John Papoulos, of the Tri-State Amusement company, operating a chain of picture houses in Steubenville, southern Ohio and West Virginia, has gone to Atlantic City for a week or ten days' vacation.

John Pekras, who operates all the picture theatres in Elyria, was in town one day last week going into executive session with F. B. O. exchange manager Lou Geiger.

Ask Jack Steinberg of the Regent theatre, Youngstown, how he likes walking. He had a taste of it the other day. Steinberg may be able to pick the winning pictures, but he's simply not there when it comes to picking the wining ponies. When the show was over he said the only way he'd get home was to walk home. And when last seen, he was on his way.

Howard Betz of the Dreamland theatre, Minerva, has left for an extended vacation trip. He has taken his family to Canada on a fishing trip.

Ray Abegglen of the Ideal and Columbia theatres, Alliance, has cured all the town moonshine consumers with a six-foot mechanical cat. Ray was recently advertising a current attraction at his house and made a huge cat out of beaverboard and cloth, with an electric motor in it which would wiggle its head and flirt its tail, while an unearthly "meou" came from somewhere inside. Late homecomers saw the cat, rubbed their eyes and then rushed to sign the pledge.

Arthur Buck, manager of the Colonial theatre, Foatoria, is driving through to California to see how the pictures are made.

George Moore, prominent motin picture exhibitor of Bucyrus and Belleview has gone on a three weeks' fishing trip. He left no forwarding address, presumably because he doesn't want to hear anything about pictures while he's vacationing.

R. Schuster, manager of the Opera House, Green Springs is rapidly recovering from a serious accident that occurred to him while on a camping trip recently. He had a gallon can of gasoline explode in his hand, burning him severely. He is still in the hospital. Because of Schuster's accident, the Opera house has been closed, and will remain closed until the fall.

Mrs. Martin Brown, wife of the proprietor of the Lorain theatre, and secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, fell one day last week, and broke her arm in four places. She is at St. John's Hospital.

Bill Kearns, of the Rex Theatre, Steubenville, is playing a return engagement in a successful real estate act in Miami, Florida. Kearns was there in the winter, came back home for a spell and is now back again in the midst of the battle.

Minnesota

JOE HASBROUCK formerly operating theatres in Graceville, Morris, Ortonville, Brown's Valley and Clinton took over the Star Theatre in Montevideo on June 1st which S. H. Baker formerly operated. Atlanta

CHARLES W. GRISWOLD, personal representative of Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, arrived last Monday from New York, to spend several days in Atlanta confirming Southern Enterprise bookings here. Mr. Griswold is traveling throughout the South confirming all bookings for theatres in the Southern Enterprises chain, remaining in each point only long enough to complete his check.

Before his connection with Mr. Franklin, Mr. Griswold was manager of the Rivoli Theatre in New York, and prior to his managing the Rivoli he was personal manager of Leatrice Joy. In August Mr. Griswold will leave New York for London, where he will supervise house service of the new Famous Players-Lasky theatre there.

Nat Royster, formerly manager of the Temple theatre, Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed manager of the recently acquired Warner Bros. theatres in North Carolina, which are the Broadway, Charlotte; the Concord, Concord; the Lexington, Lexington, N. C.; the Lincoln, a colored house, in Winston-Salem; and the Broadway theatre in Columbia, N. C.

Prior to his connection with the Temple theatre in Birmingham, Mr. Royster was affiliated with the Marvin Wise interests.

Claude Ezell, district manager of Associated Exhibitors, who has been spending the past several weeks in the Atlanta office, has appointed O. K. Bourgeois to succeed Joseph Marentette as branch manager of the company in this territory. Mr. Marentette went to Florida some weeks ago, and since his departure Mr. Ezell has held the fort until he should appoint a successor to Mr. Marentette. On Monday morning of this week Mr. Bourgeois began his duties with Associated Exhibitors, on Walton Street.

Mr. Ezell leaves for Charlotte today, and from there will go on to the West Coast.

In the process of systematizing the local office of Famous Players-Lasky, Thomas A. Kilfoil has instituted office hours of 9 to 5, instead of the 8:30 to 5:30 rule under which the exchange had been working.

This is in conformity with the hours observed in the New York office of the company, and has met with the hearty approval of Paramount's force here,—needleness to say.

High wind last week completely demolished the plate glass front of Metro-Goldwyn's new exchange on Walton Street, where the office has just recently been installed. No one was hurt in the crash, however.

The Lyric Theatre, Hogansville, Ga., is now closed and for sale, it is announced by Messers. Smith and Heywood, former owners and operators of this theatre.

Riley P. Davis, shipping clerk and head of the accessory department of Progress Pictures Corporation here, was married on July 1st to Miss Elma Clarice Dumas, of Atlanta. They are now residing at 1075 Highland Avenue.

William Oldknow, well known film man of Atlanta, is in Florida this week. He seems to have been bitten by the "real estate bug" with the rest of them, and expects to spend a short while down there looking the situation over.

Mrs. Oldknow, wife of Oscar Oldknow, President of Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, is enjoying a month's stay in Asheville accompanied by her young son. She is stopping at Kenilworth Inn.

Dave Prince, branch manager for Paramount, is spending this week visiting the exhibitors in several Georgia towns of importance. He will return to Atlanta early next week, it is expected.

Pierce Saxin, of Progress Pictures, was in Chattanooga last week visiting his family there. He will be back in town Sunday.

H. R. Kisler, Florida representative for Pathe, was in the Hospital last week for a few days having his tonsils removed. Friends interested will be glad to learn that he is getting along nicely.

Thomas A. Kilfoil announces that indications all point to the opening of Paramount's new exchange a week prior to the date set, July 25th. Unless unforseen difficulties come up, he expects the office to be installed in their new quarters by July 18th.

Mathew Betz, who plays an important role in "My Lady's Lips," a B. P. Schulberg Production.

Archie Blue, sales representative for Paramount working out of the Jacksonville exchange, has left the company. His future plans have not been announced as yet.

Walter Klements, formerly billing clerk for the Atlanta Paramount exchange but now booker in the Jacksonville exchange, was in the city Wednesday to arrange bookings of Paramount Pictures in Florida. He returned to Jacksonville in the evening.

Charles Crute, of the Lyric Theatre, Huntsville, Ala., was in Atlanta late Wednesday afternoon on business.

Fred Martin, salesman for Liberty Film Distributing Corporations, underwent an operation for appendicitis in Chattanooga last week. Oscar Oldknow, president of the company, immediately sent Bill Specht, another member of the sales force, to Chattanooga to take care of Mr. Martin during his illness, and to see that he got the very best of attention.

Mr. Martin is reported to be improving rapidly, and will soon be back in Atlanta again.

S. T. Wilson, Pathe's Georgia representative, was in town Sunday conferring with Branch Manager W. W. Angerson. He left town again Monday to take up his duties again with renewed vigor.

E. E. Geyer, exploiteer for Famous Players, left Wednesday for Toccoa, Ga., where he hopes to build up good summer business for the Star Theatre.

D. L. Sullivan, general auditor for Warner Brothers, left town a few days ago after completing one of his regular visits going over the books of the exchange here. He next goes to the Warner exchange in New Orleans, Dallas, and Oklahoma City; then back to Charlotte, returning to New York from there.

Ernest Bowman, assistant manager of the Alamo No. 2, who has been ill for the past several weeks is now sufficiently recovered to resume his activities at the theatre.

Captain M. McKenzie, production manager for the Criterion Classics, came into Atlanta Friday of last week from Los Angeles, and left next day for New York.

W. F. Ganz, head of the poster department of the local First National office is still on his vacation this week. He will return from his two week's jaunt early next week.

Mrs. Thomas Kilfoil came into Atlanta Monday of this week from New York, to join her husband, who is on duty in the local Paramount exchange. Mr. and Mrs. Kilfoil are staying at the Robert Fulton hotel.

"Monty" Salmon, head of the Southern Enterprises houses in Macon, Ga., formerly manager of the one-time Lyric Players here, came in Monday for a flying visit to his Atlanta theatrical friends. He returned to Macon on Tuesday.

Roy S. Campbell, Universal representative in Alabama, was in Atlanta a few hours Friday, en route to his home at Cleveland, Tenn., where he went to spend Sunday.

San Francisco

MAX DOLIN, musical director at the California theatre, which orchestra, is considered the highest class on the Pacific Coast, has endeared himself to the music loving and high class motion picture goers of this city by giving the child artists of the city opportunities to appear at his special Sunday Concerts.

S. King has announced that he will erect a new theatre at once, on the north side of Haight street, east of Steiner. The house will seat 1500 and will represent a total investment of $160,000, of which $35,000 represents the value of the site.

Fred Woldenberg, salesman for All-Star features in this district, recently returned from a successful tour in the San Joaquin Valley in his new Chevrolet. He said he had no punctures nor trouble.

The Sutter theatre was opened in one of the city's residential districts July 1 and will be under the management of G. Michaels, J. C. Richards and Nathan Manilar, who recently acquired the lease. This theatre formerly was known as the Republic and has played an important part in the city's theatrical history. It has been entirely remodeled and will show only the best pictures. A Wurlitzer Hope-Jones organ has been installed with new heating and ventilating systems, a new marquee and drapes.

Glen Goff, formerly organist at the Pantages theatre in Seattle, has been chosen to be the new organist at the California theatre. Goff, when but a couple of weeks with the California, already proved himself popular because of the selections chosen.

George Lipschultz, conductor of the Loew's Warfield Music Masters, has returned from a short stay in Sacramento where he was appearing at the Senator theatre.

Ed Rowden of the T. and D. Jr. circuit is to be married July 18 to Miss Stella Breen and has been receiving many congratulations.

Texas

WARREN M. HOLMES, 33, manager of the Palace theatre, is dead, and Joe Fallon, property man of that playhouse, is at the Infirmary, seriously injured, following an auto accident Tuesday, July 7th on the LaPorte road.

Mr. Holmes has been connected with the Interstate Amusement Company which owns the Palace and Majestic theatres here for about 15 years, and was well known as a showman throughout the country. Two years ago he was made manager of the Palace after first serving as assistant manager.

Surviving Mr. Holmes is his wife two half brothers and a half sister, all of Houston.

The need of a permanent film sales and distributing center at Houston is again brought to the fore by the fact that the manager and entire sales force of the Dallas Paramount Exchange have established headquarters in this city temporarily, as was done last year and the year before. Located at the Rice Hotel Manager J. B. Dugger is directing Paramount booking and sales throughout south Texas. Aside from his sales force Curtis Dunham, Paramount exploitation representative for this territory, has also established an office in Houston.

On being asked if the need of Houston as a permanent film distributing center for South Texas was not equally obvious, Mr. Dugger replied:

"That is perfectly true. The physical handling of film—its shipment to distant points to fill engagements and its return shipment for inspection before it is permitted to go out to another customer—it is becoming very burdensome with the rapidly increasing volume of business. This burden would be very much lightened by the creation of an exchange in Houston. Moreover, I feel at liberty to say that our company had had this subject under consideration for some time. It is a matter that requires careful consideration, for a Paramount exchange is much more than a modern office building—it is a plant requiring special equipment of an extensive and costly nature.

"Houston as a film distributing center would constitute a useful adjustment of the present machinery of film handling. Not only would it take care of the business in South Texas, but would sooner or later take care of the territory of Western Louisiana. In my opinion a plant of this kind can be counted on for the not distant future."

Gabe Laskin manager of the Cozy Theatre for five years, who has been in Los Angeles for the past six months, was in Houston last week enroute to Kansas City.

Mr. Laskin is negotiating for another location in Houston, and plans to reopen a show here at an early date. He is also planning to bring a series of high class road attractions to the City Auditorium this fall and winter.

Jerry Iselt left Sunday night for California where he will spend several weeks at the film headquarters. Mr. Iselt is house manager of the Isis theatre.

Otto Brauer Universal Film Service South Texas representative is in town for the week end.

This instrument is not only used for recitals but has made possible many novelty equestrian events, such as musical rides.

Milwaukee

RECEIPTS of three big days at the Garden Theater were saved by the security of the lock on the recently installed safe, when cracksmen tried to force the combination on the night following July 5. As banks were closed over the week-end, the total box office revenue from Friday, Saturday and Sunday was in the big safe at the time, but the complication of the combination saved the day, or rather the night. It is believed by Manager Koch and the police that the bandits hid in the house after the close of the show, later repairing to the office for their unsuccessful venture.

Mrs. S. H. Abrams, wife of the Milwaukee manager for F. B. O., and their son, Herbert, arrived in this city Friday, from Indianapolis, to establish permanent residence here. Mr. Abrams became Milwaukee manager four months ago, succeeding Harry Hart, who resigned because of serious illness.

William Loibl of the Chimes Theater, Cedarburg, has returned from a trip to California, apparently unconvinced that the climate or anything else out there is better than in his own home town.

George Radtke, manager of the Butterfly Theatre, Sheboygan, enlivened Milwaukee's film row, when he popped in last week on business and pleasure bent. The Progress Pictures office arose to the occasion by entertaining him with a private screening that won't be forgotten so very soon.

The Wright Theater, on Milwaukee's north side, has been reopened under the promising management of William Mills, who announces that he is going to make a real house of it. After extensive improvements, the name of the theater is to be changed and a progressive policy is to be inaugurated.

James Finkler, manager of the Avenue Theater, is gathering up his sportiest clothes, preparatory to driving out to California to give things the once over.

Harry Hart, former manager of the Milwaukee offices of F. B. O. is reported as on the way to complete recuperation from the serious illness that necessitated his retirement four months ago. It will be a matter of months, however, before he can again assume business responsibilities.

Formal opening of a bona fide branch office of the Fox Film Corporation at Milwaukee was held on July 6. The branch is the outgrowth of the sub-office operated here for the past four years as a part of the Chicago branch. It will have jurisdiction over the entire Wisconsin territory formerly divided between Chicago and Minneapolis. Attractive new headquarters have been established at 721-723 Wells Street, the center of the city's film row, from where films will be directly distributed to Badger exhibitors. Jack Lorentz, who has been in charge of Milwaukee operations for the past four years, now has the status of qualified branch manager.

Detroit

A. J. MOELLER, president of the Moeller Theatre Service Inc., of New York, has been a visitor in Detroit. He renewed acquaintances with a number of friends he made while he was manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan several years ago.

Michael de Stefano, concert master of the Capitol Theatre Symphony orchestra has been awarded a Fellowship in the Juillard Musical Foundation Graduate school of New York. Competitive examinations for the fellowship were held recently by the Foundation. During the eight days of the test, 170 musicians were examined, of this number 102 were declined. De Stefano before joining the Capitol group was a member of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, occupying first chair, he also saw service overseas as a member of the expeditionary forces. An American of Italian parentage, Stefano is a native of New York state. The awarding of the Fellowship is regarded as one of the highest honors a musician can obtain in this country.

L. H. Gardner of the John H. Kunsky Enterprises who recently was rewarded with a month's vacation with full pay and a bonus of $1,000 for his ten years of service with that organization, has departed for California together with Mrs. Gardner.

Al Ruttenberg, manager of the New Home theatre leaves this week for an extended vacation in the Muskoka Lakes region of Canada.

W. W. Brown, prominent Grand Rapids exhibitor is receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Mary Ann. Her weight is given as six and one half pounds. She was born on June 28. Both the child and Mrs. Brown are reported as doing very well.

Jess Fishman, general manager for the Standard Film Service company arrived in Detroit this week to supervise plans for the local campaign to distribute the 200 films he will handle for the coming year.

George Porter, who has been with the Fitzpatrick and McElroy enterprises for a number of years as manager of the Benton Harbor property has been placed in charge of four new houses recently purchased by the enterprise. The houses are the Tivoli, a combination house, the Willard, Starland and Dreamland Theatres.

Canada

FROMAN & PETEGORSKY, proprietors of the Majestic theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, have struck the popular fancy in the Canadian Capital through the opening of a number of "Orange Mills" throughout the city where orange juice drinks are dispensed over the counter. The new emporiums are proving to be young gold mines, despite the fact that light beers are again legal in Ontario.

For some weeks past, the Papineau theatre, Montreal, has had a baseball team that has succeeded in overwhelming all comers, but the other day the movieмen travelled down to the little French-Canadian village of L'Epiphanie, where they went down to defeat in a close battle by the score of 3 to 2. The Papineau team protested some of the decisions of the local umpires, Messrs. Charpentier and St. Pierre but to no avail.

The theatre employes on the team include Thompson, Bourdeau, Paquette, Doyle, Bowles, Dooley, Laplante, Ledden and Skidmore, the latter being the stalwart pitcher. The Papineau Theatre is one of the Montreal chain of houses operated by United Amusements, Limited, which is affiliated with Famouse Players Canadian Corp.

One who has been greatly missed around the Province Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, is Miss Grace Hyde, who presides at the console of the grand organ. Day in and day out, Miss Hyde plays the pictures and has become an institution at the theatre. When she went away for a rest in the Lake of the Woods district, many enquiries were received from admirers, but she is now pleasing them all again with her music.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"How Baxter Butted In"—Warner's, Piccadilly, New York

Times: "Here is a comedy which all can enjoy and one which will hold the attention from the introduction to the last fadeout. It is agreeably acted and efficiently assembled. Certainly it gives Matt Moore plenty of chances to win the audience, as peal after peal of laughter yesterday greeted some of the ludicrous incidents. This film has been handled with praiseworthy originality."

Evening Journal: "A corking good comedy! There's lots of enjoyable nonsense in the film, and is very well acted. You'll like the picture. You may even find it inspiring."

Morning Telegraph: "The picture is an appealing mixture of pathos and humor and gives Matt Moore ample opportunity for the sort of thing he does best. Dorothy Devore is well cast and plays with a great deal of sparkle."

Daily News: "Some new jokes, mighty good sub-titles, the pleasing Matt Moore, the vivacious Dorothy Devore, an entertaining plot. Pretty fair average, isn't it? Matt Moore fits snugly into his role and Ward Crane is a handsome villain."

Evening World: "Moore demonstrates again that he is the most delightful sap character on the screen. He never at any time loses the entire sympathy of his audience."

'The Making of O'Malley"—First National, Strand, New York

Herald-Tribune: "We never care for policeman pictures. And then, when 'O'Malley' began, it was a distinct and pleasurable surprise. It might almost be called 'The Making of Milton Sills,' he seems so human! And we're sure, that, unless you are even more rabidly set against policeman pictures than we are, you'll be amused by 'The Making of O'Malley.'"

Morning Telegraph: "Milton Sills appears as the chief cop to the entire satisfaction of the real movie fans. It is bound to succeed at the box-office for two reasons; Milton Sills and the story, which is a sure fire affair that will make a lot of friends for the First National star. Miss Mackaill has never appeared to such beautiful advantage before. She lends a certain thespian dignity that lifts it above the ordinary movie performance."

Molly Malone who will play opposite Jimmie Adams in two reel Educational comedies.

Times: "A picture with a popular appeal and a rugged sense of pathos. Helen Rowland is impressive and evokes much sympathy in the part of Margie."

World: "Motion picture crook melodrama well done. Milton Sills fills out a uniform in splendid fashion. There emerges a fine and fanciful inspiration."

Mirror: "'The Making of O'Malley' is corking good entertainment with plenty of romance and heart appeal. Really an exciting ending."

American: "One a minute—that's the number of guaranteed sure-fire heart throbs that have been injected into 'The Making of O'Malley.'"

Evening World: "Sills is splendid and Miss Mackaill never was so appealing. Officer Jim is a lovable character."

Sun: "Mr. Sills gives a more human, truthful portrayal in 'The Making of O'Malley' than he has vouchafed in any photoplay since 'The Sea Hawk.' Mr. Sills rather surprised me with his genuineness."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Orchestra Hall—Chicago

Tribune: "Everybody's going to say it, so I might as well travel right along with the crowd—Rex, the handsome horse star on the screen at Orchestra Hall, acts with almost human intelligence. He's a great, big beautiful black—the ebony wonder that made 'The King of Wild Horses' a picture to talk about. Patient and continuous training has made of him even a more smooth and resourceful actor than he was in his first film, and in 'Black Cyclone' he hands you thrill after thrill."

Herald and Examiner: "Even if you have a poor opinion of motion pictures as a substitute for the stage, please go to Orchestra Hall and see 'Black Cyclone.' If you don't, you'll miss one of the oddest and most interesting films of the year. It's a great picture. Horses are the principal players in this swift and spacious show, wherein the human actor serves only to point a parallel and bring up the tail. Here wild horses play and plot and love and hate and fight and win, even as man in the melodrama."

Evening Post, said: "'Strongheart' and 'Rin-Tin-Tin' and other canine actors have been able to fulfill star roles in many picture plays, but until 'Rex' galloped onto the screen as the hero of 'The King of Wild Horses,' not so long ago the equine players had to be content to divide honors with their riders. But 'Rex' has that sort of a dominant personality which makes him stand out conspicuously wherever he may be, and here he is, duplicating his first exploit by gracefully carrying the star role in a second picture, 'Black Cyclone.'"

Lewis Stone, signed to a long term contract by First National.

Pathe All Comedy Bill—Egyptian, Aztec, San Francisco

Daily News: "Ten reels—count 'em—of fast and furious fun. And all under one tent, ladies and gentlemen. In one program, that is. We're getting our amusements mixed. But anyway that is what one will find in the 'Comedy Circus' at the Aztec and Egyptian Theatres this week.

"In the big ring will be found Harry Langdon, champion of funmakers, in his latest frolic, 'The White Wing's Bride.' Alongside, left or right, depending on which eye you look at, is Ben Turpin in 'The Marriage Circus.' At the ends are a Mack Sennett laugh producer called 'Super-Hooper-Dyne Lizzies,' which recites the adventures of a party who go joyriding in a Ford regulated by radio, and a Hal Roach gloom dispeller and treat for the eyes, 'Sheiks of Bagdad,' that produces a famous sextet of beautiful girls composing the visual feast. If it is laughs you crave, they can be found in plenty at the Aztec and Egyptian Theatres this week."

Call and Post: "An all comedy bill with Ben Turpin and Harry Langdon as headliners, makes the current entertainment at the Egyptian and Aztec Theatres ideal for the tired business man, the worried housekeeper, and the children. 'The Marriage Circus,' Ben Turpin's vehicle, is one of his best, dealing with his disappointment in love because his heroine does not like his face.

"Harry Langdon's film is 'The White Wing's bride,' the success of which is made mostly by side-splitting situations and the expressions or lack of them on the star's face. In this picture, which has more or less plot for a comedy, Mr. Langdon again proves himself the greatest comic of his kind on the present day screen.

"'Sheiks of Bagdad,' a very funny burlesque on 'The Thief of Bagdad,' is a Hal Roach production, done in the Hal Roach way. 'Super-Hooper-Dyne Lizzies' is a comedy dream that should appeal to radio fans who believe that their pet science is still in its infancy."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Loew's State, Boston

Advertiser: "That animals can make a movie melodrama just as lively as human filmsters is proved by 'Black Cyclone,' novelty picture now at Loew's State, Rex, the hehorse who became a star in 'Rex, King of Wild Horses,' gives another powerful performance in this film. He portrays a noble untamed roamer of the great open spaces where horses are horses. There are some humans in the cast, also—and they do good work. But the novelty of seeing horses enact a complicated plot efficiently, and without much human aid, is so intriguing that we have little interest to spare for the human beings."

"Kiss Me Again"—Warners, Forum, Los Angeles

Examiner: "One of the most delicious comedies of marriage the screen has ever seen. The work of Marie Prevost is almost faultless. Monte Blue is convincing throughout and registers with brilliant dramatic effect. John Roche was never seen to such advantage as in this picture and Clara Bow and Willard Louis make their roles outstanding. The story is fast moving and graphic.

Express: "Nothing more delightful in conception and execution has ever been put on the screen. Hans Kraely put into Lubitsch's hands one of the keenest and most sparkling of farce comedies, knit into a fine fabric of the quality of a tapestry. And what a merry revel in irony Lubitsch has had in visualizing it! 'Kiss Me Again,' by comparison with the average photoplay, is a cascade of dramatic fireworks, at which one can only say 'Ah!' again and again."

Record: "One of the finest comedy dramas of the season. All five players had established certain records with other directors but with this they succeed in surpassing all things previous."

Times: "A Lubitsch production is always an event of character and class. Marie Prevost will claim anew her rights to stellar prominence. Blue is responsible for much of the mirth. John Roche has never given a better impersonation. Clara Bow is piquant and Willard Louis also is very good."

Herald: "It is the importance of the small details which make 'Kiss Me Again' worth seeing and give it the note of subtlety which sets it above the ordinary polite comedy."

Daily News: "I did not imagine that the motion picture producers were capable of such excellent work. To say this is a comedy is misleading, for we usually think of comedy as slapstick. It is one of the most delightfully whimsical pictures I have ever seen. It is even better than 'The Marriage Circle.' It is subtle, satirical, clever."

"The Monster"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew's State, L. A.

Times: "'The Monster' is a mystery thriller which outbats 'The Bat' and outcats 'The Cat'! In fact, this spine-chiller makes all other mystery mellers look like the day dreams of an amateur detective. Don't miss it. 'The Monster' is all full of restless doors and trick stairways and strange attendants doing weird deeds of science in dimly lit chambers."

Record: "They've finally succeeded in transferring the various chills and thrills incident to a mystery play to the screen. All attempts heretofore have been more or less interesting, but rather mild. In 'The Monster' the audience's composite backbone is very likely to assume some of the properties of ice. If you don't believe it listen to the applause when the meek little hero finally disposes of the final menace at Loew's this week."

Express: "The idea that it is impossible to match the spoken drama in the line of mystery plays on the screen is quite dispelled at Loew's State this week by 'The Monster.' This creepy melodrama has been turned into silent form very effectively and even improved by alterations in Crane Wilbur's work in the transfer. Lon Chaney has done his usual excellent characterization of an extreme type. Mystery stories are popular, and this one is one of the best."

Herald: "Thrill follows fast on the heels of thrill at Loew's State this week where Lon Chaney carries the titular role in 'The Monster.' To the suspense and mystery of the plot is added the pseudo-scientific note imparted by the fact that 'the monster' is a surgeon, a madman from the unprofessional ranks. This is weird enough, but a mad surgeon athirst for experience! What more soul stirring situation could the most ardent seeker after thrillers ask for than that?"

Sonya Levien, scenarist signed by Warner Brothers.

Examiner: "You can laugh or shudder when you see the 'The Monster.' Whether you prefer a tingling funny bone or a creeping sensation about the spinal column, you are sure to be gratified. Hilarious comedy episodes vie with ingenious villainy in making this picture one of the most unusual which this season has offered. Mystery stalks abroad, and lightning flashes serve as its only illuminant. A small town detective solves a strange case of criminal disappearances, and shrieks of laughter pursue his every move. Here is quite the best mystery play the screen has ever offered."

"The White Desert"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York

Daily News: "A movie which is terrifyingly beautiful and visibly perilous! 'The White Desert' is probably one of the most venturesome productions ever screened. It's certainly one of the most entrancing, most spell-binding and, indeed, most interesting. Robert Frazer is called upon for a portrayal which requires and receives real ability. Claire Windsor is her beautiful self in a sympathetic role. If you don't get a kick out of 'The White Desert,' movies no longer hold any kicks for you!"

American: "Suspense quivered in the air from the first scene of 'The White Desert.' And, as the story progressed, the audience at the Capitol became tense with excitement. This is one thriller that really thrills. The shots of the great snow avalanche slowly creeping down the mountainside, toppling buildings over the cliff, completely swallowing up a village—they are terrific. Then, for good measure, a blizzard, a famine and a madman are thrown in. If you enjoy thrillers, you will find this one of the best."

Evening World: "There is a soul-stirring thrill in nearly every inch of 'The White Desert.' As the name implies, 'The White Desert' has to do with man's herculean battle against billions of tons of snow in the Rocky Mountains during the construction of a transcontinental railroad. It demonstrates anew the aptness of Shakespeare's observation that 'the play's the thing.' This feature has the advantage of a stellar cast—but its story is so grippingly realistic that almost any cast could have made it convincing."

Journal: "'The White Desert,' at the Capitol is one of the best outdoor dramas I've ever seen. It's an absorbing and very well acted tale, placed in the snow lands of Colorado, and with situations that leave one breathless. What with the villainy of Mathew Betz, a starving baby and the efforts of the men to get aid from the nearest town despite a raging blizzard, the picture is dramatically effective."

Sun: "'The White Desert' is a wintry melodrama abounding in gorgeously beautiful snow scenes. The avalanche which tumbles over the camp was thrilling and beautiful as it rolled and rumbled down the side of the mountain, crushing a number of shanties of the camp. It is decidedly worth seeing."

Mirror: "The snow avalanche is one of the most stupendous pieces of photography we've seen. Claire Windsor lends wistful beauty to the action and Pat O'Malley dashes through a heroic role in convincing style. Priscilla Bonner and Frank Currier contribute intriguing characterizations."

Times: "One of the appeals at this particular moment of 'The White Desert' is its continuous snow scenes, which strike the eye gratefully at this season of the year. The scene of the snowslide is one of the best effects of its kind seen recently in pictures. It is very impressively managed. The sequence of the relief train's approach also has moments of high effectiveness."

Graphic: "The production is a marvel of photography. There is a story, and a very good one, too, woven into it, and the picture is really a splendid one. The scenes involving the destruction of the camp by a succession of snowslides are marvelous, as are those where the men go out into the blizzard to repair the telegraph lines."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Granada, San Francisco

Call-Post: "A marvelous picture—'Black Cyclone.' What 'Black Beauty' is to literature, 'Black Cyclone' is sure to become in filmature. Had anyone told us, before we saw 'Black Cyclone,' these things could be done with animals—not trained but wild beasts—we'd have led him aside, gently but firmly, and told him he was a delightful madman and interested us hugely. These things have been done with wild animals in the Pathe picture. It is one of the most remarkable things accomplished in the picture line since Edison, in the days of his youth, brought forth the kinetoscope."

Daily News: "There is something new under the cinema sun! It is 'Black Cyclone,' a picture so original, so different from the usual that it stands out on the screen like a beacon of hope to eyes that have become jaded, perhaps, and brain somewhat dulled from viewing picture after picture, many of them good, yes, but all along conventional lines. 'Black Cyclone' is not to be considered an 'animal' picture. It is drama, well thought out and well acted, horses and human beings working in complete accord. There is never a dull moment in its unfolding."

"Happy Warrior"—Warners, Rialto, New York.

Herald Tribune: "Another one of those charming Hutchinson stories which seem to be more nearly fool-proof than any tales that have ever been devised for the screen. J. Stuart Blackton was a happy choice of directors and the picture is fascinating from start to finish. 'The Happy Warrior' is as fine a picture as 'The Clean Heart.'"

Morning Telegraph: "A story and production that will appeal to audiences of intelligence and taste. Mr. Blackton has effected a thoroughly refreshing photoplay. The tale is ingeniously developed."

Daily Mirror: "Mr. Blackton possesses the charming knack of transcribing the whimsicality, the pathos and the tenderness of Hutchinson to the silver sheet. 'The Happy Warrior' ranks with his previous sterling production, 'The Clean Heart.'"

Times: "The author would recognize his story if he were confronted with this screen version of it, which is more than you can always say. This is a consistently developed photoplay that always holds the interest and frequently displays touches above the average. Olive Borden runs off at a gallop with acting honors but the others do excellently."

Evening World: "Blackton has done excellently well. For here is a feature which has intelligence sticking out all over it. And he has the advantage of a perfectly sensible and plausible story, which has lent itself to the screen with rare fidelity. Malcolm McGregor probably never has done better, Alice Calhoun gives an excellent portrayal, Olive Borden gives more promise than any young lady seen on Broadway screens in months. Mary Alden gives one more of her stellar character performances, and Gardner James excited sympathy throughout."

Daily News: "'The Happy Warrior' proves the actors' point: 'Give us a story and we'll give you a picture.' This is as lovely a photoplay as you'll have a chance to see for a long time."

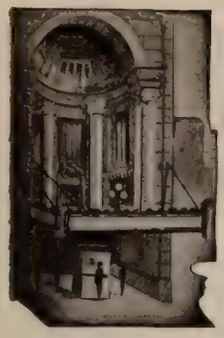
Evening Journal: "The cast has been excellently chosen. The picture is packed with action and melodrama and you'll be thrilled at the circus riot and the fight."

"Evolution"—Red Seal, Rivoli, New York

Herald-Tribune: "Don't miss it whatever you do. We sat through it twice."

The Sun: "'Evolution' is an absorbing picture tracing the ascent of Man. Your beliefs, pro or con do not prevent your enjoyment of an exhibition presenting in pictorial form the beliefs and deductions of the best known scientists of the world. A wave of applause swept over the audience."

Journal: "Absorbing, timely and well done."



World: "Enlightening and amusing."

Post: "Unusually interesting and instructive as well."

Mirror: "Fascinating. Hugo Riesenfeld should really issue a special invitation to William Jennings Bryan."

Times: "The audience applauded 'Evolution,' which proved interesting as a means of popularizing an abstract question."

Telegram: "Applauded for almost a minute."

New Color Effects for Stage Presentation

Eastman Theatre and Kodak Co. Develop Method Giving Remarkable Results That Are Easily Obtainable

By Thomas F. Murray, Jr.

ALL of the color effects so far described were "static." They were put upon the curtain and remained unchanged, discounting the irising effect on designs like the butterflies, until they were removed. Changing colors, chasing each other like shadows over the curtain, would be more graceful. They would lack that severity, that definition of the static color effects.

In an article on, "The Use of Color for the Embellishment of the Motion Picture Program"* Loyd A. Jones and Lewis M. Townsend refer to this matter in the following words:

"The great difference between color in nature and in the handiwork of the artist is that the latter is largely static, while the former is frequently mobile. There is a fascination and charm in the mobility of color as observed in nature which we cannot hope to find in the static production of the artist. Many of the best artistic results are good because the artist has caught a fleeting color effect and fixed it on his canvas. If this is true, how much more interesting and beautiful would be a picture having a mobility of coloring similar to that displayed by nature. The motion picture has made it possible to reproduce mobility of form but unfortunately the photographic process in common use at the present time is not capable of reproducing the chromatic attributes of color, and we are forced to be content with pictures from which these chromatic factors are absent."

Some very interesting effects in dynamic color production are afforded by the use of the double dissolving steropticon and photographed designs similar to those used for static color production, except that here the photographs are made on plates, or on films which are then sealed between plates. A very artistic result was obtained by using the design illustrated in Figure 8. This was revolved in the path of one beam of light while the color wheel in front of it was also rotated, giving the design in a series of colors. The other beam of light was used to flood the curtain with red. In this case it was the negative, of course, that was used.

was mounted in the path of one beam of light and the other design in the path of the other beam. If now the designs are held stationery while the color wheels revolve, the effect produced is that of revolving wheels suddenly changing their direction of motion. Other effects are produced by setting the designs as far out of center as possible and revolving them in the same direction or in opposite directions while the color wheels are not revolved. Another variation is to revolve both the color wheels and the designs.

A refinement in the production of dynamic color has just been described by L. A. Jones and L. M. Townsend. They have used a pair of filters each composed of three disc wedges, one colored blue-green, one magenta, and one yellow. These are so mounted that the complete filters may be rotated as units or each element may be rotated independently.

If a conventional design is used, the photograph is taken on cine positive film on acetate base and a print is made on similar material. The negative is placed in one stereopticon and the positive in another. The wedge filters are so set that the designs through the two films contrast. When the filters are rotated in the same direction at the same speed, the design will always have the same contrast although the colors will change continually. If the design photographed contains gray areas or figures in addition to the black on white, or white on black, that is, if there are half-tones on the films, the half-tone areas will be colored by light from the two filters and thus there will always be three colors on the curtain. When the filters are mounted so that each element can be made to rotate independently of all the others, and each element of the filter is made to rotate at a different rate of speed, the sequence of color obtainable is practically unlimited.

A simpler filter, and one by which very satisfactory results may be obtained, is produced by making a color wheel of eighteen sectors of colored glass or gelatin so selected that the hues are uniformly spaced through out the spectrum and also through out the nonspectral region. Do not be frightened by "spectrum" and "nonspectral region." All they mean is this:—a spectrum is the same as a rainbow. The colors in the rainbow are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and violet. Now there is this to remember about a rainbow, the ends do not meet, which is unfortunate, for if they did, there would be no "nonspectral region."

Now of the colors in the rainbow the important ones are red, green, and blue, and if there were bands of no-man's-land between these colors, there would be no yellow. If the ends of the rainbow joined, red and blue would mix giving the magenta and purple hues; but the ends of the rainbow do not join so the purples and magentas are relegated to the "nonspectral" region. Even though these shades are not in the rainbow, they are very pleasing colors in a motion picture house so you should include some of them in your color wheel. Furthermore, in your wheel these "nonspectral"' colors are essential to an easy transition from blue to red.

On rotating a filter made as described, a series of color changes is produced. The change in color from one filter to the next is not very abrupt since at the time of each change sections of the two adjacent filters are in the path of the light beam and a mixture of the two colors result. These color wheels may, of course, be used with designs, and effects will be obtained similar to those described when using the compound wedge filters.

So color has come to the motion picture house as the result of the combined efforts of physicist, projectionist, and artist, and backed by the organizations which invented and perfected motion picture film and established leadership in the art of entertaining the public through the medium of it. Colors produced as described and judiciously employed fill a void in the motion picture program which has long been recognized, but tolerated for want of a suitable solution to the problem. This color introduction to the picture smooths out the bump which, since the beginning of motion picture projection, has been experienced in those moments between "The End" of one film and the title of the next.

Might not now this prediction be safely made? Color with motion pictures will become increasingly popular, and improvements will appear in the methods of entrapping it and releasing it for the edification of the cliente of the theatre. Striving for color perfection will continue until the day comes when every film shown in a motion picture theatre will exhibit not only the forms of the things in nature but will reproduce, as well, their splendid colorings.

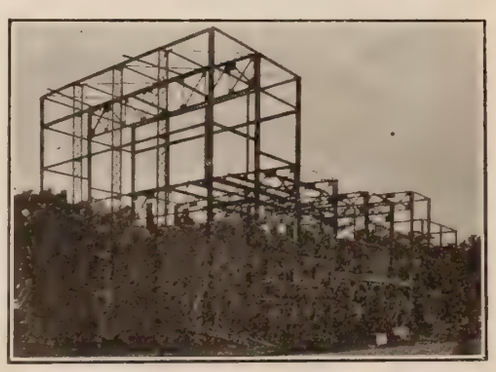
New Theatre Planned for Jersey City

Plans are being drawn by Hyman Rosensohn of Newark, New Jersey, for the construction of a motion picture theatre to be erected on a plot 115 x 190 at Newark Avenue, Jersey City. The building is to be a one story brick construction. The owner is Alfred Gottesman.

Start Work Soon on Warner Theatre in Hollywood

Plans for the theatre which Warner Brothers will build at Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox avenue, Hollywood, were approved last week by H. M. Warner and construction work is scheduled to start within 60 days. The estimated cost of the building is $1,250,000. It is to be a 3,600-seat house, of modern architecture.

Among the features which will be included in the theatre are a large ballroom, a roof garden and promenade, with the balance of the structure devoted to shops and offices. The theatre will be used for world premieres of Warner productions.



Ventilation Proving Important in Securing Business for Small Houses

A COOL theatre; satisfied customers; personal advertising;—

These benefits plus bigger box office returns invariably follow when theatre owners appreciate the value of comfortable theatres and actually make their places of business pleasing to their patrons.

For many years theatre owners have found the summer months more or less barren from the profit standpoint. In fact, scores of good theatres are closed during the summer time just for this reason. Not only has this been detrimental to the individual theatre owner who closes in summer but it is injurious to the theatrical business in general.

Every theatre man knows that much educational work has been done in the past to develop the "theatre going" habit in America. Whenever theatres close it interrupts the "theatre going" habit. Hence, the habit must be developed all over again. This means a greater outlay of money in advertising than would have been the case had the theatres been able to keep open in the summer and keep up a continuous run of advertising.

The Bellmore Theatre, a five story playhouse being built at 21st Ave. S., and Blaken St., Nashville, Tenn. by the Summers Construction Co. or Crescent Amusement Company. This house is claimed to have cost $175,000.

The theatre men of America have two things to sell, first entertainment and second comfort. Any theatre lacking in either loses business. Which of the two is most important is hard to say but it is safe to guess that in the summer time the second is most necessary.

Making a theatre comfortable in the summer time has been a difficult problem for the medium and small theatres. Just recently, there has come on the market a new cooling and ventilating system which has already been installed in many theatres, particularly in the middle west. This system is known as the Artic-Nu-Air with offices in the State Lake building, Chicago.

The Arctic Nu-Air system was exhibited at the Milwaukee convention and attracted considerable attention. The system was in actual operation and proved to be a very impressive exhibition. It "kicks up" 40,000 cubic feet of fresh air every minute and distributes it throughout the theatre. Thus far the manufacturers report satisfaction on the part of all who have installed them.

Popularity Well Deserved

Until you have looked through the Steel Furniture Company catalog, examined Steel chairs themselves, and acquainted yourself with Steel prices, you cannot know how much beauty you can attain in your theatre at a sensible expenditure consistent with good business judgment.

The remarkable value in Steel theatre chairs per dollar invested is attracting wide comment. Their exceptional durability is a matter of record.

Inquiries and Comments

The Newcomer Errs

SOME little while ago we welcomed into our fold a newcomer in the editorial projection field when American Cinematographer, a West Coast publication, announced the institution of a Projection Department as a regular feature of its publication.

That this welcome was not unanimous was evidenced when another publication undertook to castigate American Cinematographer for daring to presume upon sacred territory.

This castigation took the rather high-handed form of sending a personal letter to the newcomer in which some rather hasty things were said and implied; even going so far as to attempt to besmirch the reputation of a good man.

But the worm turned!

It smote back!

Indeed it smote such a mighty smote that nothing has since been heard from this castigator. Not even one little yelp. Which is as it should be for the less said of this unpleasant episode, the better.

Our Turn

Be that as it may, we too wish to take our turn at castigating this presuming newcomer. But in a fashion a little more friendly than that attempted by the individual referred to above.

We have no hard feelings for American Cinematographer. Rather, we wish it success.

The thing that riles us, however, is a certain passage in the Projection Department article of June last issue wherein the writer condemns all exhibitors and projectionists alike for their all-round stupidity and shiftlessness. The passage referred to is this.

"The average projectionist perhaps looks at his screen six or seven times during the projection of the same number of reels. The manager knows little or nothing about projection, and the man he is paying to project his expensive program is either ruining him or making money for him. However, the manager doesn't realize this, and because his box office receipts fall off he thinks that his programs are very poor. He hasn't stopped to realize that perhaps it might be his presentation that is effecting the decline in box office receipts; he is not educated to know good projection; he doesn't realize that the screen is the medium from which all the money in the industry is derived; he doesn't realize that his screen is too bright, too dull, that the screen is dirty, that his house is lighted wrong or that the mechanical condition of his projectors is poor. The picture is jumpy and, perhaps, out of focus. His box office receipts will tell him all this if he is not educated to proper screen presentation. What is the result of all this? Nothing more than it is the screen, the projected picture that brings the money to the industry. Everything finally and absolutely depends upon the projection of the individual picture on the screen to bring out those qualities that are so nearly life-like and real and to bring out that value that has been put into the production. When the managers realize the secret of putting on their screens all that is actually in the film, then their box office receipts will directly correspond with the value that is in the picture."

We Take Exceptions

We justly take exception to the statements in that article. We believe we have no less than three good reasons for taking such exception.

In the first place, after all the educational effort that has been put forth in the past years to prevent the things charged in this article we are not ready to admit without argument that these efforts have been all in vain.

Secondly, everyday personal observation in theatres has convinced us that the exhibitors and projectionists are, on the whole, wide-awake to the importance of good projection and that they are making earnest efforts to bring themselves to a high standing in their respective business.

Thirdly, we are not ready to admit so freely that reduced box office receipts are entirely the fault of the poor projection.

Not So Stupid

Concerning the first two points we do not believe that theatre managers and projectionists, in general, are quite so stupid and shiftless as Mr. Cuffe paints them. No, indeed! It is possible that he bases his remarks on personal observations in theatres on the West Coast but at that we doubt whether these accusations would apply in the sweeping manner he indicates.

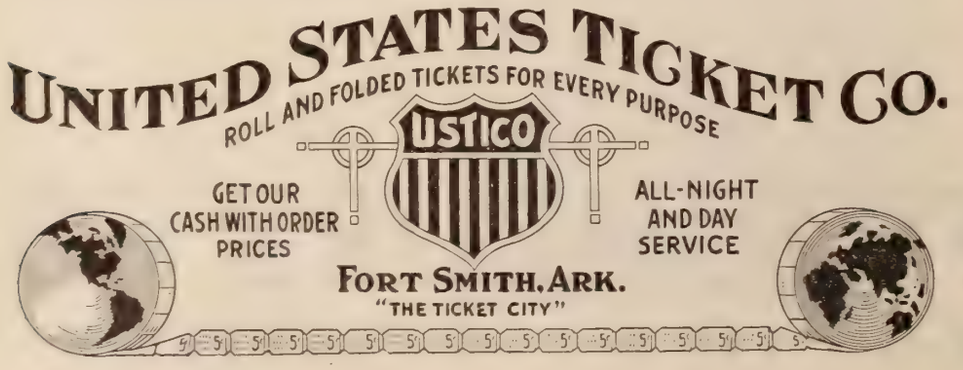
Suffice it to say that in the East, at least, when a theatre suffers poor business, the first thing that is usually subjected to close scrutiny is the quality of projection—and we have every reason thru correspondence with other theatres, to believe that this holds true in other sections of the country also. Theatre men are renowned for a failing to fall prey to every patented device for improving their projection.

On the other hand, to admit such a charge would but be an admission to a graver one that the various trade and technical publications, the S. M. P. E. and the efforts of the various unions had been wasted entirely. This is obviously far from being the true case as a little reflection on facts will bear out

Not Alone Projection

With reference to our third point we do not believe that all the good projection in the world will correct the evils of a poor picture plot or poor photography.

Mr. Cuffe speaks nonchalantly of the state of perfection which has been attained in the producing end of the business but the fact remains that of all the thousands of motion pictures produced the total of those having repeated value can be counted upon the fingers of one hand.



We call this a rather poor showing. The reason for it is not hard to find. The principal thing in present day pictures seems to be to strike some cord of popular appeal. Heart Interest as it is called. Such appeal is unusually hard to continuously maintain.

The Picture Quadrangle

As we see it, the success of this picture business rests squarely upon four things. These four things are, good stories, good casts, good photography, and good projection.

The lack of any one of these is sufficient to kill the show and explain poor box office receipts.

It seems hardly fair, Mr. Cuffe, to put the onus on the exhibitor and projectionist with their limited capital and limited education when the producer with wealth enough to buy the services of the best brains and experience available falls down on the job.

Low Cost Quality Projection

THERE is no apparatus or light source available for motion picture projection that surpasses Incandescent Lamp Projection for economy of operation or quality and dependability of screen illumination.

The incandescent lamp lowers projection cost from 33% to 75% because it requires much less electrical power than the standard arc.

The light from the incandescent lamp is steady and of a tonal quality that brings out greater depth of pictures and adds to their attractiveness. It is a soft light that will not tire the eyes of the audience.

The light source is definitely fixed. Light is spread evenly over the entire screen. Shadows are eliminated.

Incandescent lamp projection greatly improves operating conditions. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat. Once properly adjusted the optical system needs no further attention. The best projectionists favor theatres using incandescent lamp projection.

Full particulars as to the adaptibility of incandescent projection to your theatre, cost of installing and operating, etc., will be sent to you free on request.

Necessity of Ballyhoo for Success in Modern Showmanship

By William F. Libman, Pres. Libman-Spanger Corp.

AMONG the definitions of the word "Lobby", Webster of dictionary fame assures us that it means "those who frequent the ante room of a legislative hall for the purpose of influencing legislators."

Were that same compiler to see the magnificent lobbies leading into today's most successful motion picture theatres, no doubt he'd define a lobby display as a "means of influencing those who enter the theatre".

The showing of motion pictures as a most important unit of the amusement industry has developed its own peculiar and necessary architectural and technical features as is apparent in the evolutionary period from the store show of earlier days to the cinema palaces of the present.

Behind the entire structure of the exhibiting business however we find the same compelling element that has been the basis of the show business from the beginning, and that is "the ballyhoo." This ballyhoo is ever present in some form or other, whether it is used by the showman exhibiting his three headed calf at Coney Island or Uncle Sam recruiting his army and navy.

From the producer who advertises his wares in the trade press to the exhibitor who informs his public of the current attractions, the old ballyhoo or the show-the-folks-what-you have stuff is always there.

Could the show business exist without resorting to this attention compelling element? Hardly, for just as long as men are engaged in providing amusement for the public, just so long will it be necesary to appeal to that same public for patronage.

Take the circus or the "big top" for example. Is there any one who hasn't got the biggest kind of a thrill as he stood before the big bulging, highly colored painted canvases that are erected outside of the sideshow which houses the numerous freaks. And what draws the millions of people into the side show every season? Is it the way the barker combs his hair? Not on your life; it's the suggestion of what he's going to see inside that the big canvas outside gave him that carries Mr. Average Man into the sideshow tent. And it's a cinch that without the painted canvas ballyhoo, there's many a freak that would wonder where the next cup of coffee was coming from.

So much for the ballyhoo of the circus. Let's take ballyhoo of legitimate every day merchandising or storekeeping. Where is the merchant's ballyhoo? Why it's right in that little old store window which experts have improved so in the past few years. Today's best store windows are so constructed that only the minimum of copper frame is used to hold the glass in place. And why? Just simply so that Mr. Retailer has as much unobstructed glass surface as possible behind which to show what he's selling.

And suppose an ordinance were enacted that demanded every store keeper to board up his windows so the public couldn't see what he's selling. Can you imagine what an imposing army of indignant retailers would march on to the City Hall? And just visualize the eloquent arguments that would be advanced in favor of the priceless value of the store window as a ballyhoo.

Why does the modern chain drug store spend millions annually for dressing its windows. And do you suppose for a moment that the chain cigar store management spends similar sums simply because the poor window dresser must live? There's only one reason why the big successful men who direct the affairs of these companies cheerfully appropriate these huge sums because they realize the unlimited value of window display.

If any exhibitor thinks these statements are overdrawn just let him open up a little cigar store just across the street from a chain cigar store, but let him build his store without any windows in it at all, and it's a sure fire bet that he'll certainly experience all the emotions of galloping starvation waiting for patronage.

So much for the store window. Now let's get down to the question of the appeal which general attractiveness carries with it. And it is in this particular field that the writer feels altogether at home in. And the question of attractiveness is certainly an important one where the purchasing public is concerned. We are living today in an age of refinement and education. To prove it we only need to compare today's department store and furniture house ads with those of a dozen years ago. The same folks that go out looking for the best house furnishings are the ones who know the difference between an attractive theatre and one that's unattractive. The public today realizes the value of decorative art more than ever before.

And that there's an irresistible appeal in things artistic and pleasing has been apparent since the hand of the Creator moulded this earth. Just to prove what a big influence a little picture will have on its surroundings, go into some home whose atmosphere of coziness you've always admired, and strip the pictures off the walls.

Then stand back and look over the results. What a different atmosphere is created at once. The warmth and friendliness of the room is gone. Now take down the mirror over the little console table. The bare wall behind it adds still more to the lack of cheerfulness and comfort that prevails. The psychology of pictures no doubt is what prompted a wise man of old to observe that no home is a home until at least one picture is hung on its walls.

And why do you suppose that prisons and corrective institutions all have that "institutional" look? It's because of the lack of that same element—the absence of a cheerful picture in a cheerful frame to break the monotony of hard empty walls.

And yet there are still some exhibitors who do not realize what a tremendous appeal that an attractive lobby can carry. An appeal that reaches out to every normal man, woman and child that lives and breathes.

But then the writer realizes too that the running of a theatre involves an attraction to a hundred details but to you busy men who run the theatres of the nation these few articles are directed with the hope that before long every manager will realize that the theatre doesn't start from where the doorman takes the tickets, but it begins at that point where something about its front stops the busy passerby and lures him into a seat.

(Ed. Note.—This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Libman.)

Not Mere Glass

CINEPHOR Projection Lenses and Condensers are made from select optical glass

CINEPHOR Projection Lenses are regarded as the work of precision optics—the division where the measurement of a millionth of an inch is not left to the imagination. CINEPHOR Condensers, made of clear, white, heat resisting optical glass, supplement and should be used with CINEPHOR Projection Lenses. The CINEPHOR Optical System, providing approximately 50% more illumination (when used with Mazdas) than any other combination of commercial lenses, is invariably recognized by impartial critics as superior.

Million Dollar Atlantic City Stanley House Opened

The $1,000,000 Stanley Theatre at Kentucky Avenue and the Boardwalk, Atlantic City, was opened on July 3rd with a special performance. Jules E. Mastbaum, President of the Stanley Company, made a short address of welcome and introduced Joseph P. Perksie, City Solicitor at Atlantic City, Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick, of Philadelphia, and Senator James Walker of New York, all of whom delivered addresses.

Sigmund Romberg, the eminent composer, was guest conductor of the Stanley Symphony Orchestra, composed of forty members under the direction of David Kaplen, and the musical program was exceptionally fine.

Karl Bonawitz, master organist, who has signed a long-term contract with the Stanley Company, and will be permanently located at Atlantic City, played several selections on the new organ.

The new theatre occupies an extremely desirable site and was designed and constructed by Hoffman & Henon under the supervision of Mr. Mastbaum. The Stanley Company holds a long-term lease on the site, which is owned by James T. and George H. Bew.

The color scheme of the theatre is blue, gold and white and one of the most striking features of the auditorium is the crystal chandelier of colored lights, weighing 2,000 pounds, which can be lowered to the floor. The latest type chairs have been provided and the seating capacity is 2,005, the largest in Atlantic City.

The final safeguard for success—

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To make the most of a picture from the box office view point you carefully plan the publicity notices, newspaper advertisements, lobby displays, tie-ups.

But one more safeguard for success remains—photographic quality. Look in the film margin for the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" and you know that the screen will show all the quality of the negative.

Something they want to buy ~

Well, what does the public buy in motion picture entertainment? We suspect they buy these things:

STARS ~ real stars, whose names can drag 'em in, regardless.

BOOKS ~ not just any old book, but books the millions read and talk about.

PLAYS ~ plays that have made real hits and get talked about far from Broadway.

TITLES ~ titles that can dig into the public mind by reason of many ways to exploit them.

DIRECTORS ~ Pictures made by men the public can trust to do a good job. Such as the men who made "The Covered Wagon," "Robin Hood," "Way Down East," "Peter Pan," "North of 36," "Are Parents People," "Back Home and Broke," "Miss Bluebeard," "The Thief of Bagdad," "Adventure."

NAT. ADVERTISING ~ Public confidence in productions made by an organization that is willing to bet its advertising money its product is right.

STORIES ~ stories that hold interest, that enthrall~ a chance to laugh a little, something to thrill at,~love that makes the world go round,~obstacles to overcome,~ a little jazz,~ a little pep,~ a dig at the funny bone or a tug at the heart strings. In a word,~stories that entertain.

Well then, how does THE GREATER FORTY fill the order ~

The Last Word in Theatre-Cooling Equipment—

As just installed in the Capitol Theatre, New York

Spray chambers showing the Helmer (Pat.) revolving spray nozzles which sprays iced water through which the air must pass reducing the air to a low temperature and eliminating surplus moisture.

"At first motion picture theatres featured only motion pictures. Then they introduced orchestras, divertissements, lighting effects, and vaudeville numbers. And now they point with pride to their cooling systems.

"We stopped in the Capitol the other day and found the theatre so delightfully cool that we went down into the basement to investigate. It was thoroughly explained, but all we remember is that there were large motors and condensers, twelve thousand feet of cooling pipes, and six thousand feet of condensing coils. Water is pumped through the roof, thereby cooling off the theatre. We also registered little gasps of astonishment at the huge machinery and the compressors, but can't recall whether our guide said the water was taken from gas, or gas taken from the water. Anyway, the theatre is refreshingly cool."

—ROSE PELSWICK, N. Y. Eve. Jour.

THE CAPITOL THEATRE has just completed the installation of the largest theatre cooling plant in the world. The problem of cooling the air of the world's largest theatre was a particularly unique one, because of its enormous size and seating capacity. After an extensive study of the various types of refrigerating plants, Major Edward Bowes, managing director, arranged with the Helmer Air Conditioning Company for the construction of a special type of plant which will meet the required conditions. This cooling plant is the largest installed in any theatre in the world and has a capacity of 400 tons of refrigeration.

BLASCO IBANEZ

The Temptress

SELDOM have so many Big dramatic moments been crowded into a story as in this master achievement of the great Ibanez, considered by the industry as the prize picture story of the year. Tense, brilliant, romantic is this drama of an irresistible Temptress. It flashes its fascinating course from the bandit-ridden interiors of South America to the gilded cafes of the Continent where beauty and wealth flirt madly in the drama of life. Here is dramatic material out of which a tremendous box-office production is being made, directed by a genius of the screen, played by an All-Star Cast!

BLASCO IBANEZ

the author of the screen's outstanding box-office successes

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN"
"BLOOD AND SAND"
"ENEMIES OF WOMEN"
"MARĒ NOSTRUM"
"THE TEMPTRESS"

And now comes

The Torrent

NO WONDER the world gasped when Ibanez published this startling novel of a love between an Opera beauty and a handsome youth. "The Torrent" is one of the most gripping romances ever written, exciting in its portrayal of a great Passion, yet tender, human, touching in its immortal love theme. Ibanez' name is associated with the greatest money-makers of screen history. "The Torrent" will make his name more than ever the symbol of box-office success.

A Great New Comedy Box-Office Bet

LUPINO LANE

The newest addition to Educational's great line-up of comedy stars is a master of pantomime second to none. He has a record of unbroken successes on the stage in both Europe and America. His appearance in pictures, both Short Subjects and features, met with instant public approval. Even such a conservative newspaper as the New York Evening Post showed the greatest enthusiasm in discussing his work in "Isn't Life Wonderful?" You can bank on a real box-office bet when the Post talks this way:

> "We wish to rise and state that Mr. Lane's work . . . touches a high mark in comedy which no screen actor save Chaplin has ever reached. . . .
> "We consider that Lupino Lane's work in 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' puts this comedian in a class by himself, and that, given the proper stories, he has it in him to become one of our best makers of sincere laughter."

Here's a great new box-office bet that means additional profit for every theatre that books and boosts his pictures.

So you'd better sign up now for the six two-reel

A Peerless Demonstration

In Your Own Theatre Will Convince You

Our distributor in your locality will put a Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp in your booth free of charge and let you make your own comparison with your present equipment. He knows the results the Peerless gives and wants you to know them too.

Hundreds of theatres everywhere have proven Peerless greater-light-efficiency for themselves. Certainly you should not be satisfied with your present screen light when you can have tremendously increased light on your screen at half your present current and carbon cost.

And remember this: Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps project more light at 25 amperes than other lamps do at 100 amperes or more. Peerless lamps pay for themselves in the economy of operation and no other lamp puts as much light on the screen. Can you afford to delay your investigation longer?

Greater Movie Season Bulletins

BECAUSE we construe the Greater Movie Season to mean a Greater Business Season for the entire motion picture industry, we are contributing this page for the cause. For the remaining week preceding the season's opening date of August third, this page will carry the important bulletins to be issued to the various branches of the industry.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

THE fuse is lighted. The big burst of advertising for Greater Movie Season throughout the United States is about to cut loose.

When the Greater Movie Season Campaign was first outlined, it was agreed that it would be a success if thirty-five cities participated.

More than three hundred cities have joined in organized campaigns and, throughout the country, theatres in hundreds of smaller towns are having celebrations of their own.

It is a celebration that is truly national in scope. Letters received from exhibitors and General Managers of the various local campaigns indicate that the theatre owners want Greater Movie Season made an annual event and that next year there hardly will be a town anywhere that will not have its campaign.

IN Detroit, 750 taxicabs will carry a sticker reading "Take This Cab To The Movies. It's GREATER MOVIE SEASON. They're Bigger and Better Than Ever."

There is a city ordinance in Detroit forbidding advertising on taxicabs, but, because of the importance of the campaign, this ordinance was waived.

AIRPLANES will drop 20,000 passes—some from every theatre in the city—over Philadelphia on August 3rd.

THE Dagmar Automobile Co. has contributed a $2,200 car for a prize in the Philadelphia Greater Movie Season Contest.

W. A. STEFFES, President of the Northwest Exhibitors, has written all members of his organization urging them to take part in Greater Movie Season, and the whole Northwest is coming in. Even the smallest theatres in the smallest towns in the Northwest are joining. Though they may do no more than to post a few one-sheets and to distribute a few heralds, they're going to celebrate.

A "RADIO PAGEANT" will be staged in New York City, from station WEAF, on the night of Monday, August 3rd. Arrangements are being made to broadcast an elaborate radio program from Los Angeles on the same night. Greater Movie Season Committees in other cities are preparing other radio programs for the same night, so that the entire country will be blanketed with Greater Movie Season Radio programs on that night.

GREATER Movie Season articles by Rex Beach, George Ade, Wallace Irwin, Rita Weiman, Temple Bailey, Richard Connell, Meredith Nicholson, John Emerson and Anita Loos, Elmer Davis, Terry Ramsaye and Pamela Wynne have been sent to all General Managers of Greater Movie Season Committees.

These articles are of unusual merit and newspapers everywhere are glad to get them. They will be released generally the last week in July.

THE Denver Greater Movie Season Parade will have as a contributed feature the Fort Logan Military Band. To the Indianapolis Parade have been contributed two excellent bands, the Newsboys' Band and the Navy Band.

In Dallas, small bands, selected from members of the theatre orchestras, will play short concerts in front of each theatre at 7:30 o'clock each evening.

New York City plans a city-wide bugle call at 9 o'clock each evening. A bugler will mount the canopy of each theatre and at 9 sharp they all will blow the same call.

THE Greater Movie Season proclamation of Mayor Hylan of New York City is being issued this week. Each New York Borough President also has endorsed Greater Movie Season.

Sunday Opening

EXHIBITORS who are confronted with Sunday Blue Laws, or who desire to conduct campaigns to the public to bring about Sunday opening, will be aided by the experience of Jay Gould, of the Eagle Theatre, Montevideo, Minn., who brought Sabbath showings to his town.

The question was submitted at an election and the liberal forces won. Here are some of the arguments used by the Sunday opening committee:

"The committee responsible for this circular and representative of the citizenship in general of our city, is in favor of a continuance of Sunday pictures for the following reasons:

"1. The Sunday moving picture is responsible for a better class of pictures being shown in Montevideo.

"2. It furnishes a comfortable place and wholesome entertainment for the young people who are seeking diversion on this day. Is it not better that we know where they are?

"3. The great minister, Dr. Chas. H. Spurgeon, put it in a nutshell when he said: 'Your Sunday bills and laws pertaining to religion seem to me to be all wrong. I should be afraid to borrow help from Government; it would look to me as if I rested on an arm of flesh, instead of depending on the living God.' John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, also has aptly said, 'Condemn no man for not thinking as you think. Let every one enjoy the full and free liberty of thinking for himself. Leave him to God, the Judge of all.'

"4. We believe that it is only fair to those who wish to attend Sunday pictures for their recreation, pastime, pleasure or whatever you may wish to call it, to have that privilege.

"5. We ask that you soberly, thoughtfully and conscientiously compare as Sunday indulgences the reading of a book in the home with that of seeing and reading the same book on the screen. Also the Sunday newspaper with its comic section, fiction and news of a good, bad and indifferent variety with the selected productions presented on the screen. In fact, compare the Sunday picture with any of the pleasures participated in by at least a majority of those who may be opposed to them and the Sunday picture could hardly suffer from the comparison.

"6. The motion picture is often compared to the public press and it is a question which would have the greater power if used for the same purpose. Then is not the paragraph in the United States Constitution which reads, 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press,' quite patent to the issue? Also freedom of religion is guaranteed by the Constitution. Why then should certain individual religionists attempt to curtail the freedom of others?

"7. A few may wish to return to the old Sunday Blue laws. In fact, a bill was before the last Congress and will be introduced in the present Congress that if enacted into law will practically re-establish them nationally. This committee is opposed to any such law and is also opposed to permitting the entering wedge being driven in at home by forbidding those who wish to do so from looking at pictures on Sunday in Montevideo.

"It is in keeping with our Constitution, our society, our many fraternal organizations and in fact the basis of successful democracies to be tolerant, to respect the other person's views. Let us not try to take away from some other person that which he may enjoy and at the same same does us no harm. Especially so since we are not willing to give up our particular form of diversion on the Sabbath Day. This is not only intolerant but selfish.

"In conclusion, we quote from the Declaration of Independence: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.'"

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Kathleen Key of "The Midshipman" (Metro-Goldwyn) goes through her setting-up exercises to the tune of the California's booster song, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'."

Helen Macfadden, daughter of the physical culturist publisher, is not only a Follies dancer, but appears in the first Truestory film "The Wrongdoers" (Astor).

Wanda Hawley in a regal pose from "American Pluck" (Chadwick) in which she supports George Walsh. The queen stands ace-high, as far as we're concerned.

GREETING AND FAREWELL

JOHN McCORMICK and Al Rockett were guests at a dinner given by First National executives and directors at the Hollywood Athletic Club on the night of July 19. It was a combination welcome home and good bye party, McCormick having returned from Europe and Al Rockett heading for New York and First National headquarters. M. C. Levee acted as master of ceremonies. Among those present were Frank Lloyd, Edwin Carewe, Al Santell, Joseph Skirboll, N. H. Brower, John Francis Dillon, Robert Frazer, Lewis Stone, Freddy Fralick, Hugh Allen, Victor McLagen, Lloyd Hughes, Fred Beetson, David Thompson, Jack Hawkes, James R. Quirk, Al Green, Harry D. Wilson, F. B. Alboni, Clifford Butler, Harry Seymour and Charles Murray.

WINNING HIS CASE

HARRY CAREY has just won his three year legal fight with the government by the decision of Secretary of Interior Work awarding him a clear deed to his "Harry Carey Rancho" in San Francisquito Canyon, forty miles from Los Angeles. In 1918 Carey took out his homestead entry on this property and since then has spent nearly $40,000 in improvements. He recently established a Trading Post there that has become one of the points of interest around L. A.

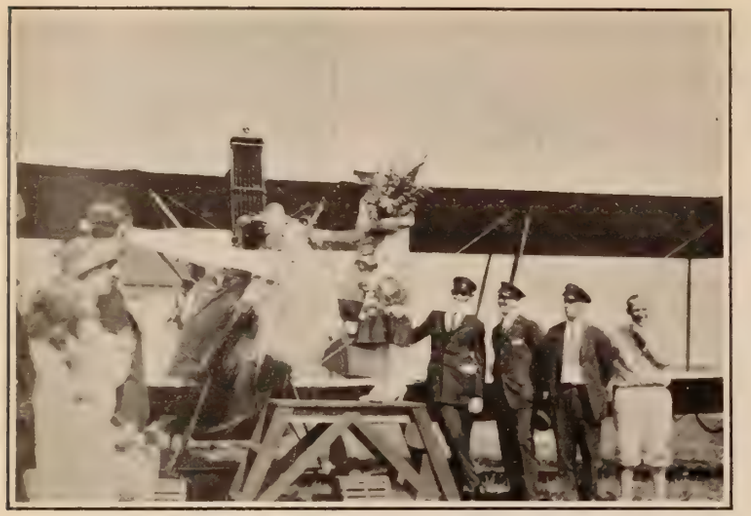
Three years ago the government intervened and declared that as the land had oil possibilities it was not subject to homesteading. The land officials finally decided, however, that the oil possibilities were too indefinite to deprive Carey of his claim. During the litigation the western star has continued work on his pictures.

DR. RIESENFELD REMINISCENCES

DR. HUGO RIESENFELD looked over some five-year old Rialto programs the other day and made some interesting discoveries. While many of the 1920 screen favorities have vanished, quite a few are just as popular to-day as they were then. During the week of July 4, 1920, Ethel Clayton was starred in a Paramount picture called "The Ladder of Lies." In the cast was Clyde Fillmore. What has become of him? Irving Cummings had a part too. Now he is a director! In July, 1920 Robert Warwick and Lois Wilson starred at the Rialto in "The City of Masks." But what has become of the other members of the cast, such as Edward Jobson, J. M. Dumont, Robert Dunbar and T. E. Duncan? Tommy Meighan's cast in the "Prince Chap" are practically all going strong in 1925. Among the missing, as uncovered by the Rialto records, is Mary Miles Minter and Roscoe Arbuckle, the latter hen starring in "The Roundup" and "The Life of The Party."

HYMAN COOLS OFF

THE sea breezes are sweeping soothingly around the person of Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre. He is rusticating by what the poet called "the sad sea waves" in the neighborhood of Atlantic City and sends us a post card offering ironic sympathy for the unfortunates whom fate compels to remain in sizzling, torrid Gotham. But—after all, he's got to come back, sooner or later, and maybe someone will mock him by mail from a safe distance.



James R. Grainger of Fox casts a general sales managerial eye over the script of "The Lucky Horseshoe" while Tom Mix and Studio Manager Sol M. Wurtzel look on.

One is reminded of the gay drawings of the late Raphael Kirchner by this pose of Laura La Plante, star of "The Teaser," a recent Universal Jewel.

Frances Howard Goldwyn visits Marion Davies, Monta Bell and Louis B. Mayer between scenes of "The Lights of Old Broadway" (Metro-Goldwyn) which they are now making.

Mrs. William Fox christens the Fox News airplane at Fox News Hangar, Curtiss field, Mineola, L. I. This plane will be devoted solely to the gathering and distribution of pictorial news.

MORE MARRIAGES

COUNT that day lost that doesn't reveal a marriage in screen circles. Whether it is the atmosphere of some choice "location" or the social contact or something which spells romance when the cameraman begins to grind, there's no getting away from the fact that film circles are developing a strong heart interest—not found in the plots.

Out at Culver City the other day saw three sham weddings and a real one being celebrated. The genuine ceremony found Edward Brophy, unit production manager for the Christy Cabanne company, being united to Anne Paulette, secretary to Norma and Constance Talmadge. The jokers didn't kidnap the bride, but the husband was seized, handcuffed, and placed in a cell for two hours, despite the tearful protests of the Missus.

For a real novel setting the ceremony performed last week on the diamond at the Polo Grounds wins the solid silver dinner set. Right where Frankie Frisch does his stuff around second base—where the double plays are started—found Maybell Pratt of Carbon City, Pa., and Rutger Farnsworth of Rockford, Ark., saying "I do." The wedding marked the culmination of a romance which began last spring at Sarasota, Fla., the training camp of the Giants.

John McGraw, who wrote the Pathe serial, "Play Ball," was best man. As for the ball players they formed two lines—a la military—crossed their bats like officers cross their swords and the happy couple strolled through the "arch."

Last Monday another wedding took place in the Little Church Around the Corner. Ceremonies are always being performed at this famous church—and they usually come off every hour on the hour. This romance of the studio introduces Dorothy Toering, continuity clerk for Frank Tuttle—and who made her debut as a character actress in "The Lucky Devil," and Russell Mathews, who had an interesting career as an adventure-seeker before going into the movies, where he has been Tuttle's right-hand man for several years. Bebe Daniels stood up for the bride and Townsend Martin acted in the same capacity for the groom.

There may be something in the titles of the Tuttle pictures which started this romance. Anyway the happy couple have been associated with "A Kiss in the Dark," "The Manicure Girl," "The Lucky Devil," and "Lovers in Quarantine."

There is another wedding which looms up in the offing. The engagement has just been announced. It features a film romance of several years' duration between Neely Edwards, Century comedian, and Marguerite Snow, one of the screen's earliest stars—who returned to pictures recently. The Yule-Tide season has been marked off the calendar as the time for the ceremony.

Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of International News, surrounded by his principal European executives; top row, Umberto Romagnoli, Rome; Ariel Varges, travelling representative and star cameraman; Emil Salle, Paris; bottom row, George W. Allison, London; ——— Hatrick; Edward Getlin and M. Conquet, Paris.

THE BIOGRAPH MUSKETEERS

THE three musketeers of the old Biograph days are together again. When you see "Heir-Loons," you will discover Ralph Lewis, Sam de Grasse and Frank Campeau—pioneers in the celluloid drama—entertaining you as they did in the good, old days. The old Biograph lot is to motion picture history what Plymouth Rock is to American history. Incidentally the three veterans have hit upon the idea of a great actor-family reunion—which will take place when "The Birth of a Nation" is shown in Los Angeles in a few weeks. Lewis, you'll remember, portrayed the unforgetable role of Stoneman, while de Grasse played Sumner. Campeau later became a member of the Reliance-Majestic company, and is best remembered for his Trampas in "The Virginian."

CODY IN VILLAIN FADE-OUT

THE sinister leer and threatening scowl will no longer disfigure Lew Cody's countenance. This purveyor of villainy on the screen is tired of portraying bad men and in the future will hit up the comedy parts. Cody acknowledges that the fans have come to look upon him as the real thing in rough stuff, but hereafter they will have to accept him as a good guy, with comic trimmings. As the financially embarrassed prince in Marshall Neilan's production of "The Sporting Venus," Cody made a tremendous comedy hit and instead of thrills and chills he is slated for a real laugh-provoker in the coming production—"An Exchange of Wives." directed by Hobart Henley.

Just to show that Greater Movie Season is not confined to the feature length pictures, the male stars under the Educational-Christie banner, celebrate the completion of several comedies especially for that event. Left to right, the comedians are: Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers, Jimmy Adams, Neal Burns, Billy Dooley, Jack Duffy, Eddie Baker and Bill Irving.

MRS. TRIES REPORTER STUNT

MRS. EMILIE JOHNSON, author of "The Last Edition," which F. B. O. will distribute, wasn't content to take a chance on her newspaper atmosphere until she came into contact with the genuine color stuff. Never having worked on a daily, she felt that she ought to get some real first-hand experience. So she approached a Los Angeles city editor, confessed that she was merely a writer of fiction, but willing to take a place on his staff and learn how the game was played. The desk man took her at her word. He sent Mrs. Johnson all "over the map" so far as his particular section of the country was concerned. She rushed to fires, dashed in and out of police headquarters, gave the morgue the "once-over" when necessary and in every way qualified herself as a busy member of the Fourth Estate.

And what is Mrs. Johnson's verdict? "I always wanted to do newspaper work," says the lady. "To me it has ever been a profession full of interest and fascination. But I never had a chance in my youth to do that kind of work. Part of my life was spent in Sweden, and there the opportunities for a girl to enter journalism aren't very rosy. Then when I came to America I was too busy raising a family to do it."

We are willing to agree as to the fascination of reportorial work. But we are also willing to bet that Mrs. Johnson doesn't adopt it as a regular profession. For the money is in the movies.

WE ALICE IN REAL ESTATE

WE are inclined to disagree with the theory that good business sense and artistic leanings won't mix. Alice Calhoun, the Warner Brothers star, is the latest screen luminary to demonstrate that one can keep a nifty eye on the speculation field and profit thereby during the intervals when the camera isn't working. Miss Calhoun, in conjunction with J. J. Curl and Mark M. Hansen, has completed negotiations for erection and operation of a large new Hollywood theatre. A sum of $2,000,000 is said to be involved in the deal, including rentals and cost of improvements.

The holding syndicate, represented by T. Larkin Griffith of W. I. Hollingsworth, H. J. Beck and J. J. Millar, has secured a ninety-year lease on the Jewett property on Hollywood boulevard, between Bronson Avenue and Gower Street, at a rental of $900,000. The new owners of the site will improve it at once with a theatre building to cost $500,000. When completed the theatre will be leased for a twenty-five year period to the syndicate of which Alice Calhoun reigns as queen.

A sum in excess of $500,000 is the rental which Miss Calhoun and her associates have agreed to pay over the twenty-five year period. The auditorium portion of the structure will have a seating capacity of 1250, two sections of the mezzanine floor will be enclosed in glass, one to be devoted exclusively to theatre parties, the other utilized as ladies' and gentlemen's smoking room during the screening of the picture.

Only the other day Lila Lee was reported as having made a big killing in Wall Street. It looks as though our feminine screen stars are fast developing into financial magnates, leaving their male contemporaries among the "also rans."

THAT DE MILLE GIRL

CECILIA DE MILLE, the attractive young daughter of Cecil B. De Mille, has gone into the movies. She will appear in her father's production, "The Road to Yesterday," which is now being filmed. Part of the picture has the Grand Canyon for a setting, so when De Mille took his company to this wonder spot, Cecilia went along for a vacation. However, the director interrupted her happy hours by drafting her into service as an actress, as he needed another character in a hurry. Cecilia gave ample evidence of her heredity in dramatics by playing her part naturally, and without being "camera conscious."

HAVING THEIR SAY

TWO dignitaries connected with Metro-Goldwyn had their say recently when talking shop. One was Irving Thalberg, associate executive for M-G-M, the other was Hobart Henley, the director. Thalberg took as his text—"The Opportunity for In-

Prince Leo traveled all the way from Kansas City to Los Angeles for the Shriners' parade, and decided it was worth it after he met Esther Ralston, Paramount player.

Lewis Stone signs a long-term contract with First National for his services, which have been much in demand. At the left is Al Rockett, who represented First National, and at the right is Freddie Fralick, Stone's business manager.

Mack Swain, veteran comedian, essays a new type of role in Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" (United Artists). Swain is now in New York on a visit with his family.

Valentino sports a new set of sideburns in the Russian role which he portrays in "The Black Eagle," to be his first release through United Artists.

dividual Expression," and enlarged upon his theme by declaring the director of today can express his individuality more than at any other time in the history of the industry.

"In the not-so-distant past," the executive stated, "the director's worries started before his story was chosen and piled up throughout the production. He cast his own players, found his locations, supervised construction of sets and passed judgment on all the minor details, later attending to the cutting and editing. Now his mind is relieved of all the time-consuming details of production—and he can devote himself to infusing all his artistry and ability into making a good picture."

Hobart Henley championed the screen in his arguments. He declared the stage has been the god-father of the screen, but now that the child has become old enough to think for itself, it is, like most children, leading its parent a merry chase.

Says Henley:

"The screen in the last fifteen years has developed faster and become more of a force in American contemporary life than the stage can ever hope to. The greatest reason may be that a small can of film is much easier and less expensive to transport over the country than a troupe of actors—and for fifty or sixty-five cents, the theatregoer may see the best talent available on the screen at any time of the day, while people living even in fairly sizeable towns have to wait months to see a star of any calibre, and then pay $3.00 or $4.00 to see him supported by a second or third rate company."

Lorna Duveen, leading lady in "The Knockout" (First National) admiring four baby skunks between scenes on location. Rather unusual pastime, isn't it?

One of the beauties of whom much is seen (take it any way you like) in "The Half-Way Girl" (First National) is Muriel Shaw, shown above.

THE HOPI WHOOPS

THE Hopi Indians on the reservation at Prescott, Arizona, are going to whoop it up for Hunt Stromberg one of these early days. Their tribal ceremonies are considered the most remarkable and picturesque of all Indian rites—and are held but once a year. Naturally, all the Hopis who have migrated elsewhere return, just like the visiting firemen, to participate in the doings. Stromberg and his cameramen are down there to catch the ceremonies for "The Last Frontier," the picture originally planned by Thomas H. Ince, which is now being completed as a testimonial to the famous producer.

C. BAKER JOINS INSPIRATION

C. GRAHAM BAKER, known to filmland at large for many years as scenario Editor for Vitagraph, and later with Fox, has signed up with Inspiration Pictures. Mr. Baker is now engaged in framing up the plot of "Just Suppose" featuring Richard Barthelmess. The fans will remember him as the author of the successful scenarios—"The Kreutezer Sonata," "Loyalties" and "The Winding Stairs."

Noah Beery carries on an intellectual conversation with a real "highbrow" in "The Coming of Amos" (Producers Dist. Corp.), the first Rod LaRocque vehicle.

Paramount Negotiating with Balaban and Katz

No Decision Reached Yet On Big Merger

FAMOUS Players-Lasky Corporation and Balaban & Katz are engaged in negotiations looking toward a merger of interests, under just what arrangements remains to be seen. Authentic news of the proposed merger came to this publication this week from its Chicago correspondent, who telegraphed as follows:

"Reports in the daily press that Barney Balaban had returned from New York and made the statement that the Balaban & Katz-Paramount negotiations for merger were under way sent B. & K. stock to a new high level of 83, on Monday.

"Mr. Balaban would not confirm the merger report but admitted negotiations of some kind were going on."

If the merger is consummated, it will be the biggest of its kind in the history of the industry and will have a far-reaching effect.

When the Chicago wire was read to Harold B. Franklin, head of the Famous Players theatre department, he said: "I can add nothing to the telegram you have just read me."

Meanwhile, Balaban & Katz are rapidly extending their interests in the Middle West. It was reported that an agreement had been made with Fitzpatrick & McElroy, who operate a large chain in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana. At the Fitzpatrick & McElroy offices in Chicago, the report was neither confirmed nor denied. "Nothing to say," was the only comment made.

Specifically, it was reported that the controlling stock in the Michigan City Theatre Corporation had been bought by Fitzpatrick & McElroy in association with Balaban & Katz. This brings all four theatres in Michigan City under one control and gives Fitzpatrick & McElroy a chain of 41 houses owned and 50 with which they have booking arrangements.

The Michigan Film Review this week stated that the reported agreement between Balaban & Katz and the Fitzpatrick & McElroy group specifies that the latter shall keep out of Chicago in return for which B. & K. promise not to enter any of the towns in which Fitzpatrick & McElroy are established. Another provision, says the Michigan paper, is that Fitzpatrick & McElroy get first choice on certain film product for their down state territory.

Through Lubliner & Trinz, an affiliated organization, Balaban & Katz have also secured an interest in the Lynch Theatres, Inc., comprising 23 houses in Chicago and adjacent suburban cities. Several of these theatres have large seating capacity. It is reported that Balaban & Katz will buy pictures for the Lynch circuit and this would seem a natural development of the deal.

The Lynch transaction brings the number of theatres affiliated with Balaban & Katz up to two hundred. Outstanding among the affiliations of B. & K. are the Kunsky circuit and A. H. Blank.

Both of the latter are First National franchiseholders, as are B. & K. In view of the proposed merger with Famous Players, interest was created in the industry as to the possible effect this would have on First National-Paramount relations.

It is well known, of course, that Sam Katz is a very important figure in First National. The scope of the merger negotiations might therefore be very wide, but no authoritative information could be obtained on this point.

In well-informed circles, it is being said that the battle-lines in the theatre war between the big producer-distributors will be clearly defined before many weeks have passed. In this connection, many observers are hazarding the guess that Paramount had a distinct influence on the recent West Coast Theatres deal, which was, at one time, all set with Fox, and afterwards fell through, Fox obtaining a minority interest only. When the smoke of battle cleared away, First National had control of the West Coast chain, through the formation of a voting trust, with E. V. Richards, Jr., head of the governing board which operates the chain.

This led some observers to the belief that a strong influence had intervened to prevent the West Coast circuit from going outside First National. Or, to put it another way, the Katz-Paramount negotiations were already in progress when the West Coast deal came up.

As stated before, this point of view lies in the realm of guesses, but there are strong indications that it has a foundation.

It was also observed this week that Famous Players had made an unsuccessful offer direct for the West Coast circuit, this being the second instance in which the former company had sought to acquire one of the big factors in First National—the other being, of course, the Nathan H. Gordon chain in New England. The latter deal was consummated.

If the Balaban & Katz-Paramount merger becomes a reality, and results in a combination of theatre interests, Famous Players will then directly or indirectly have control over or a voice in the operation of the following, which have always been accounted outstanding factors in First National: the Balaban & Katz; A. H. Blank and John H. Kunsky interests.

It will be recalled that E. E. Shauer, foreign manager for Famous Players, in a recent statement, thus far not denied, declared that Paramount had 358 theatres in the United States. If the interpretation of the situation as given above is correct, the consummation of the deal with Balaban & Katz, taking into account the latter's affiliated interests, would bring the Paramount list up to more than five hundred. And, if the West Coast chain can be figured as being in line through the deal made last week in which Sam Katz must have played a big part, then Famous Players and its associates would have control or an equivalent over about 700 theatres.

It is some such analysis as this which leads close observers to call the present situation "the battle of the giants."

In any event, the extension of Paramount theatre interests goes steadily on. Negotiations are pending for a pooling arrangement with Nathan Robbins, operator of New York upstate houses, ten in number in Utica, Syracuse and Watertown.

The arrangement, it is reported, would provide for a pool to be operated by the Famous Players theatre department. The Famous houses are located in Yonkers, Poughkeepsie, Lockport, Newburgh and other towns, most of which have been acquired recently.

All-Night Bugaboo is Again Up in Seattle

Seattle's ever-present film bugaboo, the question of "all-night" movies, has sprung up again to break the tranquility of the motion picture situation in the Seattle City Council chambers. For the last year Councilman Robert Hesketh has been attempting to force the closing of all motion picture houses at midnight. Up to this time, a number of the small second run theatres "below the line" have been operating twenty-hour programs. And again Mr. Hesketh's efforts seem doomed to disappointment.

Mr. Hesketh has been battling in behalf of a bill introduced by Mrs. Bertha Landes, former councilwoman. At the last meeting of the council, the matter was indefinitely postponed, following reports by operators of some of the all-night shows. It now appears that the postponement is likely to be final.

Chaplin-Mayer Picture Company Dissolved

Papers noting the voluntary dissolution if the Chaplin-Mayer Picture Company of New York were filed with the secretary of state in Albany during the past week. The company was incorporated on September 30, 1919, with a capitalization of $1,000,000. The officers of the company were Louis B. Mayer, of Hollywood, Calif., president; Colman Levin of Boston, Mass., vice-president; J. Robert Rubin, of New York city, secretary, and Oscar Grosberg, of Boston, treasurer.

Crandall Officials Deny Sale Reports

Wilmer & Vincent Acquire Important Altoona Theatre— Stanley and Butterfield Expanding

CONSIDERABLE attention was given in the trade this week to reports that the Crandall Circuit in Washington, D. C., one of the most important in the country, was about to be sold. MOTION PICTURE NEWS made direct inquiry through its Washington Correspondent, who reported as follows:

"Crandall officials deny circuit will be sold. Several offers have been made for the circuit from time to time, as for every circuit, but none has been given serious consideration."

Reports concerning the Crandall chain were revived when it became known that William Fox was in Washington this week.

It had also been reported that the Stanley Company of America, which is expanding to the southward, would take over the Crandall theatres, but Stanley officials also denied that such negotiations were pending. The Stanley interests have recently acquired four theatres that were for several years owned and operated by the Topkis-Ginns interests in Wilmington, Del.

Among other circuit news was the announcement by Walter Vincent of the purchase of the large Victoria theatre and office building in Altoona, Pa., by Wilmer & Vincent.

This property was built only a few years ago, and owned at first by Athenas George, who at one time owned and operated the Victoria theatre in Harrisburg. The Altoona property, however, subsequently passed into the hands of Lee & Karides, from whom Wilmer & Vincent have just made the purchase. The consideration was not made public. The papers are to be passed in a week or two.

While both Mr. Vincent and C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg representatives of the Wilmer & Vincent Company, confirmed the purchase of the Altoona property, they declined to discuss the report that the company acquired the theatre for the purpose of transferring it subsequently to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which is reported to be about ready to close a deal whereby it will acquire sixteen Pennsylvania theatres from Wilmer & Vincent.

While it is believed in authoritative though unofficial circles that the Altoona will be included among those that Famous Players-Lasky contemplate buying, and that the Wilmer & Vincent purchase of the Altoona theatre was made merely to facilitate the bigger deal, neither Mr. Vincent nor Mr. Hopkins would confirm this impression. Nor would they yet admit that Famous Players-Lasky will acquire any of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres.

A block of boulevard frontage at the Northeast corner of Linwood boulevard and Troost avenue, Kansas City, has been designated as the site for a 14-story shop building and the largest motion picture theatre in Kansas City, a 90-day option to purchase the tract having been given by M. H. Cohen of Des Moines to W. C. Gumm, who was represented by Al Finkelstein of the Harry Finkelstein Realty and Theatres Company. The price stipulated was $500,000.

It has been persistently rumored in Kansas City for the last two months that Metro-Goldwyn was negotiating for a large suburban theatre. Mr. Gumm admitted negotiations were pending for the leasing of the theatre to a large motion picture producer, but declined to name the company. Plans are being prepared by H. Alexander Drake, architect.

The plans provide for a theatre on the ground floor level with a seating capacity of 3,760. The theatre stage, as outlined, would be one of the largest in the city, being adequate for the largest of prologues. The estimated cost of the building, as shown in the architect's plans, would be $2,500,000, which with the ground, would be a total investment of $3,000,000.

At a meeting of the stock-holders of the Consolidated Theatres, Inc., Detroit, W. S. Butterfield purchased the controlling interest in the stock and was elected president of the new company. His purchase of the Consolidated Theatres coming within a month after his purchase of the lease of the Powers Theatre gives him control of the amusement situation in Grand Rapids. The Majestic, Orpheum, Isis and Strand theatre are in the consolidated group. Two are straight picture houses while two play combination bills.

On July 18 the wrecking crew started razing the City Hall at Owosso, Michigan, which site is to be utilized for the new 1200 seat Capitol Theatre, which will be operated by the Butterfield interests. The ceremony of the breaking of the ground will take place on August 1st. Plans call for completion of the theatre by the middle of December, and the formal opening will take place during the Christmas Holidays.

Plans for the new theatre at Ann Arbor, Mich., are being completed, and Colonel Butterfield announces that construction work will be under way by Fall. Also that work on the new Capitol Theatre at Flint will commence in the very near future.

Booking Combine Plans Change in Chicago

PLANS for a Chicago booking combination which would include Cooney Brothers, Karzas, Coston and Ascher Brothers, preliminary papers for which were signed about ten days ago, have been changed, and Cooney Brothers, Karzas and Coston will constitute the interests which will unite for film buying purposes.

The houses which will constitute the new circuit include Cooney Brothers' Capitol, Stratford, Chatham, Hamilton and Cosmopolitan, and two large theatres in the course of construction; Andrew Karzas' Woodlawn Theatre and two theatres which he is erecting, the Robey and the large house in Hammond, Indiana; and the seventeen houses constituting the 63rd Street Theatres, which have been booked for some time past by James Coston.

It is understood that a story in the Chicago daily press which indicated that Ascher Brothers had secured control or merged with Cooney Brothers, Karzas and Coston, aroused considerable antagonism among Cooney Brothers stockholders, of which there are a large number, and prevented the combination, as originally planned.

Buffalo Council Refuses the Riverside Co. Permit

The petition of the Riverside Amusement company for a permit for the construction and operation of a moving picture theatre at Tonawanda and Prairie streets was denied this week by the Buffalo city council. Property owners and residents in the vicinity were opposed to a permit being granted. It is likely that Charles F. Boine, attorney for the petitioner, will apply for a mandamus order compelling the council to grant the permit.

The house planned was to have cost $200,000 and it was reported that the Shea Amusement company was interested in leasing it.

Loew Co. Takes Lease on Star Theatre, Cleveland

The Loew's Ohio Theatres last week acquired a ten-year lease on the Star theatre, a former downtown burlesque house in Cleveland. It is located on what is down as lower Euclid Ave. The theatre is old and delapidated, but contracts have already been let for an entire new front and complete new equipment and interior decorations. This makes the ninth Cleveland house for Loew's Ohio. The others are the Stillman, Allen, State, Park, Mall, Alhambra, Liberty and Doan. Negotiations were completed through the offices of Joseph Laronge, Union Trust Bldg.

Samuels and Hyman to Build New Atlanta Theatre

Adolph Samuels, veteran showman in Atlanta, who owns the Alamo No. 2 theatre here, and Hyman Jacobs, financier, have jointly bought the property in West End and intend to build a block of business houses, offices and stores, and a model suburban theatre. The property is located on Gordon street, near Lee, and is valued at about $15,000.

Schine Corp. Will Build New Fairport House

Fairport, N. Y., is to have a new motion picture theatre. The J. Meyer Schine Theatre corporation will build a house in West avenue, just west of the Jacobson block. The Schine company operate the Rivoli theatre in the same town.

Burford Acquires a Third House in Arkansas City

Roy Burford has acquired the Isis theatre in Arkansas City, Kas. Burford now controls that city, operating in addition to the Isis, the Burford, Rex and Strand theatres there.

Europe Needs Showmen in Every Branch of Industry

Vast Opportunity Seen by News Staff Man Abroad

By L. C. Moen

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles on the European film situation, based upon personal observation, by a member of the News editorial staff who has just returned from abroad. Recognizing the growing importance of the European market and the vital changes which are taking place there, the News desired to obtain its own first-hand story of what is going on. Succeeding articles will go into the trend of production, distribution and exhibition in each of the leading European nations and in relation to the American world market.)

THE story is told of a traveler, journeying by train across a small European country, who, upon looking from the coach window and seeing a Titian-haired damsel, wrote in his notebook the entry: "The women of this country have red hair." Perhaps I do not quote the story quite accurately, but it will illustrate the point. Travelers are prone to base their judgment of a country on just such scanty evidence. I met a tourist in Boulogne who assured me that the French currency was about to collapse. He knew, because he had talked with a bank clerk in Paris. The next day the franc staged a substantial recovery. I met another in Hanover who had been in one German motion picture theatre, and who assured me that the movie houses were "terrible — positively terrible!" That statement, too, proved substantially untrue.

So let me state at the outset that I make no claims to omniscience in this matter of the European film situation, and that I shall try in these articles merely to set forth as clearly and honestly as possible my necessarily sketchy impressions of that field, reinforced by the opinions and statements of men far better qualified to judge of the outlook than I.

Yet even that is not easy. You can find in Europe an opinion of whatever complexion you seek. One man will assure you that the public wants nothing but American films. The very next man you meet will inform you that the public is weary of them and craves more European pictures. A producer will assure you that it is virtually impossible to finance picture making in Europe today—and another scoffs at the idea and shows you where he has finances available for a dozen films.

Still, taking the matter by and large, that is not surprising. The film industry, even in America, has never been noted for frankness in the giving out of information. There is a strong faction in Europe devoted mainly to the distribution of American films, and another interested in the making and distribution of European product, so there is nothing remarkable about the fact that this should lead to a rather chaotic situation. In spite of the maze of conflicting rumors, denials, reports and opinions it is possible to draw a few sound conclusions as to what is going on—and what is coming.

Let me, at the outset, express my appreciation of the courtesy and co-operation that have been extended to me by every faction in my effort to gain a true picture of the situation. Producers, distributors, theatre managers, newspaper men, tradepaper editors, exchange managers, American representatives, film brokers, laboratory men, players and directors, publicity men—all of these have, often at great personal inconvenience, aided me in every possible way to get at the bottom of things as directly as could be. Except for that hearty assistance and co-operation, I should have seen much less during my necessarily brief stay in each European centre.

First and foremost, I bring away from Europe the conviction that there is here a tremendous potential field and an outstanding opportunity for showmanship. Just who is going to develop that field and cash in on that opportunity remains to be seen—and the battle lines are forming right now for the struggle. That struggle will not be merely American vs. European, but one American company against another, and European firms against each other, with still other factions consisting of alliances between American and European distributors. And it is my guess that the last named, in some form, will win.

But above all, showmanship—using the word in its best sense—is the outstanding need in Europe. Showmanship in the production of box-office pictures. Showmanship in the creation of a larger picture going public. Showmanship in the operation of better theatres. And so on down the line.

Thus, far, probably no one will disagree. But the mistake that can be—and is being—made is to assume that pure and unadulterated American showmanship is the required article. That is somewhat wide of the mark. The European public is not the American public. The European and the American may be brothers under the skin, but there is a wide divergence in their tastes, their customs and their modes of thought. What is altogether proper to an American may appear shocking or, more likely, absurd to a European.

To further complicate the problem, each European country has its own peculiar problems. We, here in America, think of Europe as just "Europe," without making any particular distinctions between one nation and another.

Yet if we would stop to consider for a moment the wide difference in exhibiting conditions, say, in North Carolina and in Ohio, or in Texas and in California, we would realize how much wider must be this divergence in Europe, where differences of race, language, customs, climate, government and politics exist in endless variety.

Generalizations about Europe, for that reason, are likely to be misleading. To say that Europe is prosperous or needy, that theatres are good or bad, that production is increasing or waning, may be completely misleading. England has certain conditions peculiar to herself. The Scandinavian countries are in a situation entirely their own. France has problems of a yet different nature. Germany has outstripped Europe in certain directions, yet is seriously hampered in other ways. Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, Spain—each of these must be considered on its own merits and in the light of its particular conditions.

For one thing, the general prosperity of Europe fluctuates widely. In some countries currency is on a stable gold basis. In others it fluctuates from day to day, with the dollar abnormally high, making it expensive for those nations to buy from America. In certain spots, unemployment is widespread. In others, workmen are busy and factories humming.

The after-effects of the war are felt keenly everywhere, and it will be many years before Europe can reach its maximum value as a market. In spite of that, however, Europe is becoming a far better market than it has been, and it can be brought to a much higher point, even under present conditions.

Showmanship is the vital need—showmanship fitted to European conditions. Americans—as companies or as individuals—cannot apply American methods without change or alteration and hope to succeed in the fullest measure. American methods of distribution, exhibition and exploitation may be the finest in the world—for use in America—but many of them will only arouse antagonism and sales resistance in Europe; already have, in fact, here and there.

Europe has, in the past, been an easy money field for American companies; a place where a little "velvet" could be brought in to add to the margin of profit. Much American product has been sold abroad at ridiculous prices and given to the exhibitor at paltry rentals. That has obtained widespread representation for American films, but it has not brought in anything like the income that this market might well yield.

Those "easy money" days are drawing to an end in Europe. The pressure of economic conditions, both in America and abroad, is rapidly bringing about a situation in Europe identical with that here.

Paramount Picture School is Opened

Eighteen Carefully Selected Students Hear Addresses by Company Executives Before Starting Studies

THE Paramount Pictures School was formally opened Monday, July 20th, at the Astoria studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, where the classes are to be completed. Fitting ceremonies marked the opening which was attended by officials of the organization and the eighteen fortunate students selected from 30,000 applicants from all sections of the United States. The course will be conducted for the purpose of developing new actors and actresses for the screen.

Addresses were made by Dr. John Haynes Holmes, Adolph Zukor, President of Famous Players and by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of production. Talks of welcome also were made by S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players; Walter Wanger, general production manager, Edwin C. King, head of the Eastern studios; and Tom Terriss, well known director, who will be principal of the Paramount School.

Of those chosen for the first term of the school, which will last for six months, nine are young women between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five, and nine are youths between eighteen and thirty. First announcement of the winners follows:

Josephine Dunn, Robert Andrews, Greg Blackton, Charles Brokaw, Claud Buchanan, Walter J. Gross, John Luden, Ethelda Kenvin and Mona Palma of New York City; Lorraine Eason, Wilbur Dillon, and Laverne Lindsay of Hollywood, Cal.; Irving Hartley of Culver City, Cal.; Marian Ivy Harris of Atlanta, Ga.; Harriett Krauth of Medford Hillside, Mass.; Dorothy Nourse, of Roxbury, Mass.; Thelma Todd, of Lawrence, Mass.; and Charles E. Rogers of Olatha, Kansas.

Enrollment was followed by organization into class groups, after which the fortunate young folks were conducted on a tour of the studio. Following a studio luncheon, a faculty reception was held and talks given by company officials.

In addition to Mr. Terriss, the faculty will consist of George Currie, pantomime; H. M. K. Smith, modern attire; Hal Clarendon, period costume and make-up; Morgia Lytton, period costumes; Virginia Terhune Van de Water, etiquette; John G. Toomey, physical training; Leo Tover, photographer; and Randolph Rogers, business manager.

Members of the school will be taught everything that a finished motion picture actor needs to know. All those displaying suitable ability will be offered contracts to appear in Paramount pictures. These contracts will be for one year but will carry an option for five more years.

Following in part is the address forwarded by Jesse L. Lasky to the students:

"On this, the opening day of the first term of the Paramount School, it is a matter of profound regret to me that I am unable to be present and to extend by personal greetings to the Faculty and students. However, I want to assure every one of you that I am with you in spirit, if not physically, and I shall watch your progress with an interest that springs from a great personal enthusiasm for the School, its purposes and accomplishments.

"The swift development of the motion picture's popularity long ago brought about a serious situation; the producers, despite the march of an army of aspiring young actors on Hollywood, found themselves facing a scarcity of good actors and actresses—men and women who combined the skill of their craft with that elusive personality that endears the great stars to the public. All the producers realized the problem, but the search for new personalities was for the most part haphazard and ineffectual.

"Just as it was Paramount that years ago brought the stars of the stage to the screen and lifted the motion picture out of the bog of mediocrity, so it is Paramount today that is trying to solve this new problem. About a year ago we conceived the idea of forming a school wherein would be trained those young men and women who gave promise of being successful on the screen. All over this vast land of ours thousands of boys and girls have felt within their breasts the ambitions to act on the screen. Many of these thousands left their homes and stormed the studios of Hollywood. There in the rush of picture making, nobody could find the time from his studio work to hear them, judge them and give them an opportunity. Out of the countless hundreds, only a few, through lucky opportunity, found their way through that camel's eye that is the door to screen success. But in that army of the unsuccessful surely there must have been some of the very people that the studios were begging for.

"Therefore, the Paramount School, while performing the selfish function of providing additional players for the screen, also opens the door to the young men and women of America who seek their fame and fortune in the motion picture.

"Before you stretches a golden avenue of opportunity. At the end of that avenue dwells success, and in its home some of you will find wealth and fame and, above all, the opportunity to bring high adventure and happiness to millions throughout the world. Truly yours is a glorious heritage!

"But I want to talk to you of your responsibility; and when I speak please believe me I speak from fifteen years' experience as the active producing executive of the biggest studio in the world. I have seen players come and go; I have seen extra girls rise to the dizziest heights of stardom, and I have seen the brightest stars lose their lustre and fade into obscurity. Therefore, my dear young ladies and gentlemen, at the risk of being a bore, for the moment I am going to be fatherly and give you some advice about the responsibility which the screen places on your shoulders. I am going to show you the other side of that great shining light which we call public favor.

"The public is lavish to its favorites. Wealth, fame and happiness are showered upon the lucky mortals who win its smile. But while it smiles, it also demands the strictest obedience to its laws; and disobedience brings punishment that is as swift as it is terrible.

"Never for one moment forget this responsibility. If you win great material success in your new profession beware of the temptations which follow in the wake of your victory. Constant pitfalls lurk in the path of the successful, no matter what profession they adopt. They are no more numerous in motion pictures than in any other line of endeavor; and character and sensible, wholesome living will make you prevail against them here as well as elsewhere. But when you are a motion picture player you are a public character, and your actions and your conduct are a matter of public concern. You must govern yourselves accordingly, and let nothing you do bring the slightest smirch upon the profession which today is accepting you as one of its members.

"So in your own life, in your own conduct, do nothing that will affront our most prized dreams. Be decent, be honorable, be loyal to your teachers, loyal to your company, loyal to the best in your profession, and above all, be loyal to that great multitude of your friends, the public."

Penn. Censors Ban Dance for Prince of Wales

THE Pennsylvania Board of Censors has prohibited the showing in Pennsylvania of close-ups and near views of native women of Zululand nude from the waist up in their dances for the entertainment of the Prince of Wales, as contained in International Newsreel's semi-weekly issue No. 58.

International has ordered the elimination of all such scenes from every print used in Pennsylvania, from where came the only protests from a censor board against the showing of these pictures. They are said to have been received by acclaim by the British in London.

New Film Companies Given Pennsylvania Charters

Charters have just been granted at the Pennsylvania State Department, at the capitol in Harrisburg, to the following new corporations:

Cinecraft Films, Philadelphia, $5,000 capital stock; $500 paid in; par value $50, organized for the manufacture of motion pictures. Anna W. Morrison, 6149 Walnut street, Philadelphia, is treasurer of the corporation, owning one share of stock. She is one of the incorporators, the others being Julia B. Janson, 324 West Dupont street, Philadelphia, one share; and T. Bailey Stinson, 5332 Yocum street, Philadelphia, one share.

The West End Theatre Company, Norristown, $50,000 capitalization; paid in $5,000; par value $100, organized for the operation and maintenance of places of public amusement; Joseph H. Woodward, 22 West Freedly street, Norristown, is treasurer, and the incorporators are Dante DiRocco, 121 East Main street, Norristown, 250 shares; Curwen S. Schlosser, 1217 West Main street, Norristown, 10 shares, and John Schoeller, 757 Kohn street, Norristown, 10 shares.

Test Case on Arbitration To Be Heard in Court

Seider Issues Statement on Latest Development

A TEST case on the validity of the present arbitration system will be made in the New York County Supreme Court and in the Federal Courts, it became known this week. Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, issued a statement in which he declared that "we feel we are justified in taking steps to compel a legal determination of our rights."

The test is to be made in the case of the Apollo Exchange vs. Wellmont Theatre, Inc., operated by Harry H. Wellenbrink, theatre owner, of New Jersey. The action was brought by the exchange through Louis Phillips, counsel for the New York Film Board of Trade.

Mr. Seider announced that the organization would back Mr. Wellenbrink in his defense of the case, which arose over a default judgment, and that counsel had also been instructed to bring a Federal action for alleged damages sustained by Mr. Wellenbrink "through exchanges at the same time refusing him film, unless he paid the default judgment or deposited with each of them the sum of $250."

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Film Board of Trade, declined to comment on the matter. Mr. Seider's statement follows:

"We feel that we have exhausted every efforts to show the merits of our claims to those in whose hands lies the power to give to the theatre owners of the country an equitable contract, and based on a fair contract, arbitration, unencumbered by rules and procedure that take away from the theatre owner his property rights.

"It was our sincere hope that this situation would be settled within the industry. What fairer method could there be than a debate on the merits? Yet, Mr. Hays has seen fit to ignore our invitation. We know that Mr. Hays is not in town, but his office has not even extended us the courtesy of acknowledging the receipt of our letter. Further, they have caused statements to be printed to the effect that they will ignore our offer to debate the issues.

"The challenge to Mr. Hays to debate the issues involved, is equal to an offer to arbitrate the shortcomings of the present arbitration system, predicated on an unfair contract.

"We feel that we are justified in taking steps to compel a legal determination of our rights. Our members must be protected. We cannot continue longer without relief of the condition of terrorism in our industry, particularly, as it relates to dealings arising out of the purchase and booking of pictures.

"Mr. W. Gavazzi King, in his report to the British organization on the Milwaukee Convention, stated in part: 'But the M. P. T. O. has been negotiating with the Renters organization and a standard contract of abnormal length and of a character which would have produced a revolt amongst your members, has been framed. Of course, the M. P. T. O. of America is not responsible for the contract. It has consistently refused to accept it.'

"Mr. Pettijohn, attorney for the Hays organization and the Film Board of Trade, has repeatedly, forcibly stated that they want 'teeth' in the arbitration clause. They paid $10,000 to a firm of lawyers, outside of their organization, to put the 'teeth' in.

"The reason so much money was paid for the drafting of this one clause is that the procedure is illegal. The great desire for the 'teeth' in the clause, by the Hays organization was the cause for the effort to obtain from high-priced lawyers some kind of clause that would pass legal scrutiny. This, to our minds, is the reason for the fear of the Hays organization to submit the question to an unbiased and equitable tribunal. They would prefer to rely on the condition of terrorism now prevalent—on their belief that the theatre owner is a coward and would not resist —on the belief that the theatre owner is not organized.

"The theatre owner is organized and he will resist and his organization is behind him to the extent of all its resources.

"In order to collect from an exhibitor, who denies the right of the distributor to cite him before an arbitration board, claiming that he had been compelled to sign the contract with the arbitration clause, under the penalty that he would not be sold any film; the Film Boards of Trade, controlled by the Hays organization, obtain a judgment by default and proceed to collect this judgment, by all members of the Film Board of Trade concertedly refusing the theatre owner film. The Film Boards of Trade claim the right to this procedure under the arbitration clause for the drawing of which they paid $10,000.

"But this is 1925. The New York F.I.L.M. Club tried this on Harry H. Wellenbrink, who operates three theatres in New Jersey. Mr. Wellenbrink refused to become terrorized. He came to his organization for protection. Mr. Wellenbrink acceded to the demands of all the members of the New York F.I.L.M. Club with whom he did business and put up with each exchange $250 and had faith in himself and in his being right and in his organization.

"Finding that Mr. Wellenbrink refused to become 'buffaloed' or scared by the bug-a-boo, the Apollo Exchange, through the attorney for the F.I.L.M. Club, Louis Phillips, did what they could and should have done in the first place. They applied to the courts for an order compelling arbitration. Whether they will receive such an order will soon be determined. They surely would receive the order compelling arbitration if their contract were equitable; if their procedure were fair; if they would not concertedly force the theatre owner to sign this contract; if they did not force the theatre owner to sign the contract with the arbitration clause under the penalty of not receiving any film. Thus it is clear that there is no need of this $10,000 clause that makes the Film Board of Trade arbitration system both the judge and the sheriff. They render the judgment and then proceed to collect it.

"The case referred to is now pending in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, New York County. The title is 'Apollo Exchange, Inc., plaintiff versus Wellmont Theatre, Inc., defendant.' It is scheduled for hearing next Friday. Our attorney, Norman H. Samuelson, is appearing for our member. Additional counsel has been engaged, who will make their appearance in due time. In addition, our attornev has been instructed to prepare a complaint in an action in the United States Court for damages sustained by Mr. Wellenbrink through exchanges at the same time refusing him film, unless he paid the default judgment or deposited with each of them the sum of $250. In this action, the arbitrators not selected by Mr. Wellenbrink, who took the law in their own hands and gave a default judgment, will be included.

"Thereby, a legal determination of the validity of the high-priced clause, will be obtained in spite of the attitude of the Hays organization. Just another form of debate, only officially before the same court, as suggested in my letter. The only difference is that in this way the decision will be absolutely binding. Just another way of obtaining for the theatre owner a square deal, only more expensive and it is thrashed out in public instead of within the industry.

"Although these matters have been pending for a long time, in fact before the Milwaukee convention, the Trade Paper Editors have refrained from editorial comment on this troublesome subject. We are sorry. The investment of the theatre owner, who is the outlet of the production of this industry, are jeopardized and yet the unbiased branch of this industry is silent.

"The fight is not the writer's. The fine tribute received by him during and after the New Jersey Convention, would satisfy the most vain person and, therefore, he could not truthfully be charged with seeking publicity. It is the very existence of the theatre owner that is at stake. This and the availability to him of quality product.

"Mr. Elliott's group apparently are playing square. Their first pledge has been fulfilled. They have appointed their committee to meet with us to frame a mutually fair contract and arbitration system.

M.P.T.O.A. Board to Meet in Detroit

Steffes and Woodhull Issue Statements—Session to Be Held on July 30 at Hotel Wolverine

A MEETING of the national board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held at the Hotel Wolverine, Detroit, on July 30, and important matters will come up for discussion.

In advance of the meeting W. A. Steffes, President of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest and of the Allied States organization, which went back into the M. P. T. O. A. at Milwaukee, issued a statement this week in which he declared that the Allied group would go to Detroit "demanding to rid the organization of one-man rule."

Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board, had nothing to say regarding the Steffes statement.

A brief statement in this connection was issued by R. F. Woodhull, National President, as follows:

"Acceptances to date indicate full meeting of the National Board of Directors, Detroit, July 30. Any reports of break prior to this meeting are manifestly premature and must be receiving encouragement from sources unfriendly to exhibitor organization."

Mr. Steffes' statement follows:

"Members of the Allied group, backed by other conscientious directors of the organization, are going to the National Board of Directors meeting in Detroit on July 30, demanding to rid the organization of one man rule.

"The time is at hand for a show down. We are going through with a campaign for reform, even though we expect it will subject us to attack as radicals and Bolsheviks. We (the Allied) do not want to again withdraw from the National organization and don't intend to, unless our efforts to accomplish reforms are futile. But neither will we sit idly by and see the organization develop into an autocracy at the time when the very life of the independent exhibitor trembles in the balance.

"To date there has never been a meeting of the Play Date Bureau Committee, of which I am a member. At least I have never been notified of such meeting. At the meeting of the Board of Directors in New York the Play Date Bureau, by unanimous vote of the directors, was separated entirely from the M. P. T. O. A., yet someone, who is attempting to constitute himself the supreme power of the organization, has seen fit, contrary to the decree of the Board of Directors, to broadcast propaganda for the Bureau under the official seal of the organization.

"The recent Finance Committee meeting, of which I am also a member, together with G. E. Cross, of Michigan; M. E. Comerford, of Pennsylvania; Harry Davis of Pittsburgh, and Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, was a joke and a crime and there was nothing accomplished, whatever. Spending exhibitors' money to bring members to New York only to meet with manipulations, trickery, etc., which prevented any action, is not in keeping with our idea of proper conduct of the organization and we don't intend to tolerate it any longer."

Pathe Forms Public Relations Dept.

Miss Regge Doran Heads Bureau to Establish Personal Contact Service to Exhibitors

A DEPARTMENT of Public Relations is the new service innovation which Pathe will establish to render personal contact service for exhibitors, it was announced this week by Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of the distributing concern. Mr. Pearson has engaged Miss Regge Doran, who organized and conducted the highly successful Public Relations Department in operation for some time at the West Coast Theatres, Inc., chain of houses in California, to form the department and direct its work for Pathe.

According to Mr. Pearson, Pathe believes that they can go further in aiding exhibitors by the type of personal contact service than by limiting the cooperation to the regularly accepted forms of publicity and advertising. The Department of Public Relations, although a separate entity, will work in close co-operation with the Exploitation, Publicity and Advertising Departments of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

In citing Miss Doran's work on the Pacific Coast, Mr. Pearson recalled one example of her work which was especially beneficial to e hibitors and motion pictures generally in the state of California. In this instance, Miss Doran so interested a prominent social group in the real purpose of motion picture entertainment that the entire body and its state affiliations backed her work and adopted the excellent slogan "Make the Best Pictures Pay."

A native of Scotland, Miss Doran expressed interest in music and art at an early age. She lived in the leading cities of Europe where she continued her cultural education. Then she came to America and entered Barnard College of Columbia University. At the University she showed her aptitude for things dramatic by acting in and directing undergraduate plays. After graduation, as one of the Washington Square Players and, later as ingenue lead for Richard Bennett, she gained the intimate knowledge of the theatre which she is now putting to such practical use.

She staged the Brooklyn pageant, celebrating the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims. Then she tried her hand at newspaper writing, both in New York and in Los Angeles. She wrote continuities and adapted stories in the Hollywood Studios, where she acquired the "screen angle" which is the "open sesame" to the picture business. Miss Doran's Public Relations activities started while she was assistant Managing Director of the Criterion Theatre in Los Angeles.

Miss Doran enters her duties with Pathe Exchange, Inc., on August 3rd and will immediately organize the Department of Public Relations.

"Roxy" to Preside Over N. Y. Circuit

With Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, Rothafel Will Build at Least Six Houses in New York City

S. L. ROTHAFEL will be at the head of a circuit of large motion picture houses in New York City, according to the plans of Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin and Rothafel, just disclosed. The announcement comes upon the heels of the deal recently consummated by the Sawyer-Lubin-Rothafel combination whereby the "Roxy" theatre, the largest in the world will be erected at Fiftieth Street and Seventh Avenue.

It is planned to erect at least six theatres of enormous seating capacity and luxurious appointment at carefully chosen spots in Greater New York with Roxy, presiding over the entire circuit as director and embodying in each new theatre his personal genius in matters of presentation and screen entertainment.

The "Roxy," to be built at Fiftieth Street and Seventh Avenue, will be designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, internationally known architect of Chicago, who has been responsible for the plans for several of the largest theatres in the middle west, and who will also design each of the houses in the "Roxy" circuit.

The first theatre in the Sawyer-Lubin Rothafel combination will have 6212 seats, involving an expenditure placed at $7,000,000 covering real estate and construction, and will offer to the motion picture going public for the first time a reserved loge section of eleven hundred seats.

Many innovations in the matters of seating, lighting, stage construction and general appointment, will be placed into effect in the "Roxy," by the man for whom the theatre is named, and who, through his successful direction of the Strand, Rialto, Rivoli and Capitol during the past ten years, has become one of the most distinctive personalities in the theatre and radio world.

Contests Increase Interest In Greater Movie Season

Newspapers Back Project as Cities Organize

A SCORE of important daily newspapers and a great number of smaller ones, have already contracted to participate in the Greater Movie Season National Contest that has as its capital national awards a trip for two around the world on the Red Star liner Belgenland, the biggest ship ever to circle the globe, and vacations for two in Los Angeles and Miami as guests of the respective chambers of commerce. With a total sworn circulation of 2,306,000 daily, and the vigorous campaign each newspaper is putting behind the affair, public response is expected to set a new high-mark in national contests. The importance that publishers attach to the contest and its mutual benefits is denoted by the caliber of the publications that comprise the following list:

The Kansas City Star, Chicago American, Detroit Times, Indianapolis News, Cleveland Press, Cincinnati Times-Star, Baltimore News, Philadelphia Daily-News, Buffalo Times, Omaha Bee, Milwaukee Journal, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Denver Rocky Mountain News, Salt Lake City Desert News, Winston-Salem Journal, Colorado Springs, Gazette-Telegraph, and Butte Post.

The basis of the contest is a three-hundred-word essay on "What the Motion Picture Means to Me" or "What the Motion Picture Means to My Community." In addition to the three national prizes, each newspaper is arranging a list of local awards in the form of donations from merchants, thus securing valuable business co-operation for the theatres throughout the season. As an indication of the general business response, the value of local prizes obtained by the Chicago American for its readers is said to be $100,000.

The national awards will go to writers of the three best essays selected from the three principal winners in each city. Campaigns that have been mapped out for the participating newspapers are already under way. Posters and slides link each theatre into the contest while stories and specially prepared advertisements will develop popular interest from the middle of July to the end of August.

By the action of Louisville in adopting the Greater Movie Season plan as sponsored by Will H. Hays, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., every key-city in the United States will now participate in the August demonstration. Louisville exhibitors have chosen Charles W. Krebs of the Rialto Theatre as campaign manager.

The biggest blanket adoption of the plan since H. M. Ritchey organized Michigan for the drive, has occurred in Texas where more than two hundred theatres, constituting the membership of the Motion Picture Owners of Texas asked for co-operation in order to put over their Season. Simultaneously fifty towns coming under the general management of Wm. P. Gray of Lewiston, Maine, have set their campaign in motion, and similar activity is reflected throughout New England as a whole.

Henry Menger of the Victory Theatre, will be campaign manager in Holyoke, Mass.; in Springfield, Mass., Gordon Rider of Poli's Palace Theatre will superintend the drive; in Manchester, N. H., Al Couture of the Crown Theatre has been elected general manager. In Hartford, Conn., I. J. Hoffman of the Strand and Princess Theatres will conduct the campaign with supervision over Ansonia as well. New Britain, Conn. has J. S. Contaras, of the Capitol Theatre, in charge, while Miss Julia Smith, of the Strand Theatre, controls the Waterbury season.

With Earl Fain, of Loew's Vendome as chairman; Harry Sudekum, of the Princess Theatre, as Secretary and Treasurer and Tony Sudekum, of the Crescent Amusement Company, as director of publicity, Greater Movie Season is moving towards an enthusiastic start in Nashville, Tenn. The campaign also embraces Columbia, Springfield, Murfreesboro, Harriman, Lebanon and Morristown, Tenn., Bowling Green and Hopkinsville, Kentucky; and Albany and Florence, Alabama. Campaign officers at Chattanooga, Tenn., include Sam H. Borisky, American Theatre, chairman; J. L. Cartwright, Rialto Theatre, Secretary and Treasurer; and E. R. Rogers, Tivoli Theatre, director of publicity and general manager.

Two newspaper contests are planned at Denver in addition to the national event. A "Star Likeness" Contest will award prizes to girls who most resemble well-known screen players while the boy-scouts are in training for an inter-city reel-race also conducted under newspaper auspices.

Highlights of the Salt Lake City drive include a mammoth sign spelling Greater Movie Season in twenty-feet letters on the mountain-side at the head of Main Street, a thousand feet above street level and certainly the most conspicuous spot in town. The sign will be illuminated at night. The Desert News, Tribune and Telegram have already begun publication of interviews with public officials and local celebrities emphasizing the achievement of the film industry. Ogden and Provo, Utah, will have campaigns designed along the Salt Lake City lines.

Baltimore elected Louis Schlichter, Bridge Theatre, general manager; Harry Van Hoven, director of publicity and Louis J. Rome, chairman of the Ways and Means committee. Ben Davis comptroller of the Schine Theatres operating from Gloversville, N. Y., and well known as an advertising and exploitation man before he entered the managerial side of the business, has completed plans in association with his district managers that include a four-page newspaper supplement in Carthage, pennants on all the cross-arm trolley wires in Corning, North Side and Painted Post, double-truck advertising lay-outs in Norwich and Oneonta in addition to an extensive campaign of window displays, radio broadcasting, public speaking, ballyhoos and bannering. Each district manager has duplicated the stunts in every town under his control.

Among prominent exhibitors most actively engaged in putting Greater Movie Season over in Buffalo is J. H. Michael, chairman of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, State of New York, Buffalo Zone.

An urgent bulletin has gone from W. A. Steffes, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the Northwest, to every theatre throughout that terriory, recommending Greaer Movie Season as a business stimulant at no great cost and offering co-operation to any theatre that desires to promote the season on an elaborate scale.

Houston theatre managers are putting on full steam for "Greater Movie Season" which will open the first week in August. Plans call for a "Greater Movie Ball" also special newspaper and outdoor advertising. A local organization has been formed and several hundred dollars is in the hands of the committee who will have charge of the publicity and advertising.

Full cooperation will be given the Motion Picture Distributors and Producers, by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., in an endeavor to make the movement this year a great success.

Not only will the Maryland organization contribute its moral support but it will dig down into the treasury for $1,500 or $2,000 to spend in bringing the matter before the public with a strenuous advertising campaign.

The decision to back the move was made at a meeting of the Maryland organization, of which Walter D. Pacy is president, held at the Emerson Hotel on Thursday, July 9, when the plans were outlined by Jack Pegler, of the Will Hays organization, and Harry Van Hoven advertising manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests, who addressed the gathering.

A committee was appointed to handle the matter including: Louis Schlichter, chairman; Harry Van Hoven and J. Louis Rome. According to the present plans a great deal

JOHN E. McCORMICK

Made First National Gen. Mgr. on Coast

JOHN E. McCORMICK has been appointed General Manager of West Coast productions of First National under which title he will assume the executive direction of that company's own units on the Coast, it has been announced by R. A. Rowland, general manager of First National. Mr. McCormick will continue to act as Coast representative for the company in dealings with independent producers.

On his return to Los Angeles, last week, Mr. McCormick assumed his new office and already is placing in operation plans for drawing First National's own producing units closer together. It is probable that in the near future, three or four units will be working continuously at the Coast studios. Announcements of other equally important developments in the production branch of First National Pictures are expected within the next few weeks.

"The rise of Mr. McCormick to his present position of responsibility is entirely due to his display of merit since his association with First National," said Mr. Rowland.

Invitation Declined by Cohen

M. P. T. O. A. Official Suggests That Testimonial Dinner Feature "Independence" Instead of Himself

SYDNEY S. COHEN, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors, has written a letter to the Committee of Independent producers sponsoring the proposed Testimonial Dinner to Mr. Cohen, declining to be the honor guest, but suggesting instead that the dinner feature "Independence."

The letter to Mr. Cohen, on behalf of the Independents, sent by Samuel Zierler, President of the Commonwealth Film Corporation, pointed out that the dinner was to express to Mr. Cohen "our heartfelt appreciation for the great effort you are making to perpetuate this industry for all those who would stay in it on a let-live basis."

After thanking the committee for "the wonderful compliment," Mr. Cohen replied:

"However, I must decline to be singled out in this way for special mention. It seems to me instead . . . Independence should be the honored guest. It is the ideal that guided our glorious country to its birth; it is the principle men have fought and shed their blood for, and it is but fitting that the Motion Picture Industry, the Screen Press of the World, the greatest medium today of transmitting entertainment, education and knowledge should have Independence for its watchword and safeguard.

"Might I therefore take it upon myself to suggest that your plans take on the form of a dinner to Independence, one that you can broadcast throughout the land; one that can focus the attention of the world on the fight we are waging for our freedom in this Industry and to keep our screens free from the restraint and control of monopoly for our people. Such a dinner it appears to me would be of inestimable advantage for all and far greater than any personal tribute.

"As for myself, I believe I have had sufficient honors. I have had the privilege of being President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for four years, of working with some of the finest men God ever made and for a cause that is so great. I have earned a priceless treasure in the many loyal friends I can count as mine in the various branches of the Industry today. My fellow workers in the Organization, the men in the rank and file, have all through various ways shown their appreciation for whatever time and service I have given to their cause. That they esteem it and value this, is enough, for to me no greater honor or fame can come than this and I would rather 'feature' Independence than 'star' myself, and instead be a doughboy in the ranks, a booster of the cause, doing my bit with the other fellow."

Ufa Acquires M-G-M Features

Forty Pictures Taken For Distribution By German Concern, Is Announcement

FORTY Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures of the 1924-25 group have been acquired by Ufa for distribution throughout Germany, according to statements issued this week by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer foreign department and the New York office of Ufa-USA.

This marks an important step in foreign distribution, since it will place in circulation in Central Europe practically an entire season's output. Ufa is an important producing, distributing and exhibiting corporation, owning and operating a considerable chain of theatres of its own. Many of these are first run houses of the newest type, and several others are under construction.

Recent steps taken by Ufa include the acquisition of United Artists and Warner Brothers product. This is all in addition to the 36 pictures which it will produce at its own studios.

At the same time, Frederick Wynne-Jones, managing director of Ufa-USA, announced that his company had engaged Mae Murray to make pictures in Germany for one year, beginning September 1st. Other American feminine stars, he stated, have been engaged but cannot yet be announced. Ufa is also looking for a suitable American male star, he said.

Further discussion of the importance of these moves will be taken up in the series of exclusive articles on the European situation starting in this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Baltimore Musicians and the Theatres in Wage Dispute

Unless the Theatrical Managers' Association and the Musicians' Union of Baltimore come to an agreement before that time over the increased wage scale demands, there will be no music in theatres of that city after August first. The musicians have demanded an increase of 20 to 27 per cent over the $38 per week which they now receive.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., have agreed to be governed by whatever the T. M. A., of Baltimore does with the exception of the Rivoli and Metropolitan theatres managed by Guy L. Wonders and Bernard Depkin, Jr. They have agreed to the new wage scale. Neither is a member of the M. P. T. O. of Maryland.

Jack Schlaifer is Honored by Northwest Film Board

In appreciation for his work as vice-president and as a member of a number of standing committees, the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle last week presented Jack L. Schlaifer with an engraved cigarette case, just prior to his departure for San Francisco as the new Western division manager for the Universal Film Company.

L. O. Lukan, who replaces Mr. Schlaifer at the Seattle Universal offices, was elected to succeed him as vice-president of the Film Board also.

American Theatre in Troy to Reopen August 15

The American theatre in Troy, N. Y., formerly operated by Ben Apple and now controlled by the Strand interests, will reopen on August 15 as a first-run with a split week policy. An admission price of 15 cents will be charged.

Samuel Weiss Dies After Protracted Illness

Samuel Weiss, father of Adolph, Max and Louis Weiss, of Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation, died at the age of seventy-one on July 17 after a protracted illness. He was born in Austria-Hungary and came to this country in his early youth.

World Premiere of "U" Film at Dayton, Tenn.

DAYTON, TENN., scene of the world-famed "evolution" trial, this week witnessed the world premiere of "Lorraine of the Lions," the Universal Jewel production in which a gorilla enacts an important role, comporting itself in a manner said to lend weight to the theory of relationship of apes and men. The picture, which is scheduled for general release in October, was shown Thursday and Friday of this week at the Lyric Theatre in Dayton.

Exploitation for the picture was directed along the lines of the "man-monkey" controversy so popular since the arrest and trial of Scopes for violation of the state statute forbidding the teaching of the theory of evolution in schools.

Eschmann Analyses Sales Personnel

First National General Manager of Distribution Outlines Points Necessary for Successful Force

"A MODERN sales organization is like a tree. The roots strike deep in the soil of product, personality and principle, giving nourishment to the branches." This is the statement of E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution for First National Pictures.

"The essential point in the building of an organization, sales or otherwise, is the point of contact," says Eschmann. "Branches flourish or wither according to the quality of the soil from which they spring. If the soil is arid there will be no fruit. If the flow of strength and nourishment drawn from the roots is checked the leaves will wither.

"The heads of a sales department are the channel of contact connecting the men in the field with the basic soil from which the organization springs. If we fail in point of contact, the vitality of the organization is weakened.

"Our requirement therefore, is to impress favorably upon contact with our men—to inspire the desire to do good—to give a proper definition of right and wrong—to be able to determine what's right by unbiased analysis—to operate for tomorrow as well as today—to assist those in need or encouragement—to dispel pessimism and court optimism.

"This may seem like a large order, and it is, but only as it is fulfilled will a sales organization realize its aim in any large sense.

"Nothing has become more evident in modern business than the importance of morale and unity of purpose. There is no room for pettiness, or selfishness in the larger vision of teamwork whereby all benefit alike. If sales executives fail to impart this spirit they are not fulfilling their mission. And they must operate through human contact, through the example of performance, not by preachments; through living their instructions, persuading and requesting, not attempting to enforce orders by autocratic demands. There is no other way to gain the spirit of true cooperation without which any organization, however elaborate its physical mechanism, is lifeless—a body without a soul.

"I am not going into a discussion of the physical formation of a sales department. In a general way the plan of operation is sufficiently familiar to the trade. Changes during the past few years have been along the line of advancement in the systematizing of efforts to reach all exhibitors with a reasonable presentation of facts. The day of bunk and bluster and misstatement has passed. A salesman must be completely sold on his own product before he can hope to sell anybody else. And there again we come back to the point of contact between executives at headquarters and the men in the field.

"We have succeeded or failed in getting across our message in proportion to our success in making the men with whom we work appreciate what we believe to be facts about the company with which we are associated and the product it is marketing.

"If a salesman employed by a company of the first rank does not believe that his own best interests are served by promoting the welfare of the company; if he lacks faith in its product, its present and its future, the fault may be with the salesman, or it may be with executives who have failed to get close to him on a man-to-man footing. Every member of an organization must be made to feel that he is a part of it, that he shares in its ideals and its destinies. If this feeling is lacking, he cannot be expected to put the requisite enthusiasm into his efforts, nor will he experience the satisfaction consequent upon success.

E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution for First National Pictures.

"The motion picture business always has been and must continue to be largely a matter of personalities. Stars are made through personality, authors write stories that introduce interesting personalities on the screen; clever exhibitors lend an inviting personality to their theatres and are extremely careful about the personnel which comes into contact with the audience; from first to last it is the personal, human equation that counts.

"Building a 100 per cent sales organization on paper would not be difficult. There are few secrets about divisions of territory, quotas, percentages and the like. All of these things have been figured out with care and precision. The variable factor is the man power that keeps the wheels moving, and the strength of this man power, in the final analysis, is due to ability of sales executives to inspire the right attitude of mind.

"Take any group of five hundred men of salesmen caliber, and by that I mean men who by reason of previous training, temperament and personality, may be deemed eligible, and the average of latent ability will not vary greatly. Some may be expected to advance rapidly, others to drop out, while along in the middle comes the great majority—loyal, steady workers anxious to make good, not only for the week or the month, but for the years to come.

"It is this group that sound business is most concerned in developing. Men of this caliber, looking to the future, are not tempted by a few extra dollars that mean parting with a company in whose principles and future they have faith.

"By his contact with his sales staff, the manager of distribution can foster, stimulate and develop these traits of loyalty—and by contact alone. No other method has been discovered. By the efficiency of his organization is a sales manager's success and value to his company measured. His force will be just as big and effective and loyal as he is himself. The head of the organization must display his good traits, wear them on his sleeve, so to speak, otherwise his associates may fail to notice and absorb them. This applies with equal truth to the members of his force.

"From whatever avenue one approaches the building up of an efficient, result-getting organization, the way leads to the cap-sheaf of contact. The method of working out and applying this cap-sheaf must be solved individually by each sales manager according to his own lights and his own personality. His success depends on finding a workable solution of the problem of contact."

Cashier of St. Louis House Held Up by Bandits

Two would-be robbers in an automobile held up Miss Elsie Betzold, cashier for the Kings Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., as she was on her way to the Chouteau Trust Company at Vandeventer and Chouteau avenues at 10.30 A. M. July 13. After searching her car and finding nothing the pair fled. Miss Betzold was driving a Ford sedan and was forced to go to the curb a few doors from the bank. The pair demanded "the money" but Miss Betzold carried no money.

On May 18 last two employes of the Kings were held up while en route to the bank and robbed of $1,700 in receipts.

Boys Loot Safe of Theatre in Reading, Pa.

The safe in the second floor office of the Hippodrome theatre, Reading, owned by the Wilmer & Vincent Company, was robbed of $225 by a boy who climbed through a transom. Frank S. Mickley, manager of the theatre, notified the police, and a few days later the boy, 13, and an accomplice, 18, were arrested, and $83 of the money, together with a bicycle on which the boys had paid $35, were recovered.

Agent of Operators' Union Charged in Bomb Case

A second arrest was made last week in connection with the bombing of the World-in-Motion theatre, Kansas City, last February. William McKinstry, business agent for the motion picture operators' union, was arrested and charged in an indictment returned against him with malicious destruction of property. He formerly was an operator for the Victory theatre, Kansas City.

Vice-President Dawes Invited to Lead the Chicago Movie Season Parade

VICE-PRESIDENT Charles G. Dawes has been invited by Will H. Hays to lead the huge parade which will open the "Greater Movie Season" campaign in Chicago, scheduled to take place in that city on August first, it has been announced by Ralph T. Kettering, general manager of the campaign.

If the Vice-president accepts the invitation he and Mr. Hays will head the line of march which will inaugurate the gigantic "go to movies" drive which has been launched in Chicago and which will reach its culmination during the month of August.

Those who will participate in the parade number many of Chicago's leading business organizations, civic and social societies. A feature of the parade will be the Chicago Evening American's photographer's float, from which pictures for reproduction in the Silver Jubilee section of that publication will be taken.

Guarantee Pictures Organized

Will Produce and Distribute the Curwood and General Charles King Stories

AETNA Finance Corporation, Ben Wilson and the Davis Distributing Division have combined and organized Guarantee Pictures, Inc., for the purpose of financing, producing and distributing the James Oliver Curwood and General Charles King series of pictures.

These pictures originally were to have been produced by Clifford S. Elfelt, whose other interests have prompted him to give up the production end. Davis Distributing Division contracted for the distribution of the pictures. By the new arrangement the Aetna Finance Corporation will finance the productions, Ben Wilson will produce them and the Davis Distributing Division will distribute them.

Guarantee Pictures has undertaken to see that five James Oliver Curwood pictures and eight General Charles King pictures are produced and distributed.

The second of the Kings is completed and stars Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber who will also be the stars of the remaining pictures in this series. One of the Curwood's is completed "My Neighbor's Wife" and the second, "The Gold Hunters" is also in work with the following cast, under the direction of Paul Hurst: Mary Carr, Dave Butler, George Fawcett, Hedda Nova, Bull Montana, Claire Windsor, Victor Potel.

The third King picture, "Fort Frayne," starring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber is in production. The two completed ones are "Warrior Gap" and "Under Fire."

The formation of Guaranteed Pictures in no way affects the other production arrangements of Davis Distributing Division, Inc. but creates a combination of the three most important elements in the industry which they believe will prove of mutual benefit to exhibitors and exchanges alike.

George T. Pardy Joins M. P. News Staff

GEORGE T. PARDY, one of the best known of photoplay critics, this week joined the staff of Motion Picture News as the successor of Laurence Reid, who resigned to become Editor of Movie Monthly.

Mr. Pardy has an established reputation as a reviewer, and is a newspaper man of wide experience. He was a correspondent for the Chicago Inter-Ocean with General Buller's army during the Boer War, was on the staff of the Detroit Free Press, Chicago American and other important dailies, and entered the industry as motion picture editor of The Morning Telegraph. Later he held a similar position with the Dramatic Mirror, and in 1916 joined the staff of Exhibitors Trade Review, where he continued until recently as Editor of Reviews.

In addition to his work as a picture critic, Mr. Pardy has written a large number of special articles for newspapers and magazines and is the author of several vaudeville sketches.

He comes to the staff a recognized specialist in the difficult work of appraising pictures for the exhibitor, and The News takes pleasure in announcing his appointment.

Woodhull Honor Guest at Rochester

National President R. F. Woodhull, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was the guest of honor at the annual Picnic and Field Day of the Rochester Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association at Point Pleasant, Irondequoit Bay, on Tuesday, July 21st.

The outing was largely attended by theatre owners and exchangemen from the vicinity of Rochester and Buffalo, who gave President Woodhull a cordial reception. He spoke briefly on the progress the National Organization was making. He congratulated the Rochester Theatre Owners on their splendid organization and of their past loyalty and support of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and encouraged them to keep on along these lines as they knew the advantages and benefits of National Organization.

Meador and Robertson to Start Production

J. E. D. Meador and John S. Robertson last week organized Meador-Robertson Productions to film a series of special from Blasco Ibanez stories and other works now under consideration. Robertson will personally direct the entire series to be known as John S. Robertson Productions.

Robertson, with Mrs. Robertson and his staff sailed from New York last Saturday to start preparations for filming "Queen Calafia," late novel of Ibanez. The picture will be shot in Spain, Paris and Monte Carlo. This production will be followed by "The Fifth Horseman" and "Sacrifice." The Ibanez series will also include "The Cabin," "La Bodega," "The Mayflower" and "Sonica."

Tourneur Will Direct Sam Rork Production

Sam Rork has engaged Maurice Tourneur to direct his screen production of "Clothes Make the Pirate," the Holman Day novel, in which Leon Errol will be featured. The picture is to be made in New York and will be presented on the First National program.

Among the players engaged by Rork for the leading roles in support of Errol are Dorothy Gish, Shirley Mason, Nita Naldi, Tully Marshall, George Marion and Frank Lawlor.

Arrow Will Distribute the Steiner Features

William Steiner has completed arrangements with Arrow Film Corporation whereby the latter will distribute the new Edith Thornton series of four society comedy dramas and also the new feature series, "Hutch of the Secret Service," featuring Charles Hutchison.

Steiner reports his five producing units on the coast well ahead of their production schedule.

Contests to Build Interest in Greater Movie Season

of out-door advertising will be used including about 100 24-sheets, 1-sheets, 3-sheets, banners, novelties, caps and buttons.

Mike Coyne, advance man for Greater Movie Season, working out details of the campaign in the south, has left Atlanta for a final swing through this district, prior to the opening of the Season, August 3rd. Coyne left Tuesday, and it will probably take him until the very day of opening of Greater Movie Season to visit all the cities which come under his jurisdiction. His itinerary includes Atlanta, Ga.; Memphis, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Texas; Houston, Texas; New Orleans, La.; Birmingham, Ala.; Nashville, Tenn.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Montgomery, Ala.; and Beaumont, Texas.

Kansas City in a few days will be dotted with pennants, not of college lettering, but bearing the words: "Greater Movie Season. Let's Go!" At present the M. P. T. O. K-M. is a turmoil of detail and hustle in an effort to complete plans for the Kansas City celebration.

A large order for pennants was placed with a company Tuesday by C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. K-M, while the committees are busy arranging for a parade of floats. A meeting has been planned at the Pantages theatre in a few days, to be after the last night performance, when chairmen of the committees will meet with the advertising representative of large business concerned in effort to obtain the fullest co-operation. Both the Kansas City Star and the Journal-Post have pledged support.

A plan to offer prizes for the best window display in connection with the campaign also has been announced. About $5,000 has been subscribed thus far among exhibitors and that mark is expected to be surpassed soon. No concrete program has been adopted for the celebration yet, although one probably will be within the next few days, according to Mr. Cook.

Letters are being sent to all towns in the Kansas City territory by the M. P. T. O. K-M office, urging that each village, town and city stage its individual celebration.

San Francisco features will be a big reception by the Mayor and city officials to the host of Movie stars and people coming up from Los Angeles. A big parade through the principal street, "The Path of Gold" to be richly decorated with banners and long strips of flags on electric light poles with a big line at top reading, "Greater Movie Season." Personal appearance of stars at residential theatres during the event on special days; newspaper ads from one page to a double truck frequently; several special luncheons by civic and fraternal organizations; prominent speakers at a big dinner by the Chamber of Commerce to visiting movie people.

The four theatres in Salt Lake City that are concentrating their efforts and capital into putting over Greater Movie Season, the Paramount-Empress, Victory, Kinema and Pantages, are getting the campaign well under way, and when the opening day comes it will find the field well covered and publicity stunts ready to burst forth.

The twenty-four sheets will be posted conspicuously about the city, and the other advertising accessories such as banners, teasers, trailers, caps, dolls and snappers will receive a wide distribution. Frank Becker, recently appointed publicity manager for the campaign, has started exploitation matters humming. The managers of the four active theatres are all planning novel and interesting stunts to be pulled at their houses, and big productions are being lined up to give the opening week of the Season great impetus.

Paul McCabe Dead; Was Prominent Exhibitor

PAUL McCABE, a pioneer exhibitor in North Carolina, and recently elected vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of that state, died suddenly at his home in Tarboro last week, after an illness of only four days.

Mr. McCabe was the owner of the Opera House at Tarboro, and was a prominent figure in theatre circles in the South. The news of his death came as a shock to the industry.

Europe Needs New Showmen Throughout Industry

Producer ownership of theatres, block booking, chaining up of theatres, booking combines, sales drives, joint physical distribution—all of those issues so familiar in America are equally pressing in England and on the Continent.

Several large American companies are preparing to invade the European field in full force. Plans for exhibition, distribution and even production are forming. Rumors and the denial of rumors will fill the air for months to come, but the smoke which hides the battle will only make more plain the fact that such a battle is being waged. The stronger European factions, too, are not to be lightly ignored. Offers and counter-offers are being made toward alliances between American and European interests. Some of these have already been consummated; others are in the air and will follow.

The soil has been tilled, the seed is in, conditions are reasonably favorable—and only the fertilization of intelligent showmanship is needed to bring in Europe a rich harvest which will increase as the years pass. Who will reap this harvest?

Test Arbitration Case Will Be Heard in Court

"Perhaps in this lies the solution of our dilemma. When a fair contract and a good system of arbitration is agreed upon, when the members of the Independent Producers and Distributors of America resign from the F.I.L.M. Club or Film Boards of Trade, controlled by the Hays organization, and set up Film Boards of Trade consisting of both distributors and exhibitors; when a penalty is placed for the bringing of unmeritorious claims and when the custom of distributors bringing claims promiscuously in amounts of $2.50 up, is stopped, then the theatre owner will have the choice of buying from the company giving him a square deal and which does not take away from him the property rights granted him by law."

New Corporations Launched in New York State

Newly incorporated companies receiving charters from the secretary of state during the past week and proposing to enter into the motion picture business in New York State, included the following: Irving Theatres Corporation, $500,000, with Marion L. Elkin, Mollie Salit, Anne Eichel, New York city; Valley Theatre Corporation, capitalization not specified, Genevieve Meyers, Anna Radeloff, Louis Mehl, Brooklyn.

Carter, Conrad A. Ross, David E. Grange, New York city.

Great Neck Playhouse Now Legitimate House

The Great Neck Playhouse takes its place among the legitimate theatres, according to the new policy announced by Irving M. Lesser. It will be devoted to legitimate plays which have already played Broadway or are to be played there. The new arrangement comes as the result of a working alliance between Lesser and such producers as John Golden, Sam Harris, Arthur Hopkins, A. L. Erlanger, the Selwyns and Shuberts.

The first legitimate production to mark the new change of policy was the John Golden play, "The Straight Shooter," which had its premiere Friday and Saturday of last week. Later it will come to Broadway as "The Holy Terror."

The Great Neck Playhouse is one of the newer theatres, built at a cost of $450,000 and its policy had been one of motion pictures, combined with a bill of vaudeville.

Atlanta Bans Organists in Picture Houses

Decision to discontinue employment of organists in Atlanta moving picture theatres was made by their managers following action of the organist members of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, which decreed a raise in salary for all organists employed in these theatres, this raise to begin September 1.

The raise decree was the outcome of a meeting of the Federation of Musicians at which a discussion of this matter resulted in motion to raise salaries. This motion was seconded and carried without consultation with the theatre managers, it being customary in all such matters to call a conference between managers and representatives of the Musicians' union before handing in an ultimatum.

I. S. Liner Joins DeMille Business Staff

I. S. Liner associated with Cecil B. De Mille during the production of "The Ten Commandments" for Paramount, has been engaged as a unit manager by the new De Mille producing organization. His first work will be the handling of the business details of "The Wedding Song," in which Leatrice Joy will be starred by De Mille for the Producers Distributing Corporation.

Set "Parisian Love" Release Date July 27

"Parisian Love," first of the new group of Preferred Pictures to reach the exhibitors, will be released July 27th, according to announcement by J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions.

The picture, produced by Gasnier, is an adaptation based on the F. Oakley Crawford novel. The script is by Lois Hutchinson. Clara Bow is featured in the leading feminine role, with Lou Tellegen opposite her. Others in the cast are Donald Keith, Alyce Mills, Lillian Leighton, Jean de Briac, Hazel Keener and Otto Mathieson.

De Mille Selects Cast for "The Wedding Song"

The cast which will support Leatrice Joy in "The Wedding Song," a Cecil B. DeMille production for Producers Distributing Corp. release, has been completed. Those who will have prominent parts in support of the star are Robert Ames, Louis Natheaux, Ethel Waley and Rosa Rudami.

Lloyd Starts Comedy For Paramount Release

HAROLD LLOYD has started work on the first of two feature comedies which he will produce for Paramount distribution before May, 1926. He is making exterior scenes on the grounds of the Hotel Ambassador and other fashionable settings in Los Angeles and Beverly Hills. Jobyna Ralston is playing the lead opposite the star.

In order to live up to the schedule which he has mapped out, Lloyd will have only a rest of about three weeks between pictures sometime in December, when it is expected his current work will be completed. He and Mrs. Lloyd plan to visit Europe for a vacation next summer after work has been finished on his second Paramount vehicle.

Premiere of "The Danger Signal" at Broadway

"The Danger Signal," a railroad drama and the first of the Columbia 1925-26 productions, had its New York premiere at the B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, where it was offered as the main film attraction for the entire week.

Hunt Stromberg Completes Three New Features

Three productions listed for distribution by Producers Distributing Corporation have been completed by Hunt Stromberg. The features are "The Bad Lands," a Harry Cary western drama, which completes his series for the current season; "The Prairie Pirate," first of the Harry Carey vehicles for the new program, and "Off the Highway," a special production with an all-star cast.

"Three Wise Crooks" Next Evelyn Brent Vehicle

"Three Wise Crooks," an original story by John Brownell and Fred Kennedy Myton has been selected as the next starring vehicle for Evelyn Brent, F. B. O. star. The camera work on the film will be started soon. Miss Brent will essay another crook characterization in which she won popularity as the star of "Midnight Molly," "Silk Stocking Sal," and "Alias Mary Flynn."

Calhoun and Gregg Signed by Independent

Jesse J. Goldberg, head of Independent Pictures Corporation, has engaged Alice Calhoun and Arnold Gregg to play the leading roles in the first "Big Timber" story featuring "Lightnin'," the canine star.

Other well known players who will appear in the picture are Stuart Holmes, Gertrude Astor and Spottiswoode Aitken. William J. Craft is directing the production.

Davidson Gets Role With Jackie Coogan

Max Davidson has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for an important role in "Old Clothes," Jackie Coogan's next starring vehicle which goes into production Monday. Davidson is a well known delineator of Hebrew characters. It is said the coming role will be much the same type as that he played in "The Rag Man," Jackie's last picture.

"Old Clothes" will be directed by Eddie Cline, with Frank B. Good as chief cameraman. Kenneth B. Clark wrote the continuity and the entire production will be made under the supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr.

Will Start Production of "The Savage" Soon

Production work on "The Savage," a First National offering in which Lloyd Hughes and Dorothy Mackaill will have the featured parts, is scheduled to start soon at the company's New York Studios.

Miss Mackaill is due back at the studio in a few days following a month's vacation in California. Hughes recently joined the Earl Hudson unit of First National.

Goulding Named to Direct "Sally, Irene and Mary"

The screen version which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will make of "Sally, Irene and Mary," musical comedy stage success, will be directed by Edmund Goulding, it was announced this week by Harry Rapf, production executive of the company. The adaptation of the play will also be done by Mr. Goulding, a work on which he is now engaged.

Fox Starts Airplane Service

Newsreel Launches the First Plane for Gathering and Distribution of Pictures

FOX NEWS is to operate its own airplane service. It will be operated solely in the interest of Fox News and dedicated to the gathering and distributing of pictures for news reels.

The first step in this direction was taken when Mrs. William Fox christened the first airplane in the new service at Curtiss Field, Mineola, Long Island, during the week. On either side of the christening plane flew a squadron of eight other Curtiss machines.

Speed is the requisite in News-gathering, but safety has been added to speed in this Fox machine. It is equipped with three parachutes for pilot and cameramen passengers, flares for night landings, compass, speed and altitude indicators and balloon tires on landing gear. A radical improvement has been made through the instal'ation of an extra "gas" tank which broadens the cruising radius from 400 to 750 miles. Thus equipped, the "Fox News" can make a non-stop flight from New York to Chicago in seven hours, or cross the continent with but two stops for "gas" and oil.

Though news reels and newspapers have hired airplanes on a few special occasions when extra speed was necessary, the purchase of its own plane by Fox News marks an unusual appreciation of the results that can be thus obtained. The decision to establish a hangar and buy a plane was reached only after a check-up of instances in which airplanes achieved news beats.

Much of the success of such a service will rest upon the skill and daring of the pilot. A seasoned and skillful military aviator has been secured by Fox in the person of Lieut. George A. Wies, Jr., who received his training at the United States Air Service flying school at Brooks and Kelly Fields in Texas.

Stromberg Will Direct "Winning Futurity"

Hunt Stromberg has been engaged by I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, to direct "Winning the Futurity," a race track special to be released by Chadwick organization probably in December. Stromberg only recently completed "The Romances of an Actress" for Chadwick.

"Winning the Futurity" is an adaptation from the well known stage success of two generations ago. Several of the race track scenes have already been made with some of the biggest turf events of the season as the background. The cast for the picture has not yet been announced.

Stuart Holmes Has Comedy Role in "Heir Loons"

Stuart Holmes, screen heavy who has played villain roles in many feature productions, has been cast for a comedy part in "Heir Loons," the feature comedy which Spitzer-Jones are making for distribution by Pathe. Others who will be seen in the play are: Ralph Lewis, Frank Campeau, Edith Roberts, Sam de Grasse, Wallace MacDonald, and others. Grover Jones is is the director of "Heir Loons."

Lionel Barrymore in "The Wrongdoers," an Aster Distributing Corporation release.

Chadwick Buys Share in Studio

Purchases Half Interest in Independent Pictures Plant From Jesse Goldburg

I. E. CHADWICK, president of Chadwick Picture Corporation, has purchased a half interest in the real estate and studios of the Independent Pictures Corporation on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood. The deal was concluded this week between Mr. Chadwick and Jesse J. Goldburg, head of Independent.

Announcement of the purchase from the Chadwick organization stated that the acquisition to carry out the production plans which have been mapped out for the coming year and that immediate steps will be taken to enlarge the studios to house the Chadwick units as will as those of the Independent company.

It is planned to increase the stage space to 17,500 square feet from the present measurement of 15,800 square feet, and erect a new two-story building with offices on the rear of the property.

Independent Pictures Corporation will continue to operate its Bob Custer, Bill Cody and Big Timber units, while Chadwick Pictures Corporation will produce with the George Walsh, Lionel Barrymore and Larry Semon units. The Charles Ray unit will continue to produce at the Charles Ray Studio, and the Hunt Stromberg unit at the Hollywood Studios.

Mr. Chadwick is expected to return east the end of this month with Mr. Goldburg, and further announcement concerning the studio activities of both organizations will be made.

"Phantom" N. Y. Premiere Set

Elaborate Plans Made by Universal for Opening at Astor September 7th

UNIVERSAL'S long heralded "Phantom of the Opera" is to have its New York premiere at the Astor Theatre, September 7th. Lon Chaney is the star and the featured players are Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry. Elaborate preparations are under way by Universal for a lavish presentation.

Notable in the premeire plans are the proposed musical accompaniments. Universal has secured the services of Professor Gustav Hindrichs, noted musical director to arrange the score and incidental accompaniment.

The big scenes of the "Phantom" are filmed in natural color, including a masked ball sequence with several thousand actors and actresses in brilliant costumes. The home office of Universal has started an exploitation campaign which it is said will surpass anything of the kind ever attempted by the company. When he departed for Europe, Carl Laemmle left word to spare no expense in putting the picture over as no Universal picture had ever been put over before.

The "Phantom" will not be roadshowed, but will be released to exhibitors early in the Fall.

"Pride of Force" Under Way at Gerson's

Production is under way at the Gerson studios on the coast on "The Pride of the Force," a police story by Arthur Hoerl. It is being directed by Duke Worne and supervised by B. Berger. This is the first of a series of six pictures being produced by B. Berger of Gerson Pictures for release through Rayart.

Featured in the cast of "The Pride of the Force" are Tom Santschi, Gladys Hulette, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., James Morrison, Crawford Kent, Alice Powell, Edith Chapman and Joseph Girard.

Russian Prince Leading Man for Pola Negri

Pola Negri's leading man for "Flower of Night," her next starring vehicle for Paramount, will be Youcca Troubetzkoy, son of the Russian Prince and Princess Nicolai Troubetzkoy.

The picture is scheduled to go into production this week under the direction of Paul Bern. The story is from the pen of Joseph Hergesheimer.

Levy Joins Commonwealth as Sales Manager

Jack Levy, formerly associated with Fox Film as head of the New York exchange and as sales manager, has joined Commonwealth Film Corporation as sales manager. Mr. Levy's connection with the film industry dates back several years and he is widely known in sales circles. Commonwealth is distributing 42 productions.

Four M-G-M Features In August

Announce Important Productions for Booking During Greater Movie Season

FOUR important feature productions have been scheduled for release during August by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Included in the group is "Romola," starring Lillian Gish, Monta Bell's production "Pretty Ladies," "The Unholy Three," in which Lon Chaney plays a featured role, and Hobart Henley's "A Slave of Fashion."

The list will be headed by "Pretty Ladies," which is announced for release on August 1st. This Monta Bell production offers a cast including Tom Moore, ZaSu Pitts, Lilyan Tashman, in the featured roles, and with Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel and George K. Arthur in minor parts. A special feature of the offering is a reproduction of scenes of the "Follies" photographed in Technicolor. The picture was shown at a pre-release engagement at the Capitol, New York City, last week.

Tod Browning's "The Unholy Three," is next, with release scheduled for August sixteenth. Lon Chaney and Mae Busch have the featured roles in this mystery romance adapted by Waldemar Young from Tod Robbins' novel of the same title. Those who have prominent parts in the supporting company are Matt Moore, Victor McLaglen and Harry Earles.

Lillian Gish's vehicle, "Romola," which was filmed in Italy under the direction of Henry King, will be released August twentieth. The supporting cast is headed by Dorothy Gish, the star's sister, and has Ronald Colman in the heroic role. The production was presented on Broadway last season at the George M. Cohan theatre.

Norma Shearer is featured opposite Lew Cody in "A Slave of Fashion," which is a Samuel Shipman story directed by Hobart Henley from the screen adaptation made by Bess Meredyth. It will be released on August twenty-third. William Haines, Mary Carr, James Corrigan, Vivia Ogden, Miss Dupont, Estelle Clark and Sidney Bracy comprise the unusually strong cast of this swiftly-moving and thoroughly modern story. A number of elaborate scenes in technicolor are a feature of the film.

First National Gives New Titles for Two Features

"What Fools Men" is the new title selected by First National for the screen version of Henry Kitchell Webster's novel "Joseph Greer and His Daughter," and "The Sea Woman," which Edwin Carewe is filming, will be released as "Dangerous Currents," according to an announcement this week from the First National offices.

Additions Are Made to "Big Parade"

Hobart Bosworth, Claire Adams, Robert Ober, and Claire McDowell have been added to the cast of "The Big Parade," John Gilbert's first starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Nardelli Signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

George A. Nardelli, former motorcycle racer who has appeared in minor roles in several feature pictures, has been signed to a long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

John Weier, Fox Magazine Editor, Dead

John E. Weier, editor of Fox Folks, the Fox Film Corporation monthly magazine, passed away suddenly July 17th, a victim of apoplexy. He was stricken while in a tea room near his home in Flushing and died shortly after reaching the hospital.

Weier, 53 years old, had wide experience as a newspaper man and before joining Fox was owner of the Flushing Daily Times for ten years. Mayor John Purroy Mitchel appointed him Park Commissioner of Queens and during his term of office he initiated many improvements. He is survived by a wife and two sons.

"The Danger Line" is Next Macfadden Feature

"The Danger Line" is the title of the second Bernarr Macfadden True Story Films production for distribution by Astor, it was announced this week by Harry Rathner, president of Astor.

Production will be made at the former Pathe Studio in the Bronx. The scenario for the play is now being written by Lewis Allen Browne.

Wesley Ruggles to Direct "Plastic Age"

Wesley Ruggles has been signed by B. P. Schulberg to direct the screen version of the Percy Marks novel, "The Plastic Age," which will be released as a Preferred Picture on the new season's program. Camera work is to start shortly. Donald Keith and Clara Bow have the principal roles. The picture is scheduled for release the first week in November.

Grainger Back From Long Trip

Fox General Sales Manager Enthuses Over Prospects for Coming Season

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager for Fox Film Corporation is back at his desk in New York City after a tour which took him to all the branch offices of the company in the United States and Canada. A keen observer of conditions, Grainger looked carefully into all local situations and returned most optimistic over the prospects of what he thinks will be an exceptional season. Not only does he think it will be a big season for the Fox Film Corporation, but that business conditions in general will show a vast improvement.

"Indications point to the biggest season motion pictures have ever known," said Mr. Grainger. "I have made a careful survey of business conditions in all big cities of the United States and Canada and as a result of this survey I do not hesitate to make the prediction that the season of 1925-26 will be the greatest in point of business the motion picture industry has ever known.

"One reason I feel so optimistic is that everybody seems to have plenty of money and willing to spend it. Another reason is that the finest pictures yet produced will go into the motion picture theatres during the coming season.

"Competition has been exceedingly keen during the past few years and the larger producers of pictures have come to a realization that they must bend every effort towards superior production. While more money is going into pictures than ever before, I believe the vast amount of capital is being expended more sanely and more wisely."

Two Chadwick Releases Fixed

"Wizard of Oz" and "American Pluck" Are Due for the Exhibitors in August

I. E. CHADWICK, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, returned to New York this week with a print of "The Unchastened Woman," which will bring Theda Bara back to the screen, and with the announcement that two of his company's seventeen productions for the coming season will go to the exhibitors in August.

"The Wizard of Oz" is the first of these and it will be released August 1st. It will be followed on the 15th by "American Pluck." The former is Larry Semon's first offering of the new season. It is based on the well known book and play of the same name by L. Frank Baum. The picture has already had pre-release showings in New York, Los Angeles and other key cities.

"American Pluck" is the first of a series of six pictures George Walsh will make for Chadwick this year. It was directed by Richard Stanton from Ralph Spence's adaptation of "Blaze Derringer," a novel by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr. In addition to Walsh the cast includes Wanda Hawley, Tom Wilson, Leo White, Frank Leigh, Wilfred North, Sydney De Grey and Dan Mason.

"The Unchastened Woman," Theda Bara's new vehicle, was personally supervised by Chadwick and was in production for several months. Arrangements are now being completed for the World's premiere showing in New York city, where it will be booked for an indefinite engagement. The house has not yet been decided upon, but the picture will open about September 1st, which has been announced as its general release date.

World Premiere is Given "Enemy of Men"

Dorothy Revier's first Waldorf production, "Enemy of Men," released by Columbia Pictures Corporation, had its world premiere at the Strand Theatre, Providence, Rhode Island, Monday, July 20th. The production was scheduled to run the entire week. It will be followed with runs in different parts of New England.

Pauline Starke Has Lead in "Little Bit of Broadway"

Pauline Starke will play the leading role, that of a Broadway butterfly in "A Little Bit of Broadway," Robert Z. Leonard's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. An important part has also been assigned to Lilyan Tashman.

Jessie Burns wrote the continuity for "A Little Bit of Broadway" from the story of the same name by Richard Connell. The picture is scheduled to go into production this week.

Farnum Will Impersonate General Custer

Dustin Farnum will impersonate the character of General George A. Custer in Universal's "On the Frontier," for which he was recently signed. "Custer's Last Stand" will be one of the big scenes in the picture. Other historic characters that will be impersonated will be Sitting Bull, President U. S. Grant and General Phil Sheridan. Edward Sedgwick will direct.

Eskimos play the roles in "Kivalina of the Icelands," from which these scenes were taken. It is a Pathe release.

Mary Astor Lead in "The Scarlet Saint"

Mary Astor will have the feminine lead in "The Scarlet Saint," which Earl Hudson will produce in New York for First National. Miss Astor will take up her role in the adaptation of the Gerald Beaumont story, which was published by a magazine under the title "The Lady Who Played Fidele," following the completion of her work in "The Pace that Thrills," in which she is now appearing with Ben Lyon.

Fitzgerald Signs Gertrude Short for "Tessie"

Dallas M. Fitzgerald has engaged Gertrude Short for an important role in "Tessie," his first production to be released by Arrow Pictures Corporation. Others in the cast headed by May McAvoy are Bobby Agnew, Lee Moran and Myrtle Stedman.

"Tessie" is an adaptation of a Sewell Ford story which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

John Krafft has completed editing and titling "The Wrong Doers," directed by Hugh Dierker, the first of the Bernarr MacFadden series, and is now writing final titles for Johnny Hines' forthcoming comedy feature, "The Live Wire."

Columbia Pictures has changed the title of "The Lure of Broadway" to "The Lure of the North." The production is to be released later in the year.

Thirteen For F. B. O. Release

Eight Features and Five Short Subjects Go to Exhibitors in September

EIGHT feature pictures and five short subjects are on the releasing schedule for F. B. O. for the month of September. The list is headed by the first of a series of eight Tom Tyler western pictures. This initial production has not yet been titled, but it will go to the exhibitors September 1st.

September 6th is set as the release date for "If Marriage Fails," an F. B. O. Gold Bond production, which recently played at the Colony Theatre on Broadway, New York. The story was written and produced by C. Gardner Sullivan, with Jacqueline Logan and Clive Brook sharing starring honors, and Belle Bennett, Jean Hersholt, Cissy Fitzgerald and Mathilde Comont in support. John Ince directed.

"High and Handsome" with "Lefty" Flynn in the starring role will be shown September 13th. The screen play is an adaptation by Rex Taylor of the Gerald Beaumont story. In the supporting cast are Kathleen Myers, Lydia Knott, Tom Kennedy, Ralph McCullough and Gene Perry. Harry Garson directed.

"Three Wise Crooks," Evelyn Brent's next vehicle, will be released on September 14th. The story is by John Brownell and Fred Kennedy Myton and the continuity by E. Richard Schayer.

The eighth Texas Ranger production starring Bob Custer, as yet untitled, is set for September 20th, while "Parisian Nights," the second Gold Bond production on the F. B. O. program, will be distributed on September 27th. "Parisian Nights" began its career at the Capitol Theatre, New York, and co-stars Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen with Renee Adoree, Gaston Glass, William J. Kelly and Boris Karloff in support. Al Santell directed.

"The Wall Street Whiz" starring Richard Talmadge is also set for September 27th release. The story and continuity come from the pen of James Bell Smith. In the supporting cast are, Marceline Day, Lillian Langdon, Dan Mason, Carl Miller and Belle Bennett. Jack Nelson directed.

Still another September 27th release is "Riding the Wind," in which Fred Thomson and his wonder horse, Silver King, are starred.

The short subjects are headed by the first of the "Blue Ribbon" comedies which Joe Rock is producing for Standard Cinema Corporation and F. B. O., in which Chester Conklin will be featured. Jay A. Howe is directing the entire "Blue Ribbon" series. "Blue Ribbon" No. 1 will be released September 6th.

On September 13th "Amazing Mazie," No. 1 of F. B. O.'s new series, "The Adventures of Mazie" will be ready for exhibitors. Alberta Vaughn will be starred.

The first of the new Standard Fat Men Comedies, which Joe Rock is also producing for Standard Cinema Corporation and F. B. O., featuring "Fat" Carr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross will be released September 20th.

The same day will see the distribution of the first of the new Bray cartoons, a one reel novelty, which Walter Lantz is now preparing and on September 27th the second episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be released.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign Lawford Davidson

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed Lawford Davidson, well known stage actor, to a long term contract. He will play suave heavies in forthcoming productions. His screen career started two years ago in the east.

Newsreel To Train Army Men

International Will Provide Training School for U. S. Air Service Operators

ARRANGEMENTS have been made with International Newsreel by Major-General Mason H. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, for the training of air service motion picture operators for the Government. The step was taken as a result of the results achieved in aerial photography by International.

Graduates of the Air Service Photographic School at Chanute Field, Ill., have been assigned to the New York and San Francisco offices of International Newsreel for a course not to exceed three months. They will work with International staff men for a few weeks as assistants, in order to learn the way in which a skilled newsreel cameraman goes about the making of a picture, and after that will cover assignments with Akeley cameras supplied them by the army.

Master Sergeant Charles G. Leiby, 22nd Photo Section, Kelley Field, San Antonio, Tex., has been assigned to the San Francisco bureau of International.

When the photographers assigned to International Newsreel for training are passed by the editors of International as fully capable and competent motion picture cameramen, they will be used by the army for the making not only of films of military value, but of motion pictures of historical value. For this purpose it is necessary that they have such training as only can be had in the office of a modern newsreel.

The army photographers will be entirely under the control of the International's news desk during their training and any individual who does not show promise will be "discharged" immediately and sent back to his regular army duties.

New Department Started by M-G-M

Bennett Nathan of New York will create a new department for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is a fabric decoration department and in it will be created the fabrics for costumes and sets. Nathan will work with Erte, the fashion and set designer.

Nathan has built up a big reputation in New York where he has decorated and created materials for many of the big musical shows, including the Follies and Scandals. His first work in connection with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be on "The Mystic," a Tod Browning production in which Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle have the leading roles.

Donald Ogden Stewart to Adapt His Book to Screen

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have engaged Donald Ogden Stewart, author of "The Crazy Fool," screen rights to which M-G-M recently acquired, to make the screen adaptation of his book. The association will be the popular humorist's first with motion pictures. His contract with the company calls for his services as a screen editor as well as scenarist.

Ben Lyon Juvenile Lead in Robert Kane Feature

Robert T. Kane has chosen Ben Lyon to enact the juvenile lead in "Invisible Wounds," which he will produce for the First National program. The picture will be based on the Frederick Palmer novel of the same title and is to be directed by Howard Higgin.

Premiere Dates Set for "The Gold Rush"

FURTHER dates for premiere showings of "The Gold Rush" were announced this week by the Charles Chaplin offices in New York. The opening at the New York Mark Strand on Sunday, August 16th, will be preceded by a special midnight showing the night previous, it was announced. This will be attended by the press and will also be open to the public in certain parts of the house. Chaplin has promised to be in attendance.

Chaplin plans to leave for Europe soon after to arrange the details of the premieres there. "The Gold Rush" will open at the Tivoli in London on September 15th; at the Salle Marivaux in Paris on September 16th; and at a leading theatre in Berlin early in October.

Mack Swain, who essays a new type of role in this picture, was a New York visitor this week with his family. Despite his 12 years on the screen and 22 years on the legitimate stage, it was his first glimpse of Manhattan.

Flora Finch Prominent in Support of Johnny Hines

C. C. Burr, producer of the Johnny Hines features which First National will release, has engaged Flora Finch, well known screen comedienne, for a prominent part in support of the star in "The Live Wire," his initial First National release which is now nearing completion in New York.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

The very strength of this lobby display on "The Night Club" (Paramo unt) lay in its simplicity. It was conceived by Manager John B. Carroll of the Victory theatre, Tampa, in connection with the recent showing at that house.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Press Campaign Only For "Confessions of Queen"

An exploitation campaign confined entirely to the press recently aided "Confessions of a Queen" in San Diego, where this production played at the Plaza theatre. Teaser ads were followed up by large displays in both local dailies, four 12-inch advertisements, each different, appearing in each paper. Such lines as "Her Majesty's Affairs of the Heart Exposed," "Under the Royal Robes—Just Plain Folks" and "The Soul of a Woman Revealed" were prominently featured.

Extra space was taken in both papers throughout the week preceding the premiere, each ad being changed daily. Slides and trailers were also brought into play at the theatre.

Both attendance and boxoffice receipts at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, recently reached an exceptionally high figure during the showing of "Madame Sans Gene." Much of its success was due to the efforts of Manager Herschel Stuart and Publicity Director William Saal, who launched a campaign of unusual merit.

One of the highlights of the campaign was a tie-up with St. Louis' largest department store, whereby the original gowns worn by Gloria Swanson in the picture were displayed in their windows. The windows being located in a prominent part of the business section where an average of 30,000 people pass daily, proved a strong advertising medium. In addition to the window displays,- the store mailed out over 10,000 letters to their largest accounts with a special folder giving the history of the production and the story of "Madame Sans Gene." This stunt cost the department store over $250, but the publicity resulting, justified the outlay.

The Union Square theatre, San Francisco, used a former vaudeville headliner dress to represent the star of "The Last Laugh" (Universal) as a door attendant during the run of the picture.

Another important feature was the tie-up effected with the Yellow Cab Company, who used a specially made card announcing the attraction at the Missouri. These were placed on the rear end of 400 cabs and proved one of the best advertising mediums ever employed by the theatre.

The regular campaign was augmented by the distribution of 10,000 circulars and Sans Gene Gold Coins by men at the ball park during the big league games. Special banners on the attraction were also carried around the ball park between innings.

Marriage License Tie-up for "Man and Maid"

When "Man and Maid" played recently at the Sun theatre in Omaha, Neb., W. G. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, caused widespread comment on the picture by causing the following paragraph to appear at the top of the marriage license column in the press under the caption "The Union of 'Man and Maid:'"

"Elinor Glyn, famous author of 'Three Weeks,' 'His Hour' and 'Man and Maid,' and leading exponent of love as the ruling passion of the universe, wants every newly married couple or those engaged to be married, to see the screen presentation of her latest success, 'Man and Maid,' at the Sun theatre. Through arrangements with Elinor Glyn and Metro-Goldwyn, the Omaha Daily News will give to each couple whose names appear in this column during the run of the picture complimentary tickets to see this forceful and graphic portrayal of the love of 'Man and Maid.' Tickets may be procured by calling at the Daily News Office."

Special stories were used in the press to supplement this stunt.

In addition Bishop distributed sealed envelopes reading on the outside: "Mr. Man: Do you dare give this unopened to a maid?" and in smaller letters under this question: "The above is for the unmarried man. The married man should give this unopened to his wife." The card inside contained an invitation to see the picture addressed in affectionate terms and signed "The One Who Gave You This."

Window displays featuring jewelry, radio, typewriters, drugs, maps and Goodyear tires helped exploit the showing also. Slides and trailers were brought into play at the different theatres and there was a special lobby display.

A strong shadow-box was the central piece of this lobby display on "The Light of the Western Stars" (Paramount), which was executed by Luke Hitchcock, staff artist of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, of which Guy O. Kenimer is manager.

Safety First Parade Given for "Seven Chances"

A novel parade emphas'zing the necessity for careful driving and safety first was the feature of an intensive exploitation campaign waged recently in Madison, Wis., in connection with the showing of Buster Keaton's new comedy, "Seven Chances," at the Strand Theatre. Six trucks headed this parade, the first truck carrying an auto which had been slightly damaged with a banner reading "Chance No. 1." The second truck carried an auto damaged somewhat more, and labelled "Chance No. 2," and so on, the sixth truck carrying a machine almost completely wrecked. These six trucks were followed by a hearse captioned: "The party that is riding inside took one chance too many. But you still have 'Seven Chances' to see Buster Keaton at the Strand." Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, conducted this campaign in collaboration with Mr. Desmoreaux, enterprising manager of the Strand.

The Casualty Insurance Company was induced to contribute a float to the parade also, and to donate a prize of $20 for the best essay on "Don't Take Chances." Manager Desmoreaux added $30 to this sum, making the prize $50. This contest was featured in the local dailies and proved immensely popular.

All Yellow Cabs carried banners exploiting the showing over their spare tires with the additional caption—"Our Drivers Never Take Chances." A "seven" sticker was attached to newspapers by newsboys, and four window displays, two with the Knapp hat stores and two with music stores featuring harmonicas, also helped exploit the showing. Heralds were put into the mail and key boxes of all guests at the two biggest hotels, the New Belmont and the Loraine, and a pass for the two was put into every box having a number ending in seven.

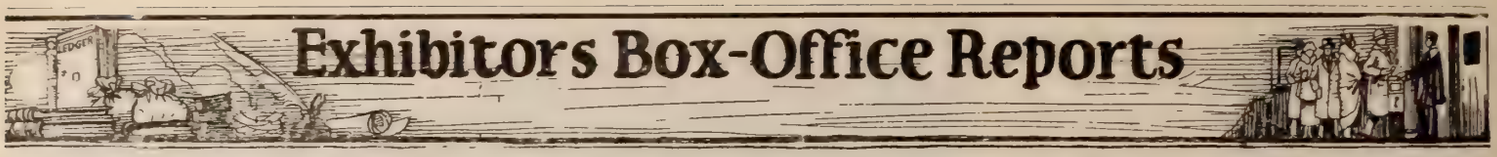
Extra space was taken in all the papers, and slides and trailers were also used. Cutouts decorated the lobby.

Lobby display with large cutout in the center, used by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce of the Strand theatre, Birmingham, for the showing of "Are Parents People?" (Paramount).

Clever Hoax Boosts "Rag Man"

Butte is Aroused to Fever Heat by Announcement of Junk Shop

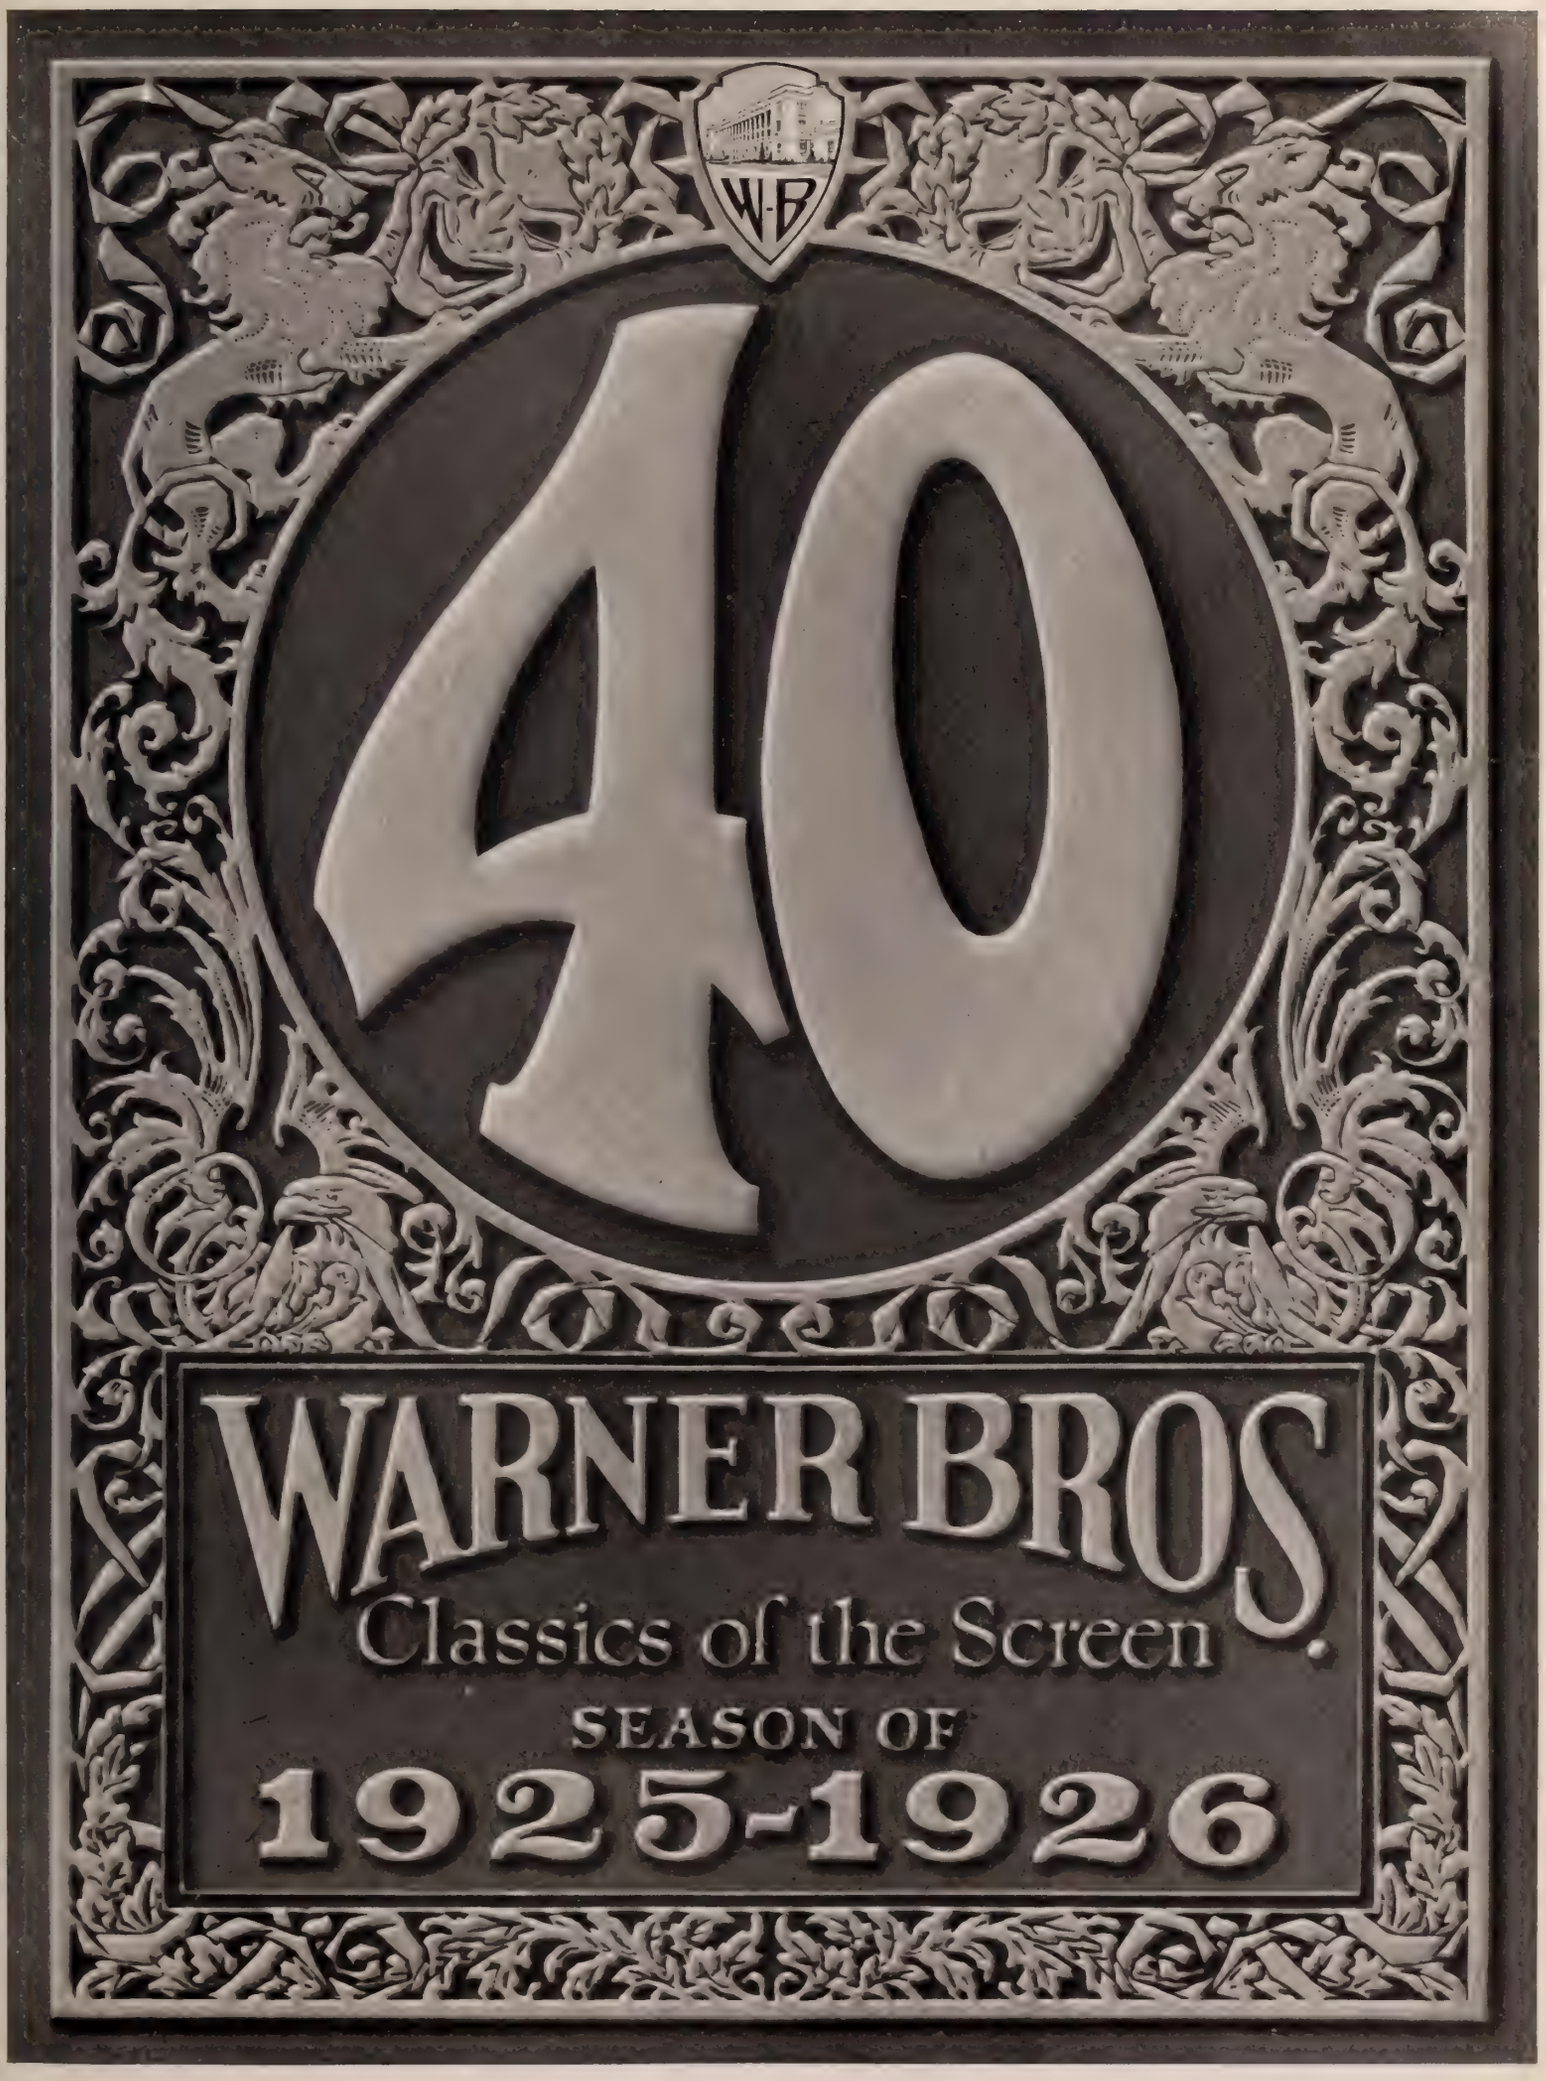
The cleverest and most successful exploitation feat ever put over in Butte, Montana, and one of the most original known, anywhere, was recently staged by W. J. Sullivan, manager of the Rialto Theatre, and W. A. Burke, director of publicity for the Silver Bow Amusement Company, which owns this playhouse.



Burke and Sullivan advertised the opening of a "High Class Junk Store" under the management of Ginsberg & Kelly," at 142 West Park street, a select retail district. Immediately opposition was voiced by merchants of the vicinity, whereupon Burke and Sullivan caused the following advertisement to appear in all of the local dailies: "Our Hats Are in the Ring! We are in Butte to Stay. Ginsberg & Kelly, Dealers in High Class Junk, Will Hold Their Opening as Advertised at 142 West Park St., on Wednesday Next. Save all your bottles, rags, etc., for Ginsberg & Kelly, Dealers in High Class Junk."

Indignation broke out among merchants throughout the town. The Riddell Paint & Art Company inserted advertisements in all of the dailies appealing to the public as follows: 'WE PROTEST! We do not believe a junk store should be allowed to operate on West Park street. We have occupied our present location on West Park street since the building was built in the year 1900, and have taken a great deal of pride in maintaining our store and improving and installing one of the most modern and attractive store fronts in the state of Montana. We believe Butte to be a modern city and have always displayed our faith in the future of Butte by constantly upholding and defending its claim to be the best city in America. We do not believe the select retail district of Butte should be handicapped with an establishment selling old bottles, old rags and junk. We believe popular opinion will strongly oppose the opening of a junk shop by Ginsberg & Kelly or any other concern, as advertised for 142 West Park street."

At this point Burke and Sullivan exposed the true situation in prominent advertisements announcing that Ginsberg & Kelly had moved from 142 West Park street to the Rialto Theatre, where Ginsberg, impersonated by Max Davidson, and Kelly, played by Jackie Coogan, would hold a grand opening in "The Rag Man."



The line "enough to make a cat laugh" was the inspiration for this lobby display on "Charley's Aunt" (Prod. Dist. Corp.) at Guy O. Kenimer's Arcade theatre, Jacksonville. Loud speakers connected with a laughing phonograph record.

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

John Barrymore

America's Greatest Actor

John Barrymore is more than a name; more than a personality he is an institution. In America and England a Barrymore play is the season's event. No player in the dramatic world has been more photographed. Magazines and newspapers continually record his accomplishments; discuss his art; analyze his personality.

John Barrymore's prestige is due to his marvelous ability. He is rightly called the world's greatest actor. Under the auspices of Warner Bros., Barrymore will make his new contributions to the screen in 1925-26. It was through Warner Bros. that John Barrymore in "Beau Brummel" reached the screen. Likewise through Warner Bros. the art and the wonder of John Barrymore will this season be brought to millions.

Syd Chaplin

Celebrated Character Comedian

Warner's policy of a varied program is again illustrated in the selection of Syd Chaplin to star in two feature comedies. The immense public favor toward this inimitable master of pantomine is best illustrated by the enthusiastic reception accorded him last season in "Charlie's Aunt."

Two Syd Chaplin pictures will be "The Man on the Box" and "The College Widow," two stories which have proven their box office power on the stage. If, as the forecasters have agreed, this season will be the year for feature comedies, then the Syd Chaplin pictures will be among the biggest of the year. For no comedian is more likeable, more spontaneously humorous, or has such finesse in pantomimic art.

Marie Prevost

Her charm has been felt wherever pictures are shown. Her appeal is world-wide—yet in every production she is a new Marie Prevost. First alluring, then demure and daintily feminine, then the chic, vivacious comedienne.

Her recent fine achievements have strengthened her hold upon moviegoers. She is a proven box office star, and her 1925-26 productions will be certain box office successes.

Monte Blue

Monte Blue will be one of the mainstays of Warner's 1925-26 program. In a smashing railroad melodrama, in society stories, in a rugged mountaineer drama, in a speedy comedy drama, this inimitable star will prove his versatility.

And Blue is versatile. Compare "Kiss Me Again" with "Recompense". Entirely different types of roles—but Monte Blue delighted his huge army of admirers in both.

KENNETH HARLAN—PATSY RUTH MILLER

These two screen artists will appear together as co-stars in stories of modern American life.

Miss Miller, as leading lady in scores of big productions during the past three years, has very thoroughly proved her hold upon the public. She is dainty and charming, and is equally at home in comedy as well as dramatic situations.

Kenneth Harlan has likewise proved his right to stardom. He is a clean cut, attractive leading man with a record of scores of box office successes.

Matt Moore—Dorothy Devore

This team of stars made their first appearance together in "The Narrow Street." They followed with "How Baxter Butted In", and showed conclusively that theirs was a type of comedy drama that is sure-fire at the box office. Matt Moore is sympathetic, droll, and has a wealth of pantomimic expression. Dorothy Devore is lovable, charming, and distinct.

The first Moore-Devore picture in the Warner forty will be "Three Weeks in Paris" to be followed by "The Sap" and "The Honeymoon Express".

LOWELL SHERMAN

Warner Bros. in 1925-26 will afford to Lowell Sherman the opportunity this great screen and stage star so well deserves. Under the direction of great Warner directors, in Warner classics that will afford him roles suited to his personality, Sherman will be welcomed as a star by thousands upon thousands.

In Lowell Sherman there is romance, a touch of sophistication, and a flair for subtle comedy that is unequalled.

Irene Rich

The public, always positive in selecting its favorites, has very definitely decided that Irene Rich shall be placed high on a pedestal of popularity. There is a wistfulness about her that entrances. She is the most truly feminine of all feminine stars, representing the highest type of American womanhood.

She will be seen in the new Warner forty in dramatic productions suited to that personality and presence which will make her forever outstanding among screen artists.

RIN-TIN-TIN

The public wants dog pictures—and the public wants Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog. He is the one canine star whose moods change with the mood of his stories. He can be tender, protective, fierce, sympathetic, aggressive, light-hearted.

Surrounded by Warner artists of highest calibre, moving through stories of the Great Outdoors filled with thrills, heart-interest and action, Rin-Tin-Tin's pictures will find a place this season in the finest theatres.

Warner Directors

THE screen's greatest stars can be made greater by fine direction. Theirs is the invisible power which gives force to the story and finesse to the acting. And Warner directors have been as carefully selected from the top ranks as Warner stars and stories.

Just as the Warner forty for 1925-26 is varied entertainment, including melodrama, society drama, feature comedy, outdoor drama, comedy drama and adventure stories, so too, Warner directors have proven their particular ability in making varied types of entertainment.

Box office value is behind the names of Warner directors. The motion picture public as well as the motion picture exhibitor has come to know and appreciate the work of these men who will handle the megaphones during the making of the Warner forty.

Genius of the Screen

The genius of Lubitsch is the greater because his work always accomplishes its purpose—providing entertainment for the millions. He is known for his subtlety and his sophistication; yet he is one who reaches the hearts of the great rank and file of moviegoers. And in this is the final proof of his genius. He creates where others follow precedent, but he does not lose his hold upon the fundamentals of screen entertainment. He is, in short, always different; never beyond appreciation.

His "Three Women", "The Marriage Circle", and "Kiss Me Again" were three high spots in movie history. He is now at work on Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan", the first of his two Warner Classics for the season of 1925-26.

National Advertising to Your Patrons

Warner's national advertising campaign for the season of 1925-26, will be focused directly upon exhibitors' patrons. Advertisements in newspapers throughout the country and in motion picture "fan" magazines will create an interest in individual Warner pictures and stars that is bound to reflect in increased profits at the box office.

Warner advertising will be the most constructive step in audience-building ever taken in the industry. The circulation of Warner newspaper advertising will total between eighteen and twenty million!

It is advertising to the public for the exhibitor!

Serial Stories in 1000 Newspapers

Warner stories will be serialized in newspapers to an extent never before dreamed of in the motion picture world. This Warner serialization plan will cover not one, but many, of the Warner classics for the season of 1925-26, building for these pictures a ready-made audience and a lively interest that could not be equalled in any other way.

Fully a thousand newspapers will carry serializations of Warner stories. The circulation reaches millions. But actual computation, a quarter of a million columns of newspaper space will be devoted to the publication of Warner's screen fiction. In all newspapers, announcement of the forthcoming picture will be made.

100 percent Service Through-

IN 1925-26 Warner Bros. will enjoy, through its own exchange system, the privilege of direct contact with exhibitors.

In the purchase of Vitagraph, Inc. early in 1925, Warner Bros. secured the oldest and most reputable distributing organization as a channel through which the Warner product could flow direct to exhibitors. This releasing system, the need for which had long been felt, completely founded out the Warner organization. With a perfectly equipt studio and every production facility, Warner has added branch offices throughout the world, which, operating under the control of the Home Office, will strive first and foremost for service.

Exhibitors who in the past have been removed from direct dealings with Warner Bros. will find, under this new distributing plan, a company able not only to produce fine entertainment, but to render the perfect service in distribution.

Complete Line-Up of the "Warner Forty"

FORTY Specials are on the Warner schedule for 1925-26. A considerable number of showmen who already have booked the entire list for their theatres. In fact, one influential Broadway exhibitor has signed a contract with Warner Bros., binding himself to show the offerings of no other producer at any time during a term of fifty-two weeks. It was Lee A. Ochs, managing director of the Piccadilly Theatre.

Six of the productions are frankly melodramas. Slightly more than a dozen are comedies or comedy dramas, although the Warners have arranged to distribute a list of comedies independently of those on this list. The remaining attractions cover the whole gamut of human emotions, supplying adventure, mystery, romance—every form of dramatic entertainment.

Herewith is a list of the Warner Forty, arranged, as nearly as is possible thus early, in the order of their release

"The Limited Mail," from Elmer E. Vance's thrilling play, starring Monte Blue, with George Hill directing from a scenario by Darryl F. Zanuck.

"The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted," a domestic drama by Gertrude De S. Wentworth-James, starring Irene Rich. James Flood will direct from scenario by Bess Meredyth.

"Bobbed Hair," from the widely read novel which was the composite work of twenty popular authors. Marie Prevost will have the principal role, and Alan Crosland will direct. The scenario is by Lewis Milstone.

"Three Weeks in Paris," a Gregory Rogers comedy, will be interpreted by Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, with a carefully selected cast. Roy del Ruth is the director and Darryl F. Zanuck the scenarist.

The melodrama, "Below the Line," by Charles A. Logue, will feature Rin-Tin-Tin, the famous dog actor. The author is his own scenarist and Herman Raymaker directed the production.

Bradley King's "Satan in Sables" has been selected as Lowell Sherman's first starring vehicle. Miss King has prepared the scenario and James Flood directed.

"Syd" Chaplin will star in Harold McGrath's comedy, "The Man on the Box," with Charles Francis Reisner directing. Charles A. Logue and Mr. Reisner prepared the scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller is starred in Kathleen Norris's "Rose of the World," which was directed by Harry Beaumont from the scenario by Julien Josephson.

Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller will be seen in the comedy-drama, "Hogan's Alley," directed by Roy del Ruth.

Oscar Wilde's most celebrated drama, "Lady Windermere's Fan," is to be picturized by Ernst Lubitsch, an all-star cast appearing in the production.

"Red Hot Tires," an adventure drama, starring Monte Blue, was directed by Erle C. Kenton. E. T. Lowe, Jr., wrote the script from the work of the author, Gregory Rogers.

Irene Rich will star in Arthur Somers Roche's novel, "The Pleasure Buyers." Hope Loring and Louis Lighton wrote the scenario and Chester Withey is directing.

Lewis Milestone's drama, "The Easiest Road" will have Marie Prevost in the leading role. Mr. Milestone will direct from the scenario which he and Darryl F. Zanuck prepared in collaboration.

The Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore combination will appear again in Harry L. Wilson's comedy, "His Majesty Bunker Bean," under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Julien Josephson was the scenarist.

Charles A. Logue's "The Clash of the Wolves" is Rin-Tin-Tin's second attraction on the schedule. H. Raymaker will direct from Mr. Logue's scenario.

"The Love Toy" will be the second production starring Lowell Sherman. E. T. Lowe, Jr., is the scenarist and James Flood will direct.

John Barrymore's first picture will be "The Sea Beast," from Herman Melville's epic of the sea, "Moby Dick." Millard Webb will direct from Bess Meredyth's scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan will star in William McLeod Raine's "The Fighting Edge."

Ruth Cross's novel, "The Golden Cocoon," is to be interpreted by an all star cast. Millard Webb directed and Hope Loring and Louis Leighton are the scenarists.

Another starring vehicle for Monte Blue is "The White Chief," by Bess Meredyth.

Beatrice Burton's "His Jazz Bride" will be the work of an all star cast.

Jay Gelzer's "Compromise" will have Irene Rich as the central figure, Chester Withey directing from a scenario by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

Marie Prevost is to star in Catherine Broody's "Why Girls Go Back Home." James Flood is to direct from C. Gardner Sullivan's script.

In "The Sap" from the famous play the inimitable comedy team, Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore will appear again on the schedule.

Rin-Tin-Tin's third melodrama will be "The Night Cry," Herman Raymaker directing.

The title of a second Ernest Lubitsch production, with an all star cast, is to be announced later.

"Syd" Chaplin is to star in "The College Widow," from the novel by Frank Howe with Charles Francis Reisner directing the production.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan will interpret "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," by Gregory Rogers.

"Hell Bent for Heaven," by the famous prize play by Thatcher Hughes, will star Monte Blue, William Beaudine directing from Julien Josephson's scenario.

Rex Beach's "The Vengeance of Durand" will have Irene Rich as star. Bess Meredyth is the scenarist.

E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The Passionate Quest" will star Marie Prevost, James Flood directing from Bess Meredyth's scenario.

Rin-Tin-Tin's next offering is to be "A Hero of the Big Snows."

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan will be co-starred in Gelet Burgess's "The Cave Man."

Rex Beach's "The Barrier That Was Burned" will have Monte Blue as its star.

Irene Rich will be the central figure in Charles K. Harrison's "Silken Shackles."

The star of Charles Hanson Towne's "The Gay Ones" is Marie Prevost. Millard Webb will direct.

Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore will appear in E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The Inevitable Millionaires," with Roy del Ruth directing from Darryl F. Zanuck's scenario.

Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan are to interpret "The Social Highwayman," by Elizabeth P. Traine.

A special all star cast is scheduled to appear in the comedy drama, "The Little Irish Girl."

It is an interesting fact that already 25 per cent of this production schedule has been completed. The studios are busier than ever before, with six companies now at work and four others actively preparing to begin early production activities.

Marked Progress Made By Warner Bros.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the 1925-26 production schedule, which, in extent, in range and appeal of subjects, and in eminence of stars and authors, easily surpasses any arranged in the history of the company, brought general recognition that it marked the high water so far attained by Warner Bros.

By various stages the Warner program has been enlarged from a single outstanding offering to a list of forty specials. This has been accomplished in eight years.

Harry M. Warner, the eldest of the four brothers, remarked recently that one thing the brothers had to learn through the years of their business association was the part each was best fitted to play. It was a case of "A place for every man and every man in his place." Each brother is in his place now, with the result that there is no conflict of authority, on overlapping of effort.

Thus Albert and Sam Warner devote themselves largely to supervision of the work at the home offices, though Albert is now in Europe inspecting the foreign exchanges and investigating the European theatre situation, and Sam keeps in close touch with the exchanges throughout the United States and Canada. Jack Warner spends his entire time on the west coast as general supervisor of studio activities, while Harry divides his attention between New York and Los Angeles, making frequent cross-continent trips.

It was back in 1903 that the Warners opened a ninety-seat theatre in Newcastle, Pa. In the next year they launched into film distribution, forming the Duquesne Amusement & Supply Company to serve that territory. For a time this enterprise flourished, but when, six years later, its supply of product for distribution was cut off by the organization of the General Film Company, it was forced to sell out at an extremely low figure.

Four months after this set-back the Warners contracted with the Film Sales Company for the right to establish a distributing agency for its pictures in the Pittsburgh territory. Unfortunately, the films were frequently late in arriving and proved of a quality inferior to what they had expected, so once again they had to dispose of their business at a loss.

But they remained an undaunted crew—this quartette of brothers. They decided that if they couldn't obtain the kind of ready-made productions they wanted they would do their own producing. Accordingly they transferred their activities to New York and established Warner's Features. Their "Redemption," "The Glass Coffin" and "Perils of the Plains," formed the original Warner schedule. Still, they were not yet fairly launched on the road to success. Their ignorance of corporation matters proved costly, so costly that, in spite of a brave struggle, the brothers lost control of their company.

There was just one thing left to do—to start all over again—and that they did. This time they organized on a more complete and elaborate scale, determined, after a careful study of business methods and conditions, to overlook no safeguard needed to insure permanency. They formed Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., with the production unit in Los Angeles and the distribution unit in New York, and Warner Bros.' "Classics of the Screen" came into being.

It was back in 1917 that the new company first did "something really big" and it was "My Four Years in Germany" that put the Warners on the map.

This success was followed by others, such pictures as "Lost City," "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days," "Rags to Riches," "The Beautiful and Damned," "Heroes of the Street," "The Little Church Around the Corner," "Brass," "Main Street" and "A Dangerous Adventure."

Then followed the purchase of the Belasco plays for screen reproduction. By 1923-24 the Warner schedule had grown to eighteen pictures, including Belasco's "Tiger Rose" and "Daddies," and Clyde Fitch's play, "Beau Brummel," starring John Barrymore.

Last year's schedule, with twenty features, was not only the largest but the most successful schedule which had been prepared so far. And now comes the 1925-26 program—a leap from an even score to the "Warner Forty."

An outstanding move of the last few months was the acquiring of a complete and extensive branch exchange system, by which the company is now serving exhibitors directly instead of through franchise holders.

Warner Bros. Are Issuing Eight Westerns

EIGHT Pete Morrison westerns are on the current Warner Bros. release schedule in addition to the Forty Classics. They are five-reelers, picturing tales of life and adventure in the "cattle country," and beyond.

In this list are "The Empty Saddle," "Santa Fe Pete," "Mystery of Lone Ranch," "West of Arizona," "Cowboy Grit," "Range Buzzards," "One Shot Ranger," and "Stampede Thunder."

Three Big Studios Operated by the Warners

WITH three large studios, two in California and one in Brooklyn, Warner Bros. own complete and extensive production facilities.

The central plant in Hollywood, covers thirteen acres, an entire block, in the very heart of the city. It is fitted throughout with the most modern equipment to meet every conceivable demand of picture production.

With their several studios, Warner Bros. are placed in a position to make 40 or 400 pictures.

Jack L. Warner is in charge of all production activities. Every department of the central plant in Hollywood is under his constant supervision, and every detail of operation receives his personal attention, or that of Bennie Zeidman, who is associate executive to Mr. Warner.

Within the main studio building on Sunset Boulevard are four stages, having a combined floor area of 85,000 square feet; and capable of accommodating from twelve to fifteen companies at one time.

The second Warner studio in Hollywood is equipped with three open air and four closed stages covering an area of 97,525 square feet. These two buildings, it is said, give the Warner organization a greater amount of floor space than is at the command of any other producing company in the world, even without taking into account the eastern studio in Brooklyn.

John Barrymore, who will be starred in three Warner Bros. productions.

Housed on the Warner lot, within or adjoining the main building, are a lumber yard, an iron mill, a blacksmith shop, a garage, a camera repair shop, drapery shops, property rooms, an aviary, a menagerie, a huge laboratory, an architectural department, and cutting and projection rooms. Herein are facilities to satisfy any requirement which could possibly arise.

The laboratory, where the film shot by the various Warner producing units is developed and printed, is a huge affair, capable of handling two million feet of film every twenty-four hours.

Expert cutters and film editors are occupied constantly in the twelve cutting rooms. The projection rooms also number twelve, four of these being used by the inspectors, who view every foot of film before it leaves for distribution throughout the world.

The main electrical power station is sufficiently large to supply the needs of a city of 60,000 population. To pour a flood of light over the largest of sets, 131 overhead pieces are used.

The Warner Bros. radio station, KFWB, from which programs are broadcast daily, with Warner stars serving as announcers, is an interesting and helpful feature which has been added recently.

The Warner Bros. studio in Brooklyn is a pioneer among picture-making plants. Its two stages are not now in use, for all Warner production is being carried on at the west coast, but the laboratories are scenes of much activity.

John Barrymore in New Type of Role

WARNER BROS. never made a more enterprising stroke than when they signed John Barrymore. For the coming season's work, Barrymore proceeded to Hollywood early this summer almost immediately upon his return from London, where, during a season in "Hamlet," he elevated the reputation abroad of American dramatic art to a new high level.

His "Beau Brummel," a Warner Bros. production, won for him the Valentino Medal as the most nearly perfect of the year.

This year Mr. Barrymore has made still a more radical departure in selecting "The Sea Beast," based on the celebrated whaling story, "Moby Dick," as the first of his productions. This epic of the sea—specifically it is a highly colorful tale of the New Bedford whaling industry—contains action sufficient for half a dozen pictures.

The selection was approved in response to Mr. Barrymore's request for an adventure story, in which he should appear in a truly masculine role. Elaborate preparations are being made for this production.

Famous Authors Contribute Warner Classics

NOT all the picture stars are actors. Some of them are literary lights who supply the material which the players interpret. Half a hundred authors —the cream of the writing world—are represented on the Warner Bros. 1925-26 schedule. They are stars in their field quite as surely as the men and women pictured on the screen are stars in theirs.

Warner Bros. have always insisted that screen vehicles should be selected with as scrupulous care as casts. They were among the earliest of producers to recognize the importance of "names" back of those of the performers themselves. Of value are the title and the theme of a production and it is enhanced immeasurably if the work interpreted is the product of authors of established reputation.

Every exhibitor knows that if star, story and author all have "sold themselves" to the public, the triumph of a picture as a box office drawing card is almost positively assured in advance. When all three have been exploited for the exhibitor—much of the trouble and expense commonly devolving upon the showman is obviated.

With thousands of persons who are both readers of books and picture fans the mere mention of many of the titles on the Warner schedule inevitably brings to mind authors in whose works they have revelled and they should welcome the opportunity to see these literary offerings pictured in the films.

Such a company of outstanding authors of wide reputation—many of them of international fame—was never before brought together, is the Warner claim. They are literary specialists whose names betray the very wide range of theme covered in the Warner productions.

27 Artists in Warner Star Stock Company

THE WARNER STOCK COMPANY includes 27 artists. It is declared to be the largest of the kind. The Warners scoured the theatrical and picture worlds to obtain its stars and featured actors.

Any company having as a star John Barrymore, Lowell Sherman and Syd Chaplin—any one of the trio—might be said to be "made," so far as its standing as a purveyor of entertainment is concerned.

A glance at the entire Warner list will reveal that in the selection of every individual star and stock company member, the utmost care was taken to recruit, at least, one person truly representative of one particular department of dramatic endeavor.

Here is the list: John Barrymore, Lowell Sherman, Syd Chaplin, Irene Rich, Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Louise Fazenda, Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller, John Patrick, Matt Moore, Dorothy Devore, John Harron, Clive Brook, Willard Louis, John Roche, Huntly Gordon, Gayne Whitman, Don Alvarado, Helene Costello, Dolores Costello, June Marlowe, Charles Farrell, Charles Conklin, Alice Calhoun, Myra Loy and the dog actor, Rin-Tin-Tin.

Famous authors whose works will be screened by Warner Bros. Upper row: Phillips Oppenheim, Herman Melville, Wallace Irwin, Carolyn Wells, Arthur Somers Roche. Lower, Harold McGrath, Geo. Barr McCutcheon, Harry Leon Wilson, Kathleen Norris.

Warner Exchange System Is World-Wide

A LONG step forward in the perfecting of their organization was taken by Warner Bros. a few months ago in acquiring an extensive system of branch exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, as well as the British Isles, the continent of Europe, and Africa.

Theretofore, the distribution of Warner product had been through franchise-holders. Under the arrangement now prevailing, the company, through duly-accredited representatives, comes into direct contact with the showmen.

When Warner Bros. decided to operate an exchange system it took over twenty-nine established offices on the American continent, in addition to twenty in Europe and Africa. It has since added several to the list, to make certain that the entire exhibition field will be adequately covered. As illustrating the calibre of the men in the field organization, it may be stated that among the twenty-nine branch managers first signed, the average of service with a single company was almost six years.

Samuel E. Morris, general manager in charge of distribution, is actively in charge of this field force.

Occasionally, also, he enters the field himself, conferring not only with his staff of captains and lieutenants in their several sectors, but meeting personally the exhibitors whom they serve.

Syd Chaplin, who will star in features produced by Warner Bros.

The exchanges now maintained by Warner Bros. in the United States and Canada, with the branch managers in charge of each, are as follows:

Albany, N. Y., S. N. Burns; Atlanta, Ga., Ira P. Stone; Boston, Mass., Chester W. Sawin; Buffalo, N. Y., C. W. Anthony; Charlotte, N. C., E. P. Pickler; Chicago, Ill., John A. Steinson; Cincinnati, O., James V. Allan; Cleveland, O., J. E. Beck; Dallas, Tex., J. E. Huey; Denver, Colo., Charles R. Gilmour; Detroit, Mich., John H. Young; Indianapolis, Ind., Calvin Bard; Kansas City, Mo., C. A. Schultz; Los Angeles, Calif., M. A. Hulling; Milwaukee, Wis., F. F. Nine; Minneapolis, Minn., Thomas A. Burke; New Orleans, La., Thomas G. Guinan; New Haven, Conn., Paul J. Swift; New Jersey (office in New York), Nat Beier; New York City, Robert S. Horsely; Oklahoma City, Okla., J. N. "Man on the Box" Is Syd Chaplin's First

"Just saw 'Syd' Chaplin's picture 'The Man On The Box.' If this isn't a $2.00 picture, there never was one and no picture ever will be. It is a rare production. To my mind it surpasses 'Charley's Aunt.' Just imagine this picture included in our Forty."

"Syd" Chaplin's next production will be the famous "College Widow" adapted from the novel by Frank Howe. He will have with him Charles Francis (Chuck) Reisner, the same director who has just finished "The Man On The Box."

Following his success in "Charley's Aunt," Mr. Chaplin leaped into favor over night. Not that he hadn't been in the popular limelight before. His "Galloping Fish" from the studio of Thomas Ince started the chuckle. Previous to this he had divided his time to business outside of the industry and making a picture now and then that always stood out. He had no intention of returning to the screen permanently.

Warner Bros. offered him a contract in which he was to have his own unit, be provided with the best story, best company and most capable comedy director obtainable. He got them and the result is "The Man On The Box."

Warners Boast Exceptional Scenario Staff

WARNER BROS. boast a scenario staff which, they contend is second to none anywhere. The work of its individual members speaks for itself. Its excellence is reflected in the finished productions.

The names of most of the men and women on this staff are almost as well known as those of many stars and directors. The Warners, realizing in fullest measure the vital part which the script writers play in picture-making, show the same discriminating care in the selection of their scenarists.

Possibly Bess Meredyth's most ambitious script was that for "Ben Hur," though she has been the scenarist of all the Fred Niblo productions. The scenarios of "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" and "The Sea Beast," in which John Barrymore is to star, are by Miss Meredyth.

Julian Josephson has to his credit the scenarios of "Main Street" and "Brass," among Warner productions, and he will be represented on the 1925–26 program by "His Majesty Bunker Bean," to mention one attraction.

C. Gardner Sullivan needs no introduction, for he has been with many producers and prepared the scenarios for a host of screen successes. His first picture on this year's program will be "Why Girls Go Back Home."

Bradley King, writer both of original stories and adaptations, was scenarist for Thomas H. Ince many years. She is author and scenarist of "Satan In Sables," Lowell Sherman's starring production for Warner Bros.

Lowell Sherman, star of forthcoming Warner features.

The outstanding work of Edward T. Lowe, Jr., to date, is "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," though his list of achievements is an extended one. He has lately signed a contract with Warner Bros. and his first work will be "Red Hot Tires."

Among other continuities which were prepared by Sonya Levien were "The Top of the World," "The Snow Bride" and "First Love."

Well known among both scenario writers and directors is Charles A. Logue, who adapted "My Four Years in Germany." Besides his work as scenarist he has written several original stories for Rin-Tin-Tin.

The name of Lewis F. Milestone is another which appears in the list of authors. "The Easiest Road," on the new Warner schedule, is an original story by him and Darryl F. Zanuck, and he is directing the production.

C. Francis ("Chuck") Reisner, gag man for and co-director with Charles Chaplin, is at once an author, actor and director. With Charles A. Logue he prepared the scenario for "The Man on the Box" and then directed it.

Darryl F. Zanuck was the author of "Find Your Man," "The Lighthouse by the Sea," "The Broadway Butterfly" and "On Thin Ice," all Warner Bros. successes, and among the stories which he adapted for screening was "Eve's Lover."

Well known among teams in "movie" circles is that of Hope Loring and Louis Leighton. "The Woman Hater," on the Warner 1924–25 schedule, was their work and, among others, the scenarios of "The Golden Cocoon" and "The Pleasure Buyers," on the new schedule, are from their pens.

Warner Features Sold Over Entire World

CONFIDENCE in Warner Bros. is universal and the appeal of the 1925–26 schedule is world-wide, according to Warner officials. Impressive evidence of this is given in the fact that nineteen foreign countries, not counting those in which the organization maintains permanent branch exchanges, already are booked for the entire program.

This is the result of a campaign launched only a month ago by the foreign department, which has its home office in New York, with Gus Schlesinger as general manager.

With the twenty European exchanges active, almost the entire world is now sold on the complete schedule, it is claimed. Negotiations with the few countries remaining are now well under way, with assurances that deals will be closed in the very near future.

It is significant that in not one of the nineteen countries with which negotiations have been closed was a single production on the schedule rejected. The contracts call for a start in delivery in September. The nineteen countries are Philippine Islands, China, Japan, Central America, Cuba, Brazil, Argentine Republic, Uraguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements and Mexico.

Warner Bros.' head office on the European continent is located in Paris, with Ronald A. Reader in charge. There are branch offices at Bordeaux, Lille, Lyons, Marseilles, Nancy and Strassbourg, in France, at Brussels, Belgium, Geneva, Switzerland, and Algiers, in Algeria, on the African continent.

George H. Smith, with an office in London, is in charge of the work throughout the British Isles, Scotland and Wales. The branch exchanges are at Birmingham, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester and Newcastle-on-Tyne, in England, Glasgow, Scotland, Cardiff, Wales and Dublin, Irish Free State.

Doubtless foreign interest in Warner Bros. and their studio product is heightened, by the European tour now being made by Albert Warner. In the illness of Mr. Schlesinger, who was confined to a New York hospital at the time, Mr. Warner left New York in June to carry on a general survey of European conditions. His intention was to remain away four months, not only inspecting the Warner exchanges abroad but visiting every important city on the continent.

The foreign department has been an effective force for the dissemination of Warner product abroad ever since its organization, and with the acquiring of the exchanges in Europe and Africa the facilities have been increased immeasurably.

Lowell Sherman Is on the Warner Program

WARNER BROS. recently put under a limited contract Lowell Sherman, an artist whose successes in roles that caught popular fancy has won for him many admirers.

Mr. Sherman will appear in productions of the Warners, which they believe will stand out prominently in the 1925-26 Forty.

The first of these is "Satan In Sables" by Bradley King under the direction of James Flood.

The picture to follow with Mr. Sherman as a star is "The Love Toy," a story of New York's Greenwich village, by an anonymous author which has proved to be one of the sensational novels of the year. The director and cast for this have not yet been finally selected, but will be of the same high calibre as appears in "Satan in Sables," it is announced.

Warner Bros. would have been willing to sign the star to a long term contract, but his stage engagements require his presence in New York early in the fall for an opening in a new play under the management of Al H. Woods. Last season he was the star of the stage play "High Stakes."

This artist is not new to pictures although this is the first time he has appeared as a screen star in his own right. Those who remember D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East" will recall the fine performance of the polished villain in that production. The part was played by Mr. Sherman.

As the King in "Monsieur Beaucaire," in which Rudolph Valentino was starred, Mr. Sherman, as usual, gave an exceptional performance.

Many Successes Credited Warner Directors

IT is one of the many proud boasts of Warner Bros. that they possess, as they confidently believe, the greatest staff of capable directors to be found with any producing organization. As in the case of their stars and featured players, every name in the Warner list is one of importance. Proof, if proof were needed, is to be found in the productions they have made.

Possibly the average fan takes little thought of the man behind the megaphone. He likes the star or he doesn't. The general impression created by a given picture is or isn't favorable. But exhibitors know that many an otherwise good film has been marred by indifferent or incompetent direction.

It is manifestly impossible to determine the exact value of the director's work in the making of a picture—with relation to the work of other contributing factors—but that it is tremendous no one having the slightest acquaintance with production will dispute.

Warner Bros. were early to recognize this. Hence they exercise the same careful attention in the selection of their directors as they give to stars, casts and stories.

To the credit of Ernst Lubitsch are such outstanding pictures as "The Marriage Circle," "Three Women," and "Kiss Me Again," and to him has been entrusted the making of Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan," on the 1925-26 schedule.

Among Harry Beaumont's achievements are "Beau Brummel" and "Recompense," the success of which won for him the assignment to make also "Rose of the World," "His Majesty Bunker Bean" and other important pictures.

William Beaudine's "The Narrow Street," "How Baxter Butted In" and other Warner attractions so impressed Mary Pickford that she borrowed his services for the production of "Little Annie Rooney." He is starting work soon on the Warner "Hell Bent for Heaven."

Millard Webb is the youngest of the directors, but a brilliant future is predicted for him. His work thus far has been so favorable that he has been selected to direct John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast." Among his best last year were "My Wife and I" and " The Dark Swan."

"The Man Without a Conscience" and "The Woman Hater" are among James Flood's outstanding successes. He has lately finished "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" and is now directing Lowell Sherman in "Satan in Sables."

"Eve's Lover," one of the greatest successes on the Warner 1924-25 schedule, was a tall feather in the cap of Roy del Ruth, who has recently completed "Three Weeks in Paris" for the coming year's program. This is to be followed by "The Inevitable Millionaires."

Herman Raymaker directed Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked in the Snow Country," and among the Rin-Tin-Tin pictures he will make on the new schedule are "Below the Line" and "The Night Cry."

Such productions as "Enemies of Women" and "Under the Red Robe" are among the past achievements of Alan Crosland. He has just finished "Bobbed Hair," the picturization of the current successful novel by twenty famous writers.

George Hill, who enjoys a wide reputation as a premier melodramatic director, with such works as "Get Your Man" and "While the Devil Laughs" to his credit, has lately finished "The Limited Mail" for the coming year's schedule.

Chet Withey, who directed "Romance," Dorothy Gish in "The Hun Within" and John Barrymore in "On the Quiet," has just completed "The Pleasure Buyers" and will start work on "Compromise" soon.

Erle C. Kenton, recently signed to a long time contract, made "Tea With a Kick" and "The Leather Pushers," among other successes. His first picture for Warner Bros. is "Red Hot Tires."

Noel Smith, signed by the Warners because of the long line of success he has made, is at work now on "The Clash of the Wolves," in which the dog actor, Rin-Tin-Tin, is featured.

Charles (Chuck) Reisner co-directed with Charles Chaplin "A Dog's Life," "The Pilgrim," "The Kid," "Shoulder Arms" and "The Gold Rush." He will be represented in the new Warner schedule by "The Man on the Box" and "The College Widow."

Lewis Milestone, who wrote the scenario of "Bobbed Hair," has just finished the direction of "The Easiest Road," the story and scenario of which he wrote with Darryl F. Zanuck.

Lubitsch To Direct Important Production

IN Ernst Lubitsch, Warner Bros., have an eminent director. Lubitsch is constantly "growing."

Coming to America from Europe, and entering upon screen work after a successful stage career, Mr. Lubitsch brought to picture direction a world-wide outlook and an experience covering every field of dramatic effort. Critics regard as one of his strongest points the fact that he is able to inject into every player whom he directs his own personality and emotions, while his residence on two continents equips him to adapt himself to whatever situation is demanded by a given script.

It will be a long time before "The Marriage Circle," a Lubitsch production for Warner Bros., is forgotten. Of the many lists of "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," compiled by reviewers in every section of the country, not one failed to contain the name of this big special, and many of the judges placed it at top of column as a production without a peer. "Three Women," a drama of another type, also won praise for Warner Bros. and Mr. Lubitsch as well as the players participating.

When "Kiss Me Again," appeared, comparison with "The Marriage Circle" was inevitable, and, following the rule in the consideration of Lubitsch offerings, most critics declared this superior to the former triumph. Although "Kiss Me Again" is yet to have its first New York run, so enthusiastic was the dramatic editor of a leading New York newspaper, who had a preview, that on two successive Sundays in recent weeks he has devoted his lead article to appreciations of the production and its director. This is a tribute believed to be unprecedented in the case of a picture yet to be offered the New York public.

According to the Warner offices, one of the greatest marks of recognition ever paid to Mr. Lubitsch was that of the trustees of the Oscar Wilde estate who, after standing out for years in their refusal to permit a picturization of the Wilde classic "Lady Windemere's Fan," yielded when assured by Warner Bros. that the production would be in the hands of Lubitsch. "Lady Windemere's Fan" has an important place on the 1925-26 schedule.

Warner Bros. to Re-Issue Semon Comedies

TWELVE Larry Semon reissues, two-reelers are being distributed by Warner Bros.

Here are the twelve: "Bears and Bad Men," "Frauds and Frenzies," "Humbugs and Husbands," "Scamps and Scandals," "Reaps and Tangles," "Pluck and Plotters," "The Grocery Clerk," "The Fly Cop," "School Days," "Solid Concrete," "The Stage Hand," "The Suitor."

Warner Bros. Add First Vamp

FOR her work in "Satan In Sables" with Lowell Sherman, Warner Bros. have just signed Myra Loy, known as "a new type of vamp" to a long term contract, making her the twenty-seventh member of their famous stock company. She is the only vamp in the Warner featured player line-up, and the company intend to cast her in important roles.

Miss Loy is a graduate of the Ruth St. Denis School of Dancing and first attracted attention when she appeared in several of Sid Grauman's prologues at his Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood. She attracted the attention of Henry Waxman, the well known photographer, and through him she obtained a part in "What Price Beauty." This was followed by a prominent role in "Pretty Ladies." Her engagement for "Satan in Sables" followed.

Warner Accessories Big Aid to Exhibitors

ONE of the reasons advanced for the success of Warner Bros. pictures at box-offices throughout the country from the inception of the firm has been the high grade advertising accessories which this big producing and distributing company make a practice of providing for each individual release.

That posters, heralds, window cards, lobby displays, newspaper electros and matrices are oftentimes prepared merely because it has long been the custom to provide articles of this nature as adjuncts to photoplays is a suspicion for which there would seem to be some justification when some lines of "advertising accessories" are under examination. From the moment Warner Bros. began their march to the top among motion picture producers with such releases as "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days," etc. it was the observation of exhibitors everywhere that here was a firm which believed in good "advertising tools" and was willing to expend plenty of time, energy, and money to provide them.

No individual piece of advertising literature used by Warner Bros. is a "one-man job." The one man whose job it is to see that the posters, the heralds, the window cards, or what not are ready for exhibitors when they want them is only the "engineer." A dozen others, representing the combined showmanship sense of the entire Warner Bros. organization, give material help on everything that is produced.

Another important factor that has brought about the superiority of these important adjuncts to Warner Bros. pictures is the constant communication which is kept up between the people who produce them and exhibitors throughout the field who use them. Some particularly valuable suggestions have been received and adapted as the result of letters of helpful criticism from showmen in relatively unimportant communities who, nevertheless, have first hand knowledge on the subject of just what is best suited to the average showman's needs.

In discussing this matter of the careful preparation of advertising accessories in its relation to the Warner Bros. 1925-26 product, Sam E. Morris had this to say:

"We have always been extremely particular in the matter of selling our pictures to the public through the medium of the exhibitor's advertising on billboards, in his lobby, etc. In moving the 1925-26 product we are going to be even more careful. We have bigger and better product to sell and, with a national advertising campaign on in important newspapers throughout the country, it is only reasonable that this other form of advertising intended to accomplish identically the same results as the newspaper advertising should be given the greatest possible care."

Newspapers Using Serials of Warner Pictures

ONE thousand newspapers are publishing every day in the year serial novels from which the Warner Forty have been produced, it is stated.

The circulation of these publications, according to the certified statements, amounts to ten million.

Among the novels which are being serialized are: The Limited Mail" by Elmer E. Vance; "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" by Gertrude S. Wentworth-James; "Bobbed Hair" by twenty famous authors; "Satan in Sables" by Bradley King; "The Golden Cocoon" by Ruth Cross; "Why Girls Go Back Home" by Catherine Brody; "The Gay Ones" by Charles Hanson Towne; "The Pleasure Buyers" by Arthur Somers Roche; "His Jazz Bride" by Beatrice Burton; "Rose of the World" by Kathleen Norris; "The Inevitable Millionaires" by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Warner Publicity Reaches Every News Outlet

THE publicity campaign carried on by the Warner organization is prosecuted with energy from one year's end to the other.

At work all the time in the home office is a staff of trained writers—specialists in the preparation and dissemination of publicity.

Five hundred of the best newspapers in the United States receive special articles from the Warner offices every week in the year.

Two thousand newspapers receive a regular Warner news service twice monthly.

A special woman's page, carrying a particular appeal to mothers and daughters—and they constitute the bulk of motion picture fans—is used by 500 newspapers every month.

Several hundred newspapers receive and take advantage of a regular illustrated mat service.

Every newspaper which has facilities for handling features in rotogravure—pictures of stars and of scenes in Warner productions—constantly is supplied with material.

Several important syndicates, serving hundreds of thousands of readers, are regularly publishing special stories furnished by the Warner publicity department.

More than one hundred of the best known and most widely circulated newspapers of the country make regular use of a special Sunday feature service.

A daily bulletin service, calling attention to the highlights in Warner activities, is supplied—and use is made of it—to newspapers numbering several hundreds.

Radio Station to Aid Greater Movie Season

IT was the enterprise of Warner Bros. that gave to Hollywood its first studio radio broadcasting station and the first of its kind in the world. Not only has theatre business within its radius proven a stimulus to theatre attendance on the word of exhibitors, but KFWB is to play a big part in the Greater Movie Season just ahead.

Much of the success of the Greater Movie Season depends on the national publicity given to it. The Warner Hollywood studio linked up with some other 18 stations stretched across the continent will be a mouthpiece of the motion picture industry during the big drive to aid business. Over KFWB in Hollywood and from a station in Washington, President Coolidge and Will Hays will exchange greetings in opening the national movement. Stars of the industry will entertain, and a series of other publicity stunts are being arranged.

WARNER BROS. are about to launch a comprehensive national advertising campaign. The purpose is to call the attention of the public to the Warner product, thereby backing up the exhibitors who play these pictures.

"Not only will the campaign be notable because of the vast field to be covered, the extraordinary number of publications to be reached and the vast amount of material published, but it will be unique in the fact that the advertising will be bonded advertising," says the announcement.

"Exhibitors will receive certificates which will be, in effect, gilt-edged pledges that Warner Bros. will make good their promise to advertise exactly in accordance with every feature of the plan as outlined to them in advance. These certificates will be an essential part of the contract between the company and the exhibitors to whom Warners sell their Forty."

All details of the campaign were worked out by Myer Lesser, president of the Blaine-Thompson Advertising Company, of Cincinnati, who has taken a desk in the Warner Bros. offices in New York and will personally direct every move in the drive until its completion. The campaign is set to start between August 10th and 15th.

The campaign is to be carried on progressively. In the beginning approximately one hundred newspapers in forty-five leading cities—key centers—of the country will carry the opening message. About ten pieces of advertising copy, some of them filling an entire page each, will be placed in each of these publications. These advertisements will have to do with Warner Bros.' product in general, and with personalities.

The presence in the Warner line-up of such a famous star as John Barrymore, such a director as Ernst Lubitsch and the Warner Bros. stock company will be impressed upon the minds of the theatre goers.

As the next move, advertising bearing directly on individual pictures on the 1925-26 schedule will be carried in approximately one thousand daily newspapers not included in the original list. Each will print about thirty pieces of copy, of column length. This advertising will be timed to coincide with the run of a given picture in each city and will appeal particularly to picture fans.

Meanwhile motion picture fandom will be reached through page advertising to be run through a year in five of the leading fan magazines of the country.

Supplementing the advertising campaign is the publication of leading newspapers of serializations of many of the stories picturized for release on the coming year's schedule. This service is to be given the publications absolutely without charge, and assurances already have been received that 1,000 newspapers will take advantage of it, it is stated.

"The launching of this campaign on a scale unprecedented," said Mr. Lesser, "is justified by the superior quality and the vast quantity of Warner Bros. product. For the same reason we are enabled to extend to the exhibitor lavishly liberal facilities, such as were never offered him in the past.

"Bonded advertising, is something entirely new in the motion picture industry. Too often in the past have some producers and exhibitors given intimations that they would back up the exhibitor with extensive advertising, only to fail him when put to the test.

"The certificate we shall issue will preclude the possibility of failure to make good our word. It will be as much of a contract with the exhibitor as a contract for one of our productions. It is Warner Bros.' bond, guaranteeing our sincerity of purpose and rendering impossible the cancellation of any part of the advertising promised."

Direct Selling to Public by Exploitation

AMONG the big plans underway by Warner Bros. as exhibitor aids is a nation-wide exploitation service which will take in districts from coast to coast and is aimed to help sell the picture to the public for the local exhibitors.

As rapidly as possible capable exploitation men will be engaged; men experienced in newspaper work, theatre management and who are proven showmen.

Campaigns on all Warner pictures are now being laid out at the New York office by "Eddie" Bonns who is in charge of national exploitation.

Although the exploitation men in the field will be under the supervision of the home office, their work in localities will be guided entirely by the branch managers and the demands of individual exhibitors. In other words the men will work in districts instead of individual branch offices, and will be sent to the spot where aid is especially needed, so that exhibitors can call on the Warner local exchange for help anytime and be sure that there is an exploitation man in the district to give it to him.

According to Bonns there are exploitation plans for trans-continental outdoor stunts, and especial attention will be paid to newspapers and the radio. The radio, reaching the large field of motion picture fans that it does, will be used largely and several stunts are under cover to use this as a medium for selling the Warner product to the public.

Among them may be mentioned a travelling radio exploitation man whose business it will be to go into cities and towns and talk about Warner Bros. pictures playing the locality at the time. There can be no surer way of letting the public know what pictures are playing local theatres than by telling them directly.

"U" Completes Several New "Jewels"

Gibson, Philbin and Peters Vehicles Among Important "White List" Films for New Season

AMONG the most important of the "Second White List" productions which Universal will offer on the company's "Jewel" program for next season are features completed or now nearing completion, in which Hoot Gibson, Mary Philbin and House Peters are the stars, as well as an all-star cast offering directed by James O. Spearing and Svend Gade.

In this group are two Hoot Gibson pictures, "The Man in the Saddle" and "The Arizona Sweepstakes"; Mary Philbin in "Stella Maris," now being filmed; House Peters in "The Storm Breaker"; and "Peacock Feathers," the Spearing-Gade directed work based on the novel of the same title by Temple Bailey.

Officials of the company regard these productions as outstanding examples of the "quality pictures" which the Universal organization will present next year and hold the belief that they will earn a place among the conspicuous popular successes when the returns of the 1925-26 season are computed and classified at the end of that theatrical period.

In connection with these enthusiastic statements details of the pictures included in the group under discussion have been published by the company.

"The Man in the Saddle"

Hoot Gibson is said to reach the high point of his career as a star in this adaptation from William McLeod Raine's story "The Daughter of the Don's." It was directed by Herbert Blache and presents the star as an American adventurer seeking thrills and excitement in South America, a role which is said to be ideally suited to the personality and abilities of Gibson.

As "The Man in the Saddle," the hero encounters all the adventure in which he revels, this including participation in political intrigues, duels, a revolution and love romance.

The climax of the story provides both a thrill and a laugh, with Hoot getting out of a dangerous situation when he meets a gang of his old army "buddies" who had been summoned to the southern republic in the same search for excitement which had led Hoot from his native land.

Gibson is given excellent support by the large cast. Virginia Brown Faire appears in the leading feminine role, and Cesare Gravina, Fred Malatesta, Georgie Grandee, William Orlamond and Otto Hoffman contribute characterizations in minor roles.

Gibson in a Western Thriller

"The Arizona Sweepstakes" is said to be a thrill picture of exceptional qualities. Clifford Smith, the director, and Hoot Gibson set out to make this feature a hair-raiser, breath-taker and heart-stopper. From all current accounts at Universal, they did it.

There is a new angle to this latest Gibson picture in which the hard-riding Hoot is first seen caught in the labyrinths of a great city's underworld before he finally gets back to his native stamping-ground—the free and unbound plains of the West.

It is the story of an unsophisticated cowpuncher's adventures in a city's gang life and of his battle of wits and nerve with an unscrupulous millionaire rancher from the East. Of the many exciting scenes that feature "The Arizona Sweepstakes" the great cross-country race participated in by Hoot, the villain and a score or more of real cowpunchers, is the most exciting.

An excellent group of players is found in support of Gibson. It includes Helen Lynch in the leading feminine role with Philo McCullough cast as the "heavy." Kate Price and George Ovey take care of the comedy well aided by Billy Schaeffer, Jackie Morgan and Turner Savage. Others in the cast include Emmett King and Tod Brown.

"The Storm Breaker"

A thrilling battle with the waves furnishes one of the big scenes in "The Storm Breaker," Universal-Jewel production starring House Peters.

The locale of the picture is an island fishing village off the coast of Nova Scotia and the fishing grounds thereabouts. In this particular scene a great storm has lashed the ocean into a fury. Out beyond the harbor a fishing smack has pounded to pieces on Gaul Rock, a jagged pinnacle that reaches up out of the sea. A man is clinging to it.

The life boat of the village puts to sea in the midst of the wind, the rain and the mounting waves. At its helm is John Strong, the most powerful man on the island, also the most arrogant and conceited. His will is supreme. This is the character played by Peters. The man on Gaul Rock is Neil Strong, John's brother.

The scene was taken in the midst of a great storm. Threatening reefs rim the rock and it is soon apparent that the life boat will be unable to get near it. John Strong turns over the tiller to another fisherman and leaps into the waves. Then begins a terrific struggle of a man against the ocean.

"Peacock Feathers"

This Universal Jewel production starring Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis, with Ward Crane and George Fawcett in important roles, is a screen adaptation from the novel by Temple Bailey. The story concerns a boy and a girl, both of whom are poor, but one of whom is proud.

The girl, once rich, is a member of St. Louis society while the boy is a struggling college graduate, having the soul of a poet and the purse of a pauper. The flames of love flare high between the young lovers, but when the vision of endless want that would certainly be their portion throughout married life throws its haunting shadow before the eyes of the luxury loving girl, whose symbol of life is the Peacock Feather, graven deep in the escutcheon of her ancestors, she turns from his mocking gaze, ashamed, to wed a man of wealth whom she despises.

From this situation is developed the struggle of the boy against the persuasive power of the jilted rich man who is still determined to retrieve his prize.

Others in the cast in addition to those mentioned, are Carolyn Irwin, Emmett King, Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy, Aggie Herring and Dunbar Raymond.

"Stella Maris"

Mary Philbin, the dainty heroine of "Merry Go Round" and "The Phantom of the Opera," now is at work in a role which Universal studio executives say will give her a veritable screen triumph. The picture is "Stella Maris" and it is slated to be one of the big Universal releases for next Spring.

In "Stella Maris" Universal will present two new Mary Philbins. Each is a totally different entity. One is a beautiful invalid; fragile, dainty as a Dresden doll—a veritable poem. The other is a scrubwoman—coarse, poverty-stricken woman with absolutely no charm—but with a soul as beautiful as an angel's under an exterior that is almost loathsome.

Mary Philbin plays Stella Maris, the beautiful—also Unity Blake, the little scrubwoman who, in William J. Locke's famous novel, lays her life down upon the altar of the happiness of the only man who has ever been kind to her.

Charles Brabin directed and a notable cast appears in the new picture. Elliott Dexter appears as John Risca, one of the two men about whom the lives of the two odd heroines center. Gladys Brockwell, of "Hunchback of Notre Dame" fame, plays the sinister Louisa, his nemesis. Jason Robards plays the other man in the strange tangle of loves that makes the story. Phillips Smalley and other well known artists are seen in adequate supporting roles.

Gotham Productions Has Completed Five

STUDIO work has been completed on five new Gotham productions, according to word from the coast forwarded by Sam Sax, producer of Gotham Productions and president of Lumas Film Corporation. "The Part Time Wife," fifth of the series, was completed last week, leaving but seven scheduled productions on the company's program for the coming season to be completed, with the opening of the season still six weeks away.

Sax is now arranging for the sixth production which will be a racing drama titled, "Racing Blood." This will be put into production in the immediate future. Preparations are also under way for the comedy special, "McFadden's Row of Flats."

The five Gotham productions already completed are "The Overland Limited," "The Fire Patrol," "A Little Girl in a Big City," "His Master's Voice" and "The Part Time Wife." "His Master's Voice" is the first of a new series featuring "Thunder," the marvel dog. Prints have been shipped east ready for forwarding to the exchanges.

Intensive Exploitation on "The Wizard of Oz"

After a short, concentrated but very intensive advertising and exploitation campaign. "The Wziard of Oz" with Larry Semon heading an all star cast, made it's bow to New York audiences recently.

Lon Young and Charles Reed Jones who handled the campaign for this Chadwick special production did not overlook any opportunity or medium which might serve the purpose of notifying the natives of Manhattan and its environs that this famous L. Frank Baum story was to appear at the Colony theatre.

One of the first tie-ups effected was with "Roseland" known as America's finest Ballroom, located at Broadway and 51st Street. A special "Wizard of Oz" night with a prize waltz contest was arranged and the contest and theatre engagement were announced in conjunction with the semi-weekly radio broadcasting stunt given by "Roseland" through station WHN. Special decorations showing the famous "OZ" characters were utilized inside and out for two weeks in advance and the large illuminated marquee of the "Roseland" on Broadway carried an 18 foot cut-out of Larry Semon as the Scarecrow which could be seen for blocks. This display and the radio publicity reached hundreds of thousands of people and started the campaign off with a rush.

Next followed a special "Wizard of Oz" contest with the New York Daily Mirror and Daily News. Each of these papers devoting space for two weeks to this attraction. The Daily Mirror offered each day a cartoon of Larry Semon in the famous straw man make up which the children were invited to color. Hundreds of prizes consisting of a Sleeper Monotrol Radio Set, a Columbia Boy cycle, Hohner Harmonicas, Flexatones, a new musical instrument similar to the musical saw, Books and Dolls of the "Wizard of Oz," Yanki Boy play suits and "Bonzo" cartoon dolls. The various prizes being donated by the various manufacturers.

The Daily News Contest featured a theatre party under the patronage of Sally Joy Brown to see this famous fantasy so dear to children of all ages.

Manager T. F. McCoy of the Florence theatre, Pasadena, played up the title of "I'll Show You the Town" (Universal) when that picture played his house.

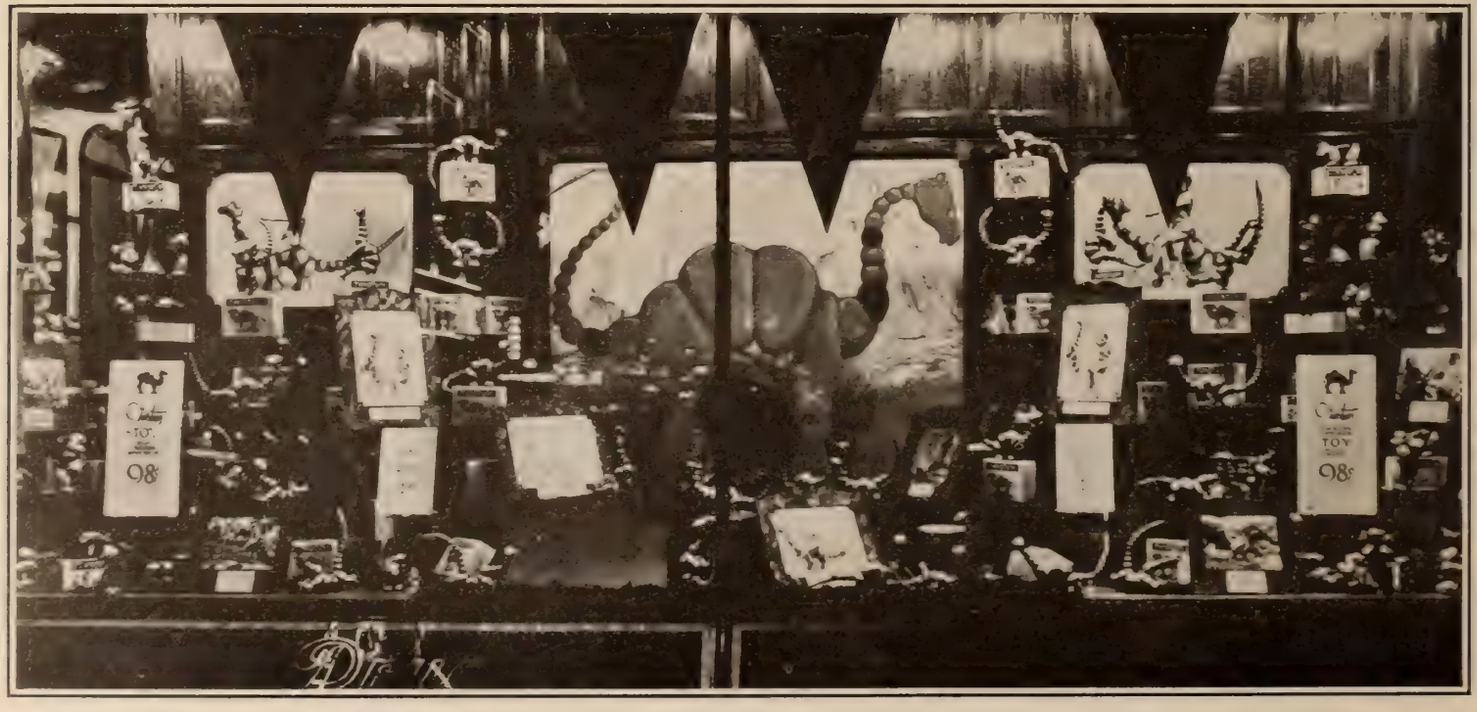
Bobbs-Merrill Co., publishers of the "Oz" books issued a special photoplay edition of "The Wizard of Oz" which was displayed in book stores throughout the city and also in department stores.

Frank L. Baum, son of the author and President of the Oz Toy and Doll Mfg. Co., arranged various window displays of these funny character creations, together with stills from the production in many prominent windows.

In addition to these various mediums all the usual methods were utilized. Special block paper ranging from one half sheets to twenty-four sheets was made and posted in every available spot in and around New York.

A series of specially drawn newspaper ads. ranging from sixty lines to full page in size, were carried in all the New York dailies.

"Chronicles" Showing Are Given Better Films Aid



Better Films Committees throughout the country are going to co-operate in the local showings of the historical series being distributed under the collective title of "The Chronicles of America."

The National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with The National Board of Review, with headquarters in New York City, has pledged itself to co-operate in every possible way with theatres showing this series produced by the Yale University Press. During the past week a letter went out from headquarters to all the Better Films Committees throughout the country urging them to "encourage exhibitors to show these films by guaranteeing the sale of tickets for the series of performances."

The letter also calls attention to the fact that exhibitors will usually allow co-operating organizations a percentage on the sales made through such organizations. Undoubtedly this is a good business proposition from the exhibitors' standpoint.

The percentage plan was recently used very satisfactorily to all concerned in Washington, D. C., where "The Chronicles of America" were shown at the Ambassador theatre at eight special weekly performances, March 10th through April 28th from 4:00 to 5:15 o'clock each Tuesday afternoon. "The Eve of the Revolution" and "The Declaration of Independence" were shown together; then "Jamestown" and "Vincennes"; "The Pilgrims" and "The Frontier Woman"; "The Puritans" and "The Gateway to the West"; "Peter Stuyvesant" and "Wolfe and Montcalm"; "Columbus" by itself; "Daniel Boone" and "Yorktown"; and finally "Alexander Hamilton" and "Dixie."

Tickets for the eight performances were disposed of largely through the efforts of the D. A. R., which was allowed a percentage of the receipts. Arrangements were made by the Educational and Public Service department of the Crandall Theatres, Mrs. Locher, director.

NOT long since Pathe publicly voiced appreciation for the splendid and most unusual spirit displayed by the Harold Lloyd Corporation in spending upon "THE FRESHMAN," their last picture under the Pathe contract, a sum far exceeding their contractual obligation.

Now Pathe desires, in all sincerity, to voice equal appreciation of the fact that this picture, representing a cost far beyond the producer's obligation, represents also a supreme effort in feature comedy making, a really monumental achievement in mirth-creation.

Pathe congratulates Mr. Lloyd personally and the Harold Lloyd Corporation upon their greatest triumph,—"THE FRESHMAN."

Pathe assures exhibitors of its profound conviction that "THE FRESHMAN" is not only Mr. Lloyd's greatest picture, but also the greatest picture and the greatest business-getting picture this business has ever seen.

Pathe is proud to present this supreme testimonial of the friendship and intimate relations enjoyed for eleven years with Harold Lloyd.

Short Subjects and Serials

A trio of action scenes from "Shelock Sleuth," a two-reel Pathe comedy produced by Hal Roach with Arthur Stone in the featured role.

Bischoff Starts Three Series of Two-Reel Comedies

Samuel Bischoff, president of Bischoff, Inc., and the California Studios, has started production on three series of two-reel comedies for the independent market. Twelve of these are the Biff comedies, twelve from the H. C. Witwer "Classics in Slang," and the other twelve the Gold Medal brand.

The first of the Biff series is titled, "Take the Air," the cast for which includes John Sinclair, Eva Thatcher, Lois Boyd and John Rand. Ed Luddy is directing.

The first of the Witwer "Classics in Slang" is "The Merchant of Weenies," a burlesque on the Merchant of Venice. Charlie Delaney is the featured player in the role of a prize fighter.

The first of the Gold Medal series will be "The Starvation Hunters," with a cast headed by Jack Cooper.

Nolan Producing 'Krazy Kat' Cartoons

M. J. Winkler has engaged Bill Nolan, a pioneer in the cartoon field, to produce the "Krazy Kat" comics for him. Nolan has already completed two of the series. He is making them at his own studios in Long Branch.

Nolan started as an animated cartoon artist with International and later was with the Pat Sullivan organization, where in a measure, he was responsible for the success of the "Felix" cartoons.

Pathe Lists Aug. 2 Releases

Alice Day Makes Debut as Comedy Star; Charley Chase Vehicle on Program

ALICE DAY, Mark Sennett comedienne, makes her debut as the star of two-reel comedies on the Pathe program for the week of August 2, the make-up of which was announced this week. In addition to the Day vehicle there will be a two-reeler starring Charley Chase on the schedule for the week, which will also bring a chapter of the "Play Ball" serial, an "Aesop's Film Fables" reel, a Pathe Review number and the regular two issues of the Pathe News.

Miss Day, who is widely known for her work in Mack Sennett productions, begins her starring career in "Tee for Two," in which she is supported by Raymond McKee, Thelma Parr and Wm. McCall.

In this comedy, Alice appears as a little Scotch girl who attempts to find her way about America as a maid of all work, and as the title implies the business-man's sport—golf— provides a locale for plenty of action.

Charley Chase stars in a Hal Roach two-reeler entitled "Innocent Husbands" a domestic situation fun-fest. Katherine Grant in the role of Chase's wife summons a medium to tell her what her husband is doing when she is away from home. Suddenly she decides that she would like to continue the seance at home and then things happen for the husband. Lucien Littlefield, Jane Sherman, William Gillespie, Kay De Lys, and Jimmie Finlayson are in the cast. Leo McCarey directed this Roach comedy.

"Betrayed!" is the title of the third chapter of the Pathe serial, "Play Ball," written by Manager McGraw of the New York Giants. In this episode, Jack Rollins is discovered to be the son of Senator Hornell, who is conducting an investigation against Thomas W. Sutton, father of the heroine, Doris Sutton. Allene Ray is Miss Sutton and Walter Miller plays Jack Rollins.

Pathe Review No. 31 presents: "The Indian Cathedral," an old Spanish mission in Arizona; Chapter VII of "The Origin of Man" series entitled "The Treasure Hunt," and Rochester, the flour city, one of the Pathecolor "Visiting Our Own America" series.

Completing the Pathe schedule of August 2nd are "A Yarn About Yarn," one of the "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day"; and two issues of last minute news events in Pathe News Nos. 64 and 65.

"Evolution" Film Subject of Radio Address

"Evolution," the Red Seal Pictures Corp. feature which played the Rivoli and Rialto in New York last week, was the subject of a radio address by Adele F. Woodward, president of the National Motion Picture League, broadcast from Station WEAF in New York on July 21. The speaker offered it as her opinion that the picture "strengthens the spiritual value of the Bible." The picture was edited by Max Fleischer.

Arias Now Heads Classplay Pictures Corporation

Henry Arias has purchased the interests of Jacob Weinberg in Classplay Pictures Corp., which he now heads as president and general manager. Classplay controls the distribution rights to several independent features.

"Krazy Kat, Krazy Kat, where have you been?"
"In the world's best papers, since I don't know when.

Big Power Plant Installed at Educational Studio

Enough electricity to light a moderately sized town is generated hourly at the new Educational Studio, Los Angeles, where Mermaid, Hamilton, Juvenile, Lupino Lane and Cameo Comedies are being made for distribution through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc

A total output of 7,500 amperes at voltages of 110 and 220 is produced by the huge motor generators which supply the current for the big arcs and Cooper-Hewitts used to light the sets used in the comedies. As the average house light uses about two fifths of an ampere hourly, the current generated is sufficient to light 18,750 lights of the ordinary 40-watt size.

Short Subject Bill Given at Lincoln in Cleveland

THE LINCOLN THEATRE in Cleveland has booked an all-short-subject program as a special attraction for three days commencing July 30th. The program will consist of a two-reel Ben Turpin comedy "Raspberry Romance," "The Love Bug," and "Our Gang" comedy; "Good Morning Nurse," two-reel Sennett Star; Pathe Review; Sportlight, and another two-reel comedy, "The Woman Star."

Managers Crockett and Burton have put out twenty-five Carnival one sheets, itemizing the program. These have been placed conspicuously in the neighborhood of the theatre. In addition, they are running slides giving the names of the short subjects to be included in the novelty program, and working up interest in the policy.

Other exhibitors in Cleveland are watching the experiment with interest. If it proves as successful it will undoubtedly become a fixture in local house policies.

International Beauty Trio in Christie Feature

Jean Lorraine, Doris Wynn and Yola D'Avril composed an "International beauty trio" which will be one of the prominent attractions in the Christie feature, "Madame Lucy," in which Julian Eltinge, female impersonator, will appear as star on the Producers Distributing Corporation program.

Miss Lorraine is an American, Doris Wynn an English girl born in Southampton, and Yola D'Avril is a Parisian dancer who made her screen debut in "Madame Sans Gene," Gloria Swanson's starring vehicle.

David Oliver Joins Camera Staff of Kinograms

David Oliver, well known cinematographer who has been connected with important photoplay and special productions, has joined the camera staff of Kinograms, it is announced by E. W. Hammons, President of Educational Films, which releases the news reel.

Oliver will be assigned to special duties requiring artistic photographic effects, a field of work in which he has gained a wide reputation.

To Release Holland Floral Films in September

Cranfield & Clarke announce that the Holland Floral Films, a group of short subjects revealing the architectural and natural beauties of Holland as well as the customs and legends of the people of that country, will be released in September. Standard Cinema Signs Rock

Under New Contract Will Produce 26 Comedies for Release Through F. B. O.

STANDARD CINEMA CORPORATION has signed Joe Rock to a new contract to produce a new series of twenty-six comedies for release through F. B. O. Rock only recently completed two series of two-reelers starring Stan Laurel and Jimmy Aubrey.

One of the coming series will be known as "Blue Ribbon" comedies. They will feature famous fat men of the screen. The first of these was started this week with Frank Alexander, Hilliard Karr and Bill Ross as the featured players. Billie Rhodes has been cast as leading woman and James Davis will direct. The picture is as yet untitled.

The other series of thirteen two-reelers will be known as "Parisian Standard" comedies and will feature some well known comedians.

A Joe Rock discovery, a young woman from Paris, who will be billed on the screen as "Helen from Paris," will play opposite the stars.

Shooting on the first of the "Parisian Standard" comedies will start this week at Universal City and prints will be in the F. B. O. exchanges on September 1st.

"Our Gang" Exploited by Rialto, New York

THE Rialto Theatre, New York City, exploited the showing there of "Boys Will Be Joys," a two-reel "Our Gang" comedy produced by Hal Roach, with a prominent display in the newspaper advertisments for the bill which was presented last week. The comedy was given a generous play in all of the ads which the Rialto used in Sunday newspaper displays announcing the bill for the coming week.

The picture received special comment from several of the reviewers for the New York dailies, the New York Evening World critic stating that in his opinion the "Our Gang" comedy was the real feature of the program.

"The Fighting Schoolmarm"

Universal-Mustang—Two Reels

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS story is styled a Western Love Story, but more properly it might be termed a deep melodrama. There is more of the melodramatic in it than there is of the western. It is a story that is not unfamiliar. In fact it is somewhat hackneyed, but there can be no denying that it holds the interest and that it is not without its thrills. Josie Sedgwick is the heroine and a mighty agile one at that. This is more than evidenced when she climbs to the school belfry and saves the small son of the man who is persecuting her, when the youth is about to be consumed in the flames whose origin he was responsible for.

Miss Sedgwick is the school mistress, whose hand is sought by an elder son of the head of the school board, who is also desirous of consummating the union of the young couple. But Miss Sedgwick will have none of him. She brings about the displeasure of the school trustee when she shelters a young man sought for an offense he did not commit.

She is found in her home with him and is promptly relieved of her duties at the schoolhouse. Young Willie Hooper, the tattletale son of the trustee sneaks to the school belfry to smoke a pipe he has found, and promptly sets fire to the structure. The heroine dashes to the rescue, throws a lariat over the steeple, climbs it and completes the rescue in the nick of time. The youth whom she has protected also figures in the rescue, so both are forgiven and the usual happy ending follows.

The Cast

The Heroine.....Josie Sedgwick

A Mustang Picture; story by Isadore Bernstein; directed by Ernst Laemmle; photographed by Ben Kline.

The Story.—Josie Sedgwick is the schoolmarm who is persecuted by the head of the board of trustees in an effort to make her marry his eldest son, which she refuses to do. She is found protecting a man wanted for an offense of which he is not guilty and she is promptly dismissed from the school. The telltale younger son of the trustee sets fire to the schoolhouse and is rescued by the heroine and the man she has protected. Both are forgiven in the happy ending.

Classification.—A western melodrama with a pretty love story and an abundance of action.

Summary.—While this is a somewhat hackneyed story, it is nevertheless interesting. It fairly abounds in lively situations, is smoothly told and gives Miss Sedgwick plenty of opportunity to display her versatility. She is equally good in the scenes which require dramatic acting or agility. The picture should go well wherever this style is liked.

"Look Out"

CLIFF BOWES, Eddie Nelson, Virginia Vance, and Zelma O'Neill make up a good cast and one deserving of something better than a comedy such as this for their efforts. The action is laid for the most part in a modiste shop and a back alley in a tough town. Aside from the fact that the characters are fairly good and well played the picture has little to recommend it. There is hardly the semblance of a story. For the most part it is a brawl among a couple of tough citizens, the proprietor of the modiste shop and the delivery girl. Zelma O'Neill plays the latter and her work is worthy of particular mention. Aside from that there is little to be said.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Bill Nolan, producer of "Krazy Kat" comics for M. J. Winkler.

"Paging a Wife"

Universal—Two Reels

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE are some good lively situations that make for some keen humor in this one, which features Al Alt. Most of these situations, of course, are improbable, but forgetting that, they help to make a story well above the average for these short comedies.

This is the tale of the wife who goes away and leaves hubby behind with instructions to behave himself, and he does in the usual manner of these deserted husbands.

Al feigns the role of the doctor on the way to attend a sick mother and child. Unconvinced the traffic cop accompanies them to the house and it is then necessary for them to produce the sick wife and baby. This difficulty is overcome when the pal climbs through a side window and hails a passing fair damsel, who is sport enough to go through with the proposition when it is explained to her.

The traffic cop, escorted into the room, is convinced of the genuineness of the story and things give promise of going fairly well until the wife unexpectedly returns, to the confusion of the scheming pair. There is no way she can be spirited past the irate wife who has discovered evidences of the feminine presence. There is an extremely fortunate ending when wifie discovers in the substitute a friend of long standing and the entire situation is happily explained to her. The fly in the ointment is that the traffic cop has overheard the entire explanation and hustles the pair off to the cooler.

The Cast

The Hubby.....Al Alt

Directed by Charles La Monte.

The Story.—Al, whose wife has just departed, is admonished to be good. He immediately becomes involved with a traffic cop for speeding and puts forth the subterfuge that he is a doctor rushing to the bedside of a sick mother and baby. He is made to prove his statement when the cop accompanies him. This he does when he persuades a passing girl to enact the sick role to outwit the cop. The plot succeeds, but the confusion is added to when the wife unexpectedly returns to find the fair visitor in the home. However, tney prove to be old friends and the difficulty is straightened out until the cop overhears the entire plot unravelled and rushes the culprits off to jail.

Classification.—A farce comedy with a good story and plenty of laughs.

Summary.—This is a well-acted, fast moving comedy with situations a little improbable but providing an abundance of humor. There is plenty of fast action and the picture is good enough for almost any class house.

"Beware"

Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE well known tiger and the equally well known combination of the human skeleton and the colored man can usually be depended upon for a few laughs in a comedy of this type. This one is no exception. It is so like so many that have gone before that one wonders how they can all continue to get laughs.

Lige Conley is the featured player but the antics of the colored gentleman in his efforts to avoid both the tiger and the skeleton must be given the palm when it comes to these so-called humorous situations. The story could hardly be dignified by being called such. It is just a lot of linked hokum and gags speeded up to a high pitch in a plea for laughter.

Lige and his colored valet finally reach the castle in the Swiss Alps, in which is concealed in a strong chamber this man-eating tiger. Inadvertently Lige or the valet opens the door to the chamber and the tiger is released. In their effort to make their getaway Lige and the valet rush into a secret chamber where the skeleton makes its appearance. The skeleton becomes attached to the shoulders of the colored man who strives in vain to extricate himself from it. The balance of the picture finds all hands dashing from room to room avoiding first the tiger and then the skeleton.

The Cast

The Dixie Composer.....Lige Conley
The Valet.....Otto Fries
The Girl.....Estelle Bradley

A Mermaid Comedy; directed by Stephen Roberts; photographed by Dwight Warren; supervised by Jack White.

The Story.—Lige and his valet visit the old castle in the Alps which has been turned into an inn. They inadvertently free a tiger, which runs amuck causing consternation among visitors and hosts alike. In their effort to escape, Lige and his valet find a secret chamber in which is a lively human skeleton who becomes much attached to the valet. From there on it is merely a wild effort on the part of all hands to escape the tiger and the skeleton.

Classification.—A fairly fast moving comedy with a few humorous situations.

Summary.—There is nothing in this picture that has not been done many, many times before. It is just a wild, harum-scarum chase of all hands to avoid a tiger and a skeleton. There is hardly a new situation in the picture, which however will probably get a few laughs in the neighborhood houses.

"Short Pants"

(Universal-Bull's Eye—One Reel)

ARTHUR LAKE is featured in this rather good story of the Sweet Sixteen series. It has more of the genuine touch of the kid stuff in it than some of those that have gone before. Arthur is the butt of the Sweet Sixteen Club, when on a motor truck party the truck hits a bump and he falls off into a mud puddle. The hostess takes him to her home where the young people gather and provides him with a suit of her husband and a formula for proposing to her daughter, which Arthur takes advantage of, only to be discovered at the height of his plea for the maiden's hand by the rest of the club members. The girl slips from the bench beside him and a cow plods up as the rest of the club chortles its glee. The fadeout finds Arthur planting a fervent kiss on the wet nose of the cow.—This one should prove a fair attraction in almost any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Innocent Husbands"
Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS new Charley Chase comedy produced by Hal Roach maintains the standard which has made this series of two-reelers the most consistently worthy of any being offered the exhibitor at present. The star is at his best in one of the best plays of the type he is doing and if "Innocent Husbands" does not succeed then the only answer is that the picture patrons don't want "feature quality" in their short subject entertainment.

On the strength of all that he has done so far on the screen, Charley Chase seems worthy of being exploited by the exhibitors. His consistent work makes it apparent that he can live up to the reputation which an exhibitor can build for him in the community by a little "boosting." Certainly "Innocent Husbands" is worth a good flash in the advertising of any theatre which books it, for with this picture the showman can promise clean, bright, original comedy done with the utmost good taste and production skill. It has laughs and plenty of them. Laughs that will issue from those who like a suggestion of the subtle as well as those who just want broad comedy broadly presented.

Chase appears as a husband again. His wife is jealous without having any reason for doubt concerning him. But circumstance takes a hand and places Charley in the most embarrassing position of having two strange women in the apartment and is put to the extremity of inventing marvelous and laughable devices for the purpose of extricating him from the difficulty. His stunt of draping one of the women with a sheet to pose as a spirit materializing from the seance which a mystic is conducting in the living-room, his procedure in removing the inert form of the fainting fat lady by laying her on a tea-carriage and pushing it through the darkened room as a second spirit and his own impersonation of an uncle, dead for years, and called for by the wife at the seance, are all extremely clever and hilarious bits of comedy.

The acting is excellent. Chase has definitely found himself in the type of characterization he essays and here he is supported brilliantly by Katherine Grant as the jealous wife. Others who score individual hits are Lucien Littlefield, Jimmy Finlayson, Kay De Lys, Martha Sleeper, William Gillespie and Jane Sherman.

The Cast

The Husband	Charley Chase
The Wife	Katherine Grant
Detective	Lucien Littlefield
	Kay De Lys
The "Other Women"	Martha Sleeper
A Friend	Jane Sherman
Clerk	James Finlayson

A Hal Roach production. Directed by Leo McCarey.

The Story.—Though she has no evidence in support of it, Charley's wife is jealous of him. She wants the truth and goes to a mystic who is guaranteed to tell her "the worst." During her absence two women from a gay party across the hall get into Charley's apartment, a most embarrassing situation when the wife and the mystic adjourn to the home to continue the seance. The husband outwits the wife by passing the other women off as "spirits" and so finally gets her promise never to be jealous of him again.

Classification.—Clever farce introducing much broad comedy and designed for general audiences.

Summary.—An excellent example of high-class short comedy, finely acted and staged and having good subtitles. It is a picture worthy of the program of the biggest theatres and entirely capable of winning success in the smallest as well.

"Yes, Yes, Nannette"
(Pathe—One Reel)

JIMMY FINLAYSON and his toupee are on display in this single reeler from the Hal Roach studios. The picture was directed by Stan Laurel and is concerned with the rather embarrassing events which a bridegroom faces on his first visit to meet the wife's family. They are a critical and frank outfit and the groom becomes the butt of their rough humor until he decides to stop being a Meek and fight them back.

It is a fairly amusing offering, perhaps a trifle better than the average one-reel comedy, having a good production and capable acting on the favorable side of its account. Among those who support Mr. Finlayson are Lyle Tayo and Sue O'Neill, sister of Sally, the Metro-Goldwyn star, and herself seemingly capable of fulfilling the hopes of Hal Roach when he signed Signed Sue to a five year contract.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Tee for Two"
Two Reels
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

ALICE DAY makes her debut as a Sennett comedy star in the leading role of this two-reel production directed by Eddie Cline. Miss Day, who has done capital work in several comedies, appears to be self-conscious or else her vehicle is too sketchy to admit of anything noteworthy in the way of performance to inaugurate her career as the stellar attraction of the brief comedies.

She appears as a Scotch girl recently come to this country and enmeshed in a romance with a wealthy youth whom she met on the steamer across the seas from home. It is a conventional story which the director has endeavored to enliven with slapstick and movement. He is successful in spots, but the task was a formidable one and there are many moments where the picture slows down to a walk—a slow-motion walk at that.

Raymond McKee is Miss Day's leading man, and the pretty Thelma Parr is the "other girl," the rich one whom the father has selected for his son's wife.

The golf links, where a burlesque game of the ancient and royal sport is perpetrated, proves the battle-ground on which this Scotch Peg triumphs over her rival for the consent of the father to a marriage. The father is a confirmed duffer and when he sees what a wonderful golfer the girl from "where the game was invented" can play he lets the boy have his way and take the girl of his heart.

The Cast

The Girl	Alice Day
The Boy	Ray McKee
The Other Girl	Thelma Parr
The Father	Wm. McCall

Produced by Mack Sennett. Directed by Eddie Cline.

The Story.—The rich boy's father meets him at the pier after his return from abroad. Accompanying the father is the girl he has chosen to be his daughter-in-law, but the son has met a Scotch lassie on the ship and he is in love with her. She is poor and acts the slavey in the boarding house of her aunt in Harlem, but only until such time as she can demonstrate that she is a great golf player, an accomplishment which so wins the admiration of the father that he consents to his son's marriage to the little newcomer from overseas.

Classification.—Love romance set to the slapstick pace and introducing the familiar plot concerning the triumph of a poor girl over her pampered and petted rival for the affection of the hero.

Summary.—There is plenty of "story" of the familiar love romance type here,—too much as a matter of fact to permit the introduction of the speed and brightness expected of the two-reel comedy. The director has interpolated considerable out-and-out slapstick, and this may pull the picture through as a satisfactory offering for the average audience.

Pathe Review No. 31
(One Reel)

THE picture log of the Roy Chapman Andrews expedition into Mongolia in search of the birthplace of man reaches the end of its journey in the installment of "The Origin of Man" which is presented in this number of Pathe Review. The scientists and explorers are seen carefully removing fossils discovered in the desert, specimens which are believed to be of great importance in ethnological research work. The reel includes a scenic of an old Spanish mission in Arizona, a rather picturesque offering, and color views of Rochester, the "Flour City."—T. C. KENNEDY.

"A Yarn About Yarn"
(Pathe—One Reel)

IN THIS Aesops Film Fables reel Farmer Alfalfa cannot "stick to his knitting," a presumably pleasant occupation considering his wrath at its interruption, because the prankish mice see fit to steal the wool yarns he needs in the enterprise of making himself a pair of sox. It is a collection of foolishness rather well done from the sketching and animation standpoint and provided with several sure-fire chuckles.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Start Filming "The Flame Fighter," Rayart Serial

Camera work on "The Flame Fighter," a serial written and to be directed by Robert Dillon, was started last week on the west coast. The picture will be distributed by Rayart with release date set for September 10th. Herbert Rawlinson has the heroic role in the play which will be filmed in ten chapters of two reels each.

First Run Theatres—

Here is the one best single-reel novelty for Greater Movie Season!

"Thirty Years Ago" brings to your theatre the beginnings of the motion picture, from the curious old close-up (which was a complete picture in 1895) to that famous super-special feature film—"THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY"—that knocked 'em dead in 1903.

It's real entertainment—real novelty. Every scene is genuine, printed from the original negative—only a limited number of copies CAN be made—so it's best to WIRE now for dates in August.

Danny, of Film Daily, says "this is a pip!" Every first run theatre in the country will want this picture—it is amusement and entertainment PLUS.

Set your dates NOW—we have only capacity enough for a limited number of runs in August—first come, first served.

Enlarging Educational Studio

Huge Closed-In Stage Will Give Comedy Units 60,000 Square Feet of Stage Space

COMPLETION of the huge closed-in stage now being erected at the Educational Studio on Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles, will give the comedy units making pictures there for the forthcoming program of the Educational company a total stage space of 60,000 square feet all enclosed. The addition of this new stage therefore will be equipped with one of the largest roofed areas ever devoted exclusively to comedy making.

The units which will make Educational comedies at the studio during the coming year include the Mermaid, Hamilton, Juvenile, Lupino Lane and Cameo companies.

Mr. E. W. Hammons, President of Educational, together with Mr. and Mrs. Mordaunt Hall, J. A. Barry and J. J. McCarthy, inspected the stage a few days ago, at which time Lige Conley was making a few scenes for a forthcoming Mermaid Comedy and Johnny Arthur working in a Tuxedo Comedy

While at the studio Mr. Hammons watched the installation of the new 300 K. W. generator set in the new power house building. This unit will be cut into the main supply lines in a few days.

Both the Mermaid and Tuxedo schedules are well under way. Norman Taurog, directing Conley and Estelle Bradley, in Mermaid Comedies, has finished the first picture of the series, "Pleasure Bound," while William Goodrich, directing Arthur and Helen Foster in Tuxedo Comedies, has also finished his first picture, "The Tourist." Tuxedo Comedies, this year, will be more along the lines of situation comedies, with clever stories, written and directed by Goodrich, the director who made the popular Tuxedo Comedies of the last series, "Curses," "The Iron Mule," "Dynamite Doggie" and many others.

Jess Robbins is directing Lupino Lane in his first two-reel comedy for Educational. The English comedy star is making a series of six Lupino Lane Comedies, which promise to be among the outstanding comedies of the year.

Al St. John is well under way on his second picture, a Mermaid Comedy. Under the direction of Stephen Roberts the company is working at Newhall, Cal., in a desert location. They will complete all exteriors in this original location before returning to the studio for the interior shots.

Production on Cameo, Juvenile and Hamilton Comedies has started, these pictures being put under way as soon as stage space was made available and the new electric generating plant completed.

Complete Cast for "The Viennese Medley"

The completed cast which First National will present in "The Viennese Medley," the screen version of Edith O'Shaughnessy's novel of that title, includes Conway Tearle, Anna Q. Nilsson, May Allison, Ian Keith, Lucie Beaumont, Nigel de Brulier, Bridgitta Clark, John Sainpolis, Marcia Manon, Edward Earle, Virginia Southern, Katherine Chambers, Isabelle Keith, Jean Hersholt, Hale Hamilton, Cora Macey, Carrie Daumery, Thur Fairfax and George Billings.

Yakima Canutt Disabled by Explosion

Yakima Canutt is the latest victim of misfortune that has struck the Hal Roach company making "The Devil Horse" in Montana for Pathe release. He is confined in a hospital in a small Montana town suffering from burns received when one of two flare lights exploded as he was carrying them over a ridge in a wild horseback ride.

This is only one of a series of mishaps that has struck the troupe, though the others are minor compared with it. Earthquakes have also added to the inconvenience of the company.

"The Devil Horse" stars Rex, hero of "Black Cyclone." Fred Jackman and Roy Clements are co-directing the picture, which will be a feature in seven reels.

Al Raboch to Direct Beach Drama for M-G-M

Al Raboch, recently signed to the directorial staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been selected to direct the production of Rex Beach's "The Auction Block," which is to be done in film form by the M-G-M organization. Raboch was a portrait painter and illustrator before taking up picture work, in which he first engaged as a designer of settings and later as assistant director.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

(Fox—7990 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS picture strikes right to the box office bullseye! A great stage success, it has every indication of being a great drawing card in filmland. You can't help feeling a sort of sneaking sympathy with the central figure, good old Bill Jones, as portrayed by Jay Hunt, and once you get heart interest established, as in this case, the feature is bound to go over with vim. Naturally the stage dialogue helps the picture version out a whole lot. This is reproduced in sub titles, craftily inserted, never too verbose and always right up to the mark.

It ranks as a really fine picturization of the lovable story that made a record Broadway run, you can't help responding to the deep pathos and tender cussedness of Old Bill Jones, and laughing at the antics of the faithful dog who guards his booze bottle. Jay Hunt in the role which made Bacon famous, gives a really splendid performance. Never once does he cross that slender borderline which divides pathos from bathos. He is Bill all the time, a true to life character, remarkable for its plausibility and tender appeal.

Director John Ford "did himself proud" in handling this one. He keeps the action moving at a clipping gait, manipulates his players with an unerring hand, and gets the real human touch into every situation. The court-room scene is undoubtedly the "big thing" in the picture. It is replete with humor and pathos. Yet it does seem to the onlooker as though Ford sacrificed straight comedy to the goddess of farce by stressing the absurd antics of the judge presiding. Even in Nevada one would expect him to maintain at least a semblance of dignity; but his clowning is so crude and far-fetched that at times it crosses the burlesque line.

The support is capital. Ethel Clayton, former Paramount star, comes back to the screen in a snappy portrayal of the young widow who vamps the aforesaid judge. Madge Bellamy is a dainty heroine and the support throughout is well balanced. Photography good, settings elaborate.

THEME. Deals with an old ex-Grand Army veteran, Bill Jones, who likes his liquor and runs a hotel in conjunction with his wife on the state line dividing California and Nevada. Swindlers induce the wife to sell out, but Bill, backed up by a young lawyer, refuses to sign. Wife sues for divorce, but relents at the crucial moment and all ends well.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy moments showing dog carrying booze bottle. Scene where hero dodges sheriff. Court-Room situation.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can play this up as one of the greatest Broadway hits. Road companies have played it all over the country and you can tell your patrons that the film is better than the original.

DRAWING POWER. This picture should do good business in any theatre. It is alive with human interest, shot through with bright comedy touches and entertaining as a whole.

SUMMARY. A capital drawing card. Not a dull moment in the entire eight reels. Direction and acting far above average.

THE CAST

Lightin' Bill Jones	Jay Hunt
Milly	Madge Bellamy
John Marvin	Wallace MacDonald
Judge Townsdend	J. MacDonald
Margaret Davis	Ethel Clayton
Sheriff	James Marcus
Mrs. Bill Jones	Edythe Chapman
Zeb	Otis Harlan
Hammond	Brandon Hurst

Authors, Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon. Directed by John Ford.

SYNOPSIS. Comedy drama centering about loveable old character who is a natural born yarn spinner. He and his wife run a hotel on the California-Nevada border. When swindlers induce his wife to sell out, Bill refuses to sign. This is misinterpreted by his wife, who sues for divorce. At the last minute, in the courtroom, everything ends happily.

IF this doesn't hit the box office target right plumb in the center we miss our guess badly. Here is a story chockful of human interest, well directed, beautifully photographed and crammed into a tidal wave finish that sweeps everything before it. We have never seen better stuff than those scenes depicting the good old Bowery in the late 90's, and the lineup of the fake crippled army is so convincing that it leaves the average spectator wondering why one should be so foolish as to work for a living wage along legitimate borders. Diamond Mike's saloon with its back room where the phony beggars congregate is the very acme of realism. The lame, halt and blind pursue their respective careers with joyous abandon, a care-free lot that you can't help warming up to, a real jovial crowd.

Then the note of pathos creeps in. For Portland Fancy, a wreck of womanhood about to slide into the eternal shadows, begs "Easy Money Charlie" to take care of her little four-year-old girl, an inmate of an orphan asylum. And Charlie makes good. He hires a housekeeper, rents a bungalow far away from the great city and brings the kid up like a lady, keeping her off the streets and never letting her know what his real profession is.

Now this is a story that the average director would, putting it in slang phrase, "slop over" on, when it comes to stressing the sentimental angle; but Herbert Brenon has skillfully steered clear of such pitfalls; his people are intensely human, they grab your sympathy and hang on to it all through the picture. Charlie lives his double life, always protecting the girl and when the right man comes along he steps out just in time to let the marriage take place. Percy Marmont scores a decided hit in the role of Easy Money Charlie, giving a really excellent interpretation of the quality of mercy. Juliet Brenon offers a finely polished, yet extremely natural character sketch of Portland Fancy, and the support is all that could be desired.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Death of Portland Fancy. Scene between Marmont and dying woman where she begs him to look out for her baby daughter. Sequence where Marmont's dog is killed. Situation where Marmont prevents White Eye from telling the girl the truth.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as an underworld romance in which the King of Beggars sacrifices everything for love. The title carries strong advertising possibilities. Feature Percy Marmont, Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton.

DRAWING POWER. A well directed, beautifully photographed story of the underworld. Should do well in any theatre.

SUMMARY. This registers as a real knockout. Fast action, clean sentiment, clever direction and good work by entire cast.

THE CAST

Easy Money Charlie	Percy Marmont
Fancy Vahern	Mary Brian
Philip Peyton	Neil Hamilton
Bridgeport White-Eye	John Harrington
Portland Fancy	Juliet Brenon
Dutch Dolly	Josephine Deffry
Diamond Mike	Riley Hatch

Author, George Kibbe Turner. Scenario by Paul Schofield.

SYNOPSIS. Portland Fancy, Bowery derelict, dying, asks Easy Money Charlie to take care of her four-year-old daughter. Charlie brings the child up carefully, never letting her know that his real profession is that of a beggar. White-Eye, Charlie's enemy, tries to blackmail him but is defeated. The girl marries the man she loves.

Wild Justice

(United Artists—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

"EVERY dog has his day" according to the old adage, and it looks as though the canines are all set for a real screen holiday. But as a matter of course they aren't enjoying a vacation, quite the contrary, for it's real work they're doing before the camera these days. In "Wild Justice" the dog star known as Arno certainly works hard from beginning to end. C. Gardner Sullivan directed this one and he saw to it that the bow-wow earned his salary.

But it must be admitted that "Peter The Great", portrayed by Mr. Arno we speak of him in a human sense, so great is the impression made upon us by this trusty paw-waver and limpid eyes, seems to enjoy the melodrama into which he puts the big punch. There are dogs and dogs! Some of them face the camera with a sort of challenge to fate. They are there just to be photographed, don't like the game but submit because of circumstances over which they have no control.

Now Peter isn't a bit like a screen conscript. Pete gives you the impression of a four-footed hound who is in it heart and soul, if dogs can be slated as possessing a soul, as the reincarnation theory has it. He displays intelligence of extraordinary high degree and makes you feel that he is boss of the entire picture. The story opens with an old man lying dead in his lonely cabin. Beside him crouches Arno, the giant dog. His owner has been slain by a bullet penetrating his forehead. Doctor Blake appears and recovers the bullet. Later it develops that the bullet which killed the heroine's uncle was fired by one Blake. The latter calls the Vigilantes together, and the angry settlers besiege the doctor's cabin. Arno is sent for help, but is trapped by Blake, tied in a canoe and set adrift in turbulent rapids above a waterfall. However, he fights himself loose and hikes back to the cabin. He gets there in time to start on the trail of Blake, who has escaped after confessing to the sheriff. In the finale, Arno pursues the villain and hurls him to death over a precipice.

THEME. Straight melodrama, with dog hero, accused of being vicious but finally clearing himself and avenging murder of his master.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Dr. Blake discovers identity of bullet with that which killed Peter's master. Gathering of Vigilantes. Arno's voyage through the rapids lashed in a canoe—his escape and return to the cabin. Flight of Blake after fight with doctor. Combat between Arno and villain in which latter is hurled over cliff.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A trick dog ballyhoo could be utilized with good effect in boosting this feature. Tie-up with department stores on dog supply sales is in order. Play up Peter The Great and feature George Sherwood, Frank Hagney and Frances Teague.

DRAWING POWER. You should do well with the juvenile trade, and the young ones will surely pull the adults to see this one. Ought to get the money as a program attraction.

SUMMARY. This will make a big hit with the kiddies and offers entertainment classy enough to please their elders.

THE CAST

Arno	Peter The Great
Dr. Dave Wright	George Sherwood
Bob Blake	Frank Hagney
Polly Ann Hadley	Frances Teague

Produced by Chester M. Franklin. Author, C. Gardner Sullivan. Photography by Ray Binger.

SYNOPSIS. Arno, giant dog is found lying beside corpse of murdered master. He repudiates Blake, who gives him to a young doctor who discovers the murderer. Arno maintains dislike for Blake, trails him constantly and finally drives him to death over a precipice.

A Slave of Fashion

(Metro-Goldwyn—5986 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD box office attraction. "The Slave Of Fashion" as its names indicates is strong on styles in women's clothing. Norma Shearer parades a magnificent wardrobe, wears her gowns gracefully and excites envy in the breasts of all feminine patrons. But there is more than mere gown display to this picture. It offers a very ingenious plot with a twist to it that the most cultured fan can hardly anticipate, holds its interest all the way and swings into a totally unexpected climax.

The story starts with Katherine Emerson hiking for New York via the Pullman car route. There's a train wreck. Katherine, bewildered, but able to rally her mental forces, gets hold of the effects of another woman who is killed, and masquerades as her in Nicholas Wentworth's vacated apartment. Nick is journeying abroad, but he returns before Katherine and her family, the members of which pay her an unlooked-for visit.

There are some very bright spots in this film. Along about the middle the action slacks down a bit, but speeds up again and makes a racing finish. Katherine has a grand time of it in the Park Avenue apartment to which she falls temporarily heiress, until the rightful owner shows up, having returned from Europe earlier than he expected. Norma Shearer photographs beautifully, gets all the comedy and emotional values out of a role which demands considerable talent and gives a really fine performance throughout. Lew Cody plays opposite her in the unusual part of hero instead of villain.

Mr. Cody has been principally distinguished in the past as a bad cuss, but manages to make this one appealing. William Haines is the plotting, ulgy scheming guy and adequate support is furnished by the remainder of the cast. The big punch in the picture is put over when the heroine's family comes to the big town, and amusing complications result when the much-astonished Nicholas Wentworth returns to find his apartment bossed over by the lovely Katherine. The plot isn't particularly convincing and depends largely upon the long-stretched arm of coincidence to hold it together, but, after all it's amusing entertainment designed to please the majority of fans.

THEME. Girl leaves Iowa home and heads for New York with intention of becoming a model. Train is wrecked, and she escapes with another woman's hand bag containing letter which gives her entree into New York society and possession of bachelor Wentworth's apartment. Latter returns unexpectedly falls in love with and weds Katherine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The train wreck. Katherine's arrival in New York and entry into hero's apartment. Visit of her family to the big town. Unexpected arrival of Nicholas. Elaborate gowns worn by star.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can praise this as a society drama of the finest. Go after the women trade on account of gorgeous costumes worn by star. Play up the heart interest and comedy stuff. Feature Lew Cody and Norma Shearer.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in any house if properly exploited. Put on a fashion parade where possible. Stress the funny angles.

SUMMARY. An entertaining picture. Acting O. K. Photography extremely attractive.

THE CAST

Katherine Emerson	Norma Shearer
Nicholas Wentworth	Lew Cody
Dick Wayne	William Haines
Mother Emerson	Mary Carr
Father Emerson	James Corrigan
Aunt Sophie	Vivia Ogden
Madeline	Miss Dupont
Mayne	Estelle Clark
Hobson	Sidney Bracy

Author, Shipman. Scenario by Bess Meredyth. Director, Hobart Henley. Photographed by Ben Reynolds.

SYNOPSIS. Iowa girl starts for New York to become model. Her train is wrecked and she obtains identification papers of woman who is killed. These admit her into New York society and a bachelor's apartment, he being in Europe. He returns unexpectedly, falls in love with girl, and marries her.

Camille of the Barbary Coast

(Dierker-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a lot of good common sense developed in this picture—which treats of the redemption theme. What is shown here could really happen and it is treated logically all the way without any recourse to melodrama to give it a punch. The director skates over thin ice in establishing the morals of the dance-hall denizens. But he gets away with it nicely. He has cast the picture well—Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh being excellent types for portraying the girl, the youth and the hard-hearted father, respectively.

The idea is not new—and the characters have been used in a score of similar plots. But where it differs from the general run of such stories is the emphasis placed upon the humanities. The author shows us a well-to-do youth who is refused aid by his father when he commits embezzlement. The young man takes his "medicine" and goes to jail. He becomes embittered and disheartened. After being released with the customary ten spot he drifts to the Barbary Coast (the action of the story has Frisco for a background) and picks up a flirtation with a dance-hall girl.

After leading him to tell his story she lends him her sympathy and offers him money. His heart is touched—and he accepts her hospitality. The father has hired a detective to watch the youth, but the "bull" being true to type, hounds him from one job to another. In the end the father is reconciled to his son—when he realizes how the girl has effected his redemption.

That's all there is to the plot—but it is told with no wavering whatsoever. To balance it the director introduces a lot of honky-tonk incident and atmosphere. The detail of the dance-hall is realistic—and while it has a sordid flavor there is no denying that it rings true to life. The manner in which the proprietor and his bouncers run the place—and the way the various hangers-on conduct themselves shows real grasp on the atmosphere of the underworld.

It is acted with genuine feeling. There isn't any humor, but plenty of heart interest and pathos.

THEME. Romantic drama of youth cast out by his father because of a theft and who is encouraged and redeemed by a girl of easy virtue Reconciliation follows.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The heart interest touches when youth wins sympathy of girl. The scene when he meets his father. The final reconciliation. The honky tonk atmosphere. The sincere acting by Mae Busch, Owen Moore and Burr McIntosh.

DIRECTION. Keeps plot even and builds it logically. Provides good atmosphere for different scenes. Refrains from adding melodrama. Brings out the sympathy for the central characters.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill as a truthful little story of two despondent people—who meet and have a romance. Play up the redemption theme. Use teaser statements such as "His father scorned him, but a girl had faith in him."

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all average houses. The heart interest and romance should appeal to the every-day picture goer.

SUMMARY. This picture is developed with a lot of common sense. To make a story out of it the father is painted rather harshly, but the climax brings on a happy ending. Treats of redemption and the power of romance to work good. Is staged with first rate atmosphere and acted with sincerity.

THE PLAYERS

Mae Busch, Owen Moore, Fritzie Brunette, Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Tammany Young, Dorothy King, William Robert Daley, Dagmar Godowsky.

By Forest Halsey. Directed by Hugh Dierker.

SYNOPSIS. Youth is caught in a theft and his father refuses to save him. After serving a prison term the young man drifts into a notorious cafe and develops romance with girl. Her sympathy helps him to get on his feet. They get married and refuse to seek assistance from the father. Eventually his heart is softened and a reconciliation follows.

Keep Smiling

(Monty Banks-Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Edwin G. Johnston)

PROBABLY the best way to label this picture would be to call it a farce-melodrama with more emphasis placed upon the thrill element than upon the laughs. For one thing it carries speed—and because the action zips right along without any pause—you don't have much time to notice its lack of spontaneous humor. Had some attention been paid toward making some of the important scenes convincing it would pass as better entertainment. Even as it is it will please certain audiences who have not become too sophisticated.

The star plays a youth afraid of the water. It is planted in the first scene how this fear complex has regulated his whole life. There is a shipwreck, but logic disappears when the lifeboat reveals the hero (as a child), with his mother as the only occupants of the lifeboat. It lacks realism on this account. The subsequent action shows the fishing village—with the child growing up with a dreadful fear of the water. He spends most of his time attempting to perfect a life-belt—which invention is the main prop of the story.

It develops that the president of a steamship company, operating nearby, offers a prize for the best life-belt—so the hero decides to get someone to give his invention an ocean test. Which is the point where the heroine enters—and where the romance begins.

The plot becomes more complicated. There is the other man—a suitor of the girl. And the incident builds to a climax, featuring a motor boat race. The other fellow is one of the entries and is promised the hand of the daughter if he wins. There is a merry mix-up of identity as Monty, the rival, and a pilot indulge in a lot of horseplay—the incident featuring the comedy in an elevator and at a dance. The race is the big scene and offers an array of stunts as well as some thrills. Let it be said that the hero wins the prize and the girl. It's a fair picture which could stand some editing in its concluding footage.

THEME. Farce-melodrama of youth afraid of water. He invents life-belt, saves beautiful girl from drowning, enters himself in boat race—and wins the prize and the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The speed of the incident. The moment when hero rescues girl. The development of romance. The incident leading up to boat race. The dance episode. The race. The good atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Doesn't point it with much logic in early scenes—and gags it too much toward finish. However, has not applied any brakes as it zips right along. Does a pretty good job by it.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title affords tease-possibilities. So use it for a slogan—and for tie-ups with stores, etc. Play up Monty Banks as one of the real comers in the comedy ranks.

DRAWING POWER. Title will draw them—and Banks has made some good pictures. So they should come out for this one. Suitable for average houses anywhere.

SUMMARY. If the melodrama had not been pointed so strongly at the start and the comedy gags not been used so often toward the finish, this picture would be a humdinger. But some of the scenes are overstressed with incident.

Ryan's Secretary	Ruth Holly
The Mother	Martha Franklin
The Child	Master Jack Huff

By Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman. Directed by Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt. Photographed by James Diamond, Lee Garmes and Barney McGill.

SYNOPSIS. Youth, when a child, becomes shipwrecked with his mother. The two are saved and as boy grows to maturity he develops a strong fear of water. He invents a life-belt and has occasion to test it while rescuing a girl. She falls in love with him. He interests her father, president of a steamship company, in the belt—and when a boat race is run off the hero wins the prize—and also the girl.

Rugged Water

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FROM a scenic standpoint this picture ranks high, the marine shots conveying much of the magical sea atmosphere for which the yarns of Joseph C. Lincoln are noted. Its dramatic quality is not so good, due to the fact that the central figure of the cast, Captain Bartlett, fails to be convincing. This character, a religious fanatic and at heart a coward, portrayed by Wallace Beery, is appointed captain of the life-saving station through political influence, a job which hero Calvin Homer expected and didn't get. You are given to understand that the Cap suffered some horrible experience in the past which has enveloped him in gloom, but it isn't made clear at the start that he is carrying an excess piety handicap.

Therefore, when he breaks loose in a sort of fanatical orgy, as a shipwreck is pending, refuses to let the crew go to the rescue on the plea that he has been engaged in prayer to the Almighty and received assurance that the vessel will receive divine help; the general effect is grotesque rather than impressive. However, the captain's dodging of his duty enables the hero to distinguish himself, for Calvin takes command and rescues the crew of the storm-battered craft.

This rescue scene is uncommonly well done. You watch the life boat fighting its perilous way through huge, rolling waves, enveloped in mist and spray, the men tugging furiously at the oars, as foot by foot they near their goal, one moment lost to sight in a veiling mist, the next reappearing on a crested mountain of foam. Then the boarding of the ship, transferring of the crew and the pull for the shore, every instant crammed with breathless suspense—a truly rare and impressive bit of camera work. Another very effective episode is that in which Calvin puts out in a dory during a terrific storm to save the crazy Bartlett, who is drifting about in deep water. The fans are so used to seeing Wallace Beery in virile roles that they are apt to be a trifle disappointed over his appearance as a chap who "shows the yellow." Warner Baxter does well as hero Calvin and Phyllis Haver and Lois Wilson are pleasing in the principal feminine characterizations.

THEME. Melodrama of the Cape Cod coast, depicting romance of young life-saver and daughter of cowardly Captain, who is also religious fanatic.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Impressive marine atmosphere. Scenes showing life boat going to aid of shipwrecked vessel and rescue of Captain Bartlett by hero in furious storm.

DIRECTION. Fair, but fails to get life like color into events outside of straight marine episodes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange for book-store tieup on Lincoln novel from which picture is adapted. Author is widely known. Play up the big storm scenes. Feature Wallace Beery, Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, Phyllis Haver.

DRAWING POWER. Has a good cast, photography pleasing, story moves slowly at first, action quickens about the middle and speeds into interesting climax. Suitable for average house.

SUMMARY. Although the film, as a whole, doesn't measure up to first-class standard, it is redeemed from listing as a commonplace feature by the fine scenic effects and potent thrills offered in the two rescue situations, which atone largely for the somewhat unimpressive narration of proceedings in the village and life-saving station.

THE CAST

Norma Bartlett ..... Lois Wilson
Captain Bartlett ..... Wallace Beery
Calvin Homer ..... Warner Baxter
Myra Fuller ..... Phyllis Haver
Mrs. Fuller ..... Dot Farley

Author, Joseph C. Lincoln. Scenario by James Hamilton. Photographed by Al Gilks. Directed by Irvin Willat.

SYNOPSIS. The hero, a lifesaver, loses appointment as captain of station when other man uses political influence. In the crisis, during a storm and shipwreck, the other man proves yellow and the hero leads the rescue. Love interest between hero and other man's daughter comes to happy conclusion.

Tracked in the Snow Country

(Warner Brothers—7159 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PICTURE with tremendous audience appeal, frankly melodramatic, vibrating with dynamic thrills and sympathetic interests, featuring the famous dog star—Rin-Tin-Tin, and winning recognition as a genuine canine screen classic. There can be no doubt as to the drawing power of this film. It ranks as a super-production of its type, warranted to grip and hold the attention of young and old alike. Even the members of the high-brow brigade can scarcely fail to respond favorably to its emotional lure, and as for the fans of the rank-and-file, they will go wild over it.

The plot centers around the four-footed actor, who becomes a victim of circumstantial evidence when his master is found dead in his cabin, having been murdered by one Renault who seeks a paper giving the location of a gold mine. The dog, chained up, has fondled the corpse of his unhappy owner, and the blood stains on paws and muzzle convict Rin-Tin-Tin of the crime. He escapes to the woods, foregathers with a wolf pack, and successfully eludes all attempts to trap or shoot him. In the finale he tracks down the slayer, does battle with him in the lonely mine, pursues him and when Renault breaks through the ice, keeps viligant watch and ward until the villain is drowned. There is a very prettily developed love romance between Joan, daughter of the murdered man, and Terry Moulton, a young forest ranger. Rin-Tin-Tin's performance not only outclasses his work in previous pictures, but leaves all his rivals completely in the shade.

His pantomime is nothing short of marvelous; the animal actually lives the part, and enters so thoroughly into the action's spirit that never once do you feel that he is being directed, it is all so spontaneous and free from artificial taint. Suspense never slackens from start to finish, and the camera shots of the snow country provide as fine and alluringly artistic backgrounds as the most captious critic could desire. The fight at the close, between Renault and the forest ranger, is the very acme of realism, and a telling comedy touch is put over in the last scene when Rin-Tin-Tin scores on the proud young parents of twins by displaying his litter of puppies.

THEME. Melodrama with dog hero. Latter suspected of having killed master and continually hunted by would-be avengers, but finally runs down real murderer and establishes his innocence.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The murder of Silent Hardy. Scene where forest ranger is about to shoot dog, when latter escapes. Rin-Tin-Tin's adventures in the woods, his avoidance of trap set to catch him and dodging of pursuer's bullets. The fight in the mine. Rin-Tin-Tin's leap from cliff to villain's shoulders. Death of latter in ice pool, with dog foiling his efforts to save himself. Comedy finish. Superb photography.

DIRECTION. Excellent. Has kept action moving at fast clip, stressed the sentimental angles skillfully without overdoing matters, and handled the thrill stuff in masterly style.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up, not only as Rin-Tin-Tin's best, but one of the finest dog yarns that has ever been filmed. Boost it as melodrama of uncommon power and heart interest. Mention work of June Marlowe, David Butler and Charles Sellon. Make a strong drive for the juvenile trade.

DRAWING POWER. Should do big business in any house, large or small.

SUMMARY. A unique picture, altogether out of the ordinary. Dog star's work a revelation. Support satisfactory.

THE CAST

Rin-Tin-Tin ..... Himself
Joan Hardy ..... June Marlowe
Terry Moulton ..... David Butler
Jules Renault ..... Mitchell Lewis
Simon Hardy ..... Charles Sellon

By Edward Meagher. Directed by Herman Raymaker.

SYNOPSIS. Falsely accused of having killed his master, the dog Rin-Tin-Tin escapes to woods, evades pursuit, joins wolf pack, finally runs down real murderer and is declared innocent. Returns to live with his home folks and rears large family of puppies.

ONE of the most important exhibits at the Sesqui Centennial will be that of the motion picture industry. The building occupied by the exhibit will occupy several acres and will be equipped with several separate and distinct screens. Among other novel features, will be a shadow box on the roof, so that pictures may be shown to a large number of persons at any time during the day. Representatives of the Stanley Company were recently in Harrisburg completing plans for the Sesqui exhibit of the industry.

Harry D. Westcott, of the Stanley Company of America, and an instructor in the Stanley V. Mastbaum School of Photoplay Study and Scenario Writing at Temple University, recently broadcasted from Atlantic City for Frank W. Buhler, General Manager of the Stanley Company, who is now in Europe seeking new musical attractions for the Stanley Circuit. An attempt was made to impress upon the radio audience the significance of the Greater Movie Campaign. Features of the inauguration of the movement here will be a big parade and the dropping of 20,000 passes to local picture theatres from airplanes flying over the city

Baltimore

THE unprecedented success that attended the showing of the 20 minute film showing the 250-mile automobile inaugural race on the Baltimore-Washington Speedway on July 11, when presented at the Garden Theatre during the week beginning Monday, July 13, has caused the combined Whitehurst Interests to install a film production department as a regular part of their organization. This auto race film was made under the direction of Harry Van Hoven, advertising manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests. Due to the showing of this auto-race picture immediately during the week following the race, the Garden Theatre did the best business in the city and had crowded houses every night.

The Rialto Theatre, North Avenue near Linden, closed on Saturday night, July 18, for two weeks. This playhouse is operated by the Associated Theatres Company and is managed by Samuel Back. It will be renovated while dark and will reopen when the Greater Movie Season starts on Monday, August 3.

B. Oletsky, manager of the Waverly Theatre and son of Pete Oletzky, proprietor of the Federated Exchange in Baltimore, returned from a vacation to Philadelphia and Atlantic City, on Monday, July 13. He motored on the trip and had his mother and three sisters along. They had a fine time but the young man came back with a very bad case of sunburn.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., is hovering back and forth between New York, Baltimore and Washington these days. He is not saying much but it can be guessed that he is watching out for bookings for the new season of Warner Brother pictures, which they have been running at the Metropolitan, which he manages. He has just made a drastic cut in his newspaper advertising.

Mrs. Frank A. Hornig, wife of the manager of the Horn Theatre, 218 West Pratt street, and their young son, are spending the summer at Atlantic City. Mr. Hornig goes to the resort every Saturday to spend the week end.

Keith's Hippodrome Theatre, managed by E. A. Lake, has lowered the prices of admission to conform with the prices of the Garden Theatre, a Whitehurst playhouse. These houses show feature pictures and short subjects together with five acts of vaudeville.

M. Schaeffer, publicity representative of the United Artists Corporation, visited Baltimore on Wednesday, July 15, and called on various editors in that city.

Theatre Supply and Equipment company will publish a house organ beginning this week, in the interest of better projection and better equipment. J. R. McIlheran, manager, is editor-in-chief of this very admirable little booklet.

Louis B. Remy, formerly assistant to Mr. Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company which operates all the Majestic Theatres in the Orpheum circuit, has recently signed a contract with Fox Film Corporation, and will probably be given the Southern district.

The Atlanta exchange of Film Booking Offices, headed by Fred L. Davie, has come first in another National sales drive which F. B. O. staged beginning February 1st and lasting till May 1st. "The Gold Rush" returns have now come in, showing that Atlanta starting off in third place, jumped to first in four weeks, and remained there, winning the large cash prize. This makes the second sales drive won by the local crew, this year, and is a very good record for Mr. Davie and his associates.

Lazarus Leide, father of Enrico Leide, musical director of the Metropolitan Theatre, has been knighted by the King of Italy, receiving the Order of the Chevalier of the Crown of Italy, in recognition of thirty years service in the chair of languages at the University of Naples, Italy.

MOTION pictures of the principal events of the recent Old Home Week celebration held in Lewistown, Pa., were shown there to the general public in the Temple theatre beginning on the night of July 17. The pictures included the six parades of various sorts that were held during the week and the crowning of the Queen of Old Home Week.

Persons allied with the amusement business generally are grieved at the death of William S. Fritz, 50 years old, known in vaudeville and circus circles as Delno Fritz, which occurred to his home in Ashley near Wilkes-Barre, on July 14. He became ill in Philadelphia while traveling with the Ringling Brothers circus, some weeks ago.

The silk mill motion picture theatre, at Liverpool, Perry county, has been closed for the rest of the summer.

Forty persons, most of them allied with the motion picture theatre business, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Bailey, of Pottsville, at a buffet supper followed by music and dancing, in honor of their twelfth wedding anniversary. Mr. Bailey is the former organist of the Hollywood theatre, Pottsville, and the guests at the party included Manager William Crozier, of the Hollywood, and all the theatre employes, and Manager Martin Falger, of the Lyric, Minersville, and his employes. Representatives of film companies present were Sidney Shugarman, of F. B. O.; Charles Charles, of paramount, and Mr. Whaley, of the Producers' Distributing Corporation. Mr. Bailey formerly lived in Philadelphia where he was connected with the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company.

New York and New Jersey

THE annual outing and picnic of the First National Club, held at Indian Point, up the Hudson, on Saturday, July 18th, was the most largely attended and enjoyable of First National employees' outings. About 150 persons were on board the river steamship Chauncey M. Depew when it left the West 42nd Street pier at nine-thirty. They returned, tired but happy, at ten o'clock in the evening.

The athletic events were carried out as scheduled except that one of the contestants in the finals of the tennis match for the Eschmann cup was away on his vacation. The finals will be played off upon his return.

The winners of the various contests follow: 50 yard dash for girls, won by C. M. Dolan, first and M. L. Victorson, second; 100 yard dash for men, Edw. J. Werner, first and W. Williams, second; in the obstacle race for girls M. L. Victorson was first and F. Burke second. In the same type race for the men J. L. Powers came in first and R. Cockey right after him. The potato race for girls showed Miss Dolan again a winner with A. E. Leach second. The same race for men was won by C. Peterson, first and J. L. Wallace, second. Sack race for girls won by A. E. Leach and M. Kaye. Sack race for the men won by C. Peterson and H. Ironfeld, second.

In the shoe race for girls D. Broderick and N. Albanesi were first and second respectively, while in the men's race Osborne of the New Jersey exchange grabbed first prize and H. Ironfeld got another second. The three legged race for girls was won by the team comprised of H. Nisbet and C. M. Dolan. The three legged men winners were G. Sherman and J. Guitilla. The Inter-department relay was won by the accounting department team comprised of Sherman, Guitilla, Rogonia and E. Werner. A mixed swimming race was won by Miss Coffey, for the girls and R. Cockey for the men.

The accounting department baseball team defeated the distribution department aggregation by a score of eight to one. A good time was had by all.

Kansas City

JUST fourteen days ago last Monday Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, assumed charge of the Circle theatre, a Kansas City suburban house which had been doing a weekly "flop" for several months. Today Mr. Eisner's books will show a daily increase over the previous day—and he hasn't even started his exploitation campaign on the house. How did he do it? Simple enough. A large sign in front of the theatre, bearing the words, "Summer Prices 10 Cents," started them coming. "Why should I worry about charging ten cents when my gross receipts show more than the house formerly did at 15 cents?" asked Mr. Eisner. "That's what counts with me."

Through tie-up arrangements with the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City, the M. P. T. O. K.-M. will receive a percentage of the earnings of the serial, "Battling Brewster," which will be recommended to the organization's membership as a means of obtaining additional funds.

When out-of-town directors of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri attend the next directors' meeting in Kansas City next month their railroad fares will be defrayed by the organization, that policy having been adopted by the organization, according to C. E. Cook, business manager.

A battered clock, found in the ruins of the Gillis theatre, Kansas City, which was destroyed by an explosion recently, created a commotion among police circles for a short time. It is believed that a time bomb had been placed in the theatre, but the inquest, which ended last week, failed to fix any responsibility for the wrecking of the house, which will be rebuilt, according to present plans.

With handerchief in right hand and straw hat in left, Kansas City's movie row continued business at a fast pace for hot weather last week. Frank Cassel, formerly with Fox, a veteran in the Kansas City territory, was named as branch manager of Associated Exhibitors. M. H. Hoffman, head of Tiffany Productions, Inc., of New York, stopped off in Kansas City long enough to assert that he was positive that the ensuing year would see a greater growth than ever among the independent producers. The Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City, has annouced a group of twenty-seven productions from famous authors for the ensuing season. E. R. Collins, new Enterprise representative, is bringing in business by the armload, according to Bob Withers, Enterprise branch manager. C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, was rubbing elbows among Leavenworth, Kas., exhibitors last week, while M. A. Levy, Fox branch manager, announced that thirty-four towns in the Kansas City territory have been closed on Fox product. T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager, made a second trip in one week into the territory, which is proof enough that business must have been good, while M. A. Levy, Fox branch manager, visited Wichita, Kas., exhibitors. Three new salesmen, Al Eden, Charles Russell and Bert Edwards, have been added to the Midwest Distributors, Inc., force. Jack Flynn of St. Louis, district Metro-Goldwyn manager, was in Kansas City and held a sales meeting.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pierce, World Realty Company theatres, Omaha, Neb.; Perry Ryan, Liberty, Fort Scott, Kas.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Abe Ulamperl, Best and Gem theatres, Topeka, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Casket, Best, Independence, Kas.; Edward Shanberg, Midland Circuit, Hutchinson, Kas.; John Tackett, New Tackett theatre, Coffeyville, Kas.

Jack Moore of the Olive theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., has gone back to his first love and accepted a position as representative for the Kansas City First National branch.

The Kansas City First National branch force turned out en masse for a picnic at Winnwood Lake last week. The following members of the force attended: Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Byerle, Messrs. Bert, Chaffee, Heft, Berkhorst and McConnell, Misses Billow, Armstrong, Black, Berman and Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rhoden and Roland Thompson.

Seattle

ONE of the biggest attractions ever offered patrons of a local motion picture theatre was staged last week at the Colliseum Theatre in this city by Manager Frank Steffy, when he offered the Birmingham Southern College Glee Club in concert at his afternoon and evening performances for four days of the week.

W. K. Beckwith, former booker at the Warner-Vitagraph exchange, was announced last week as assistant manager of that office, by Manager H. A. Black. Mr. Beckwith's position has been taken over by Mr. Nave, former booker at the L. K. Brin Kwality Pictures Exchange.

"The Ten Commandments," Famous Players' big spectacle, opened its first engagement in this territory at popular prices last week at Manager Al Finkelstein's Strand Theatre. The picture is being run on a continuous performance basis, with admission prices raised to fifty cents at all times.

Ned Marin, sales director of the Universal Pictures Corporation, spent a few days here last week at the local Universal office with L. O. Lukan, recently appointed manager, and Jack L. Schlaifer, Western division manager. Mr. Marin has been on a tour of the Pacific Coast exchanges, and expected to return to the East within the next few weeks.

Jean Anthony Greif, popular concert organist at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, is rapidly achieving the reputation of offering the most up-to-the-minute musical selections of any organist or orchestra in this city. Each week Mr. Greif introduces a new selection to the Blue Mouse audiences, and popularizes it by his novel interpretations.

For the first time since the week of January 18th of the current year, two pictures were held over by local showhouses for second weeks' engagements last week. The films were "Black Cyclone," which has been doing a very successful business for Manager Robert W. Bender at the Columbia Theatre, and Marion Davies' "Zander the Great," which was used as the opening attraction at Manager Charles W. McKee's Heilig Theatre under its new higher price policy.

Harry Dunham, production manager of the Weaver Studios in Tacoma, spent a few days in this city last week and announced that he is now completing arrangements for the production of a picture centering around the salmon industry of the North Pacific Coast.

Manager Frank Edward of the Winter Garden Theatre has started the policy of filling in his summer programs with an occasional second run return engagement of one of the big productions of past seasons. During recent weeks he has offered "A Rogue's Romance" and "The Love Flower."

Reports were received in this city last week of the marriage of Mr. Claude Jensen, Portland theatre magnate, to the daughter of Henri Keates, organist in one of the Jensen-Von Herberg theatres in the Oregan city.

Minnesota

LES DAVIS, for the last four years sales manager of the Minneapolis First National Branch, and recently named manager of the Exchange succeeding L. O. Lukan has been receiving numerous letters of congratulation since he assumed his new position. There is no question that everyone knowing Les admits he's a darn nice fellow and all were glad to hear of his promotion.

L. O. Lukan, formerly "boss" of the Minneapolis First National Branch, is now manager of the Universal Exchange in Seattle.

Leo Landau, well known showman in the Northwest and who managed the affairs at the Lyceum theatre in Minneapolis, until closed recently while a new policy was declared to be under way, has quit the picture business. He has gone to St. Louis, Mo., where his father has a well established retail clothing business.

In Lake Benton, Minn. comes the word that A. M. Gehlsen has taken over the Opera House and since under his management he has renamed this house Majestic, which we all know means something magnificent.

Max Weisfeldt, always on the go doing justice to his position as divisional sales manager for F. B. O. in this section is visiting with Eph Rosen manager of the Minneapolis office this week.

Roy Zimmerman, assistant manager of F. B. O. office, no longer belongs to the Bachelors Club in Minneapolis but has married the charming little Miss Olive Leighton on July 11th.

A newcomer to the Vitagraph exchange in Minneapolis is H. G. Kopelman, who comes from the Friedman Film Corp. also in this city. He will take over the territory in northern Minn.

Lou Bloomberg has been hailed as the best golf player of the Metro force. In rare form, the other day, he made 85 strokes for nine holes. Pretty good, we'll say.

And a big time was had by all, so say the managers of the Finkelstein and Ruben circuit attending the first theatre managers convention ever held in this part of the country. One hundred managers and assistants accompanied with their wives and friends assembled for the three day session held last week at the New Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis.

Charlie Perry, manager of the Garrick theatre in Minneapolis, has returned after spending three weeks at one of the ten thousand lakes in Northern Minnesota.

October 1 is the tentative date for the opening of the new State theatre, Eau Claire, Wisconsin according to Eddie Ruben of the F. & R. Theatres. This theatre when completed will cost approximately three hundred thousand dollars and will be a theatre of beauty in every respect. A new Wurlitzer organ already has been ordered for this house. In addition to the above activities, excavation has started for the New Fargo theatre, in Fargo, N. D. where a 1500 seat house will be completed before Jan. 1, 1926 this theatre costing a quarter of a million dollars. In Sioux Falls, S. D. work has begun on the new F. & R. State theatre which will have a seating capacity of 1500, cost three hundred thousand dollars and open not later than November 1, this year.

Anna May Wong, the oriental screen star came to the Twin Cities last week. She appeared in person for one week at the State theatre in Minneapolis and this week moved over to St. Paul for a week's engagement at the beautiful Capitol theatre. From St. Paul, Miss Wong goes to Duluth.

Hal Daigler, manager of the Capitol theatre in St. Paul, left this week for a well earned vacation. He will go to Seattle, his home town and visit with his folks, and also friends in Spokane.

Blackmore Bros., operating in Duluth, and Mr. Scholseith & Son owner of the Princess in Sioux Falls, S. D. were visitors along film row last week.

In connection with the Greater Movie Season in the Twin Cities, the local managers have organized to promote gala demonstrations presenting latest ideas in motion picture entertainment. One committee already organized with A. V. Leak, manager of Paramount exchange and his associates, as follows: A. H. Fischer, manager of Metro, E. T. Gomersall manager of Fox, Les Davis, manager of First National and Ben Friedman, of Friedman Film Corp. have been very busy with the program now in preparation and it can be said that the Twin Cities will not take a back seat with any of the other big cities.

John Rugar, managing the American theatre at Park City, Utah; B. G. Thatcher, owner of the Capitol theatre, Logan, Utah; Ben Winzler, operating the Liberty theatre, Tremonton, Utah, and Al Cameron, operating a chain of houses at Alpine and Linden, Utah, were in last week.

George E. Carpenter, manager of the Paramount Empress theatre, is arranging a stupendous prologue to be used in connection with the Paramount production, "The Ten Commandments," which will be shown for twelve days. Thirty people will be used, and two chariots used in the filming of the picture have been imported from the Hollywood studios to be incorporated into the prologue.

Carl A. Porter, manager of the Victory theatre, left Sunday for a two weeks' vacation trip to New York City, his home city.

Mike Lewis and Blumenthal, representatives from the head offices of Famous Players-Lasky out of New York City, were here Saturday and conducted a sales conference at the local exchange.

Harold Pickering, manager of exploitation in this territory for Famous Players-Lasky, declared the first conference with exhibitors for this section which he conducted at the local exchange last week to be a complete success.

Canada

JACK ARTHUR, director of music for the Hippodrome Theatre, Toronto, the home theatre of the Famous Players chain across Canada, is becoming the "Roxy of Canada" through his tie-up each week with the Station CFCA, Toronto, with the Hippodrome Concert Orchestra. These weekly "releases" by the Hippodrome organization have become a very popular feature, and considerable publicity is secured.

Another of the series of special free moving picture performances as a community feature was staged in the Palace Theatre, Montreal, on July 18 when Manager George Rotsky took care of an audience of 1,500 underprivileged boys and girls. Appropriate pictures were presented, including "Christopher Columbus," and others.

Howard Snook, manager of the Columbia Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, was the winner of Universal's first prize of $100 in Canada for the best exploitation of the serial, "The Great Circus Mystery."

Leonard Bishop, manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, dropped back to his post of duty on July 13 after spending a month on the picture front in Los Angeles where he visited many studios, had a happy stay with his father, mother and sister, and toured through Canada and the United States going and coming.

Former theatre managers of Ottawa, Ontario—or at least their wives—broke into the big league society news of the Canadian Capital on Thursday, July 16, when Mrs. Oral Clockey entertained at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa's exclusive hotel, in honor of Mrs. (Capt.) Frank Goodale, now of White Plains, N. Y. Mr. Cloakey is remembered as the lively manager of the Ottawa Regent and he is now in the gold mining business.

A bit of very important social news is that J. C. Kennedy, manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Fort William, Ontario, for the past year took unto himself a wife on July 11 at Ottawa when he married Miss Blanche Gauvreau, cashier of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa.

The first half of the schedule of the Toronto Motion Picture Baseball League has been finished with Regan Films, Limited, holding first place in the standing with four victories and two losses. First National was also in the running until the last engagement of the series when the team of Famous Players Canadian Corp. took First National into camp by the score of 8 to 6. Regals also got quite a scare when they were trounced 12 to 10 by the team of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, but they held first place through First National's defeat at the hands of Famous Players. The final standing of the four teams was as follows:

	Won	Lost
Regal Films, Limited	4	2
First National	3	3
Famous-Lasky Service	3	3
Famous Players Corp.	2	4

Although Griffin's Theatre at St. Catharines, Ontario, is closed for the summer, Manager George J. Forhan is busier than ever because of extensive alterations and improvements in the theatre. There will be a grand re-opening late in August.

H. M. Thomas of Winnipeg, supervisor of Famous Players Theatres in Western Canada, has carded his combined annual flapper and baby shows at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, for the week of July 27. This mid-summer feature never fails to draw the big crowds. The baby show classes, divided according to age and sex, are staged every afternoon during the week while the flappers of various types tread the stage every night.

"Take-A-Chance Week" is becoming a summer feature in various Canadian cities. Manager Harry S. Dahn made a big success of this stunt at the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, during the week of July 12 when the novelty of the thing attracted big crowds. Not once during the seven days, through newspaper advertising, readers, reviews or lobby displays, did he reveal any definite detail of the current offerings yet the crowds were big.

Manager Ralph Ruffner of the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., has also staged a "Chance Week" along similar lines.

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, had complete charge of the luncheon of the Rotary Club of Ottawa which was held at the Chateau Laurier, Monday, July 13, which was attended by Mayor J. P. Balharrie of Ottawa and other notables. Mr. Franklin was chairman of the meeting and directed the whole program.

Manager McNeil of the Rideau Theatre, Smiths Falls, Ontario, made a special play for patronage during the Old Home Week celebration which was conducted in Smiths Falls during the week of July 13. He gained a real slice of business despite numerous counter-attractions by staging a number of novelties and putting over good advertising. One feat was the holding of dances on the stage of the theatre for two hours after the close of regular night performances without extra charge to the patrons.

The regular moving picture and vaudeville performances at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, on August 7 are being cancelled by Manager Joe Franklin to provide for a transient treat, the concerts of Sousa's Band at both matinee and evening appearances.

Albany

SAM HOCHSTIM, who used to be a film salesman with Pathe in this city, but who is now running the Star theatre, in Hudson, following his usual policy of redecorating and changing the lighting effects in the theatre each year, has just completed the work. Edward Hochstim, his brother, who is with Pathe here, generally spends Sunday in Hudson, running the house and thereby giving his brother a day off.

Business is expected to take on the usual August rush in Saratoga Springs within the next few days with the motion picture theatres of that city coming in for their share. On account of the tens of thousands of persons who flock to the race meet each year, the theatre owners retain many of their best pictures for August.

Leon Medem, manager of the local Pathe exchange, and Charles Boyd, local manager for Associated Exhibitors, journeyed over to Pittsfield during the past week, to interview the exhibitors of that place.

The Majestic, in Cohoes, which is run by Louis Buettner, is scheduled to reopen on Labor Day. In the meantime the house will be thoroughly renovated and a number of improvements made.

Moe Mark, of New York city, and Walter Hays, of Buffalo, who are at the head of the Strand group of theatres in New York, Brooklyn, Albany, Troy and Buffalo, were here the other night, returning from a most successful fishing trip in the Adirondacks. They were accompanied by Frank Dolan, of Albany.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, passed many anxious moments last week as his young son fought bravely for his life. It appears that the boy had had his tonsils removed, and that later on pneumonia developed. He is now said to be out of danger.

A. L. Burks, who formerly handled the exploitation and publicity for Universal in the Buffalo and Albany territories, and who later removed to New York city, has the sympathy of all through the death of his wife which occurred on July 2.

William J. Craft, signed by Independent Pictures to direct Bob Custer in features for F. B. O.

Daniel Keefe, new Fox director who is in charge of the filming of O. Henry's "Shoes."

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange in this city, has issued a challenge to J. H. MacIntyre, manager of the Famous Players exchange here, for a golf match on the local links in the near future. Both men play excellent golf and for some time past there has been a keen rivalry between the two that has not been confined to Film Row alone.

Along Film Row during the past week were Bob Pierce of Ilion, W. H. Linton, of Utica, who went on to New York; L. L. Connors of Cambridge, and Louis Buettner, of Cohoes.

Peter J. White, who is connected with the Universal office here, has been promoted to the position of sales control, succeeding Miss Mittauer, who has resigned and returned to her home in Vermont. Howard Morgan, manager for Educational, is away on his vacation. Jane Halloran, secretary of the Albany Film Board of Trade, will leave on August 19 for a two weeks' vacation.

The Empress theatre in Norfolk and the Star in Norwood, which have been run by A. E. Curry, have just been leased to Charles McIver, who plans to run amateur nights from time to time.

Uly S. Hill, of Troy, accompanied by his son, Norman, left this week by car for Canada, where he will spend several days in angling for black bass.

George Gildersleeve, the new manager of the Community theatre in Catskill, received a visit during the past week from Herman Stearn, local manager for F. B. O. Mr. Gildersleeve reports business as being first class in the Catskill resort village.

The sympathy of the readers of this magazine is extended to C. L. Gardner, of the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, in the recent loss of his mother. His theatre was closed for two days.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, with houses in Watertown, saw to it that when "His Supreme Moment" played at the Avon in Watertown, last week, and in which a former resident of the city appeared, the fact was played up in the newspapers.

In order to put a stop to the practice of seeking free film, the Albany Film Board of Trade recently adopted a resolution with the result that the following notice is now prominently displayed in all exchanges in Albany:

"No exchange has the authority to approve the giving of donations, charity, free shows, etc., to any individual, club or institution. All such requests must be made to the secretary of the Film Board of Trade."

The Empire, in Glens Falls, which is managed by John Garry, is cutting down on its newspaper space this summer. When the house was first taken over by C. H. Buckley, unusually large newspaper advertisements were run.

H. C. Bissell has purchased a new Hudson coach. By way of explanation it might be stated that Mr. Bissell is the manager of the local Universal exchange which won first place in Group C in the Carl Laemmle Jubilee Contest and which brought to Mr. Bissell the sum of $250 and to each employee of the exchange one week's salary.

There was an exciting baseball game on Saturday afternoon at East Berne between the nine from that village and a team made up from among the film salesmen of Albany. Bissell did the twirling for the film aggregation with Ray Smith catching.

Meyer Schine paid a brief visit to Albany, coming down from Gloversville, and later taking the night boat for New York city.

C. R. Halligan, of the Universal exchange, better known to the trade as "Daisy," is enjoying himself on a two weeks' vacation which he described before he left as being "in parts unknown."

John Mattice, who runs the Novelty theatre in Middleburg, and who at the present time is booking pictures for his house as well as hot dog concessions at various county fairs, will not be seen this fall at Altamont. The trouble came when the management of the Altamont Fair raised the price of the concession beyond what Mr. Mattice thought it was worth.

A. A. Elliott, who has the Rialto and Playhouse in Hudson, returned from New York city last week, following a conference with Sydney Cohen.

Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal theatre in Albany, has just bought himself a country home at Crooked Lake, a well known resort a short distance from Troy. Mr. and Mrs. Hellman will spend their summer there, motoring in to Albany each day, however, in order to give their personal attention to their theatre.

Miss Noma Suckno, able manager of the Albany theatre, is planning to take a two weeks' vacation soon. Her brother, Walter, who devotes most of his attention to the Regent, will probably remain on the job.

With sleeves rolled up, Alec Sayles, who left a newspaper desk a year ago, to become manager of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, leaves no stone unturned to attract business. That he has been successful is plainly evident from the crowds that are flocking to the theatre nightly.

Portland

THE Strand Theatre has been opened at East Corinth, Maine, by John H. McGraw. The Strand was destroyed by fire about a year ago and the new theatre replaces it. The seating capacity is about 450. While it is built of wood it is as modern as possible. Pictures are run two nights a week, Universals being used entirely.

H. A. Robinson and Mr. Morang have purchased the interests in the Dirigo Theatre at Ellsworth, Maine, formerly owned by Robert King. Mr. Robinson will assume the manager's duties from now on.

S. Hanson, owner and manager of the Camden Comique has returned home from a trip to California. Mr. Hanson made the trip by motor and while there visited many of the large studios including Universal City whose pictures he uses to a large extent.

George B. Seitz, in Arizona producing "The Vanishing American" for Paramount.

Buffalo

GEORGE EASTMAN, accompanied by Dr. Albert D. Kaiser and the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Norton, leave Rochester July 26 for a several week's trip through British Columbia. During the latter part of the trip Mr. Eastman plans to follow the coast of the Alaskan peninsula in a large power boat. He hopes to make pictures of the kadiak bear, now nearly extinct, which is occasionally found in the neighborhood of Sitka. The party expects to return early in September.

J. B. Strayline has purchased the Grand theatre in Geneseo, N. Y. The house formerly was operated by Carrie Aprile. Mr. Strayline will redecorate and remodel the theatre.

Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply company is spending the summer with his family at Crystal Beach.

Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men were surprised this week to learn that E. J. Smith had resigned as district manager for F. B.O., to accept a position in the Warner Brothers' home office, where he will be associated with Sam Morris. Mr. Smith is a brother of Art Smith. He was very popular with everyone in the industry in western New York. Ed was eastern division manager for F.B.O. Harry Dixon, Buffalo branch manager, has just returned from a trip down state.

Clarence Ross has succeeded Leo Mullen as cashier at the Buffalo Fox exchange. Moe Grassgreen, auditor, is in town for a few weeks. Bill Rowell, branch manager, has fully recovered from his recent illness and is back on the job. Sid Horen, after much effort, has at last sold his flivver and is again able to sleep at night.

Bill Bork, Paramount booker, and Mrs. Bork have returned to town after a two-week vacation at Crystal Beach.

Ben Wallerstein, manager of the Broadway theatre, was seen on the promenade at Crystal Beach last week end, demonstrating what a well dressed young man should wear.

E. H. Arnold, better known in the realm of the celluloid world as "Cuckoo," has arrived in Buffalo to take over the exploitation work at the Universal exchange. Mr. Arnold started in the film business in Syracuse, way back in 1907.

Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, is vacationing at his summer home at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Colonel Howard F. Brink, Educational manager, is finding the warm weather has nothing to do with the film business. The colonel reports contracts coming just as fast as in the zero days and his entire sales and office staff is being kept "on its toes."

St. Louis

FIFTY boys of the De Molay, including the officers and the military brass band of the St. Louis Chapter, gathered on the stage of the Missouri theatre, Grand boulevard, at Lucas avenue, at 9 p. m., July 14, when former Governor Frederick D. Gardner of Missouri presented a silk United States flag to the order on behalf of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The award was made in recognition of the meritorious service given by the De Molay to the Post-Dispatch's Free Ice and Milk Fund for Babies.

Harry Redmond, owner-manager of the Majestic theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., returns this week from the Rocky Mountains and Yellowstone Park.

C. D. Hill, manager of the local office of Producers Distributing Corporation, spent several days out in the territory.

Jimmy Drake has closed a lease on the new theatre at Pine Lawn, Mo. It has accommodations for about 600.

Tom McKean of F. B. O. has returned from a sales conference at Chicago. Ill.

Claude McKean, who recently was selected to manage the new Fox exchange at Memphis, Tenn., has gone to that city to lay the groundwork for his new sales organization, etc.

Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill., has returned from a delightful visit to California.

Miss Emma Mevers, assistant cashier for the local Fox office, is spending her vacation at Old Monroe.

F. Roman of Benld, Ill., was a caller of the week.

Green Luttrell of Jacksonville, Ill., dropped in at the local Fox office and signed up 100 per cent for the new product.

J. N. Rogers of the home office organization is installing a new booking system at the local Universal exchange.

Use of motion pictures as a means of introducing evidence in court has been frowned upon by Circuit Judge Franklin Miller of St. Louis, Mo. It is probable that the court will bar such evidence on the grounds that it cannot be used before the Court of Appeals if an appeal is taken. Taylor R. Young, counsel for the defense in the suit of other property owners to prevent Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Clifford, 3667 Cook Ave., from selling their home to negroes, had the pictures taken. They show negroes entering and leaving a church directly opposite to the Clifford home. He contends the pictures show that the poprerty is salable only to negroes.

Texas

W. L. WESSLEY, Producers Distributors Corporation, signed a contract for their entire output in Houston early last week. This was the last organization to secure an exhibitor in Houston.

Tonky Rappaport of the Rappaport Billposting Service and Palace theatre is in St. Louis for a two weeks' visit. Mr. Rappaport plans to visit New York and Chicago before returning to Houston.

Morris Schummerman of the Strand theatre is in Dallas arranging for his new fall and 1926 bookings.

Paul Wakefield, local theatre critic, has been out of town on a two weeks vacation. Mr. Wakefield spent part of his vacation with Harry Cohen, owner of the Galveston Tribune, Galveston, Texas.

Reports come from Dallas that Max Brock, well known film salesman, has deserted the "grip" and has moved to Oklahoma City. Mr. Brock is a well known salesman in South Texas, having made this territory for several years.

Ernest Sparks is now manager of the theatre department of the Houston Press. Sparks is a well known writer and should make a big success in his new work.

M. Crown former owner of the Folly theatre will leave for a summer vacation in a few days. He sold his theatre to the owners of the Crown theatre who now operate the old Crown and the new Folly theatres.

The office of the Queen theatre was entered at a late hour Sunday night and robbers were successful in getting into the safe and making away with more than $400.00 in small change. The main vault was not broken open. It contained more than $2,000.00. This is the second time, robbers have made an attempt to loot this safe, in less than a year.

Warren Holmes manager of the Palace theatre, W. L. Downton manager of the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth Stock company and Tony Rappoport of the Rappoport Billposting company left Sunday for a motor trip through Chicago, New York and into Canada. They plan to be gone for seven weeks.

Gene Lewis and his wife are making a motor trip to Los Angeles in their new Packard car. He will visit Aaron Laskin while on the coast and will negotiate with him regarding the contract Mr. Laskin holds with him for a winter engagement at Memphis. He will return to the Palace theatre for a winter engagement.

Milwaukee

THOMAS McCONNELL, formerly with the Pathe 2-reel comedy department at Cleveland, Ohio, has joined the Associated Exhibitors at Milwaukee and will henceforth travel Wisconsin and Upper Michigan in that capacity.

Herbert Wertz, former cashier for F.B.O. at Milwaukee, and prior to that affiliated with Celebrated Players, and years ago with Triangle, died suddenly Monday night after an attack of black smallpox. He was widely known in the local film world. Funeral services were held Tuesday.

Improvements that will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000, have been started by Henry Goldman at his Colonial theatre in Green Bay. Two hundred additional seats will bring the capacity of the house up to 900. In addition to painting and redecorating the interior, a new Barton organ is to be installed. The house will rank with the best picture theatres in the northern part of the state.

George Levine, Milwaukee branch manager for Universal, was elected vice president of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade at a special meeting held following the resignation of Ed Tundstal of the Tundstal Film Co. George Levine is a pioneer film distributor in this territory, and was at one time president of the Milwaukee Film Club, forerunner of the present Board of Trade. He commands the friendship and respect of both exhibitors and exchange men. Tundstal has formed a partnership with Walter Hickey, formerly associated with him as salesman for Warner Brothers in Wisconsin. The two will go East to sell cooling systems in the New England states.

Joe Winninger, who formerly owned the Davison theatre at Waupun, has completed his survey of desirable locations for picture houses in Wisconsin, and has placed his choice as the Palace theatre, Waupaca, which he will open Aug. 1.

J. G. Frackman, Milwaukee manager for Progress Pictures, has returned from a trip through the state.

Sam Miller, general manager of the Fischer theatres at Madison and Appleton, paid a periodical visit to Milwaukee film row during the past week.

Julian M. Solomon, director of advertising publicity for Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

Phil Dumas, Minneapolis exchange manager for Universal, stopped in for a visit with George Levine, manager of the Milwaukee branch, during the past week, while en route to Chicago, where he will do some business with the Orpheum Circuit offices.

Fred Martin, former Milwaukee manager for Vitagraph, has joined the sales force of the newly established Fox branch office here, and will soon embark on his initial sales trip through Northern Wisconsin.

One of the most elaborate screenings in the history of Milwaukee took place at the Parkway theatre, when John Lorentz, branch manager for Fox Film Corporation, screened "The Iron Horse" for 30 members of the Badger Theatres Corp. A complete musical program was arranged for the occasion.

George W. Guise, general manager for the theatres controlled in Detroit by Charles H. Miles, is now on a motor tour of the East. George plans to be away for at least three weeks, during which time he will visit the principal cities of the East.

Cincinnati

S. J. MAURICE, exploiteer De Luxe and special representative on publicity for Universal spent several days at the local exchange and visited with Mulford Unger, manager of the Grand Opera House.

Fred Myers, manager of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O., paid his weekly visit to film row last week. While here he agreed to enter into the greater movie season campaign in Hamilton. John Schwalm of the Rialto had already agreed to do so and from all indications big things are expected from the little city on the Big Miami.

Two chariots that were used in the production of "The Ten Commandments" are now in the Famous Players offices and will be used by Bill Danziger the exploiteer for special work on the picture this fall.

Gus Shiffas of the Strand Theatre, Middletown, O., spent several hours at the exchanges.

Bill Danziger, made such a hit as a public speaker at the recent publicity convention held by Famous Players for the Exhibitors of Cincinnati and environs that he has received an invitation from H. F. McGovern, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Findlay, O., to address the Kiwanis club of that city in the near future.

Tom Lindsey, office manager for Paramount is giving a house party for the office force with instructions that everybody bring his own.

E. A. Dodge, managing director of the Opera House at New Richmond, O., has opened the Temple Theatre at Whitamsville, O., and has appointed the ever popular Levitt Bugie as house manager. The theatre will operate on two nights a week policy. This is about all the shows that this great Metropolis of the Ohio Valley can stand.

John Schwalm, of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, has received a check and an honorable mention from the Universal exchange. Another exhibitor in this territory to be so honored is H. Rohs, of Rohs Opera House.

Harold Potts formerly with United Artists has joined the sales force of the Standard Film Co.

Dave Helbig, who recently resigned as city salesman for Metro-Goldwyn, has assumed a similar position with Producers.

J. I. Saad, of the Weddington Theatre, Pikeville, Ky., paid a visit to the local film offices and made several purchases.

Harry Bugie, one of the best known picture theatre men in this part of the country has resolved never to look at a flivver again. While trying to crank his brother Levitt's Ford the other day the darn thing kicked back and broke his arm. Any one else would do the same thing.

Detroit

LOUIS Wisper and Al Ruttenberg announce their newly acquired Gratiot theatre will reopen on August 17. Complete redecoration and entirely new equipment including an organ will feature the new house.

Publicity plans for "Greater Movie Season" have been completed by H. M. Richey, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan and Fred T. Grenell, who are handling the local exploitation. Cooperation of the Detroit Times has been secured for putting over the Essay Contest on "What the Movies have Meant to Me."

Ralph Hibler, booker at the Universal exchange, is receiving high praise as a life saver. Ralph went into Grand Lake after the small son of Charles Edwards, manager of the Oakland Boulevard theatre had waded beyond his depth and brought him safely out. It was a "close shave" according to Charlie.

Fred Reynolds has rejoined the A. B. C. selling force and his efforts will be devoted to special work for this company in the state.

A. J. Moeller, of the Moeller Theatre Service Co., was in Detroit during the past week.

Jack Saxe, of the Favorite Film Company, left Wednesday for a two weeks motor trip. He will go as far northwest as Minneapolis, his former home.

Harry A. Ross, Division Manager for Paramount, was in town several days last week. He said all his territory had taken more new Paramount contracts so far this season than last year or any other year.

A. J. Petersmark, of the Baker and Bluebird theatres is in bed with a fractured leg sustained when he fell from a high ladder while overseeing some repairs on one of his theatres. He will probably be confined indoors for some time.

The Film Building Base Ball team will journey to Imlay City, Sunday, August 9th, for a game with a team in that city. The game will be played at Pleasant Lake and W. D. Ward will be in the box for the Detroiters.

Fred Wuerth, of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, leaves July 20 to attend the triennial conclave of the Knights Templar at Seattle, Wash.

Jack Goldhar has been appointed special representative of the Standard Film Service in Michigan and will assist Bob Rowan, manager in the larger towns.

Cleveland

NORMAN VIBBARD has joined the personnel of the Cleveland Pathe exchange as special two-reel comedy sales representative. Vibbard was formerly manager of the Cincinnati branch of the Progress Pictures Company.

R. S. Shrader, central division manager for Pathe, spent almost the entire week in Cleveland, making side trips out in the territory and getting in personal touch with the northern Ohio exhibitors.

J. R. Kaufman, special representative out of the Pathe home office, is spending several weeks out here in behalf of Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman."

The local Pathe exchange stands ten up and three to go in order to fill its quota of first-run bookings on "The Freshman" for release date. Oscar Ruby, exchange manager, states that ten first runs have already been signed, sealed and approved for the Big Day, September 20. The remaining three are soon to be closed.

The Film Building register showed the following out-of-town exhibitor guests during the past week: Phil Messina, Liberty theatre, East Palestine; John Damm, Strand, Wadsworth; Charles Mack, Strand, Sebring; George Fleischman, World, Toledo; C. W. Goodrich, Chardon theatre, Chardon; K. Olszeski, Olszeski theatre, Dillonville; Henry Rosenthal, Ohio theatre, Ravenna; and Messrs. Richard A. Werner and C. F. Phister, the new owners of the Crescent theatre in Hicksville.

Both the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange and the Security Pictures Company will be slightly crippled temporarily, due to the fact that Steve Andrews, Metro-Goldwyn shipping clerk, is going to marry Mary Garagus, inspector for Security.

H. A. Bandy showed favoritism before leaving Cleveland for his new duties in London for First National, by giving a farewell luncheon for the male contingent of the local First National exchange. But just to prove once again that women bear no malice, the entire office, both male and female, presented Bandy with a gold pen and pencil set.

Every day from two to five o'clock in the afternoon, the local Standard Film Exchange holds screenings for whomsoever it concerns. Eventually all the 200 pictures to be released through Standard will thus be screened for exhibitors. Notices have been sent to all exhibitors in the territory announcing a continuous screening policy. Frank Hard, publicity manager for Standard, says this has been the most effective advertising project they have ever put into effect.

Charlie Barbian, who is interested in the new Keith building now in course of construction in Akron, was in town the other day and says that he expects the house to be ready to open about January 1st. Barbian has his finger in another interesting pie, too. He is working on a special projection experiment, which, if successful, will revolutionize present projection methods, he says. A special lens is now being made to test out the experiment.

Jim Dunlevy, manager of the Strand theatre, Akron, made his first trip to Cleveland in two years. He has been in poor health for that long. However, last week he drove up with Charlie Barbian, and held a regular reception in front of the Film Exchange Building.

Jack Zipp, one-time booker in the Cleveland Standard Film Exchange, then transferred to the booking department of the Pittsburgh branch, has been promoted to the Pittsburgh sales force.

Joe Deutch, of the Regent theatre, Cleveland, has just returned from a camping and fishing expedition in Maine.

Jack Harwood, vice president of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, went to Columbus to attend a board meeting of the association, which was held in President William James's office on Tuesday.

Al Mertz has been appointed manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange. Mertz was manager of the Universal office in Detroit at one time. He resigned to handle an independent picture of his own. Later he joined the local "U" sales force, and just lately he has been placed in command of the outfit.

Mr. V. E. Saeger, who with Mrs. Saeger, operated and managed the Southern theatre, Akron, died last week. Mrs. Saeger will continue to run the house.

The Feiber-Shea interests have bought the Casto and Palace theatres, Ashtabula, from Ward Johnson and Louis Mueller. Paul Mueller will remain with the new owners as manager of the theatres.

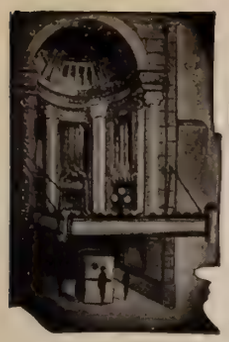
Greenie's July picnic was held last Thursday in Mentor. "Greenie" is Frank Greenwald, independent distributor. He promotes good feeling among local film folks by staging an outing once a month. The big event of the show was a baseball game between two factions headed by Howard Reiff, of the Scoville-Essick-Reiff circuit, on the one side, and by "Doc" Brodie of the Broadway Theatres Company, on the other side. The Reiffs beat the Brodies 10-9.

The Crescent and Capitol theatres, Hicksville, O., changed hands last week. The Crescent Amusement Company purchased them from W. LaVon Boon. The Crescent Amusement Company consists of C. F. Pfister, a former Troy exhibitor, and R. A. Werner, a former Paramount Film salesman connected with the Cincinnati branch office.

Denver

THE annual picnic of the Denver Film Board of Trade was held at the Mt. Morrison Hotel at Morrison, Colorado, during the afternoon, evening and night of July 15th, and the early morning of July 16th. All film exchange employees attended the picnic as did all the exhibitors from Denver and nearby towns who could possibly be there. Upwards of three hundred people were present and all indulged in some of the numerous sports including swimming, racing, dancing, base ball games and mountain climbing. The dance started early in the afternoon and continued until early the next morning and was held on the veranda of the Mt. Morrison Hotel. The annual prize waltz was won by Arthur O'Connel, shipper of Universal, and Miss Gallup of Pathe and both were presented with beautiful prizes. The base ball team captained by Joe Ashby of First National were victors in the contest with the team captained by Eugene Gerbase of Universal, winning by a score of 11 to 4.

James Cruze is directing the "Pony Express" for Famous Players-Lasky on location four miles from Cheyenne, Wyoming. There are about 150 people taking part in the picture, the stars of which will be Cortez, Betty Compson, Wallace Berry, Ernest Torrence and Johnny Fox Jr.



H. W. Braly, manager of Paramount, held an exploitation meeting to give suggestions to his customers for the putting over of his "New 40" pictures. Many exhibitors came to Denver to attend this meeting and traveled hundreds of miles for the purpose of doing so. Among them were Fred Bezold, Lotus Theatre, Sheridan, Wyoming; Jim Hughes, Imperial Theatre, Alliance, Nebraska; Russel Hardwick, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, New Mexico; Miss Maud Buford, Avalon Theatre, Grand Junction, Colorado; Henry Fulkerson, Lyric Theatre, Powell, Wyoming; Paul Krier, Star Theatre, Walsenburg, Colorado; Dave Hess, Iris Theatre, Monte Vista, Colorado; George Frantz, Mt. Rose, Colorado; Ed. Marquand, Isis Theatre and Longmont Theatre, Longmont, Colorado; and William Ostenburg, Orpheum Theatre, Scottsbluff, Nebraska. In addition to these, all the Paramount salesmen were called in to attend the meeting and it was a great success in every respect.

Mr. H. L. Burnham has been appointed sales manager at the Denver branch of Pathe for Associated Exhibitors succeding Guy Parfet. Mr. Burnham was promoted from the position of Special Two Reel Comedy Representative for Pathe. Mr. James A. Hughes succeeds Mr. Burnham as Special Two Reel Comedy Representative. After these changes were made in the Pathe organization, a sales conference was held in the Denver office by Mr. C. M. Van Horn, the manager. Mr. Van Horn has lately rejoined the Denver Film Board of Trade.

Mr. Art Schmidt, Western Division manager for Film Booking Offices of America, has been in Denver for a few days visiting Mr. Sid Weisbaum, local manager of their exchange.

Mr. Weir, Western Division manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, has been in Denver recently visiting the local branch of that company.

The Denver Film Board of Trade conducted a very peaceful, quiet and efficient meeting last week by re-electing all present encumbants. The officers of this organization were and are as follows: Charles R. Gilmour, Warner Bros., President; James S. Hommel, Producers, Vice President; H. W. Braly, Famous Players-Lasky, Secretary; Duke W. Dunbar, Executive Secretary, Treasurer and General Counsel. No change was made in the members of the Board of Arbitration which are as follows: Exhibitors: Jacob Eppler, Ogden Theatre, Denver; Gordon B. Ashworth, Federal Theatre, Denver; A. J. Hamilton, Ivy Theatre, Denver; Exchange representatives: Sidney D. Weisbaum, F.B.O.; J. H. Ashby, First National, and R. J. Garland, Metro-Goldwyn.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Analysis of New Theatre Construction

Predictions for Future Building; Many Independent Houses Scheduled

WITH the continuous reports circulating of theatre acquisitions made by large producing companies and circuits it is of interest to study the ownership of new houses and proposed theatres to be built this year. Also the question arises—what effect will the circuiting process have on the construction of independent theatres and houses by small circuits operating but from two to five theatres. Will the incentive for the construction of this group of theatres be killed or invigorated?

Logical reasons can be advanced justifying either contention, but far better than reasons and opinions is an analysis of the building program that is now under way.

The new theatre projects that have been reported to the NEWS office have been published in this department at intervals. Also the latest theatre building news is printed hereinafter. By scrutinizing this date, a conclusion that may be surprising to many is reached, i. e., a large number of theatres are being built for private ownership, though these so-called independent theatres are in the majority of cases houses constructed on a less pretentious scale than those being built by large circuit and producing companies.

A logical conclusion to be reached regarding theatre building in general is that a continuous round of theatre construction may be anticipated for an indefinite length of time as a result of several forces—the population increase of this country and the subsequent need for more seating capacity; the gradual improvement of the entertainment offered by motion picture theatres with its instigation of greater patronage; the ever present appeal for investment in any motion picture enterprise by the public; and, for the present at least, independent theatre competition for circuit and producer built theatres.

The following list of new theatre projects, numbering thirty-one, shows the Central section of the country represented heaviest, while the Eastern division runs a close second. In this particular report the West Coast is sparingly listed which is a reversal to its representation in former reports. Two theatre projects are given that call for an investment of over two million dollars each, one at an even million and eight for more than one hundred thousand:

Work starts on Paramount's new theatre and office building at Times Square. The Putman building (on right) to be wrecked and entire excavation started within the next sixty days.

The new Beverly theatre, recently opened by West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Hollywood Theatres, Inc., at Hollywood, Calif. This house, as may be noted by the photograph, is of strict East Indian design. The exterior makes a very majestic and imposing appearance.

Consolidated's Executives Dine; Progress and New Plans Reported

THE executives- and department heads of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., attended the first of a series of get-together dinners at the Hotel Astor, Friday night, July 17, that will be given at regular intervals for the purpose of promoting the spirit of cooperation and good fellowship among all the employees of this industry.

A fascinating story of remarkable business progress was unfolded as the achievements of this company during the first year of its existence were summarized. Starting but little over a year ago and representing the consolidation of five separately operated laboratories, the management of the Consolidated has so unified and coordinated the activities of these plants that today a much larger business than the total of all the separate plants before consolidation.

The increase in the business being done by the Consolidated and their desire to turn out the best quality product and give the utmost in service has led them to enlarge one of their laboratories so that when it is finished it will be equipped to handle more film and to render a degree of laboratory service as near perfect as possible.

This new laboratory when finished will enable the Consolidated to handle nearly three times their present volume of business and will be the last word in the scientific inventions for a speedy handling of all kinds of laboratory work under the most ideal conditions.

Even further plans of expansion were hinted at by H. J. Yates, the Managing Director, in his brief informal talk. Plans that are already under way will insure the growth of the Consolidated to a creditable position in the film industry.

Poli Theatre, Scranton, Pa., Undergoing Remodelling

Taking advantage of the dull summer season to make improvements on the Poli Theatre, Scranton, Pa., the Comerford Amusement Company has temporarily closed the house. The changes being made include the removal of the picture booth from the balcony to the gallery, and the installation of more seats in the balcony as well as on the ground floor. The house is being redecorated and refurnished on an elaborate scale, including the placing of new draperies and carpets. Alterations are being made to the stage and the boxes, and a new Kimball organ is to be installed. Peter Shafer is the house manager.

Work Started on 1,500 Seat Florida Theatre

Work on the new Edwards Theatre, on Pineapple Avenue at Seventh Street, Sarasota, Florida, has started, the contract having been awarded last week to G. A. Miller, of Tampa, and it is promised to be completed and delivered not later than the first of December this year.

The building will have a frontage of eighty feet and a depth of 190. It will be three stories high, with offices and apartments on the two upper floors and the theatre occupying the ground floor with a seating capacity of 1,570.

The structure will cost $210,000. It will be of Spanish style, fireproof and modern in every way. The Universal Film Co. have taken a lease on the theatre for a term of twenty years, and they will install the theatre equipment, which will include a large pipe organ. There are two other theatres now operating in Sarasota, one of them under the management of the Universal Co.

Richmond, Ind., Theatre, Installs Marr & Colton

M. E. Remley, of Richmond, Indiana, has purchased a two-manual organ for his Washington Theatre. The theatre is being remodeled and redecorated and will be reopened September 1st. The organ will be installed during the summer.

Reducing the Fire Hazard

UNDOUBTEDLY, the greatest fear associated with motion picture projection which exists in the minds of the layman—and a good many other persons with more experience—is that of fire. This fear has some justification in the occasional serious fires which occur when some overly careless person violates the common sense rules which should be followed when handling motion picture film whether in the projection room, or outside.

This consideration of safety has been one of the impelling motives for various improvements in projection and projection room construction until now the danger of a serious fire starting has been pretty well minimized. The attempt has been made, to make the handling of such film, at least during the time of projection, more or less foolproof.

Automatic Fireproof Device

The final step seems to have been taken when two Cleveland projectionists, according to our correspondent, perfected a device for precluding the possibility of film fires while the film is in the projector.

The projectionists in question, Henry Leiber of the Strand Theatre and Edward Noble of the Kinsman Theatre have already secured the approval, it is claimed, of the fire insurance underwriters and have had favorable reports made on the device by other persons holding posts of importance in the motion picture industry.

A company of Cleveland business men has already been formed to manufacture this fire prevention attachment. Ten of the attachments have been made, some of which were exhibited at the recent Motion Picture Supply Dealers convention in Milwaukee which took place simultaneously with the Exhibitor's convention.

Incidently, the fire underwriters are quoted as saying that the installation of this device should reduce fire insurance rates.

How It Works

The device, as we have received the description, is fairly simple and can be attached to any projector. It has one principal object—that of preventing a fire while the film is being projected—which is accomplished by three operators.

It causes the projector to stop running; it extinguishes the light and it cuts the film off below the lower idler sprocket so that there is no danger of film packing at this point.

Should the film, while in motion break, either at the top or at the intermittent sprocket, should the sprocket holes be torn, or the driving belt break, the projector is instantly halted automatically. The film must be kept in motion to have a picture on the screen.

The mechanism, which has not yet received its commercial name, is attached to the head of the projector as shown in Fig. 1. It consists, primarily, of a centrifugal governor, which actuates a magnetic device for breaking the lamp circuit thereby extinguishing the lamp. At the same time the motor circuit is broken so that the projector itself stops running.

The third operation, that of severing the film past the intermittent sprocket is accomplished by means of a tension cutting device attached at a point between the lower idler sprocket and the guide rollers at the entrance to the lower magazine. This cutting mechanism can be seen in Fig. 2 which shows the tension rollers lowered after having just cut the film at the entrance to the lower magazine.

Should the film break past the intermittent sprocket, the tension rollers here illustrated will drop, thereby causing the automatic switch to open which will extinguish the light and stop the projector.

It will be noticed in Fig. 2 that there are two tension rollers below the lower idler sprocket, one bearing against either side of the film. If the film is torn on either side, therefore, one or the other of these rollers will drop, thus causing the automatic switch to function.

In Fig. 3 is shown a film threaded in the projector with the two tension rollars bearing against it ready for operation.

To start, presumably, the projector and motor switches are closed, the projector is then cranked by hand and when sufficient speed is obtained to close the centrifugally operated switch, the projector motor starts simultaneously with striking the arc when the carbons are separated.

We are not certain as to whether or not this is the procedure, but if it is we cannot help but wonder how the projectionist warms up his arc to form the proper crater and we rather imagine that with Mazda, the lamp filament must receive some considerable jolt during that first inrush of current.

If on the other hand projector and light source are temporarily disconnected from the automatic switch and started in the regular manner, will the projectionist always be thoughtful and careful enough to again connect in the automatic switch to make the device operative? These points require further explanation.

It's expected

"Eastman" and "Kodak," in black letters in the margin, identify the genuine Eastman product—the film that carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Positive Film assures the kind of photographic reproduction that audiences are entitled to—and expect.

Procedure for Insuring Proper Theatre Lobby Display

W. F. Libman, Pres. of Libman-Spanjer Corp.

IN last week's article, the writer whose knowledge of things artistic, and whose activities in lobby display matters qualifies him to speak as an expert, pointed out how the theatre lobby might well be regarded as the finger which beckons the prospect on past the ticket taker.

To the reader of the last article it might seem that all that is necessary to attract the eye of the visitor is to run down to the local five and ten cent store and grab an armful of chromos and have the hired man nail them up in the lobby. Maybe there was a time when this could be done, but not in the year 1925. We are living as has been remarked in an age of specialization.

When a successful architect desires the execution of a mural decoration he doesn't call on the local house and barn painter, and neither does he commission the neighborhood all round carpenter when he wants theatre chairs, etc.

And so it is with those things that go toward making the lobby the kind of a magnet that pulls the customer up toward the ticket box. If every theatre were equipped with a standard lobby that could be dressed up in the same manner as the chain cigar store folks dress their windows it would be an easy matter for the manager to fix up his lobby to the best advantage.

But inasmuch as every theatre practically presents its individual lobby characteristics, it is necessary for the owner or manager to call for help, and this is where the expert with the right kind of service is indeed helpful and necessary. The right time to call on the frame builder and lobby expert is when the theatre plans are being laid out in the architect's drafting room. It's at this stage of the game where the lobby man with his sense of attractiveness and utility can do his best work.

It should stand to reason that any specialist continually doing theatre work is in a position to advise and suggest as to the best means of getting every advantage out of certain lobby spacing. He knows that atmospheric conditions make themselves felt on ornamental woodwork, gildings and finish. He knows what is good for the salt air of a New England shore resort theatre lobby is all wrong for the lobby of the Florida resort lobby where atmospheric appetites eat things up in an altogether different way. So why not get expert advice on the lobby from e perts and at the right time.

So much for the value of expert advice. Let's talk about some lobby abuses that can be remedied. One of them, to the writer's mind, is the pasted up poster. Years ago the only thing that men could think of when they held a poster before them was to stick it up somewhere with the pastebrush. It was customary for subway, street railway and railroad companies to stick their placards up with paste, and we can all remember how ragged looking and dirty many of these posters looked after a few days of service. But today the urge of neatness prompts even the smallest organization to do things different, and better.

Some managers seem to feel that when they have pasted a poster on the outside of their theatre or even in the lobby where it may be attacked by rain, sunshine or "Peck's Bad Boy," is sufficient. But let it be here noted that pasted up posters are just as much out of the running in the life of a modern theatre, as is the old kitchen chair of the obsolete store show. Pasted up posters are all right in their place but that place is a billboard and not the wall of a lobby.

How often have we seen the handsome hero on a lithographed poster doing his big scene with part of his anatomy removed and just simply because the poster on which he appears has been insecurely pasted or has been meddled with. The writer himself saw a poster recently that had been half pulled off and showed the upper portion of Gloria Swanson supporting the lower extremities of Charlie Chaplin. This was the result of a picture of Chaplin being pasted up the week previous.

How many exhibitors during the year pay a visit to the big nationally known theatres just simply to get ideas and to take home with them a few object lessons in up to date theatre management. Practically every worthwhile big theatre is using lobby displays to the best advantage.

Many times we have seen theatres opened that were wonderful examples of architectural beauty. Buildings whose lines and period construction was so pure that no advertising could possibly be used without outraging this architectural masterpiece. The theatre opens and folks come into the entrance but no farther, because they see no familiar mark in the entire lobby that stamp the building as a theatre. All they see is marble, bronze and tile.

In a certain cultured New England city, a theatre was planned and to make sure that it would be everything that its Grecian style of beauty called for, the services of an internationally famous patron of art was secured. This house opened its doors with the dignified blowing of trumpets. After the first nighters had their innings it was noticed that business was very poor—in fact there wasn't any. It's true that art students used to come into the lobby and go into ecstasies over its alabaster pilasters but they weren't show patrons.

Today that theatre front is covered with dignified poster frames and is doing its regular share of business as a theatre, instead of a beautiful but non productive example of Grecian art. This proves that the theatre front has a mission to perform, namely—to interest the passerby in what is being shown within.

The new Lafayette theatre, opened at Batavia, N. Y., by the Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of which Fred M. Zimmerman is president.

Western N. Y. Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., Opens Lafayette House

BEAUTY of architectural design, safety provided in its construction and careful attention given to the little details for the comfort of its patrons are among the features of the new Lafayette theatre which was opened on July 9 in Batavia, N. Y., by the Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., of which Fred M. Zimmerman is president.

The theatre, which was built by the Farber Brothers and leased to the Zimmerman organization, is constructed of sturdy building tile covered with light buff brick. It is trimmed in white cast stone and dark buff brick and a copper cornice extends across the front. The front of the house is 52 feet both in height and width and halfway up on either side of the entrance are two stone masks. The marquise, which extends over the sidewalk almost to the curb, is illuminated on all sides by large daylight bulbs. Double rows of colored lights around the sign are controlled by an automatic flasher. At the front of the sign the theatre name is displayed in large channel illuminated letters and theatre programs are shown on either side in apalite glass letters. The theatre sign which hangs over the marquise is about 25 feet in height and also has a double row flasher system. Four large photograph frames are hung at the front of the house.

As an entrance to the lobby from the street there are three wide double oak doors finished in mahogany and trimmed with bronze grills and door handles. Each door is equipped with an automatic closer and swings almost at the touch of the hand. Over the doors is a large art glass panel of blended colors. In the lobby itself one gets the first view of a pleasing color scheme which has been worked out in all the interior decorating. The ceiling is of a rough grain plaster with maroon, blue, gold, green, grey, bronze and buff colors all skillfully combined to give a restful effect to the eyes. The border of the lobby is of light brown Italian marble with a darker marble wainscoting and baseboard. The floor is of black and white check tile and is on a level with the sidewalk.

On either side of the lobby are two large oak picture frames for bills of future attractions. On the north side there is a gilt framed leaded glass mirror between the picture frames. The box office window is between the frames on the south side. There is a three inch brass rail in front of the ticket window. The lobby is divided into three aisles by heavy rose-colored velour ropes with bronze fittings. The lobby is lighted by a large bronze fixture in the center of the ceiling and smaller candelabra fixtures at the sides.

All of the house lights may be controlled from either the ticket office or the stage and are equipped with dimmers. Wide oak panel doors lead into the foyer of the theatre, which is carpeted with a long nap turf-like Axminster carpet with a rose and black figuring on a taupe background. Under the balcony light is provided by nine inverted ceiling fixtures. The men's smoking room is on the north side of the foyer under the stairs and the ladies' room is under the stairs on the south side. Both rooms are finished in white tile and enamel brick and are large and roomy.

The auditorium walls are of light buff color and on either side are tapestry effect panels of maroon stencil work trimmed with a border of gold-coloring ornamental plaster. The stencil work is shaded to give it a cloth-like appearance. The radiators are set in deep recesses in the walls along the side aisles.

There are 700 seats on the main floor. Each seat is leather cushioned and knee room of 30 inches is allowed between the seat backs. There are 22 seats in each row—eleven in each section. Four double exit doors lead from the auditorium to concrete runways which lead directly to the street.

CLASSIFIED AD SECTION

RATES: 10 cents a word for each insertion, in advance except Employment Wanted, on which rate is 5 cents.

'Kivalina of the Icelands"—Pathe, Strand, New York

Times: "As an antidote to the sultry weather, 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands,' the principal attraction at the Mark Strand this week, undoubtedly served a purpose yesterday, as for more than an hour one felt all the cooler for centering one's attention upon a frozen background with scenes of the 'restless Arctic Ocean, silenced by the grip of deadly winter.' There is a deal to be learned from this picture, and much credit is due Mr. Rossman for his courage and energy in putting forth such a production."

Evening World: "'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is a distinct screen achievement. It is one of the most interesting and informative pictures seen on Broadway in months, and, coming as it does so soon after the return of Amundson, it is bound to exert a tremendous appeal wherever it is shown. Earl Rossman, big game hunter and explorer, is responsible for this excellent effort."

Graphic: "No more wonderful picture of the Arctic has ever been filmed, not excepting 'Nanook of the North.' Probably the most wonderful scenes of the Arctic region ever photographed are displayed. 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is not only an entertaining picture but an educational one. You cannot afford to miss it."

Mirror: "Every now and then a human interest cinema document of much beauty and interest reaches the silversheet. The Mark Strand offers such a production this week in Earl Rossman's 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands'. The film, which required two years to shoot, is rich with gorgeous photography, thrilling reindeer scenes, and entertaining human touches. Of particular interest is the first picturization of the Aurora Borealis in natural colors"

Daily News: "Here is one of the most interesting and unusual films to grace Broadway in a cinema season. The cast is capable and interesting to behold. And the colored sequences showing the Aurora Borealis—this must positively not be forgotten—are gorgeous beyond words. Everybody interested at all, in anything having to do with people whose lives we little know, will be wholly appreciative of this delightful production. Don't let it get by without seeing it."

Sun: "'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' is a wholly admirable offering. Its chilling scenes are excellent antidotes for summer weather. In its reels one may see reindeer round-ups, caribou hunts, seal hunts and whale hunts. The film depicts the barren frozen life the Eskimos lead and is a picturesque successor to 'Nanook of the North.' It is a wholesome diet for those who are fed up with the trivial stuff of the films. It is real."

World: "One of the most fascinating of all the screen novelties is on view at the Strand this week. 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands' presents a play by Eskimos, the entire action of the drama taking place in the bleak and merciless coldness of the Arctic. If for no other reason than that it brings to every man's home town a reproduction in faithful pictures of a land few of us will ever see, it is a valuable and interesting document. But 'Kivalina' is much more than this. The scenes in full color of the Aurora Borealis are magnificent."

American: "One of the most absorbing dramas that Broadway has seen for many weeks. For two years Earl Rossman lived in the Arctic regions, studying the ways of its people. Slowly he gathered material for his film. Actors he selected from among the villagers. They knew nothing of acting, they had never heard of movies, but they were willing to continue their usual mode of living while the handle of the strange black box continued to turn. And their usual mode of living contains enough thrills for twenty pictures."

Telegraph: "I only regret that I have but one hat to take off to Earl Rossman, who produced 'Kivalina of the Ice Lands.' The scenery is, to say the least, awe-inspiring. It is a truly gorgeous picture, refreshing and clean, and despite all lack of 'sex appeal,' it ought to appeal to almost everyone."

"Pretty Ladies"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York

Telegraph: "Monta Bell has done it again. Which means that in 'Pretty Ladies' he has turned out a picture of remarkable entertainment value. With Adela Rogers St. Johns' story of the trials and tribulations of a 'Follies' star to work with, he has evolved a beautifully balanced and continually interesting film. It gives ZaSu Pitts the best role she has ever had; it contains some of the best natural color scenes yet made, and it dares to give frank information about some features of chorus girl life. Miss Pitts is superb in the leading part."

Journal: "If I had a hat on, I'd take it off to Monta Bell, who directed 'Pretty Ladies.' It's one of the best pictures of the season. Monta Bell directs a picture like a painter paints one. He takes an idea and presents it with such deftness that it leaves an impression beyond mere visual entertainment."

Daily News: "One good turn deserves another. After years of glorifying the American girl, Mr. Ziegfeld and his 'Follies' come in for a large portion of glorifying in the movies. Monta Bell is the bright boy who did it. And he did a neat job! There's a glamor about the piece that holds one until the fadeout."

Mirror: "'Pretty Ladies' is a pictorial gem, "resplendent with gorgeous scenes, beautiful girls and superb acting by ZaSu Pitts. It offers the kind of entertainment for which one ordinarily pays $5.50 and checks up another directorial triumph for Monta Bell."

Graphic: "You'll want to see 'Pretty Ladies' at the Capitol, and when you've seen it our bet is that you'll want to see it again. For 'Pretty Ladies' is the best backstage picture that has ever been put on. Mr. Bell knows as much about directing as a fish knows about swimming—and that is everything. Each shot of this film is interesting, unique and to the point."

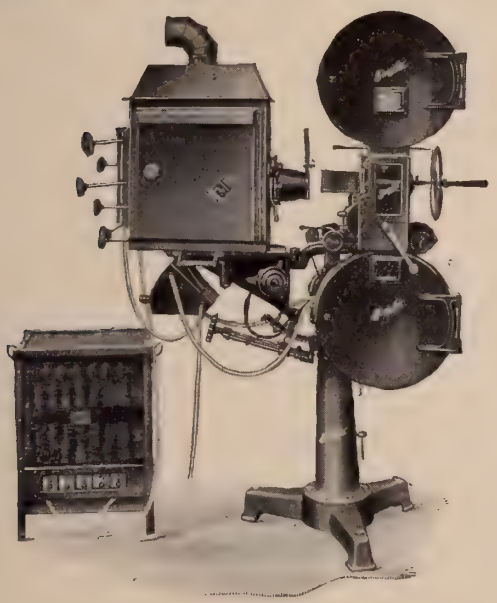
"One Minute While We Change Reels"



IN the early days of motion pictures no one cared much about the technique or quality of projection. When the operator announced—"One minute while we change reels"—the audience was glad of the opportunity to rest its eyes from the flash and glare of the screen. It accepted the annoyances of poor projection without protest.

But it is quite a different story today. The manner in which a picture is presented is as important a matter as the quality of the picture itself.

Projection today is either an asset or a liability. It either attracts patronage or drives it away. The large percentage of unsuccessful theatres that have poor projection is tangible proof that people know the difference between good and bad projection and that they give their patronage to theatres that offer the best.

Good projection is a matter of good business. Besides being an unfailing means of increasing patronage it actually costs less in the long run. If you have faulty projection you also have expensive repairs of machines and reels, less box office receipts, and the good will value of your theatre is nil. But if you have perfect projection, the kind you get from a Simplex projector, you have no repair bills, larger box office returns, a high investment value in your machine, and the reputation of your theatre extends more and more every day.

A SLAVE OF FASHION

Hobart Henley production. From a story by Samuel Shipman. Directed by Hobart Henley. Co-starring Norma Shearer and Lew Cody. Presented by Metro-Goldwyn. Shown at the Capitol, N. Y., week July 19, 1925. Running time, 69 minutes.

Katherine Emerson.....Norma Shearer
Nicholas Wentworth.....Lew Cody
Dick Wayne.....William Haines
Mother Emerson.....Mary Carr
Father Emerson.....James Corrigan
Aunt Sophie.....Vivia Ogden
Madeline.....Miss Dupont
Mayme.....Estelle Clark
Hobson.....Sidney Bracey

A sure-fire box office bet. It has everything film fans want. There is a beautiful star, a lot of romance in the story that also carries a great suspense thrill, clothes, laughs, and in addition a surprise in the fact that Lew Cody turns out to be a hero instead of a heavy, which is fair enough in itself.

Atop of all this the picture is directed with a score or more of deft touches on the part of Hobart Henley, who is now about at the top of the group that are labeled "commercial directors," for he is turning out pictures distinctly box office.

This one starts off with just that type of kick that is usually held for the big scene in a picture. It is a railroad smash-up, high in the air on a trestle, as a result of which the heroine of the story instead of landing in New York to hunt for work assumes the identity of a girl of pleasure who was one of the victims, takes over an apartment that a former admirer and protector has placed at her disposal while he is abroad, with the understanding that she is to leave before he returns.

Just think of the transition of a small town girl from the wilds of Io-way, where Jed Flanagan comes from, to a Park avenue duplex with a maid and a man servant, a Rolls and a charge account for everything from theatre tickets to clothes.

Does she step! And how!

Why she just speeds and all is going along in great shape, for she has even copped herself a would-be [illegible] who thinks she's a married woman with a lot of loose dough that she doesn't know what to do with, until the folks back home decide to hop into Henry and fliv their way east. That's a laugh, Henry chugging up to the Park avenue joint and parking front of the door.

Then things begin to happen. Aunt Sophie fears for the niece, who incidentally has accounted for her living in splendor by confessing to a secret marriage with her husband hurriedly called away to Europe, because the boy friend is very much on the job and it looks as though the niece might be compromised. So auntie suggests to mother that word be sent the husband and this is done. He does drop everything in Europe and dashes back to the good old U. S. A. because if he has a wife he wants to see who she is, and with his arrival the little heroine masquerader and fibber is in another jam. She wants to confess all to mother and the family when the "husband" decides that she might as well be the wife anyway and brings about a happy ending.

Norma Shearer looks like a million dollars, especially in a shower bath scene that'll make all the boys out in Io-way sore on themselves for ever letting her get to New York, and Cody handles himself like the master of acting that he is. Mary Carr as the mother is just her wistful charming screen self, and Vivia Ogden gets laugh after laugh.

The production looks like a lot of money, and the clothes display is corking. The title in itself suggests naturally a fashion show, which is always sure fire, but with this picture one doesn't need go after anything heavy in the way of a flash to go with it for it is certain to make 'em come.

WURLITZER UNIT ORGANS

Wurlitzer Unit Organ Catalog is ready.

WURLITZER Grand Pianos are endowed with the same unapproachable tone and quality inherent in the Wurlitzer Unit Organ

The Indiana Theatre Indiana Harbor Ind.

Box Office Value!

KOZACIK & MANTA

INDIANA STATE BANK BUILDING

INDIANA HARBOR, IND.

July 14, 1925.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

This is to let you know just how we feel by now about our Wurlitzer Pipe Organ in the Indiana Theatre.

As you well know we bought this organ only after a lot of investigation as to merits of other makes and the fact that we bought a Wurlitzer and paid more for it than what we could have bought others of equal specifications, speaks for itself as to what we think of Wurlitzer organs when it comes to tone and quality.

As to Box Office Value, I can only say this, that even if your organs were only equal to others, it would still be the organ to buy because it is a Wurlitzer.

We use the phrase "The Mighty Wurlitzer Pipe Organ" in all our advertising copy and we know that the public associates the name Wurlitzer with the best. Lining up our Organ with those of such theatres as the Chicago, Tivoli, McVickers and others of Chicago, it places our Organ installation in the City of Chicago, it places our Organ in public favor far above those of our competitors in this region.

All in all, the instrument, installation and service considered, we believe that we have the finest theatre organ in the State of Indiana.

With best regards from Mr. Kozacik and myself I remain,

Sincerely

9th mo. SEPTEMBER 1925

On September 1st, 1917, the first Paramount Week began. This year, September 6th-12th sees the eighth annual celebration of Paramount Week. This follows the opening of Greater Movie Season in August. Large advertisements listing Paramount bookings at exhibitors' theatres will be carried in 4,000 newspaper in the United States and Canada. Never were the pictures greater in entertainment value than this year. The August Paramounts are: "Night Life of New York", "In the Name of Love", "The Lucky Devil", "Beggar on Horseback", "Street of Forgotten Men", "The Ten Commandments". The September Paramounts are listed in this almanac.

"If it's a Paramount Picture, it's the best show in town"

In September comes the first showing of Harold Bell Wright's newest and greatest novel, "A Son of His Father", which has been running serially in McCall's Magazine (circulation 2,125,000) and which will be issued August 1st as a book with a tremendous advertising campaign in 400 newspapers and national magazines. Produced in true Paramount de luxe Western style.

Ultra-modern gowns, society scandals, bathing beauties, comedy and strong human drama are features of Gloria Swanson's new Paramount picture, "The Coast of Folly", released in September. More people want to see Gloria today than any other star in the world. Cash in! Allan Dwan produced the picture.

Thomas Meighan, with Virginia Valli and a superb supporting cast, has about finished his greatest picture in a long time, "The Man Who Found Himself". Booth Tarkington wrote the very strong story especially for Tom. Alfred E. Green directed. Soon Tom will start work on "The Shamrock", a big Irish story. Meighan—"Shamrock"— you can appreciate the box-office wallop of that combination!

Christie's Greater Laugh Season

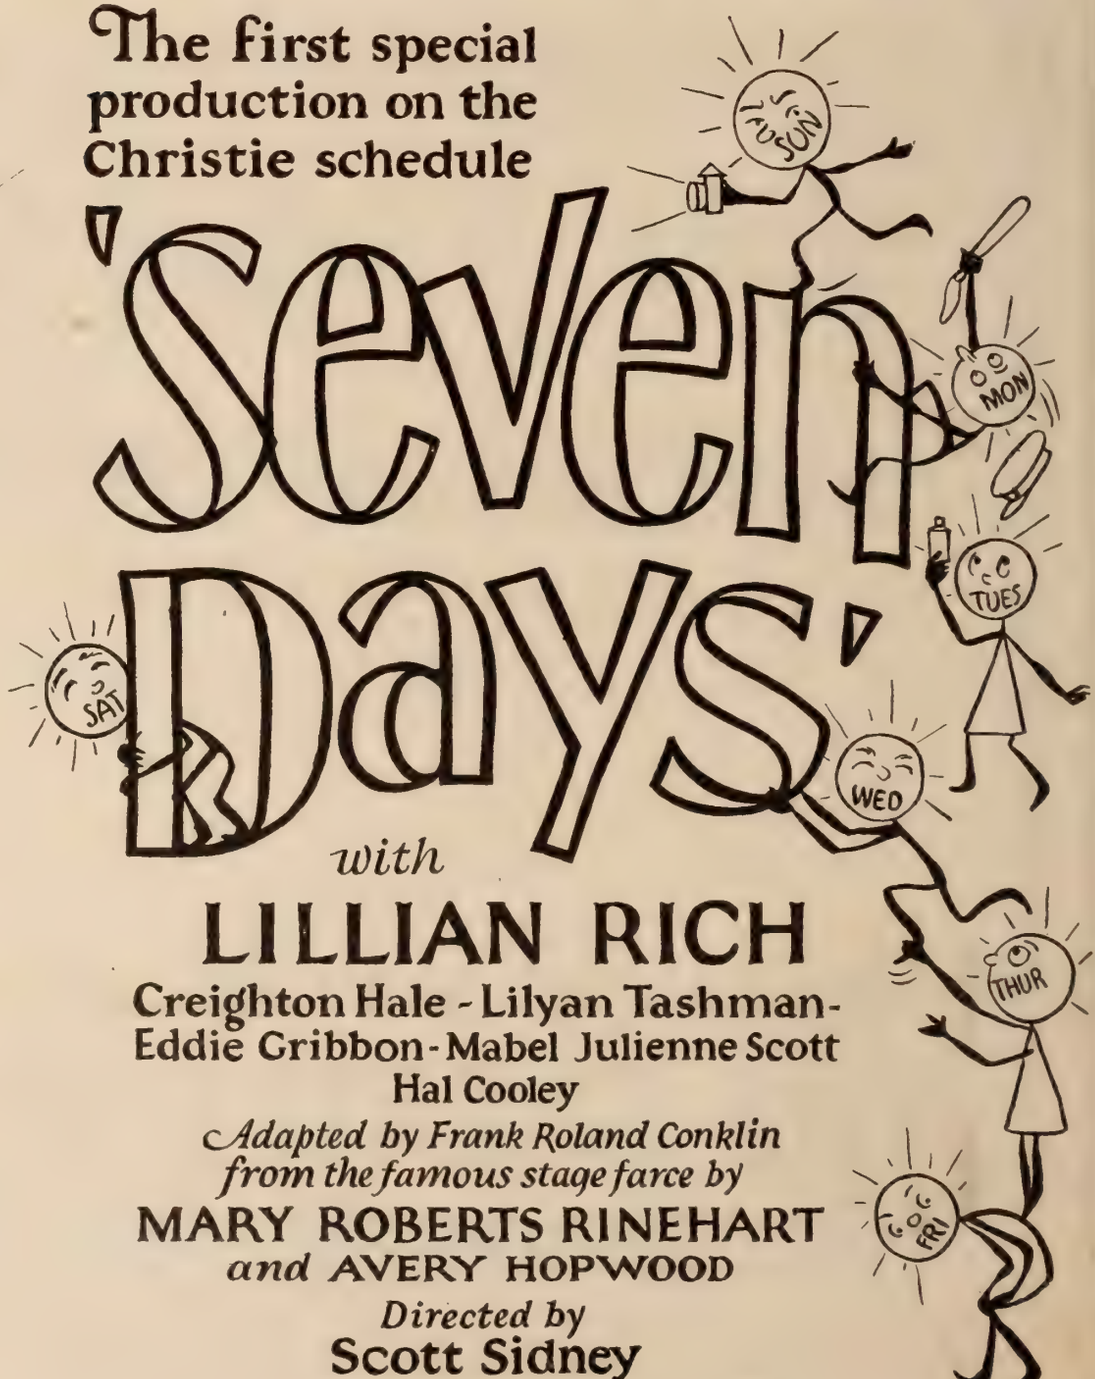
The successful showman is the one who has his finger on the public pulse.

The vital spot—the most sensitive and responsive fiber of that public pulse—is the "laugh center."

That's why the good old public pays millions for a laugh—and not a centime for a crepe-hanger.

If you can make a cat laugh, you have achieved the ultimate. As a figure of speech, "Enough to make a cat laugh" means that the risibilities of millions of human beings will be jazzed into a merry, rhythmic syncopation when they see the Christie Specials.

The Christies have been titillating the public diaphragm for many years, while the cash registers of exhibitors have played a jolly little "Dough-Ray-Me" symphony of their own.



Christie Specials are the Champion Classical Jazz Symphonies of the screen —and the CHAMPION MONEY— GETTERS OF ALL TIME!

"Enough to Make a Cat Laugh?"— Yea, bo!

means to you Mr. Exhibitor

With an established reputation of fifteen years as producers of fast-moving, rollicking comedy of proved box office quality—backed by the most elaborate and up-to-date studio equipment for the creation of de luxe productions—the Christie Feature Comedies for the coming year will Surpass the magnificent records made by the Christie Product in the past.

His long and brilliant career has won for Al Christie the title of Master Farceur of Motion Picture Production. That rare faculty of detecting the humor possibilities in a situation and that still rarer ability to grasp the kind of humor that turns laughs into plethoric box-office receipts, is the reason Al Christie leads in the Feature Comedy field.

The Past Performances of the Christies have made their name synonymous with Box Office Success. When you book a Christie picture, you book an Assured Success—the product of men who have proved their ability to gauge the public demand for Entertainment and have met that demand with the maximum percentage of Showmanship Productions.

The stupendous success of "CHARLEY'S AUNT" demonstrated that the Christies stand alone in the Feature Comedy field.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT" BROKE ALL RECORDS AT EVERY FIRST RUN HOUSE IT PLAYED SINCE DATE OF RELEASE! It is acknowledged to be the greatest screen comedy ever produced.

"SEVEN DAYS" and "MADAME LUCY" will measure up to the superlative quality which the Christies demand and the public expect in the Christie Feature Comedies.

THE proper use of light is a subject that every theatre owner should study carefully. For in every theatre, large or small, light can be employed effectively to increase the attractiveness of the theatre—both inside and outside.

Our lighting experts have recently prepared a booklet that is one of the most complete and up-to-date treatises on the subject of theatre light that has ever been published.

A few topics discussed in this booklet are:

(1) How to use direct and indirect lighting.

(2) The proper intensity of light that should be used in each department of the theatre.

(3) The secret of coordinating light and music.

(4) Decorative and ornamental lighting.

(5) The use of colored light for psychological and decorative effects.

(6) The selection of orchestra lights.

FILM BOOKING OFFICES of America take this opportunity to thank Mr. Brown openly for his complimentary expressions.

This is Mr. Brown's first letter of praise written to any film company. Naturally we are gratified to receive such a commendary note. Thousands of other exhibitors who use F. B. O. Product never write letters either, yet, if they did, they would write precisely as Mr. Brown has written.

Fine pictures. Square treatment. Good prints. Money making product. What else can any exhibitor ask for? So as we've said many times before—"TRADE WITH F. B. O. AND UNDERWRITE YOUR OWN PROSPERITY."

F. B. O. Gold Bond Specials For 1925-26

DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION

The talk of the trade. The Associated Arts production, from Elizabeth Cooper's famous novel. Directed by F. Harmon Weight. Packed 'em in for one solid week at the CAPITOL, New York's largest and finest theatre. Backed by Sat. Eve. Post advertising selling the picture to millions of people before you play it.

"The Keeper of the Bees"

Gene Stratton Porter's sensational success now running serially in McCalls magazine, and NOW being advertised nationally in McCalls for four solid months by F. B. O. Backed also by a tremendous national campaign by Doubleday, Page & Co. on the book tie-up. Produced by J. Leo Meehan.

"PARISIAN NIGHTS"

The Gothic production starring Lou Tellegen, Elaine Hammerstein, Renee Adoree. Directed by AL SANTELL. Packed 'em into the CAPITOL, New York's finest and largest picture theatre for one week. Praised by the critics.

"IF MARRIAGE FAILS"?

C. Gardner Sullivan's sensational drama of the marriage problem starring Jacqueline Logan, Clive Brook and Jean Hersholt. Superbly directed by John Ince. Played capacity at B. S. Moss' beautiful new COLONY theatre B'way at 53rd St., New York. Praised by all critics.

"A POOR GIRL'S ROMANCE"

The 2nd of the sensational LAURA JEAN LIBBEY stories. We predict for these Laura Jean Libbey stories an enormous draw at the box office because these are stories that millions have waited for.

2 EMORY JOHNSON GOLD BOND SPECIALS

The first of which will be the thrilling melodramatic newspaper story "THE LAST EDITION" with the popular Ralph Lewis in the lead. Second Gold Bond Special by Johnson entitled—"HAPPINESS" a huge story with a wonderful theme and backed by tremendous exploitation.

"When His Love Grew Cold"

The first of the famous LAURA JEAN LIBBEY stories that will set new box office records. Stories known to millions—a sensational box office draw. See trade papers for further announcements.

"THE MIDNIGHT FLYER"

A thrilling railroad romance, with a story twist that has never before been seen in railroad pictures. A smashing climax built up by a marvellous breath taking series of events. Watch the trade papers for further news on this one.

"THE FUTURITY WINNER"

A whale of a race track story, based on a new angle of showmanship. All the romance, fire, color, high speed action and box office power of the best of the big timers. More news of "THE FUTURITY WINNER" to be announced shortly.

"FLAMING WATERS"

Associated Arts next big time Gold Bond Special for F. B. O. based on E. Lloyd Sheldon's famous story of of a "he" man in the great golden oil fields of the far west. Thrills, chills, drama, punch, power.

"THE ISLE OF RETRIBUTION"

Edison Marshall's thrilling book brought to the screen at last. A story of great courage, great honor, and a greater love. One of the best sellers of the season.

MOSS' BROADWAY THEATRE —"The Danger Signal," adapted to the screen from the story by Douglas Z. Doty. A Columbia production, directed by Erle C. Kenton.

THE CAST

May Browning	Jane Novak
Laura Whitman	Dorothy Revier
Cyrus T. Browning	Robert Edeson
Ralph Browning	Gaston Glass
Robert Brown	Robert Gordon
"Pudgy"	Lincoln Stedman

"THE DANGER SIGNAL," whizzing along at the Broadway, is all about railroad life. It has one of the most thrilling climaxes that has been screened lately. Runaway engines are always good for a shiver or two. And, when there's a dead convict at the throttle and the Limited steadily approaching, the effect is enough to startle the most placid audience.

The story is one of the good old-fashioned kind that always has a moral up its sleeve. Twin boys are separated in their infancy, their widowed mother relinquishing one to her estranged father-in-law, who is also a railroad president. Twenty-one years later the boys meet, neither having heard of the other's existence. Ralph, who had been pampered by their grandfather, is a selfish, indolent youth. Robert, guided by his loving mother, is a typical movie poor-but-honest hero.

Of course, Robert and his brother's fiancee fall in love. Then follow fights, mail thieves, train wrecks, all ending in a motorcycle race with the speeding train. It sounds rather like [illegible] for boys, but it,

"THE DANGER SIGNAL" GOOD ENTERTAINMENT AT B'WAY

By HARLOW J. PETERS.

There is something homey and sincere about "The Danger Signal," the Columbia picture which is playing this week at the Broadway Theatre that places it beyond the category of mere movie hokum. Undoubtedly it did not de- any- become interested in their doings.

JANE NOVAK

The type of story, which, by the way, was written by Douglas Doty, is such that it can be made or killed by direction and acting. "The Danger Signal" is made, for Director Erle C. Kenton has come through with real results, aided and abetted by Jane Novak, Robert Edeson, Robert Gordon, Dorothy Revier and Gaston Glass.

There are humor, pathos, near-tragedy and thrills in "The Danger Signal," all so nicely interwoven that none walks on the heels of another. The story, in brief, concerns twin sons of a girl who married the son of a railroad president. When he is killed, the father will have nothing to do with the girls because of class prejudice, but insists on taking a baby to educate. From this premise the scene shifts forward twenty-one years, and we see the adopted son as a society "waster" and the home son as a noble fireman on a Pacific-type engine.

The two finally come together, and the girl who is engaged to the "waster" falls in love with the other brother. In a series of complications, ending in the saving of the limited by the "good" son, their identities are established and everything ends as is fitting under such heroic circumstances.

The chief thrill scene is unusual. The good" son races a runaway engine with a motorcycle, finally running ahead of it on the ties, trying to reach a certain switch before the engine meets the limited head-on. He falls off the motorcycle and throws back the switch just in time. Of course, I do not like to be captious, but I hate to think of what would have happened if that switch happened to be locked, as switches away from a railroad yard are supposed to be. But that would have spoiled the thrill—it is to be placed under the head of "movie license."

Jane Novak does a fine piece of work as the mother, her heavy, emotional acting never becoming tiresome. Personally, however, I consider it a little bit criminal to make the beautiful Miss Novak wear a wrinkled make-up. Dorothy Revier is entirely acceptable as the girl in the case, and works very well with Robert Gordon, as the "nice" son. Gaston Glass, as the "mean" one, is his competent self throughout, and, of course, it is always a pleasure to watch Mr. Edeson.

"The Danger Signal" will be no red flag to any audience.

"Danger Signal"

Smashing Railroad Drama at the Broadway This Week.

CAST:

Mary Browning	Jane Novak
Laura Whitman	Dorothy Revier
Cyrus Browning	Robert Edeson
Ralph Browning	Gaston Glass
Robert Brown	Robert Gordon
John T. Moran	Lee Shumway
Mrs. Whitman	Mayme Kelso
"Pudgy"	Lincoln Stedman

"The Danger Signal," with Jane Novak, Dorothy Revier, and Robert Gordon, is the photoplay attraction current at B. S. Moss' Broadway. This is a smashing railroad melodrama, directed by Erle C. Kenton, chuckful with thrills and a knock-out climax.

Dorothy Revier makes an attractive heroine; Robert Gordon a clean-cut hero, while the rest of the cast—Jane Novak, Robert Edeson, Lincoln Stedman and Lee Shumway—are adequate.

Here's a Thriller That Really Works

"THE DANGER SIGNAL," at the Broadway, is one of the genus rara avis—a thriller that thrills. It must be a jaded moviegoer indeed who doesn't feel a few prickly sensations along the spine when he sees the hero, of whom he has become very fond, riding a motorcycle over the bed of a railroad with a speeding locomotive jogging along a scant yard or two behind him.

Jean Novak's portrayal of the mother of the two boys seemed an unusually fine piece of work. In a part that might have been so easily overdone she showed an admirable restraint and understanding.

Lack of a program is the only thing which prevents credit from being given to some one for admirable direction of the picture. In a story far from distinguished in itself there are many fine touches, little things, but intelligent things, which you would have liked to applaud.

RAILS BURN AS MELODRAMA DASHES ON TO DIZZY CLIMAX

By MILDRED SPAIN.

Would you like to see a choo-choo melodrama with a perfectly thr-rilling climax?

That's "The Danger Signal."

It's an above the average picture of this sort, in story, direction and acting.

For one thing there is plenty of action and the picture steps right along.

This one is going to make them sit up in their chairs as straight as the vertical side of a cross-word puzzle all the way from Walla Walla to Canarsie. It fires thrills with rapidity, and at no time does the mechanism get clogged. It possesses, in addition to superlatively high-grade cast and direction, a story that while old and jammed with melodramatic hokum, has a tear, a smile and a wallop for every one of the several housand feet of film in its make-up.

Railroad stories when they are properly told and filmed always make good picture material. There are few thrills to be compared with the sight of a steel monster crowded with humanity rushing toward a bridge that has been tampered with and is ready to crash down when the weight of the engine reaches it. The heavy, for instance, no sooner has the destruction of the bridge planned than he learns his mother is a passenger on the train. The hero's father, crack engineer of the line, is at the throttle, the first to pass over the new bridge built under the direction of his boy. But his heart is heavy as his little girl is desperately ill at home and a red flag flying from his house as he speeds by shows her to have taken a turn for the worse.

To cap the climax a giant maniac breaks loose on the train and takes possession of the engine, after knocking out the engineer. Nothing can stop the train and the engineer comes to just in time to uncouple the locomotive and apply the brakes to the first car, as the engine crashes down from the bridge.

In the reading all of this and the countless other strong situations sound as though it were all piled on too thickly, but the expert handling does away with that danger. The direction is credited to Frank O'Neil, but, although the press sheet fails to mention his name, Renaud Hoffman is given as supervisor in the preliminary titles, and his sure touch in the small-town commonplaces, pathos and humor, is clearly defined.

The entire cast is tremendously effective. Malcolm McGregor, who has been arriving like a sky-rocket, is excellent in the lead, as is the dainty Olive Borden, who plays opposite. Alice Lake successfully resists the temptation to overact as a vicious small-town flapper who tries to frame the hero, while Ralph Lewis, John Miljan and "Buddy" Post, as the engineer, heavy and maniac, respectively, are others who are outstanding.

It's a genuine pleasure, none the less, because it is surprising, to see an unheralded independent of this quality. According to announcement it is the first of a series of 12 productions to be made under the same banner, and if the rest average one half as good, Gotham will be the talk of the industry.

CLASS B

THE OVERLAND LIMITED (States Rights) A thrilling railroad melodrama with Ralph Lewis as a faithful old engineer. That sounds "box office-y" doesn't it? It is all of that for added to Ralph Lewis, are Malcolm McGregor, quite the most "regular" and natural of our young leading men, Alice Lake, Olive Borden, Charles Postand and a number of capable character people including Charles West, Emmett King and Charles Mailes.

The story concerns the romance of the engineer's son and the railroad president's daughter. The youth is a talented bridge engineer, and receives a commission to build a bridge which will be a "short cut" and will also be the means of saving huge sums of money for the railroad.

A jealous rival thwarts him at every possible turn even to the extent of wrecking the bridge on the occasion of its opening (this by the way is a real "big scene") but being an out and out melodrama, virtue triumphs and the youth goes forward to building new bridges and a life's happiness with the girl of his dreams.

Ralph Lewis is bighearted, bluff and sympathetic as the engineer, Malcolm McGregor plausible and likable in the extreme as his bridge building son. Alice Lake gives a fine portrayal of a zippy little railroad town vamp while Charles West is sufficiently revolting as her "badger" companion. Olive Borden is a new and charming ingenue. A really outstanding performance is that of Charles Post, as a huge, mentally unbalanced ex-pugilist who turns maniac on the train which is speeding to open the new bridge.

This is lurid melodrama but of the most entertaining sort, and can be exploited to any extent without fear of overdoing it, or of promising too much.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, AUGUST 8, 1925 NO. 6

Greater Movie Season Bulletins

BECAUSE we construe the Greater Movie Season to mean a Greater Business Season for the entire motion picture industry, we are contributing this page for the cause. This is the final week preceding the season's opening date of August third. Here are the important, last-minute bulletins issued to the various branches of the industry.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE has endorsed Greater Movie Season. News-wires have broadcast that endorsement; the public has read it; the NEWS reprints it.

Before a national industrial movement can attain such significance as to merit presidential commendation, that movement must reflect internal unity of effort. Greater Movie Season has begun in more than a thousand cities and towns. It is the industry's first nation-wide demonstration. With only three months' organization work behind the drive, and apart altogether from its public aspects, Greater Movie Season has brought producers, distributors and exhibitors into closer working harmony than the whole twenty-nine years of film activity achieved hitherto.

Still wider plans are contemplated for next year's season.

Five years hence a 99.9% co-operating industry may look back into the archives of 1925 and wonder why field-men ever had to be sent out to sell the Greater Movie Season idea.

ENLARGED photographic copies of President Coolidge's endorsement have been supplied to all campaign managers in sufficient quantities to allow one to each theatre. Displayed in lobbies this letter will impress indelibly the national importance of motion pictures. Even after the season no exhibitor is likely to discard it. He'll frame it and hang it conspicuously as the presidential answer to unwarranted criticism.

NINETY-SIX War Department Theatres attached to army posts are in on the big show. Six thousand five hundred Navy boards are displaying the Greater Movie Season poster.

DENVER holds the record for window showings. During the season there will be between 400 and 500 displays.

THE Salt Lake City newspapers will run special Greater Movie Season sections on Saturday and Sunday, August 1st and 2nd.

BECAUSE Greater Movie Season means greater entertainment, producing directors and musical directors of theatres all over the country have arranged presentations and orchestral accompaniments that will emphasize how remarkably the art of presentation has advanced. The Broadway houses in New York City, the principal theatres in Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington and elsewhere maintain production standards that equal the stage's highest.

THE National Contest has opened editorial doors in newspaper offices that have been closed and locked against film exploitation. Those doors will remain open. Add the Tulsa (Oklahoma) Tribune to the list of participating papers. Never heard of the Tulsa Tribune? Nevertheless its 35,000 daily circulation means as much to exhibitors in Tulsa as the Chicago American's half-million means to Chicago.

THE FOURTH ESTATE, the most authoritative magazine for editors and publishers, has urged newspaper support and pointed out the revenue-earning possibilities of enlisting commercial advertisers with the movement. Hundreds of pages of co-operative space arranged by newspaper space-salesmen will give additional impetus to the season's opening.

MANY small theatres, only now appreciating the value of the season, have requested campaign books. Their campaigns, just developing, will culminate in September. Greater Movie Season presents that advantage. It is as good during one month as any other. The Hays office will keep on hand for many months to come press-books and complete organization details that any theatre may secure at any time.

An Exhibitor's Declaration

ELI WHITNEY COLLINS, President of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas and an official of the national organization, has written A Declaration of Principles, which deserves both commendation and widespread publicity. Here are the standards upon which Mr. Collins operates his theatres:

"To give to our public the last dollar in value, reserving for ourselves only a fair and just profit.

"To show nothing upon our screens that we would be ashamed to have our wives, daughters, sisters and mothers see.

"To lend the power of our screens to the upbuilding of Jonesboro, Craighed County and Arkansas and all worthy institutions therein.

"To fearlessly and vigorously eliminate from our programs all that does not conform to the highest standard of morality.

"To acknowledge and perform our duty as citizens and to zealously guard the position we have attained as the Arbiters of Jonesboro's pleasure.

"To keep our theatres clean, cozy and comfortable and to serve our patrons above ourselves.

"To accept no profit that is obtained at the expense of our principles as men or that requires a slackening in our sense of right.

"To deliver, at all times, the finest entertainment attainable at the lowest prices commensurate with a just profit.

"Our business has been built upon a solid rock of confidence. Our patrons know that our 'Golden Rule' is not mere words. It is the keynote of our business. We have never made all the money that we could have made had we not adhered to this rule, but we have faith to believe that we will make money longer and more surely than by adopting the methods that many have followed, of getting all we could out of our customers, and giving back as little as possible.

"You must be satisfied at our theatres or we do not want your money."

Showmanship

SOME forceful remarks on the necessity for first-class showmanship in all theatres are contained in a recent Bulletin of the Board of Trade and Commerce, affiliated with the M. P. T. O. A. We quote:

"Many theatre owners who are shrewd and astute buyers of film, who are clever handlers of men, and who, to all intents and purposes, run their houses perfectly, fail to achieve that measure of success which would seem to be rightfully theirs. They lack some degree of showmanship. It is not enough to buy some 'sure fire' attraction, at a right price, and then just make an ordinary announcement regarding it. Showmen—real showmen—must not keep secrets from the public where their shows are concerned. They must literally 'tell the world' what they've got. Then, if the world does not come in to see the attraction, it is not the fault of the theatre owner. But all too many of us do not let enough people know what we have to show. Far too many persons in our own localities do not know that we have a certain fine picture until after it has played our house. We venture to say that there are enough of such people in every theatre owner's locality to either make up the difference between profit and loss, or the difference between a mild success and a knockout.

"Don't be content with your usual stereotyped methods of teaching the public. Such continually to reach them in new and individual ways as befits the attraction you are showing. The exploitation aids you get from some of the film companies are of help, but your very best exploitation will be that which you yourself devise. You know your public; you must also know all about the pictures you are playing. Don't be content to 'plug' one portion of your show—even your chief feature—to the exclusion of the rest of the show. Particularly should this be the case in all of your front of the house advertising. Play up your bill as the vaudeville houses do theirs; name every part of your program distinctly, so that 'he who runs may read.'"

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

ON WITH THE DANCE

CAN it be that sultry weather conditions, instead of slowing down the physical and mental pep of the inhabitants and near-inhabitants of filmland, causes them to brim over with dynamic vigor and engage in joyous festive carnival? We ask in all humbleness, for otherwise how account for the sudden deluge of invitations to recent nightly pleasure rallies, combined with a business seasoning?

Famous Players-Lasky came to bat with the triumphant prophecy of a wonderful time at a barbecue being given Saturday night, August 1st, in Times Square, on the site of Westover Court, rear of Putnam Building, and marking the actual breaking of ground for the new twenty-nine story Paramount Theatre Building, which will occupy the tract now covered by the Putnam Building and Westover Court. Two thousand persons are expected, consisting of employees of the Famous-Lasky Home Office, theatres and studios, and their guests. Following the dinner, a concert by Ben Bernie's jazz orchestra, after which general dancing on a floor especially erected for the event.

From Whitman Bennett came the announcement of a House-Warming, to assist in commemorating befittingly the acquisition of the Glendale Studios, Glendale, L. I. Mr. Bennett further announced that special buses would leave Times Square, north-east corner of Broadway and 42nd Street, at 6 P. M. Friday, July 31st, 1925. And there was high revel and much "tripping on the light, fanastic toe!"

And at the playhouse in Great Neck, L. I. First National gave a trial showing of Frank Lloyd's "Winds of Chance," based on Rex Beach's adventure novel of gold-rush days. This was followed by a screening of Constance Talmadge's Hans Kraely picture—"Her Sister From Paris," directed by Sidney Franklin. At both affairs a large crowd of general sales managers, film executives and stars were present, who pronounced the attraction to be sure-fire box office stuff. Showings for "Winds Of Chance" and "Her Sister From Paris" in New York are being arranged in the near future.

Three heads are better than one, says Fat Karr, and calls in Tiny Alexander and Kewpie Ross, appearing with him in Joe Rock's Standard Fat Men Comedies (F. B. O.).

The trained dancing grace of little Lois Moran, playing Laurel in "Stella Dallas" (First Nat'l), shows up even in her form at tennis.

You'd never know that the two seemingly aged figures at the left are Pat O'Malley and May McAvoy, now would you? The others are Cullen Landis and Laurence Trimble, directing "My Old Dutch." U(niversal).

C. Graham Baker, for many years scenario editor for Vitagraph and more recently with Fox, who has joined Inspiration and is contin uitizing "Just Suppose" (First Nat'l).

Alberta Vaughn is the personification of the typical "fresh" stenog in her new starring series, "The Adventures of Mazie" (F. B. O.). They should be some adventures!

Mary Brian, dainty Paramount featured player, pauses between scences of "On Dress Parade" long enough to put in her boost for Greater Movie Season.

Coral reefs and all the tropical atmosphere figure in this setting for "South Sea Gold," the Carlos production in which Richard Talmadge is now working for F. B. O.

CASHES IN ON FRECKLES

THE possession of a legion of freckles and a countenance that even his warmest adherent could not help pronouncing as most unbeautiful helped a whole lot in getting Junior Coghlan of Southern California a contract as regular member of the De Mille Stock Company. But homeliness, although a big factor in Junior's success, wasn't all by a long shot.

It was when the lad, who is only eight years old, distinguished himself by the fine performance he gave with Willian Boyd in "The Road To Yesterday", that he made such an impression on De Mille as to induce that astute person to sign him up. Young Coghlan is tow-headed and his teeth are chiefly conspicuous by their absence, and De Mille, who realized that the boy would stand out in odd contrast to most other youngsters before the camera, is convinced that he will become a second Wesley Barry. The later, by the way, was given his first big chance in De Mille's "Male and Female." Junior is no novice in picture work, having made appearances in "Mike" and "The Skyrocket" for Marshall Neilan; "Cause For Divorce", "Bobbed Hair," "Garrison's Finish" and "The Fourth Musketeer."

In addition to the above information, sent us by Charles J. Giegerich of Producers Distributing Corporation, the publicity expert gives vent to his feelings in the following touching lament:

If I hadn't been so pretty as a boy
I would have proved an everlasting joy
To millions who viewed me on the screen,
'Tis tough, indeed, to think what might have been!

We were not acquainted with Mr. Giegerich in his juvenile days, but are quite willing to accept the foregoing statement at its face value.

Sally O'Neill was a centre of much attraction when a thousand midshipmen recently visited the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to see "The Midshipman," which was largely filmed at Annapolis.

AN UNDERSTUDY FOR TONY

TONY, the celebrated Mix co-star and equine actor, is to have an understudy. The latter is named Napoleon, and his selection was the result of a long and painstaking search on the part of Tom Mix, his ranch foreman, Pat Chrisman, and various cowboys who have worked in films with Tony and his master.

Horse stars have come to the front rapidly since Tony first made his screen debut nearly a decade ago, but Tony is the dean of 'em all, and no other steed has so thoroughly established himself in the affection of the fans. But having passed his twelfth year, which is middle-age life for his kind, Tony has earned the right to take things a bit more leisurely, hence the efforts of Mr. Mix to find a worthy successor for him.

It was no easy job to locate a nag showing promise enough to be ridden over the sort of picture trails Tony negotiated so successfully. Colt after colt was examined, and often it was believed that the search was ended. But always some blemish or bad trait loomed up which resulted in the find being abandoned. Finally Napoleon, a promising bay colt, made his appearance. The veterinaries pronounced him sound in wind and limb, he gave every indication of being bright mentally and free from all meanness.

That was two years ago, when Napoleon was purchased and sent to the Mixville corral, California, where he has been constantly tutored in his new profession. He will make his first appearance on the screen in "The Lucky Horseshoe." That he will prove a talented cow-pony is confidently predicted by all who have had a hand in training him for his new duties. It took Tom Mix five years to find a suitable co-star, but if he fills the bill, the time has not been wasted. Meanwhile the wise and dignified Tony will indulge in a long vacation, after which he and Nap will alternate in the Mix pictures.

Lige Conley, Cliff Bowes, Eddie Moran and Virginia Vance, comedy funsters frolicking on the lot before the new cutting and projection room at the Educational studios.

MARRIED — THAT'S ALL!

SOME sensationally-minded folks persist in calling it an elopement. But, Arthur William Kelly and his bride, Miss Josephine Freygang, won't have it that way. They say they didn't want any fuss or crowd, so simply walked into the City Hall and were duly wed. Such is the explanation given by the happy pair when leaving New York July 25 for a three weeks' honeymoon in Canada. Mrs. Kelly is widely known as a writer of verse, artist and creator of exclusive gown designs. Mr. Kelly, brother of Edith Kelly Gould, is vice-president and treasurer of United Artists Corporation.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Freygang, 32 East Fifty-eighth Street, New York. Mr. Kelly, born in London, came here in 1911 to represent Frank J. Gould's interests in the Gould railroad and public utility holdings. He served in the British Army tank corps and during American participation in the World War held the rank of Major in the U. S. force. After the war he became assistant production manager for First National and later personal representative and business manager for Charlie Chaplin. The romance which culminated in marriage grew out of a meeting with Miss Freygang in New York in 1922.

MEIGHAN VISITS ERIN

THOMAS MEIGHAN, Paramount Star, is aboard the Leviathan, headed for the old sod, where he will produce a picture with the Lakes of Killarney, Muckross Abbey, Ross and Blarney Castles, for backgrounds, as well as a well-known race course in the vicinity of Dublin. This is the culmination of a long cherished ambition on Mr. Meighan's part, as he long pined to make a film surrounded by genuine Irish atmosphere.

If a high-class producing staff means anything in the turning-out of big features, the Meighan experiment ought to prove a howling success, even if it is listed as silent drama. For, besides Mrs. Meighan, whose job it is to see that Thomas doesn't overwork himself, there's the renowned Tom Geraghty, supervising director and scenarist of many of the Meighan screen hits, who will attend to the story values end, with direction in the hands of Victor Heerman and Alvin Wyckoff at the camera; with Louis A. Sarecky, Ted Pahle, Gaston Longet and Emmet Crozier also in evidence. And it's a safe bet that they'll frame up a film that will be an apt illustration of the old slogan—"There's nothing too good for the Irish!"

Colleen Moore, First National star, and her husband, John McCormick, return to Hollywood after their trip abroad, and are greeted by a party headed by Al Rockett, production executive.

MARIOTTI'S STRENUOUS CAREER

FREDERICK MARIOTTI, actor and soldier of fortune, has been cast for the role of Toni, the mate, in Rex Ingram's production of "Mare Nostrum." Which means "Our Sea" talk. The picture is now being filmed in Europe for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno, in the leading roles.

But as regards Mr. Mariotti, that gentleman shines as a brilliant offset to the popular belief that a chap who is chockful of valor on the screen would run if pursued by a sheep in actual life. He's a fascinating blend of the artiste and bold adventurer. Born in Marseilles, France, of Spanish and Italian parentage, at the age of thirteen he blew into Buenos Aires, where his uncle lived. Later he foregathered on the pampas with Indians, where, like a wandering troubador of ye olden time, he became an established favorite with the copper-colored sons of the open because he sung jovially and strummed the light guitar. Joining his brother at Rosario de Santa Fe, a revolution broke out, and they managed to make a getaway by the closest kind of a shave. Mariotti then started out to view the globe in dead earnest and during the next few years sailed all over the Seven Seas. He was first mate when he decided to try the land again and appeared in music halls, singing songs of the pampas. Later he played leads in a Paris Stock Company and made his film debut there. When the great war broke out he went to the front and saw 33 months of active service, was seriosuly wounded and sent to Nice to recover. After which he went in for the cinema game in real earnest, and since that time has appeared in important parts in "La Nouvelle," Imperial, "Surcouf," and several other successful European films.

They won't have to worry about any role being too rough for this Gallic gamecock to tackle.

A Pretty Ladies club, inspired by "Pretty Ladies" (Metro-Goldwyn), has been formed on the coast among girls who want to exercise and remain beautiful. They have a good start, we'll say.

VICE-PRESIDENT AT CHEYENNE

VICE-PRESIDENT CHARLES C. DAWES recently devoted a whole morning to watching the filming of "The Pony Express", James Cruze's next Western historical picture for Paramount, on the Cruze location near Cheyenne, Wyo. General Dawes and party were the guests of Senator and Mrs. Francis E. Warren of Wyoming. As the General, when a young man, spent much time in Western Nebraska, when the Wild West was really untamed, he was much interested in the scenic thrills, remarking that the sod houses used in the picture were more familiar to him than his Washington habitation. The Vice-President was also greatly taken with the work of the "Pony Express" orchestra, which played for him a number of oldtime stage driver songs of 1860, the period where the action is set. Among the Dawes party were Mrs. Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Humphreys of Denver and Mrs. W. V. Hoges, of the same city, Senator and Mrs. Warren, and John Fleming of the Wyoming State Tribune.

As a climax to his visit the General was induced to direct a sequence of the film, also to crank the camera on one of its important scenes, thereby qualifying as one "on the inside of the game", whereas before he was merely listed as an enthusiastic fan.

Vice-President Dawes presumably telling James Cruze to give 'em "Hell 'n' Maria" as he watches him direct scenes for "The Pony Express" (Paramount) near Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner snapped on the Leviathan as the boat neared England. Warner is making a survey of theatre conditions abroad.

J. CONFERS WITH IBANEZ

J. E. D. MEADOR of Meador-Robertson productions announces that he is in receipt of a cable from director John S. Robertson that the latter was met by Blasco Ibanez on the former's arrival, with his staff and Mrs. Robertson in Paris, and that he is holding daily conferences with the author regarding "Queen Calafia," first of the company's special series of Ibanez works.

The Spanish writer is a friend of long standing of Meador's and will personally assist in an advisory capacity in the production of "Queen Calafia" Mr. Robertson will visit Spain and Monte Carlo to select the locations needed for the film. The director has been promised the co-operation of the Spanish Government and expects big results in the way of getting an authentic picture of life in King Alfonso's country, something, it may be added, not always to be seen in the average feature depicting doings among the Dons.

HOPE HAMPTON SAILS

SHORTLY after completing work on in the leading role of "The Unfair Sex", Associated Exhibitors picture, Hope Hampton packed up and fled to Europe, leaving on the Aquitania, July 28. The object of her exodus is to view the field of operatic vehicles and selecting one for production. It is also rumored that Miss Hampton will appear with Walter Woolf in "The Sheik."

While in Paris she will purchase gowns to be reproduced in a series of pictures in natural colors, returning to America early in September, when she will go into rehearsal in the chosen opera, under Shubert management.

HERBERT BRENNON has begun work at the Paramount Long Island Studio on Sir James Barrie's "A Kiss For Cinderella," in which Betty Bronson will play the leading role. This will be Paramount's Christmas gift to the fans. It is described as a delightful fantasy, with much of the imaginative atmosphere so loved by the kiddies, and that human interest quality which appeals to the adults. Tom Moore plays the policeman who is transformed into a prince and Henry Vibart the serene Mr. Bodie.

W TWO DISTINGUISHED GUESTS

WILL HAYS AND JAMES P. GOODRICH, ex-Governor of Indiana, were recently guests at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Culver City studios. Escorted by Louis B. Mayer, they went all through the huge plant. Later, at Westview Park, they saw in process of construction a replica of the Circus Maximus in which the chariot race of the Fred Niblo production of Ben Hur will be staged. Ramon Na Novarro plays the title role in this picture.

William S. Hart, whose return to the screen is eagerly awaited. He promises that his new pictures for United Artists release will be the best ever.

John S. Robertson and his wife, Josephine Lovett, sail to film "Queen Calafia," and are seen off at the "Paris" by J. E. D. Meador, the producer.

William Wellman, director, discusses dance steps with Fanchon, the dancer for a cabaret scene in "I'll Tell the World" (Metro-Goldwyn), against an unusual setting.

Three ex-Follies girls, Ann Pennington, Jacqueline Logan and Billie Dove, meet on the Fox lot, where they are busy in "Lucky Horseshoe" and "When the Door Opened."

Peggy Shaw, leading lady of James A. FitzPatrick's Music Master series, who has just returned from abroad where several subjects were filmed.

Florence Turner (left) will be seen again on the screen with Alice Lake in "The Price of Success" (Columbia), where her emotional ability will be seen to advantage.

Battle of Theatre Seats Now Being Extended to Europe

American Interests Seeking First Run Control

By L. C. Moen

WHEN the smoke of battle dies down in Europe, someone is going to be sitting on top of the heap, holding control of the first run theatre situation and the world film market. That someone will then automatically become the strongest film organization in existence and the first to be truly international. Or perhaps there will be two such groups. It is very unlikely that there will be more.

The day of provincialism in costly pictures is about done. Pictures of purely national character will have to be made cheaply enough to gross back their cost and a profit on the home market. Productions deserving the adjective "big" will have to be made along more truly international lines than has yet been achieved, if they are to command a market wide enough to make them pay.

Just as, in America, each year has seen a sharper division between important productions and program pictures, a sharp cleavage will develop between the product made for the home market and the greater pictures made for the world market.

The secret of making genuinely international pictures has not been solved. Occasionally, one has resulted from accident, but not many. The company to survive and dominate will be the one that masters that problem.

What that solution will be I do not pretend to say, but I will venture a prophecy as to what it is not: The assembling of an American director, a German scenarist, a British leading man, a French leading woman, a Russian vampire, an Italian villain, a Spanish cinematographer and a Danish architect will not prove to be the road to internationalizing film production. The Tower of Babel, you may remember, was not a great success, architecturally or otherwise.

Much study is being given that problem in many quarters—more than is generally realized—and something is going to be done about it. European tastes are being quietly studied—reports of the success or failure of American pictures abroad analyzed—moves being made toward lessening the handicap of provincialism that lies on American photodramas.

But production of a more or less international character will not be enough. There must be control of the first run situation at home and abroad, to assure showing of these costly pictures in all countries. And that is where the fight will centre.

The three leading contenders from this side of the water, as matters stand today, are and will be Famous Players, First National and Metro-Goldwyn. As the principal theatre-owning groups in America, they are naturally making the greatest bid for first run dominance abroad. None of them is giving any publicity to its movements in this direction, logically enough, but evidences of busy activity are to be seen on every hand in Europe.

Paramount is playing rather a lone hand. This organization, which achieved its first beginnings with a French film, was the first American company to pay any great attention to the foreign market. While other firms were still disposing of their product en bloc to brokers at ridiculously low prices, Paramount was opening its own exchanges.

Paramount also began theatre acquisition at an early period and has the advantage of having considered this move and laid plans for it over a period of years.

As a result of all this, Paramount is firmly entrenched in Europe. Its distributing and exhibiting activities abroad have been extensive. Because of that, it occupies today a position probably materially stronger than its two leading rivals, though tomorrow the situation may be changed.

Digest of Second Article In European Series

L. C. MOEN, of the NEWS staff, who has just returned from a survey at first hand of European conditions, this week continued his discussion of the "low-down" on what is developing abroad.

This is of vital interest to everyone in the American industry, since the European situation is closely interwoven with our own. As is pointed out in the accompanying article, the struggle for first run control abroad is developing along much the same lines as that here, making producer ownership of theatres a world-wide issue.

This article sketches something of the activities abroad of Famous, Metro-Goldwyn and First National.

Essentially Paramount's European tactics have been along the lines of developing single-handed its own machinery of distribution and first run exhibition. There has been little talk of alliances or mergers. That has resulted in a certain strength, but there is a crack in the armor, also. As the outstanding American-owned and operated concern abroad, it has had to bear the lion's share of the attacks made on American pictures.

Just as I was leaving Europe, a stormy session occurred in the Chambre Syndicale des Industries Cinematographiques, or Motion Picture Chamber of Commerce, in Paris, at which it was even proposed that American concerns be excluded from membership. The brunt of this was borne by Adolphe Osso, Paramount's manager, who made a valiant effort to meet the criticisms directed at his company—more of which will be said at a later point.

Again, when Paramount purchased the historic Vaudeville—a theatre dear to the hearts of Parisians for its traditions—a storm of protest arose. Just as a storm of protest would probably arise in New York if the Hippodrome were to be purchased by a German firm, or if a French syndicate had purchased Madison Square Garden and announced plans for the erection of a theatre for the exhibition of French films.

Noted literary and artistic people of France went so far as to appeal to the government against this alien ownership of a revered French institution. Then this committee discovered an old law on the statute books in Paris, no longer enforced but still valid, providing that no theatre might have more than 900 seats. Threats were made to invoke this ordinance, which might have crippled Paramount's plans, since the desire was to build a large first run house seating several thousand persons.

Finally Paramount announced that it would build on the site of the Vaudeville, not a cinema, but a legitimate theatre. This quieted the storm, and now, from all I could gather, Paramount is going right ahead with the construction of a large, modern picture theatre.

You may put your own interpretation on such affairs, but they afford a clue, at least, to the hazards of "going it alone" in Europe on a large scale. Nevertheless, Paramount, through its early start and its heavy theatre holdings, occupies what is easily the strongest position of any American company in the European field, and its income from this source is well ahead of that of any other company.

Metro-Goldwyn, however, bids fair to become an important contender through its recent deals—the one the formation in France of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn, and the other the deal with Ufa for distribution in Germany of the entire last season's production.

The precise nature of the arrangement between Gaumont and Metro-Goldwyn, resulting in the organization of Gaumont-Metro-Goldwyn, has never been announced, and

STROHEIM WILL ACT AGAIN

To Support Constance Talmadge

THE "best hated man on the screen," Erich von Stroheim is going to act again.

This was the surprise note accompanying word from the offices of Joseph M. Schenck in Hollywood that the director-actor had been signed to direct Constance Talmadge in her next First National starring vehicle, "East of the Setting Sun," and also to act in it.

This forthcoming First National attraction will be von Stroheim's first appearance as an actor since his memorable portrayal in "Foolish Wives," which he also directed as well as acted in. In the new Constance Talmadge film he will wear the monocle, uniform and all the other accoutrements of the villain which in "Foolish Wives" earned him the title of "best hated man on the screen."

"East of the Setting Sun" is from a serial novel by George Barr McCutcheon which is in preparation for appearance in book form. McCutcheon is the author of Norma Talmadge's current romance, "Graustark."

Copyrights Menace to Canada

New Society Enters Field to Protect Rights of Authors and Composers

A NEW menace has appeared on the horizon for all exhibitors of Canada as a result of the formation at Toronto, Ontario, of the Canadian Performing Right Society with the object of protecting and enforcing the rights of composers and authors and other copyright owners in the Dominion, as they are protected and operated in Great Britain and other countries.

The designated president of the Canadian Performing Right Society is H. T. Jamieson of Toronto and he is to control the Canadian organization. Announcement to this effect has just been made by John Woodhouse, Controller of the Public Right Society of London, England, who has been visiting in Canada on business in connection with the establishment of the Society in the Dominion, following the organization of a branch in South Africa. Incidentally, Mr. Woodhouse has paid a visit to New York City for the purpose of consulting with the American Society of Authors and Composers with a possible view of securing a working arrangement on a co-operative basis in the United States.

In connection with the formation of the Canadian Society, Mr. Woodhouse has stated that the Canadian Copyright Act is reciprocal with the British law in regard to the performing right in music and that it is the intention to establish agencies for the purpose of collecting fees for the performance of music comprised in the extensive repertoire it controls, both in British and foreign music.

Woodhouse has intimated that his society is very much in favor of the proposed changes in the Canadian Copyright Act which came up before the last session of the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa with a view to legally designating theatrical performances as coming under the scope of the Copyright Act for the collecting of royalties. This did not become law before the session adjourned but the Performing Right Society claims to be in a position to proceed with its operations under existing conditions. It is proposed to charge flat fees for the presentation of its controlled copyrighted music in all theatres.

Judge Refuses Injunction Banning Negroes

An injunction was denied the Franklin Amusement Company of St. Louis by Circuit Judge Miller seeking to prevent the Little Theatre Corporation, operators of the new Palace Theatre from segregating negroes and white patrons of the house.

Judge Miller held that the practice of admitting negroes only to the balcony was not in violation of a provision of the lease which provided that the house was to be used either exclusively as a house for negroes, or for mixed audiences.

Counsel for the plaintiffs stated that formerly negroes were permitted to mix with the whites in all parts of the house. The "mixed audience" clause was inserted in the lease so that the theatre would not interfere with the Majestic which shows to whites exclusively.

Holdup in Chicago House Nets $7,500

Joseph McKeown, manager of the Stratford Theatre, 63rd and Halstead Streets, Chicago was robbed of $7,500, receipts, which were being transferred by McKeown and Miss Elizabeth Kelly, cashier, from the box office to the manager's office on the mezzanine floor. The robbery occurred outside the manager's office within a few feet of hundreds of people in the audience. The three robbers appeared with drawn guns, snatched the bag and ran downstairs to the street. The police are looking for the trio.

Battle of the Theatre Seats Extends to Europe

there is no little speculation in France as to the details. In effect, it probably means a partnership over a period of five years between the two companies in the production, distribution and exhibition of pictures in the French field. The Gaumont string of theatres is a large and important one, headed by the Gaumont-Palace in Paris, the largest picture house in the world. Such a circuit must be assured of a constant supply of meritorious product, and it was probably the fear of a shortage of good pictures that precipitated the deal with Metro-Goldwyn, for Gaumont already occupied a strong position.

The chief concern in the French industry, while I was in Paris, seemed to be whether or no Gaumont had demanded in return that Metro-Goldwyn distribute a certain number of French pictures in America, or produce pictures in France. Producers felt that a concern like Gaumont, holding an important group of theatres, was in a position to demand in return for them a representation in America, and that it would be little short of treachery if they did not.

Apparently, however, such was the case. Stories in France were to the effect that Metro-Goldwyn would either select a certain number of Gaumont productions for American release, or would produce them in association with Gaumont in Paris. It has been stated that the Gaumont studios at Belleville, at the edge of Paris, were to be renovated and brought up to date in order to accommodate this production. It should be remembered that Metro-Goldwyn has already done some little foreign producing on its own account, including the Rex Ingram productions, Marshal Neilan's trip to England, and one or two other units.

Further strong representation will be given to Metro-Goldwyn on the continent through the deal with Ufa in Germany, announced last week. While this involves no theatre control, it will give widespread showing to the product in central Europe.

First National, meanwhile, has terminated its arrangements with Transoceanic and placed the distribution of the 1925-26 product in Germany in the hands of Phoebus-Film, one of the strongest surviving independent distributors, which has excellent theatre affiliations. In France and Belgium First National is opening its own exchanges, and mighty fine ones, too. In England it is already well established. First National, too, is preparing a heavy drive on the European market.

MOTION PICTURE production in 1924 totaled $175,000,000, according to a survey made by the Research department of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association of Hollywood. That is the estimated amount given by the association.

The annual picture payroll is placed at $50,000,000; employees are numbered at 12,500, studios at 19 and producing companies at 250.

Variety Is Keynote In Coming Season's Productions

Hollywood Seeking To Broaden Theatre Audience

Cecil B. De Mille

Rudolph Valentino

Charles Chaplin

John Barrymore

Douglas Fairbanks

James Cruze

By Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

TALK of big pictures is again echoing around Hollywood. And it is not talk merely—but words supported by decisive action.

The announcements of the new fall and winter programs are indicative of the trend, but more than that there is a revival of the big feature spirit in the studios. Producers, directors and stars all want to do something extraordinary again. Entertainment as entertainment is not to be neglected, but it is going to have an increased significance. Ambition is seeing a new reawakening.

The one consistent impression growing out of this is that the standards of the more spectacular productions are about to be re-established. There have been enough stress on movies as movies for a time, and while there is no let-down in the meeting of the box-office demands, there will be a bigger stride toward more artistic (not highbrow, however) objectives.

No single type of film is actually in the spotlight. There is no repetition of the wild rush toward costumes that prevailed two years ago. Variety is the watchword, but variety with a stronger emphasis on worth. Careful and more painstaking effort in production. Less speed and haste in the turning out of films just for the sake of getting them on the market, making a time record and overdoing the economy impulse. More attention devoted to the sort of picture subjects that require thoughtful carrying out, fine detail and thorough planning. All this to be blended, of course, with the more modern efficiency in the studios and the elimination of waste.

The conclusion is clear. An enormous benefit should result to the whole industry. There will still be plenty of those types of pictures that are fill-ins, but there will also be a very appreciable number that will increase and renew the prestige of the theater, bringing back again those audiences who have inclined to scoff a little of late at the general quality of entertainment. Big pictures that can be heavily advertised for their personnel, their subjects, and their general merit—as well as incidentally their cost—get the people into the theater, and cause them to become once again more vitally concerned with the screen as a means of diversion.

Most interesting of all just at present, is the John Barrymore adventure in "The Sea Beast," taken from the American classic, "Moby Dick." A critic's artist much of the time on the screen, with a strong appeal also to the discriminating theatergoer, Barrymore has embarked on an enterprize that appears destined for unusual popularity. The period of the story is historic. From all accounts, though, the film itself will reflect not only history, but also a strong pioneer inspiration, suggestive to a degree of "The Covered Wagon." That is the aim both of Barrymore, and of Warner Brothers as the producers.

The background is the whaling industry of New Bedford, already familiar through "Down to the Sea in Ships." Similarity ceases, however, with this setting. "The Sea Beast," is essentially romantic in idea and purpose. The pioneer force grows out of the achievement of early Americans who had to struggle for a place in one of the world's greatest trading activities. But beside this, a very appealing and pathetic love theme, plus the fascination of roving sea adventure, will endow the plot with telling humanness.

"The Sea Beast" is a marked departure for Barrymore, though it affords him a tremendous and powerful acting role. As a leader of the whaling expeditions he is crippled during a battle with the denizens of the deep. He becomes a sort of Lon Chaney character, embittered, sombre and tragic, contrasting decidedly with the romantic individual that he is in the beginning. The locale for the romance is the island of Java, which was reproduced with rare tropical splendor right in the studio for the early scenes.

Some of the whale fishing shots will be secured through an expedition in the Pacific, and Barrymore himself is to appear in many scenes aboard a chartered vessel. Dolores Costello, the daughter of Maurice Costello, has been assigned the role of the heroine, and makes a very quaint picture in the old fashioned hoopskirts of the period.

Barrymore has long desired to do a vigorous out door picture, and he has on various occasions expressed a great admiration for "Down to the Sea in Ships," and even declared that he wished he could have played in this feature. "The Sea Beast," therefore, represents for him a fulfillment in many ways of this ambition.

One can well turn an interested gaze also toward the activity of Cecil de Mille at the present time. He has taken an entirely new turn with his production of "The Road to Yesterday." His goal is romance, but it will be set forth in an entirely different way from the Barrymore production. There is a historical aspect to "The Road to Yesterday," but it is highly imaginative. The theme of the feature touches on reincarnation, and after De Mille has introduced his modern set of characters, and disclosed their various perplexities, he transfers the scene to the middle ages. This cutback is far more elaborate, and has a more important relation to the plot than any other that De Mille has introduced, with the exception of "The Ten Commandments," wherein the cutback was instead a prologue. In "The Road to Yesterday" the entanglements of the modern story, hinge in part on the curse spoken by a gypsy during the historic episode, in a tragically melodramatic climax of burning at the stake.

Jetta Goudal, Joseph Schildkraut, and Vera Reynolds figure prominently in both parts of the plot, while De Mille is also predicting big things for William Boyd in a heroic lead.

The story as I have heard it impresses me as being one of the soundest and most convincing that De Mille has ever directed. It suggests spectacular elements that will be on a plane with his very biggest features. De Mille's first independent venture is altogether one of his most promising, and despite that there has been much headshaking and scepticism about his departure from the Paramount organization, he appears to feel no restrictions or limitations in his new endeavor. Personally, he evidences the keen optimism that has always distinguished him. He has built up an organization that appears to differ comparatively little from the one that he formerly possessed. The general feeling in his studio is also excellent, the directors, particularly, who are working with him, seeming to be more than happy in their association.

Douglas Fairbank's plans regarding "The Black Pirate" have been taking shape steadily. Doug has gone right to work without his usual rest between pictures, and has been experimenting in an exhaustive way with the possibilities of the film color process. It now is virtually certain that he will make his new production entirely in color, and this move on his part promises to have a very revolutionary effect on the use of the prismatic embellishments in pictures as a whole.

A really animated pirate story has yet to be made for the screen. "The Sea Hawk" did not fall fully into that classification. The actual pirate adventures were secondary in interest to the big struggle of the galley slaves for freedom, which made the real punch of the picture. Doug therefore still has a clear field for such light and deft treatment as he will undoubtedly give his dazzling pictorial spectacle. There will be plenty of Fairbanks stunts and comedy along with the melodrama and romance. Doug has considered doing the feature for all of two years, and the present moment appears especially auspicious since there are no other productions of similar character that are so elaborate forthcoming.

James Cruze's newest effort, "The Pony Express" will command more attention than anything that he has done since "The Covered Wagon." He has gone into this with every intention of making it an equally big pioneer epic. The company, and it is a huge one, has been on location for some weeks, and the picture will, without doubt, reveal a remarkable natural panorama of the West as a setting. Some of it is being made in the Rocky mountain region as well as around Sacramento, California, section, which was the western goal of the pony express riders. The achievements of these rugged heroes, who established the first active communication between the East and the West; their vicissitudes, dangerous escapes, and terrific hardships make for most stirring drama. Cruze has had to devote much of his time to routine film material—with the exception of "Beggar on Horseback," which proved a little too highbrow—but he is having his great chance once again. He will doubtless display an intensified zest in directing the new feature, because of its large and pulsating interest.

Two Frontier Pictures

Cruze is not alone in the field with "The Pony Express." Universal are also starting their picture based on much the same pioneer exploits, which carries the title of "On the Frontier." The locations are to be at Pendleton, Ore., and West Point Academy, and this picture also is to be filmed on a very pretentious scale, with Norman Kerry, Dustin Farnum, Kathleen Key, Anne Cornwall and George Fawcett among the principal personages in the plot. Dustin Farnum's return in this type of picture will doubtless be greeted with considerable attention.

The cast in Cruze's film comprises Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence, who plays a combined role of blacksmith and preacher for comedy reasons, Wallace Beery and Betty Compson. Torrence has given superb performance in "The Wanderer" the biblical story, that is soon to show as one of the big fall spectacles, and he is also going to make a huge hit in his newest portrayal from all accounts, as is also Wallace Beery. It will be good to see them together in a western setting in a production that promises to be one of the season's most ambitious.

Westi Liquidating Affairs in European Field

ACCORDING to word received in America this week, the Westi Film interests in Germany are being liquidated. The Stinnes interests were involved to some extent in this company, the firm name being evolved from Wegeroff and Stinnes. When the banks took over the management of the Stinnes enterprises, following the financial crisis, it was announced that support would be withdrawn from all unessential enterprises in the group. This was taken to mean that the film interests, represented by Westi and Dewesti, would receive no further financial backing.

Westi was formed with the intention of becoming an international organization. An alliance with Pathe in France covered production, distribution and exhibition on a mutual basis. The Nordwesti in Sweden was producing there. An Italian branch was also at work, and a distributing system had been opened in Great Britain.

Further developments in this situation, and their bearing on the European market, will be taken up in succeeding articles in the series now appearing in the NEWS by L. C. Moen, of the staff, who has just returned from a survey of this field.

Away from Sophistication

All of the features that I have mentioned symbolize money. They represent, too, a certain reaction away from sophistication, and too much parlor drama and sex stuff. The outdoors always gives freedom and new vitality to a movie project. Most of the big pictures in the past have had open-air settings, whether they have been historical or of the present. The camera seems to need the sweep of nature, variety and changing landscapes, to fulfill its function most inspiringly. Even "The Birth of a Nation" required the rush of horses' hoofs over the roadway to help put over the force of its assailing dramatic idea. "Robin Hood" had its great drawbridge swinging down into the sunlight, its host of knights in glittering armor sun-emblazoned, its frolicking band of outlaw knights in Sherwood forest, to give it not only breadth and beauty, but also gayety. Consider also the steady march of the early plainsmen in "The Covered Wagon," the flight of the Israelites across the sands in "The Ten Commandments," the sweep of the oars as the galleys made their way across the sea in "The Sea Hawk"—and in every instance the salient fact comes out that the natural setting has contributed to increase both the fascination and the power of these pictures. The earth, in all its scope and diversity of settings, is really the great stage of the movies.

Of sophistication there will also be an important share in the new season's attractions. "The Viennese Medley," in particular, is one of this type that will be awaited. A First National release, it is a powerful realistic story of the effects of the war in Central Europe. Conway Tearle and Anna Q. Nilsson are among the principals, and the settings are a height of decorativeness. June Mathis is supervising, with Kurt Rehfeld making his debut as director. They are taking plenty of time with this undertaking, because it is to be carried out so pretentiously.

Other war pictures like "The Big Parade" and "Havoc" promise much, and will be released early. Jack Gilbert's presence in the former, and George O'Brien in the latter will perhaps give a new edge to the present competition among prominent leading men. However, they are strikingly different personalities. As for the pictures themselves, "The Big Parade" is inclined to lightness in the treatment, whereas "Havoc" has a sternly dramatic quality.

Quite a contrast to these modern stories of conflict will be the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish, with oldtime Latin Quarter of Paris as the background. The first tests of Miss Gish indicate that she will have a charming loveliness as the heroine of this delicately romantic picture. The familiarity of the opera should have considerable to do with the film's popularity, particularly when it is presented with music chosen therefrom. The actual screen adaptation is being made from the original novel by Henri Murger, and this should materially strengthen the story.

Comedy still holds its own as a salient force in all picture-making. It will probably be used to brighten and humanize the romantic enterprises that are now forging into the foreground. Charlie Chaplin has demonstrated that unusual outdoor settings can prove attractive in comedy, as well as serious drama, in his production of "The Gold Rush." A considerable interest in this picture is due to the fact that he made it with the suggested background of Chilcothe pass.

The reaction to "The Gold Rush," especially of the stars and directors, has been unusually favorable, and the public has been crowding to the presentation at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre ever since the opening. Everybody seems to enjoy the experience of being able to laugh consistently for more than two hours. The "epical," or "deeply significant" phases of the Chaplin production, if it has such, do not appear to matter particularly so long as everyone can enjoy himself thus agreeably while in the theatre. "The Gold Rush" also offers several very telling touches of Chaplin pathos, and while I do not believe that the picture, as a whole, is artistically on a par with those Chaplin classics, "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms" or "The Kid," it is nevertheless great entertainment.

Rudolph Valentino is somewhat affected apparently by the present comedy tendency. His picture "The Black Eagle" is to lay considerable stress on humor. The period of the story has been modernized and the setting is Russia. Valentino plays a Cossack officer, who suffers some tribulations because of the women, but more importance is to be given on this occasion to the star's newly developed athletic skill. Some expert horseback riding and other stunts by him will likely be incorporated, insofar as they do not tread too closely on feats like Fairbanks performs. Vilma Banky, the Hungarian actress, whom Samuel Goldwyn discovered abroad, will play the feminine lead, and great things are already being predicted for her in "The Dark Angel." Goldwyn's final picture before joining United Artists.

President Coolidge Endorses Greater Movie Season

Plans Completed For Launching Of Campaign

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE has endorsed Greater Movie Season.

In a letter written from Swampscott, Mass., to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., President Coolidge declares:

"My attention has been called to the fact that you are taking the twenty-ninth anniversary of the moving picture industry as an occasion to inaugurate a Greater Movie Season Campaign. Such a movement to emphasize the desirability of worthy motion pictures will be of real public value. The progress that has been made in both education and entertainment in this tremendous enterprise is an outstanding achievement of the opening years of this century. I congratulate you and wish you a continuation of your success.

Very truly yours,

Sgd. CALVIN COOLIDGE."

President Coolidge's statement constitutes a signal honor for the film industry since, with the exception of Red Cross drives, no other national movement has received such official endorsement from the White House. Consummating unanimous expressions of good-will by national executives, governors, mayors, and heads of civic, industrial and social organizations, the presidential commendation establishes Greater Movie Season as a national occasion. According to advices from all over the country, the instantaneous effect has been to arouse and focus public attention upon the screen in a manner hitherto unknown, and to redouble the co-operation which newspapers and commerce generally have extended to theatres during the campaign.

How enthusiastically the industry as a whole has adopted the season is indicated by the fact that whereas at the outset the central organization attached to the Hays office set thirty-five individual campaigns as its objective, actually one hundred and twenty-one drives are in vigorous operation. More than a thousand cities and towns, large and small, are embraced in this scope; more than five thousand theatres are flying the Greater Movie Season pennant.

From many localities here the central bureau received no advice that action was even contemplated, unexpected demands for accessories and urgent co-operation reveal that, of their own accord, exhibitors have organized to put the season over.

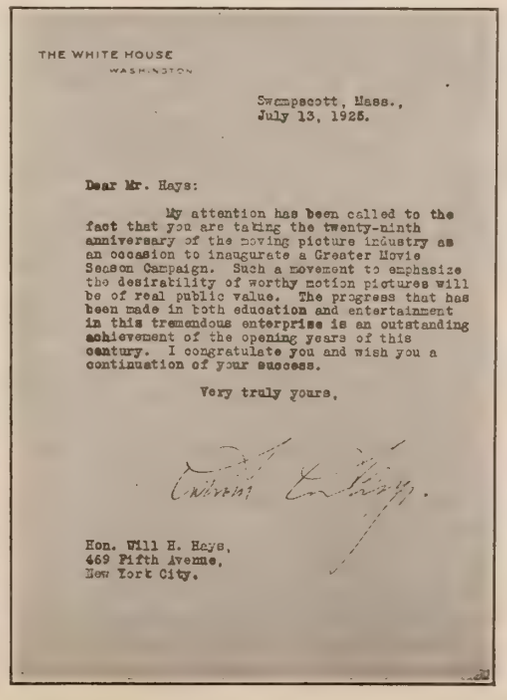
Thirty Newspaper Contests

Every phase of the campaign is marked by similar success. Thirty newspapers with an aggregate daily circulation of 3,049,000 are now conducting the Greater Movie Season essay contest that has a trip for two around the world on the Red Star liner Belgenland and vacations for two in Los Angeles and Miami as the principal national prizes. Latest additions to the list include the New York Mirror, Washington Times, Louisville Herald and Post, Oklahoma City News, Toledo News-Bee, and Wichita Beacon.

As a feature of the general opening celebrations, Monday, August 3rd, a radio pageant linking east and west has been arranged. From 10.15 P. M. to midnight, station WEAF (New York) will broadcast a special program to which famous artists of stage and screen and the combined orchestras of the Capitol, Rivoli, Rialto and Piccadilly Theatres will contribute hookups with different stations and carry this program as far west as Davenport, Iowa, while on the same evening film folks have arranged an aerial demonstration from Los Angeles with radio greetings for the fans from their favorite players as an additional attraction.

Naval co-operation secured at the commencement of activities has already gone into effect with the result that 6,500 Navy boards occupying picked street locations throughout the country carry the Greater Movie Season poster that the U. S. Navy prepared. Ninety-six War Department Theatres attached to army posts have joined in the celebration, each theatre conducting a campaign along the lines set out by the Hays office, supplemented by special advertising material from the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service.

Apart altogether from increased entertainment, increased public service to be rendered by the screen has become the keynote of many campaigns. Notably M. J. O'Toole, former president of the M.P.T.O.A. in aiding the theatres of Scranton, Pa., has stressed the educational influence of motion pictures and secured official recognition from the U. S. War Department, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and the State legislature. Another phase of this work is presented by the Stanley Theatre of Philadelphia, in the form of a huge pledge, framed and hung outside the theatre, that shows the signature of every employee from the manager to porter, guaranteeing better service to moviegoers.



The Governor of Colorado and the Mayor of Denver have been invited to head the movie parade in Denver, in which Betty Compson, Ernest Torrence and players of the "Pony Express" company on location will participate. Every dancing academy in the city will provide pretty ballerinas for floats, while several hundred cowboys, adding picturesque local color, will ride in honor of various western stars.

Headquarters Busy Spot

Greater Movie Season headquarters is the busiest place in the city. All work for the past week has been concentrated on developing plans for the monster parade which will be held Saturday morning August 1st at 10 o'clock. Estimates at this writing indicate the parade will be two and one-half miles in length with approximately forty floats. Floats are being entered by all the larger theatres. In addition to the theatres the leading commercial houses of Denver have entered their appearance either by floats or other representation. Indications to-day are that Colorado Springs will be represented by the participants of a rodeo which will be held there in the near future.

Two meetings last week between chairmen of committees working on the Greater Movie Season campaign in Kansas City and advertising managers of large Kansas City business institutions have left arrangements nearing a status of completion. Co-operation has been assured by several large business concerns. The meetings were held at the Pantages theatre and the Newman theatrette, the latter being in the basement of the Newman theatre.

Plans for parades, floats and other details in connection with the celebration will be completed in a few days. C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, succeeded in "getting over"

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Swampscott, Mass.,
July 13, 1925.

Dear Mr. Hays:

My attention has been called to the fact that you are taking the twenty-ninth anniversary of the moving picture industry as an occasion to inaugurate a Greater Movie Season Campaign. Such a movement to emphasize the desirability of worthy motion pictures will be of real public value. The progress that has been made in both education and entertainment in this tremendous enterprise is an outstanding achievement of the opening years of this century. I congratulate you and wish you a continuation of your success.

Very truly yours,

Calvin Coolidge.

FRED CUBBERLY

Gets Important New Post With F. & R.

SUPERVISION of Finkelstein & Ruben's long string of theatres in the Northwest outside the Twin City territory is in the hands of Fred Cubberly.

He was given the job of running the out-of-town theatres after he had done all the theatre buying for the F. & R. organization for more than a year.

His desk is now moved up near the head of the line in the Loeb Arcade offices in Minneapolis and he has his hands full, for he is still in a sort of general supervision of the film activities of the Twin City company.

It has been six or seven years now since Cubberly took charge of the First National office in Minneapolis and thus made his first connection with F. & R. After three or four years in this capacity he entered the short subject field as well taking hold of Educational films. A little later he acted for Finkelstein & Ruben in the establishment of F. & R. Film company, organized to handle independent features for the company and for any others who wished to use them.

At length he resigned his First National connection and began doing the theatre buying for the Northwestern string and now they have given him the job of handling the whole line.

Greater Movie Season will open in San Francisco with a week of festivities at all of the city's theatres, according to plans launched at a meeting of the Allied Amusement Industries.

Distributors of San Francisco, which will open its season during the week of August 8th, perfected the following organization, representing every branch of the industry.

Another New House for Kansas City

Kansas City is to have another new picture palace, the seventh to be announced in the past two months. The latest announcement calls for a 3,000 seat house at a location within one block of the new Warwick, to be reconstructed at Thirty-Ninth and Main streets. It is to cost upward of $200,000.

The new house is being promoted by George Trinastich, who will operate it, and R. L. Willis, who is owner of the property.

G. Edgar Smith Victim of Heart Disease

G. Edgar Smith, for fifteen years treasurer of the New Theatre Company and who was treasurer for the Whitehurst Interests for many years as well as a buyer for the American Wholesale Corporation, died at the West Baltimore General Hospital Saturday, July 18. He succumbed to heart disease and was buried at Merchantville, N. J., the home of his mother. He was 63 years of age and is survived by his mother and two sisters.

Picture Conditions Poor in East Africa

A. M. Warren, American Consul at Nairobi, Africa, reports picture conditions rather poor in that scattered farming community of 4,000 inhabitants. There are three picture houses that give performances nightly, except Sunday. On Saturday night the attendance reaches its maximum of about 100.

Rented films are imported independently by the theatres in sufficient quantity to give two changes of performances weekly. The programs usually include an American comedy of two reels, an American scientific film of one reel, a topical British film of one reel and a drama or comedy film in six reels. The admission prices range from about twenty-four cents to seventy-two cents.

Thirty Take Civil Service Quiz as Reviewers

About thirty persons took the Civil Service examinations in New York state last week, seeking later appointment to the New York State Motion Picture Commission, as reviewers. The examinations were held in the State Capital. The number of men and women were about equally divided.

The position of reviewer pays $1,600 a year outside of the metropolitan district, and $1,800 in and around New York city. It is said that there are no vacancies existing at the present time. When such occur, the person heading the list as the result of the examinations conducted last week, will receive the appointment.

Exhibitors Campaign for Sunday Shows

Exhibitors of two Missouri towns are waging educational campaigns in hope of bringing back Sunday shows in their respective communities.

J. W. Cotter of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., is conducting the fight for liberalism in that town, while in Columbia, Mo., Rex Barrett of the Cozy Theatre is showing the way back to the days of Washington and Jefferson.

An effort will be made to obtain city ordinances permitting Sunday shows. It is also probable that elections will be held in both towns.

Governor Smith to Open Radio Pageant

THE radio pageant which will inaugurate "Greater Movie Season" in New York will be formally opened by Governor Alfred E. Smith, who will broadcast from the Crystal Room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel at 10 o'clock through station W. E. A. F.

In accepting the invitation, Governor Smith said:

"The only thing that might prevent me from talking into that microphone would be a call to Albany to attend to some important official business. From the present outlook I expect to be in New York city for the next week. I shall be only too glad to open the program that night and say a few words about the movies. I heartily endorse any movement for a better era for the cinema."

Five Important Developments In Arbitration Situation

Seider-Pettijohn Debate in N. Y. Leads the List

Joseph M. Seider.

Five important developments were noted this week in connection with Arbitration, which continues to be one of the livliest topics in the industry:

1. A sharp exchange of views between Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, and Charles C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Film Board of Trade.

2. Decision of the Government not to appeal a case in which Federal Judge Bondy held that members of a trade association may withhold credit from customers under certain conditions. Advocates of the present Arbitration in the film industry declare that this is a parallel situation with the Film Board of Trade.

3. Announcement of the forthcoming complete extension of Arbitration System to Canada, where it is expected to be in full operation by October 1.

4. A week's postponement of the Apollo-Wellmont Theatre case, in the New York County Supreme Court. The Apollo Exchange seeks to compel the theatre to submit to arbitration. This case, it has been announced, will be made a test action by the exhibitor organization which is backing the Wellmont in its defense of the suit.

5. In answer to a suit filed June 24 by John Romwebber, Akron exhibitor, charging the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, Pathe, Progress Pictures, Skirboll Gold Seal Productions, and the Ohio Educational Exchanges with conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce, Squires, Saunders and Dempsey, attorneys for the defendants, have filed a demurrer charging that the case of Romwebber against the above defendants is not within the jurisdiction of the Cleveland Federal court, and furthermore that there is insufficient grounds in the charge to make a case. The court will decide whether the case has any standing or not.

C. C. Pettijohn.

The debate between Messrs. Seider and Pettijohn took place at an open meeting of the A. M. P. A., in New York, July 23, and was entirely unexpected. Mr. Seider had been invited to address the association. Mr. Pettijohn, as an A. M. P. A., member, asked permission to query Mr. Seider, and the result was a heated argument.

It will be recalled that Mr. Seider recently sent a letter to Will Hays inviting the latter to a joint debate on arbitration and the Film Boards of Trade. During the A. M. P. A. colloquy, Mr. Seider declared that the letter had not been acknowledged, to which Mr. Pettijohn rejoined that the letter had been acknowledged and a copy sent to Mr. Hays, who is in California. Mr. Seider said he had not received the acknowledgment.

Mr. Pettijohn charged that Mr. Seider "did not represent anybody," to which the latter replied that he was President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and had been unanimously elected chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Committee on Contract and Arbitration.

Admitting that he had never had any difficulty with the Film Boards of Trade, Mr. Seider contended that he was qualified to deal with the arbitration question because he had nothing personal at stake. "We are fighting for a cause," he declared. "There is no personal motive whatever behind my activities."

Mr. Pettijohn asserted that there was no complaint from any theatre owner. "They are all satisfied with the arbitration system," he added.

"We are not opposed to arbitration," Mr. Seider replied, "but we want fair arbitration predicated on a fair contract. There are four law-suits pending in every part of the country. There were six hundred theatre owners in the convention hall at Milwaukee; all six hundred voted unanimously against the present contract and your arbitration system."

Mr. Pettijohn declared there was one case in Texas that had been settled and one pending in Ohio.

Mr. Seider came back with the Wellenbrink (Wellmont) case and the Samuelson matter. Referring to the latter, the exhibitor leader declared that Samuelson asserted the case had been delayed. Mr. Pettijohn answered that he was ready to try it "tomorrow."

"If you want to determine the legality of the arbitration clause or whether or not there is restraint of trade, go to court—go to it," he continued.

Mr. Seider replied: "You, as an exponent of arbitration, tell us to go to court. You have left us no other alternative. We have already done so."

Then followed an extended argument over the status of the negotiations between the exhibitor organization and the Hays body on revision of the contract.

Mr. Pettijohn declared that Nathan Burkan took up redrafting of the contract with any of the Hays office. He added that Mr. Burkan had gone to Europe and Gabriel L. Hess, of the Hays legal staff was on vacation; hence nothing was done.

Mr. Seider rejoined that Mr. Burkan had written him (Seider) a letter in which he said that Mr. Hess refused to consider the contract submitted by Burkan and informed him that the theatre owners had practically agreed to a new contract. On the contrary, said Mr. Seider, the negotiations had not been concluded. Quoting Mr. Burkan: "You can see by this that we did not get very far with them."

When a motion was made to extend a vote of thanks by the A. M. P. A. to Mr. Seider for his address, Mr. Pettijohn seconded it.

The decision by Judge Bondy was handed down in New York last May in the case of the Government vs. the Fur Dressers' and Fur Dyers' Association, Inc. The Government's petition alleging conspiracy in restraint of trade, was dismissed, Judge Bondy held that members of a trade association may agree to withhold credit from customers who have not paid bills long overdue, without violating the law, provided such practice "does not go beyond the reasonable requirements to correct the abuses which have crept into the trade."

Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, counsel for the association, have been advised that the Attorney-General has decided not to appeal the decision. The time limit for such appeal by the Government has expired.

Judge Bondy held, in part, that the Association fixed no prices, but merely regulated the business of members in a manner tending to promote legitimate trade rather than restrain it.

Supporters of the present arbitration system in the picture business declare that the decision virtually legalized withholding of credit from exhibitors by the Film Boards of Trade in connection with certain arbitration cases.

All recognized picture distributors in Canada will have the Arbitration Clause included in their printed forms of booking contract as outlined by the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada,

Theatre Circuits Extending Rapidly

Seven More Houses for Famous Players—Important Deals in Jersey, Michigan, New England and Texas

NEW YORK STATE, Michigan, the Pacific Northwest, Baltimore, New England, New Jersey, Canada, and Texas figured this week in important news of theatre circuit activities.

Famous Players-Lasky has acquired a half interest in six houses upstate through a deal with W. W. Farley of Schenectady. Paramount gets an interest in the four theatres which Mr. Farley owns in that city—the State, which cost upwards of $400,000; the Strand, the Albany and the Barcli, all located in the business center of Schenectady. Two houses in Catskill are included in the deal. The four Schenectady theatres were recently acquired by Mr. Farley a few weeks ago, when he bought the interests of William Shirley and William Rafferty, with whom he had been associated under the firm name of Farash Theatres, Inc.

The Catskill houses were also acquired recently by Mr. Farley and include the Community, formerly operated by M. E. Silberstein and another theatre which was run by William Smalley. There is a report that Famous Players will also enter Albany and either buy or build a theatre in that city in the near future.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. has acquired the Russell Theatre at Ottawa, Ontario, and will operate it under a varying policy of pictures, vaudeville and stage plays. This makes the third of the former Ambrose Small Theatres in Ontario which have been recently acquired, the others being the Grand, London, Ontario, and the Grand, Kingston.

In Detroit, an extensive building program, said to involve $10,000,000 and the construction of six new houses, was announced by Charles H. Miles, who operates the Miles, Regent and Ferry Field. The program has for its aim the placing of a Miles theatre within easy reach of every Detroit neighborhood. The projected theatres will have a combined seating capacity of 20,000, according to the announcement.

The first to be built will be called the New Miles and will stand on Adams avenue opposite the Tuller Hotel. It will seat 3,500. This will be the only downtown unit of the new group. The rest will be neighborhood theatres. None will seat less than 3,000 and two have been designed to take care of 4,000 each.

In the Pacific Northwest, reports are current that William Fox is negotiating to take over the important Jensen & Von Herberg circuit. The Northwest Film Journal says that Fox has made an offer indentical with that Famous tendered, but that Fox would meet the demands of Jensen & Von Herberg for cash.

Although Harry M. Crandall this week specifically denied that an interest in his chain had been sold to the Stanley Company, reports continue that Fox is interested in, or is negotiating for an interest in the Crandall circuit.

In Baltimore, the report is persistent that the Stanley Company will build one or more theatres in the Maryland metropolis. A wire to the Stanley offices remained unanswered at press time. It would not be surprising, however, if the story turned out to be substantially correct. It is known that several of the larger companies have contemplated building there.

New England attracted attention because of the activities of the group headed by Arthur S. Friend. They are already building a large theatre in New Haven, Conn., which is to be the first of a chain of eight in the New England States. A site has been secured on State street, the main business thoroughfare of New London, Conn., where the second house will be built. The land cost the syndicate about $130,000, it is reported, and this, plus the cost of the building, will make the project total about $630,000. The seating capacity of the theatre will be about 2,000.

There were two important developments in New Jersey. The Fabian Enterprises have taken over the Capitol, at Passaic, the largest theatre in Jersey, under a 21-year lease. The report was confirmed by Abe Fabian, who said that an arrangement had been made satisfactory to the Harris Brothers, who are the controlling stockholders of the Capitol. This brings the number of Fabian theatres up to 21, and they will open three more in the Fall.

Joseph Stern announced this week that he had bought land in Red Bank, N. J., and would build a 2,000-seat house there to cost $300,000. Vaudeville, pictures and dramatic shows will be given. Mr. Stern also has under construction the following houses: Royal Theatre, Bloomfield, capacity 1925, cost $500,000, to open Nov. 1; Ritz theatre, Newark, capacity 2,000, cost $400,000, to open Dec. 1; Sanford theatre, Irvington, capacity 1,800, cost $350,000, to open March 1.

In Texas Dent-Musselman, Inc., controlling more than 15 houses, have made a deal with Dye, Ford & Rogers for supervision of the latter houses, including the Strand; Mission and Deandi at Amarillo, and the Olympic, Strand, Mission and Palace at Wichita Falls.

Dent-Musselman recently completed negotiations for the management of the Fair at Amarillo from J. Levy and the Strand at Wichita Falls from the Strand theatre company. Henry Ford will be city manager at Wichita Falls and Ross Rogers at Amarillo.

Sam Bullock Resigns as Ohio Field Manager

SAM BULLOCK has resigned as field manager for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio. He resigned because of poor health. He has been field representative for the M. P. T. O. of Ohio ever since the organization was formed, and before that, he was father to every exhibitor organization ever formed in Cleveland.

For many years Bullock has been hammering at the idea that only in unity of purpose and unity of action is there any hope for the exhibitor. He tried to weld the Cleveland exhibitors into a local organization to accomplish favorable legislation. He fostered the slide plan for financing local exhibitor organizations. And he took off his coat and went to work to line up all the exhibitors in Ohio for the state and national associations. Bullock will be sadly missed from the ranks of active workers. It is hoped that a period of rest will put him in shape to take up the cudgels once again in the near future. Bullock's resignation was accepted by the board of directors who held a meeting in Columbus last Tuesday.

Important Developments in Arbitration Situation

Toronto, by October 1st, according to formal announcement just made from the headquarters of the Canadian distributors association.

This arbitration clause is already effective in the contracts of a number of leading film exchanges in the Dominion and its full force is now felt in those Provinces where Film Boards of Trade have been established, these having been organized at Toronto, Ontario, and Montreal, Quebec.

It is pointed out in the new contracts that the provisions of arbitration are to be construed according to the laws of Ontario where there is a code of statutes designed to provide for private arbitration of selling contracts. This code was primarily intended for the use of grain companies and growers but the provisions therein are applicable in every degree to disputes in any line of business, it is stated.

Arson Charged Following Freeport, Me., Fire

Gasoline enough to blow up the entire block is alleged to have been found by the authorities following a fire in a bowling alley which also partly destroyed the Nordica Theater in Freeport last Tuesday morning. As a result Lewis and Nikilos Kesaris and Henry Morin, all of Lewiston, are being held under $4,000 bonds each on charges of arson.

The fire started in the bowling alley situated under the Nordica Theater and was well under way when firemen arrived. Four jugs of gasoline are alleged to have been found in the burned area and it is also said by the authorities that gasoline had been spilt over the floor.

They are to appear in the Municipal Court July 31. The theater was named after Madam Lillian Nordica world famous singer.

Nat Beier Named Warners' New York Manager

Nat Beier has been named manager of Warner Brothers New York exchange, succeeding Robert S. Horsley, resigned. Beier in his new position will also continue to exercise supervision over the New Jersey territory. He was appointed New Jersey manager a few weeks ago. Beier is a veteran of the picture industry and an old time Warnerite.

Independence Week To Be Held In Month of October

M. P. T. O. A. and I. M. P. A. Join Forces For Drive

INDEPENDENCE Week will be celebrated in the theatres of the country beginning Sunday, October 18. This was determined upon at an important meeting this week of the Board of Trade and Commerce, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and a committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America.

Present at the meeting on behalf of the M. P. T. O. A. were Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the national board; Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass.; A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington, D. C.; and L. M. Sagal, of New Haven, Conn. Representing the independent producers and distributors were Frederick H. Elliott, General Manager of the I. M. P. A.; W. E. Shallenberger, A. Carlos, Jack Bellman and Harry Thomas.

The country will be zoned into six districts, to which will be sent special sales and publicity men. The statement issued by the two committees and signed by those named above follows in part:

"The Committee endorsed the various activities carried out by the Committees in charge in connection with Board of Trade and Commerce functioning. The producers stating that the results of the formation of the Board were actually in operation and were of a most gratifying nature. Independent product was getting its chance; and the inroads of Monopoly upon this Industry was being slowly but surely checked.

"A resolution by the Committee inaugurating an Independence Week, beginning Sunday, October 18th, across the American continent, was unanimously adopted; and this Committee immediately proceeded to its Independence campaign by zoning America into six districts, to which will be sent special sales and publicity men, augmented by auxiliary staffs furnished by the Independent producers to make Independence Week known to the peoples of America and register for the theatre owners and producers during that week a record week's business.

"Preceding Independence Week the public will be introduced to the cause and purpose of Independence, to the Independent theatre owners backing Independence and to Independent product and their producers.

"Each theatre in each of these zones will be visited many times and Independent product offered the theatre owner together with the greatest publicity campaign, national and local, to make the Theatre Owner in our Industry Independent, and to thereby assure for the people of America that their screens shall remain free for them to control through the patronage of what they desire upon their screens.

"Independent producers promise that the theatre owners shall be given product of such quality and importance for presentation during Independence Week, that no longer will the Theatre Owner question the marketable value of Independent product.

"The public will be told that it is the Independent product which has always furnished them with the entertainment they still talk about in pictures; and that Independent product will continue to make Picture History in Motion Pictures."

Chadwick Sees Wall Street as Menace

Independent President Declares Production and Exhibition Have Become Secondary to Stock Market Rigging

Declaring motion pictures the new plaything of Wall Street, I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Association, asserted in an address to members of the association at a meeting in the Hotel Astor, Wednesday, that production, distribution and exhibition of films are being made secondary considerations.

"The main idea of the manipulators today is rigging the stock market," he said. "The whole thing is a repetition of what happened in the steel business, the automobile industry and in other lines where the American ideal of industrial combination and centralization lent itself to the purposes of money power. Steel, automobiles and the other big industries have been stabilized and standardized and so Wall street needs a new toy.

Playing for Market Rise

"Motion pictures supply that need, so they are going about the work of playfully rigging the market for an overnight rise of anywhere from ten to fifteen points. In order to do this, they have to have something to build on and theatre control satisfies that necessity. It is all being done to create a structure on which they can sell stock issues to the public, thereby rigging the market.

"It stands to reason that men who can make millions simply by rigging the stock market do not care about the relatively small profits to be made out of legitimate picture production, distribution and exhibition.

"Out in Los Angeles, where picture production is the main thought, they believe that the picture is the thing. They know nothing whatever of the distribution or exhibition phases which, in the final analysis, are the really important ones. For no matter how good a picture may be, unless it is distributed and exhibited it is worthless. And these producers who are making pictures and turning them over to the big companies honestly believe they are creating fine things, individualistic and artistic.

"As practical picture men and business men, we know that this is not true. Already the dominant forces of this industry have standardized picture production to the point where individuality no longer counts. It is a repetition of what happened to the individuals in steel and automobiles. They simply become spokes in the big wheel of centralization, from the highest to the lowest among them. And the same thing is becoming true in the picture production field.

"It is a regrettable thing that such things are permitted to happen in this country, for industrial combination and centralization stifle the opportunity and individuality of our children and the future generations. And some day we will pay heavily for it.

"The independent steel companies and the other industries which were the playthings of Wall Street lost their individuality because they did not fight—and the success of the independent picture industries, production, distribution and exhibition, depends entirely on the amount of fight they put up. I cannot too strongly urge upon these elements and especially the members of this association the necessity of meeting the opposition with the same weapons they use against us. We must meet them with the same forces and our forces must be equal to theirs in numbers and intelligence. It is a game in which we must have the same number of players as they have and it is up to us to get them.

Sacrifices Must Be Made

"To do this it will be necessary for us to make sacrifices, to forget selfish interests and to put all of our power into the punch for defense and independence."

Mr. Chadwick, who is president of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has just returned from the coast, and this was the first meeting of the Independent Association over which he had presided since the gathering in Milwaukee.

ATKINSON JOINS "ROXY" CIRCUIT

Associates With New York Chain

WILLIAM E. ATKINSON, vice-president and general manager of Metro-Goldwyn, is to become associated with Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin and S. L. Rothafel in the erection of a circuit of mammonth motion picture theatres in Greater New York, the first of which to be called the "Roxy," will be built on the plot at 50th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City, with a seating capacity of 6,212 seats.

Atkinson was one of the prime movers in the affairs of the Metro Pictures Corporation for many years, entering that organization eleven years ago as field representative.

Upon his return to New York, following an absence of several weeks, Mr. Atkinson made the following statement:

"On my return to New York, from an extended vacation, Sawyer and Lubin invited me to become associated with them in their undertaking with Mr. Rothafel. While I naturally regret severing a business relationship which has lasted almost eleven years and which has been a source of great pleasure to me, due to the excellent men with whom I have been associated, a careful study of the enormous theatre project planned for, influenced me to tender my resignation as vice-president and general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. I expect to take up my new work in August. It is my sincere belief that the erection of the "Roxy" at 50th Street and 7th Avenue, the world's largest motion picture theatre as the first link in the circuit of Roxy houses to be placed in carefully chosen locations in New York, Brooklyn and the Bronx, will revolutionize motion picture theatre history in the outlying districts of New York, at the same time bringing to the great host of local screen followers the type of entertainment which in some sections they have long been denied."

Skouras Declares Dividend

Report of the St. Louis Concern Shows Healthy Business Condition for Quarter

THE Board of Directors of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., St. Louis, declared a dividend of 40 cents per share on its Class B stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share of the Class A issue. The dividends are payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 25.

A report of the company's business for the three months' period ended July 3, 1925, shows a net income before deducting federal income taxes but after allowing for interest, depreciation and running expenses, etc., of $67,214.50. For the first quarter of the year the net earnings totaled $58,979.17, bringing the total for the first six months of the year to $126,193.67. This is at the rate of $10.09 per share on the 25,000 shares of A stock outstanding or 3 2/3 times the dividend requirements.

The statement shows a liquid condition of $426,596.17 in quick assets to meet current liabilities of $116,544.67, leaving a working capital of $310,051.50. The net worth as of July 3 was $2,111,159.44. The quick assets included $315,131.23 in cash.

"The outlook for the company for the next six months appears very good" the report stated. "We have equipped ourselves with many of the best super films on the market and feel that these will bring us in large earnings. Announcement of the products will be made in the near future.

"Progress on the new theatre at Seventh and Locust streets is very satisfactory. At present the contractors are two weeks ahead of schedule, and the foundation is about one-third complete. Steel will start being erected around August 15."

The A stock closed the week on July 25 at 43 a new high level and an increase for the week of 2 points.

Labor Troubles Loom in Industry

Regular Annual Controversies Are Under Way in Many Cities, With Atlanta in Most Serious Plight

WITH the approach of the new season and the termination of old agreements, the usual labor controversies are looming among theatre managements, musicians and operators unions in various sections of the United States.

Up to the present the most serious threatened difficulty seems to be around Atlanta, where a possible lockout of all employees of Atlanta picture houses loomed last Saturday when it was learned that machine operators, stage hands and others connected with the industry were asking increases in salaries and making other demands.

"Operators are asking for a 20 per cent increase, and other employees are demanding advances in proportion," Willard C. Patterson, representing the Theatre Managers' Association of Atlanta, said. "We are unable to meet these demands as we were to grant those of the musicians, and are negotiating to try to avert any crisis. We hope that nothing serious will result."

G. R. Swords, operator at the Rialto theatre, is head of the local branch of the I. A. T. S. E. A., operators' union.

Members and directors of orchestras of practically all large motion picture houses in Atlanta were given notice by managers of the theatres that after two weeks their services would not be needed.

The climax in the wholesale discharge of musicians, all of whom are members of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, came with announcement that Alex Keese, director of the Howard orchestra had received his notice. Enrico Leide, director of the Metropolitan, received his notice earlier.

Williard C. Patterson, speaking for the Theatre Managers' Association declared local theatres have been "forced to take such action because of unreasonable and impossible demands made by the Atlanta Federation of Musicians."

On Friday of last week a joint meeting was held of the Atlanta theatre managers, representatives of the Federation of Music, and the members of the Motion Picture Operators Union. At this meeting, which took place in the offices of the Atlanta Film Board of Trade, in the Haas-Howell building, the musicians asked for an increase for organists, and an increase in scale for several theaters. The operators are asking a 20 per cent increase in salary, and are also asking that the Metropolitan and Howard theatres employ three operators instead of two, the work to be divided evenly among them.

It is the consensus of opinion that the time is not opportune for any advance in salaries, and it is understood that a very decided stand will be taken by the managers, that no increase shall be made in any salary in any department of any Atlanta house.

Theatre managers participating in this meeting were J. J. Franklin, district Supervisor for Southern Enterprises, Sig Samuels and Williard C. Patterson, of the Metropolitan; Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand; Louis Haase, of the Atlanta; James Jackson, of the Tudor, Thomas G. Coleman, of the Cameo and Alamo No. 1; Matt Whitham, of the Alamo No. 2; Martin Semon, of the Forsyth theatre; W. T. Murray, of the Rialto theatre, and Howard Waugh, of the Howard theatre. Mr. Patterson presided over the meeting.

The annual controversy with the operators' union now is confronting Kansas City exhibitors. This year the operators are demanding an increase of 30 cents a hour—from $1.45 to $1.75. Several increases have been granted the operators in the last few years, but this year sentiment among exhibitors is decidedly against the increase. A meeting between exhibitors and operators probably will be held in a few days.

Motion picture machine operators in the New Portland, Maine and Casco motion picture houses are out on strike with the employees of the Loew Circuit for alleged violation of contracts. These two local houses are the only ones to date affected. Pickets were stationed in front of each theatre and while the union denies that police have stopped these others say it has been done.

Survey Brings Clean Pictures Plea

Interesting Facts Are Revealed in Questionnaire Issued by Loew's Warfield in San Francisco

LOEW'S Warfield Theatre in San Francisco, operated by the West Coast Theatres Inc., has just completed a survey of likes and dislikes among the motion picture theatre goers of that city.

Every differing neighborhood, every class of inhabitant, every varying portion of the business and financial districts of the western city was included in the survey which was made by Therese Fitzgerald, newspaper woman, press agent and fiction writer—a woman with an understanding of and an appreciation for this work.

The outstanding feature of the entire survey, a canvass which covered more than a thousand varying peoples, was "let the pictures be clean—sacrifice, if need be, some of the thrill so that we may take our youngsters to the theatre."

Perhaps one of the most interesting facts revealed by the survey was—20 percent of those who attend Loew's Warfield Theatre are attracted, for in answer to the question marked "If so—what attracts you,"—by the policy of the theatre for they answered,—"It's a habit and because the Warfield is the best show in town."

Some months ago Loew's Warfield took for an advertising slogan, "San Francisco's Greatest Entertainment," and every piece of copy turned out of the publicity department since has borne this line.

Loew's Warfield, in its advertising campaign uses 60 percent newspaper display space, 30 percent billboards with the remaining 10 percent of their advertising appropriation covering a tie-up with radio K P O, the dash boards of the Market street car line and exploitation stunts. Yet the answers of those interviewed gave practically an equal division among all the various mediums. Friendly advice and conversation that showmen term "mouth-to-mouth" advertising, ranked high in swaying a doubtful theatre goer.

"What sort of pictures do you like best?" brought almost a constant repetition of "Any kind, just so they are clean." If any advantage was to be placed over another, "Romantic Drama" had the edge with the added advise of "but, no costumes." The leading star vote had Colleen Moore leading the field with Norma Shearer second and Norma Talmadge a close third. Among the men, and this was unusual because Loew's Warfield had been the topic of conversation between the investigator and those interviewed, Tom Mix was the favorite and the Mix pictures are never shown at the Warfield. Milton Sills was next with hardly any other choice for a male star. Harry Langdon led in the comedy leads.

Less than a half of one percent of those interviewed could give an intelligent answer to the question, "Do you understand the picture situation." The investigator augmented this with, "Do you know how the theatres secure the pictures, where they are made and what stars work for certain producing companies and what theatres release the pictures of these stars and producers."

This fact brings home the thought that more serious informative publicity should be given by the theatre press men as to the releasing companies, the producers and under what banner a star is playing. The investigator reported that the average person was interested in this phase of motion picture situation but had never read anything concerning it.

Eight and a fraction percent were attracted to Loew's Warfield by the music and stage entertainment. This is considered a fair average for this house which makes a feature of their Fanchon and Marco stage presentations and the Lipschultz and the Music Master orchestral offerings.

The entire survey cost the theatre less than $60.00 and this included both the time of the investigator and the printing of the questionnaire. A trifling sum, in the opinion of General Manager A. M. Bowles of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Frank Whitbeck in charge of publicity and exploitation, for a new and interesting insight to just what the present and prospective patrons of Loew's Warfield Theatre wanted in their entertainment, in the appeal that was to be made to them to gain their patronage and the manner in which they were to be treated after they had spent their money at the box office.

F. B. O. HAS SURPRISE STAR
Tyler to Have Lead in Westerns

F. B. O. has revealed the identity of its new surprise star. He is Tom Tyler, twenty-two years of age and an athlete of considerable ability. He is to assume the leading role in a series of Western pictures.

Tyler is one of the star athletes of the Los Angeles Athletic Club team. He is said to be credited with American and world's records in weight-lifting in two events—the one-hand "clean and jerk" at 240½ pounds, and the two-hand "snatch" at 213 pounds.

In addition to his ability as a strong man, Tyler is said to be an expert horseman, and a football, track and field star of note. He is not new to the screen as he has appeared in a number of productions, among them Elinor Glyn's "The Only Thing." He has supported Fred Thomson, has played several roles in Joe Brown productions and was featured in "The Midnight Express."

"Let's Go Gallagher" is the tentative title of the first Tyler production. It is described as a fast moving Western with plenty of action. A number of other stories are being lined up for the new star.

Independent Association Boom
Producers, Distributors and Exchanges Are Taking Organization Memberships

FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT, general manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, makes the announcement that within sixty days virtually all independent producers, distributors and exchanges in the industry will be members of the association. He bases his forecast on the number of new members recently elected and upon reports from seventeen Regional Directors who have been making a survey of the situation under his direction.

Since the election of Elliott as General Manager, June 15, thirty-five new members have been added to the organization, which now includes twenty-six producer-distributor members and sixty-four exchanges, a total of ninety organizations. The association has representation in every key center.

New members taken in since July 15 include:—First Graphic Exchange, Albany; Franklin Film Co., Boston; Franklin Film Co., New Haven; Progress Pictures, Inc., Charlotte, N. C.; Progress Pictures, Inc., Indianapolis; Progress Pictures, Inc., Oklahoma City; Skirboll Gold Seal Productions, Inc., Cincinnati; Renown Pictures, Buffalo; Independent Films, Inc., New Haven; American Feature Films, New Haven; Celebrated Players Film Exchange, Indianapolis; Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, Indianapolis; Pen and Pencil Films, New York; Imperial Pictures, Philadelphia; Astor Productions Inc., Boston; Erwin S. Kleeblatt Press, Inc., New York Associate Member.

Elliott declares that the product being offered by the members of his association compares favorably with any which is being marketed to exhibitors for the new season.

"Our members," he declares, "realize that without good product they cannot hope to compete for play dates, regardless of how well disposed towards them exhibitors may be. Consequently they have gone to extraordinary expense in procuring suitable stories, stars and directors for their programs.

"The Independent producer, distributor and exchangeman all feel that this is to be their big year and they have spared no expense in making their pictures par with the best of them. I do not think anyone can dispute the fact that Independent pictures for 1925–26 season are bigger and better than at any time in the history of the business.

"Our members are sincerely trying to give exhibitors the best product obtainable and, with the support which members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have pledged them, they will be encouraged to even greater efforts in the future."

Noted Title Writers Sign M-G-M Contract

Katherine Hilliker and her husband, Captain H. H. Caldwell have been signed to a joint long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as title writers. Under this contract they will not be associated on the same pictures, but will work separately for the first time. They have titled many of the leading pictures of the past.

Paramount Tossers Beat the Metro-Goldwyn

The Metro-Goldwyn baseball team suffered its first defeat in four starts this season when they were humbled by the Paramount Pep Club at the Catholic Protectory oval in New York last Saturday 7 to 2.

Sweeney, pitching for Paramount allowed only six hits, while Borack was touched for eight. Sweeney fanned eleven and Borack ten. Claude Keator, center fielder for Paramount starred with three hits in four trips to the plate. He was also credited with three runs. Max Kusel was the Metro star with two hits out of three times up.

The game marked the second victory of Paramount in two starts. They previously defeated Fox by a 10 to 4 score.

Oscar Neufeld is Named on Contract Committee

Oscar Neufeld, president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade, has been elected chairman of the equitable contract committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association. Joe Klein and Jack Bellman, of New York, are the other members of the committee.

The committee of which Mr. Neufeld is chairman will meet with a committee appointed at the Detroit meeting of the board of directors of the M.P.T.O.A. to draft an independent contract which will in all probability be adopted for the 1926-27 season.

New Companies Launched in New York State

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week, included the following: Arthur Kober, Inc., capitalized at $15,000, with Arthur Kober, Henry I. Myers, New York city, and Ruth Tree, of Hollis; Manlove Amusement Corporation, $15,000, Benjamin Guttman, Jennie Guttman, Brooklyn; Israel Sablove, New York; Mineola Theatre, Inc., Mineola, $150,000, Ralph W. Latham, Alexander D. Latham, J. Alfred Valentine, of Mineola; 2404 Amusement Co., Inc., capitalization not stated, Max Sheinart, Brooklyn; Frieda V. Goldstein, Tessie Goldberg, New York City.

Fox Reported Negotiating for Three Important Theatre Chains

WILLIAM FOX has been negotiating to take over the Mark Strand chain of theatres, it was learned this week from an authoritative source. It was said Mr. Fox made an offer for the chain in conferences with Moe Mark, but that an agreement could not be reached on price. In some quarters it was said negotiations were already off.

The Mark Strand Corporation, besides controlling the New York and Brooklyn Strand theatres, a house in Albany, and a new theatre to be constructed there, has three houses in Troy, N. Y., one each in Quincy, Mass., Lynn, Mass., and Worcester, Mass., and has an interest in houses in Syracuse and Buffalo.

It was pointed out that Mr. Fox, if he obtained the circuit, would have an important Broadway outlet, besides theatres located in other strategic points.

It was also reported that Fox was negotiating for the Jensen & Von Herberg circuit in the Pacific Northwest. This follows reports that Famous Players was making overtures to buy control of the chain, and it was said Fox had made the same offer as Famous Players, except that Fox offered to meet the demands of J. & von H. for cash.

In the trade the report was given considerable credence, because Fox has already bought a 40% interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., and it was pointed out he might very likely be seeking a further outlet in the Far West.

Still another report of the Fox theatre extension activities was linked with the Crandall Circuit in Washington, D. C., for which Mr. Fox was said to be negotiating. None of these reports could be confirmed.

Shallenberger Reviews Independence

Arrow Chief Sees Failure for Smaller Exhibitors Unless They Cooperate Fully With Producers

DR. W. E. SHALLENBERGER, leading figure among the independent producers and distributors of motion pictures and a pioneer in the industry, sees a very definite handwriting on the wall unless the present movement of the independent producers and distributors with the cooperation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners attains its objective. That objective, according to the President of Arrow Pictures Corporation is the separation of the producing end entirely from the exhibition end. He sees as the proper stimulant to box office activity the division of the two natural component parts of the industry.

Dr. Shallenberger is a very strong advocate of the "live and let live" policy. He has no objection to what he terms the "trust" companies, provided they will not interfere with the independents; that they will continue on their way without molestation of the smaller companies. He sees only the stifling of competition in what he terms "the methods now being employed to crush the independent market."

Along this line Dr. Shallenberger says:

"This country has grown too large for any one-man or group to control any particular branch of our industrial and commercial life. The independent producer of motion pictures asks that he be permitted to enter into legitimate competition with other organizations and that price and quality of product be the determining factors of success. The spirit of live and let live is too thoroughly American to be killed by any group or organization or individual.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger.

"The exhibitor whose theatre is his only means of income and livelihood is vitally concerned with the policy of the open door. With the present tendency of the large picture companies corralling theatres, it is only a question of time, if they be permitted to continue, when the independent exhibitor will be extinct.

"There are enough independent theatres in the United States, who, if they booked independent pictures in the same numbers as they have booked trust pictures in the past, could, within six months bring about an entire change of present and possible future conditions so that they need never fear dictation or possible ownership at the hands of the larger interests."

Advocating the independent picture, Dr. Shallenberger points to the fact that the expenses of the independent who has not the large overhead staff to maintain, and who has the same good talent available as the big national companies for the production of pictures, can naturally make as good pictures as the big fellow and at considerably less expense.

Continuing, he says:

"In the final analysis in the determining of price values which every exhibitor must

Gloria Gould to Launch New Embassy

Society Leader to Take Charge of Premiere of Latest Broadway House; Has Interesting Plans

SOMETHING of a new experiment in motion picture exhibition came to light this week with the announcement that Gloria Gould, society leader and daughter of George J. and Edith Kingdom Gould, will have charge of the showing at the Embassy theatre on Broadway of "The Merry Widow."

This house, an intimate theatre containing but 600 seats, all reserved, is now under construction by Metro-Goldwyn and will be ready to open late in August, it is expected. Major Edward Bowes is supervising the details of construction and decoration, and the house will be unique in many respects. It is near the Palace theatre, between 46th and 47th streets on Broadway.

Miss Gould, who in private life is the wife of Henry A. Bishop, Jr., a young New York stock broker, is the first woman to be in full charge of all the activities connected with the presentation and management of a Broadway motion picture theatre. She will be no mere figurehead, but has many novel and striking ideas which she will put into execution. She has been an ardent "movie fan" for years, and the move at the Embassy represents the fulfillment of a dream of long standing.

Primarily, Miss Gould has felt that there is a need for a greater classification of theatres, just as exists in the legitimate. Believing that there exists a discriminating audience that will respond to a suitable appeal, she has long wanted to conduct a small motion picture theatre along so-called "society" lines. In pursuance of this policy, some of the ideas to be carried out at the Embassy will include the following:

The entire personnel of the theatre will be composed of women, even to the musicians, ushers, and the like. In addition to its value as a novelty, Miss Gould firmly believes that women are more efficient than men, and will provide her with a more smooth-running organization. It is also in line with her conviction that every woman should be self-supporting, regardless of her social position.

There will lbe no "presentation" or supporting program in the usual sense at the Embassy. The feature will stand on its own feet, unsupported by surrounding vaudeville or short subjects. There will be an overture, and perhaps other musical numbers, but no prologues or atmospheric presentations.

There will be but one performance each evening, and perhaps three matinees a week—probably Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday.

The house will be run at a two dollar top—and bottom. Thus it will be seen that the whole appeal will be along the lines of making the Embassy a "smart" institution, unique among picture theatres.

The statement has frequently been made by critics of the screen that progress would require that theatres stop trying to appeal to all classes of persons, and that motion pictures be made of varying types to appeal to these varying audiences.

The plan laid down for the operation of the Embassy will be an interesting experiment in this direction, and if it proves successful it is not unlikely that it would pave the way for similar houses in other large centers.

The appointment of society leaders to the positions of hostesses in charge of intimate motion picture playhouses promises to lend increased attraction to pre-view showings, and insures brilliant premieres in addition. The opening of the Embassy under Miss Gould's management promises in particular to be a gala social affair, brilliant with literary folk, screen and stage stars, with society matrons and debutantes acting as ushers and program girls. It is prophesized in this connection that society leaders will play a prominent part in the little theatre film movement already begun in England and rapidly mounting in favor in this country.

Lubliner and Trinz Sign Louis Kramer

LUBLINER and Trinz have signed Louis P. Kramer to serve as their director of publicity and advertising. He will have charge of the exploitation of more than twenty-five big houses, including some of the finest in America.

Lilyan Tashman is Signed by Metropolitan

Lilyan Tashman has been signed to a three year contract by Metropolitan Pictures and in future will be seen in featured roles exclusively in productions to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation. The new contract assures her roles in pictures to be produced by Cecil B. De Mille, Hunt Stromberg, Al Christie, Frances Marion and George Melford.

Valentino Picture Title is Again Changed

Another change in title is announced for Rudolph Valentino's first starring vehicle for United Artists, which went into production this week. It will be released as "The Lone Eagle." The previous change was in conflict with another production being made by United Artists.

Five additions to the cast for "The Lone Eagle" were also announced. They are Louise Dresser, Carrie Clark Ward, James Marcus, Captain Albert Conti and Eric Mayne. Clarence Brown is directing.

Anne Cornwall Leading Lady With Banks

Anne Cornwall has the leading role opposite Monty Banks in the Associated Exhibitors' feature comedy, "Keep Smiling," which was directed by Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt from a story provided by Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman. The picture is a Monty Banks Pictures Corporation production.

Colvin Brown Off for Brief Tour

COLVIN W BROWN, vice-president in charge of production for Film Booking Offices has started on a tour which will take him to a number of exchanges. He departed July 24th for Chicago, Minneapolis and Detroit, but will visit other cities before returning. The trip is being made in the interest of the company's product for the coming Season.

Two Thousand Extras in Mix Picture

Tom Mix required the services of two thousand extras for the making of "The Lucky Horseshoe," his first picture for the Fox Film Corporation since his return from Europe. The picture is now being made on the west coast with Billie Dove in the leading feminine role and a supporting cast which includes Malcolm White, J. Farrell MacDonald, Clarissa Selwyn and twelve beautiful Hollywood girls. J. G. Blystone is directing "The Lucky Horseshoe."

First National Purchases the Molnar Novel

First National has purchased screen rights to "Prisoners," the new novel by Franz Molnar, the Viennese playwright, whose "The Devil," "The Swan," and "Fashions for Men," have been produced in New York. "Prisoners" is the only Molnar novel translated into English and published in this country.

De Mille Signs Lillian Rich for Long Term

Lillian Rich has signed a five year contract with Cecil B. De Mille. Her first picture will be in the feminine lead in Rod La Rocque's starring vehicle, "Red Dice," on which Director Paul Sloane is scheduled to start shooting in August. In the meantime De Mille has loaned Miss Rich to Christie for a featured part in "Seven Days," which is now being filmed.

Byron Morgan is Signed by Paramount

Byron Morgan, well known as an author, has signed a long term contract with Paramount whereby the latter will have exclusive rights to his stories for a number of years. He has departed Hollywood for New York to write a screen story for Bebe Daniels.

Among Morgan's latest stories for Paramount were "The Air Mail," "Code of the Sea" and "The Lucky Devil." He wrote several of the starring vehicles for the late Wallace Reid.

Fire Threatens the Sets in Universal City

Fire which broke out last week at Universal City threatened several sets, but the heavy loss was averted through the prompt action of Battalion Chief George A. Kelly, who directed forty firemen in the fight. These firemen at the time were playing roles for Universal in "The Still Alarm."

Scenes from "Lightnin'" the John Golden stage play adapted for the screen by Frances Marion and produced by Fox Film Corp.

Seider Talks Before the Kiwanis Club

Joseph M. Seider, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey addressed a meeting of the Kiwanis Club and the Board of Directors of the ersey organization at Toms River last Tuesday in which he described the mechanism of the motion picture industry and the exhibition branch in particular. In concluding his talk Seider offered the screens of New Jersey for any local meritorious work contemplated. Following the address by Seider, Isadore Hirshblond, Toms River exhibitor was lauded by Rev. Dr. Rowland Nichols who declared that only on very rare occasions could pictures shown by Hirshblond be subjected to criticism.

Virginia Bushman Signed to Contract

Virginia Bushman, daughter of Francis X. Bushman, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will be seen for the first time on the screen in a small part in the Monta Bell production, "Lights of Old Broadway." It was because of her work in this "bit" the contract was offered her. Miss Bushman is nineteen years old.

Dana Rush to Pass Upon True Story Scripts

Miss Dana V. Rush has been engaged by General Manager R. R. Riskin of the Bernarr Macfadden True Story Film Company to pass upon all scripts to be produced.

Will Perfect Plans for Cohen Dinner

PLANS will be perfected within a week for the testimonial dinner to be tendered Sydney S. Cohen by the Independents. While it has not been definitely decided that the testimonial will take the form of a dinner, that angle seems practically certain. It is also likely it will be held at one of the largest of the New York hotels in September.

Members of the arrangements committee in charge of the affair are: Samuel Zierler, chairman; Ben Amsterdam, J. G. Bachmann, Fred E. Baer, Whitman Bennett, Joe Brandt, Abraham Carlos, I. E. Chadwick, Frederick H. Elliott, Arthur James, Ray Johnston, Oscar A. Price, B. P. Schulberg and Dr. W. E. Shallenberger.

take into consideration in order that he may establish the danger line between expense and income, the one item over and above all others is not so much the overhead of the theatre which he is managing but the overhead the picture producer has to add on his product in order to make ends meet and insure a profit on his investment."

"As has been proven in many instances, no one producer has a monopoly in the making of good pictures. Today, as a result of experience and observation, the Independent Producer is employing the best brains and talent in turning out a product that will stand the acid test of public approval. He can sell his pictures for far less money and still make a legitimate profit because he has no carrying charge of inflated executive expense and home office maintenance to add to the cost of his releases. The average cost of distribution of pictures, it has been learned, runs between thirty and forty per cent of the gross income for the big combinations. This cost is double and triple what it costs any other large industrial organization to carry on its business. Who pays this?

"The question almost answers itself. In fact there is but one answer. The exhibitor! It is he who guarantees this expense. The public only pays a certain stated admission fee. The cost of product to the exhibitor can only come down when the exhibitor picks and chooses his pictures instead of buying in block. Every condition in the industry is susceptible to betterment and every individual exhibitor is the best doctor for the ailment.

Situation Seen As Acute

"Present day conditions are not the creatures of a moment. The cancer that is slowly but surely eating into the vitals of the Exhibitor began its deadly course years ago until now, through the indifference or apathy of the exhibitor, it has reached a point where the surgeon has to cut deep and quick to save the patient.

"The Declaration of Independence which sounded the death knell of tyranny and oppression to the Colonies and resulted in the establishment of the Republic of the United States, was not a document created by inspiration of the minute. On the other hand, years of suffering and threatened annihilation, political and financial, brought it about. It is the same story with every man who operates his theatre that he bought and owns as a result of toil and savings. If left to follow the course laid out for the motion picture industry by the monopolistic octopi, there will be no independent exhibitor in five years from now. The producer will operate your theatre and maybe, if you are lucky, you can get the job of janitor."

Hays Office Plans for Group Insurance

PLANS are being investigated by the Hays office with the ultimate idea of buying insurance protection on a group plan for all of the members of the organization and thus reducing the prevailing rates. At present all possible data on the subject is being gathered and this will be presented in concrete shape to the members of the association.

The plan as at present contemplated provides for the appointment of the Hays office as insurance manager for the entire group and the possible use of one broker as the medium through which all of the business will be handled.

F. B. O. Buys First Story for 1926-27

F. B. O. has selected the first story to be produced for release on the 1926-27 program. They have secured screen rights to Calvin Johnston's novelette, "Pedigree," which is to appear in several installments in Pictorial Review. It will be made as a special and will be listed under the Gold Bond productions for the season.

Asher at Universal for "Two Blocks Away"

E. M. Asher has arrived at Universal City, where he will assist the studio officials at the big plant of the Universal Pictures Corporation in the production of "Two Blocks Away," one of the new Jewel pictures scheduled for the Second White List. Production on the picture will be commenced without delay.

Harry Pollard will handle the megaphone. Several prominent screen stars will be featured in the cast, including George Sidney, Charles Murray, Vera Gordon and Alex Carr. "Two Blocks Away" was written by Aaron Hoffman. The continuity is being prepared by Alfred Cohn.

Florence Turner Returns With Columbia

Florence Turner, Vitagraph star of twenty years ago, has been engaged by Columbia Pictures to play in "The Price of Success," second of the Columbia-Waldorf releases. Miss Turner will be directed by Tony Gaudio, who "shot" her early productions, when Griffith was her director.

For the past eight years Miss Turner has been heading her own company in England with considerable success. She expects to continue her screen career in America in the future.

Alice Lake heads the cast for "The Price of Success," while in the supporting roles are Gaston Glass, Lee Shumway, Alma Bennett, Spec O'Donnell and Tom Ricketts.

Phyllis Haver Joins "New Brooms" Cast

William de Mille has added Phyllis Haver to the cast of "New Brooms," which he will produce for Paramount. Others already announced in the cast include Bessie Love, Neil Hamilton and Robert McWade. Clara Beranger adapted the Frank Craven play for the screen.

John Barrymore's Next to Be "Don Juan"

JOHN BARRYMORE'S next starring vehicle for Warner Brothers following "The Sea Beast," which he started last week, will be an adaptation from the Lord Byron poem, "Don Juan." This is in keeping with the star's request for an entirely different role in each picture.

It will be some time before the new picture is started as Barrymore is scheduled to leave Hollywood shortly to obtain the thrill scenes for "The Sea Beast."

Alice Lake Heads Cast in Waldorf Picture

Alice Lake has been selected to head the cast for the second Waldorf picture, to be released through Columbia Pictures. Tony Gaudio will direct. Production manager Harry Cohn is now recruiting the balance of the cast.

Wilson Co. Will Release Morden Pictures

Sering D. Wilson and Company have concluded arrangements for the world distribution of William J. Morden's "Far Eastern Trails," which comprises 165,000 feet of film taken in Asia and Africa.

Morden is a well known traveller and sportsman who has just returned from a three year trip over the regions which are the objective of the Roosevelt expedition. The first series of the subjects he photographed will be released by the Wilson organization under the title of "The Buzzing Orient." This will consist of twelve separate releases picturizing the principal industries of the Orient. The initial subject, "Yarns of Old Kashmir" is scheduled for release September 17th. Thereafter they will be released at the rate of one a month.

Ship X-Ray Machine for Broken Leg

It was necessary to ship a 6,000 lb. portable electric generator, X-Ray photographing machine to a point 160 miles northeast of Flagstaff, Arizona, to X-Ray the broken leg of William A. Griffith. Griffith is production manager of the Paramount company engaged in filming "The Vanishing American," a Zane Grey story.

Marjorie Bonner Signed for Paramount Story

Irvin Willat has signed Marjorie Bonner to play the ingenue in Paramount's screen version of James Oliver Curwood's "The Ancient Highway." The featured roles are being played by Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Montagu Love, while others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlick, William A. Carrol and Stanley Taylor.

Buck Jones Has Completed Two Westerns

Buck Jones, who will figure prominently on the Fox releasing schedule for the coming season, has already completed starring roles in two westerns, "The Timber Wolf," from the novel by Jackson Gregory, and "Durand of the Bad Lands," adapted from the story by Maibelle Heikes Justice.

In addition to the western picture, Buck will play the title role in the screen version of the Owen Davis stage success, "Lazybones." The first release of the season, however, in which he will star, is "The Timber Wolf," set for September 20th. "Durand of the Bad Lands" is set for release November 1st. "Lazybones" will reach the screens of first run theatres November 8th.

Christies Make Additions to Producing Staff

A number of additions are announced to the Christie comedy staff producing for release through Educational. Hank Mann has been signed as gag man and assigned to the company that William Watson is directing. This comedy is the first of the Christies in which Bill Dooley, former vaudeville star, is featured.

Sig Herzig has joined the Christie scenario staff and is collaborating with Frank Roland Conklin on the script for the first Jimmy Adams comedy, which is being shot under Harold Beaudine's direction.

Hal Conklin, brother of Frank Conklin, is also writing comedies, the first of which will be Bobby Vernon's first in his new starring series for Educational.

Edward Hearn in Coming Schulberg Release

Edward Hearn, who gained considerable popularity in the title role of "The Man Without a Country," is playing the leading masculine role opposite Clara Bow in B. P. Schulberg's forthcoming Preferred picture, "The Lawful Cheater." The picture was directed by Frank O'Connor.

Irene Rich is starred in "The Pleasure Buyers," a Warner feature from which these stills are taken.

M-G-M Signs McNutt on Scenario Staff

William Slavens McNutt, well known fiction writer, is the latest addition to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenario staff. He was signed to a contract last week and is now on his way to the Culver City studios. Among other recent additions to the scenario staff are Louis Lighton, Hope Loring, Katherine Hilliker, and H. H. Caldwell.

Stone Co-Featured With Barbara La Marr

Lewis Stone will be co-featured with Barbara La Marr in his first picture under his new long term contract with First National. "Spanish Sunlight" is the title of the picture which Sawyer-Lubin are producing from the new Anthony Pryde novel. It will be made on the west coast under the supervision of June Mathis who is preparing the continuity.

"Paris After Dark" Norma Talmadge's Next

Norma Talmadge's next starring vehicle for First National will be "Paris After Dark." It will go into production immediately upon completion of her present vehicle, "Graustark."

"Paris After Dark" is an original story by John W. Considine, Jr. It was previously titled "Sun of Montmartre."

Gwen Lee Signed to Long Term Contract

Gwen Lee has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will make her first appearance in Robert Z. Leonord's "A Little Bit of Broadway."

Meighan Signs New Contract

Star, Bound for Ireland, Signs Paramount Agreement for a Long Term of Years

ONE of the last moves of Thomas Meighan before sailing for Ireland last Saturday was to sign a new long term contract with Paramount. The star still has two more pictures to make under his old contract and the new one will carry him along for a period of several years.

Just before boarding the steamer Meighan said:

"During the past several weeks I have received offers from nearly every company in the picture business. However, I have been associated with Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky in Paramount pictures for several years and during that time I have come to have a regard for them and their company which made it impossible for me to accept any of the offers that were made me, however generous and flattering they were.

"Under the terms of my new agreement made with Mr. Zukor I shall be a star in Paramount pictures practically for the rest of my life. The plans for my future productions, as outlined to me are extremely interesting, as I know that Mr. Zukor and his associates will give me everything, in the way of stories, directors and supporting casts, that is necessary for the best pictures."

Mr. Zukor was equally enthusiastic over the new agreement with Mr. Meighan and predicted that in his coming productions the Paramount star, will rise to even new heights of artistic and popular success.

Marilyn Mills Completes the First for Davis

Marilyn Mills Pictures has completed "Tricks," first of the company productions to be handled throughout the world by Davis Distributing Division. The picture was directed by Bruce Mitchell and stars Miss Mills and her two horses, "Star" and "Beverley." In the supporting cast are J. Frank Glendon, William Lowry, Myles McCarthy, Hazel Dean and Eugene Paulette.

Ray Will Start Third for Chadwick

Charles Ray and Jerome Storm, his director, are preparing to start work on the third Ray starring vehicle for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. The story will be an original written for Ray and has not yet been titled. Production will start as soon as President Chadwick returns to the coast. Ray has already completed "Some Pun'kins" and "The Winners" for Chadwick.

"U" Buys Another For Denny

"What Happened to Jones" Goes Into Production for Second "White List"

UNIVERSAL has purchased another old-time stage success for Reginald Denny. This time it is "What Happened to Jones," a well known farce produced by George Broadhurst. Last week it was announced that Universal had purchased "Skinner's Dress Suit," as a Denny vehicle.

The Universal announcement also carries the information that "What Happened to Jones" will be put into immediate production, and prepared for release as a Second White List picture, which means that it will reach the screen during the coming winter. "Skinner's Dress Suit" also has been scheduled for Second White List release, and will be ready for the market next Spring.

This means a re-arrangement of the Denny schedule for the year 1925–1926.

In introducing "What Happened to Jones" and "Skinner's Dress Suit" to the Second White List, the following changes have been made:

"What Happened to Jones" goes into the schedule in the place of "The Whole Town's Talking," and will be released January 17, 1926. "Skinner's Dress Suit" goes in as a replacement for "This Way Out," scheduled for release April 4, 1926. The two replaced pictures probably will be moved over to the Third White List, scheduled for release during the 1926–1927 season.

The new Denny schedule for the Second White List is as follows: "California Straight Ahead," "Where Was I," "What Happened to Jones," "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "The Love Thrill."

Sullivan Will Prepare "Three Faces East"

Cecil B. De Mille has engaged C. Gardner Sullivan to prepare a screen treatment of "Three Faces East," the war-time secret service play, which is to be filmed at the De Mille studio under the direction of Rupert Julian for Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Paramount is Casting for "Kiss for Cinderella"

Paramount has started signing the cast for "A Kiss for Cinderella," which will go into production as soon as Betty Bronson and Tom Moore arrive from the coast. They have the leading roles in the picture. Henry Vibart is the first member of the supporting cast signed.

"Kivalina of the Ice Lands" to Open in Washington

"Kivalina of the Ice Lands," which has been set for national release by Pathe on August 9th, is to open at the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., on that day. It recently had its premiere at the Mark Strand Theatre on Broadway, New York.

Additions To Warner Staff

Five Important Changes Are Made in Personnel of Executives of Field Force

SAM E. MORRIS, general manager in charge of distribution announced five important additions to the Warner Brothers field staff made last week. E. J. Smith, well known as a film executive, was appointed eastern sales manager for the concern, with headquarters in New York.

Smith was with Universal for many years. He organized the English offices for that organization and afterwards became sales manager. More recently he was eastern manager for F. B. O.

Herbert Elder is the new Warner southern division manager, with office in Atlanta. He has been with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation many years, occupying a post in the home office recently.

George H. Dumond, who has been in the picture industry twenty-one years, becomes general manager of the theatres controlled by the Warner organization. For two years, up to about a year ago, he was with the Warners as home office representative. Recently he has been managing the State Theatre in Cleveland and had charge of production for all the Loew houses in that city.

Dumond left last week to inspect the Warner houses in the south and confer with Nat L. Royster, managing director of Warner Bros. Southern Theatres, Inc., at Charlotte, N. C.

H. O. Martin, a veteran branch exchange manager, has been appointed manager of Warner Bros. exchange in Washington. He formerly was manager of United Artists office in Chicago and previously to that was Pathe manager in that city.

Another new member of the Warner organization is M. A. Hullings, who becomes branch manager at Los Angeles. Mr. Hulling also has had wide experience as a salesman and executive and he is familiar with Warner product, having been with a Warner franchise-holder several years.

"Wanderer" Premiere on August 19th

PARAMOUNT has completed plans for the world premiere of "The Wanderer" to be held at the Criterion Theatre, New York, Wednesday night, August 19th. The picture is announced by the Paramount organization as a worthy successor to "The Ten Commandments" and "The Covered Wagon." It is a Raoul Walsh special production.

An elaborate New York presentation is being prepared by Hugo Reisenfeld, who also is working out an effective operatic score. The Criterion is being remodeled and redecorated for the occasion.

In the principal roles of the picture are, Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery, George Rigas and Kathlyn Williams.

"Fire" Panic Averted by Piano Player

Some person yelling "fire" at the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany, N. Y., last week, precipitated what came within an ace of becoming a serious panic. Through the coolness of the piano player, Peter Reilly, the panic was averted. Reilly kept on playing and by doing so, quieted the crowds that were jamming the exits.

One woman was crushed in the jam and fainted, but upon being revived later on, was taken to her home. Abe Stone, who runs the theatre, offered a reward of $25 the next day for any information that would lead to the arrest and conviction of the offender.

James McKay is Directing "Souls for Sables"

Tiffany Productions has engaged James C. McKay to direct "Souls for Sables," which is now in production. The picture was adapted from "Garlan & Co.," by David Graham Phillips. Before joining Tiffany, McKay was assistant director to Herbert Brenon and later was with Cosmopolitan Productions.

Truart Announces Four Picture Titles

Titles have been given the four Truart Pictures now in production. M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the company announces these titles as follows: "The Midnight Special," "The Flood," "The Night Watch" and "A Call in the Night."

Warners Selecting Cast for Barrymore

Warner Brothers are still carefully selecting the cast to support John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," production on which has already started. Those so far named are Dolores Costello, as leading lady, Wilfred Lucas, Mike Donlin, Sam Baker, Sojin, Frank Hagney, James O. Barrowes, George O'Hara, Mathilde Comont, George Burell and Sam Allen. Millard Webb is directing the production.

Farnham to Write Titles for "Big Parade"

Irving Thalberg has assigned Joseph W. Farnham to write the titles for King Vidor's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade," starring John Gilbert. Farnham recently completed the titling of "The Mystic" and "A Slave of Fashion," neither of which has yet been released. "The Big Parade" was written for the screen by Laurence Stallings.

Doty Signs Contract With Cecil De. Mille

Douglas Z. Doty, a former editor of Century Magazine has been signed to a long term contract by Cecil B. De Mille as a member of his scenario staff. Doty recently completed the continuity for Leatrice Joy's next starring picture, "The Wedding Song," which is now being produced under the direction of Alan Hale.

Constance Talmadge in scenes from "Her Sister From Paris," in which she stars for First National.

New United Artists Producers

Joseph Schenck Reveals Association of Roland West and John W. Considine, Jr.

ROLAND WEST and John W. Considine, Jr., have combined forces and will become associated producers for United Artists Corporation, according to announcement from the coast by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists. Up to the present time West and Considine have been production supervisors for Norma and Constance Talmadge.

By the arrangement this new combination of producers joins the executive roster of the newly organized Art Finance Corporation and places at their disposal $3,000,000 to expend on their forthcoming productions.

This is looked upon as another step by Schenck toward a much heavier releasing program for United Artists in the future. He recently was instrumental in bringing Samuel Goldwyn and Sol Lesser into affiliation with United Artist. They also will add a number of productions to the schedule, which will include pictures by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charley Chaplin, Rudolph Valentino and William S. Hart.

West and Considine will supplement their producing activities by continuing to supervise the Norma and Constance Talmadge films. West, who produced "The Unknown Purple" and "The Monster," and is credited as author and producer of more one-act plays than any American playwright, will supervise Norma Talmadge's next starring film, "Paris After Dark." Considine is preparing to put Constance Talmadge's adaptation of the George Barr McCutcheon story, "East of the Setting Sun," into production. He also is general manager of the Norma and Constance Talmadge Productions.

Charles Ray Signed by M-G-M

Will Be Co-Featured With Pauline Starke in "A Little Bit of Broadway"

AMONG the many contracts negotiated recently by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with stars, studio executives and others, is one which bears the signature of Charles Ray. This announcement has just been made by Harry Rapf, associate production executive at the Culver City studios.

In the first story in which Ray will appear under his new contract he will be co-featured with Pauline Starke in "A Little Bit of Broadway." This is a Robert Z. Leonard production and in it, it is said, the star will be seen in the type of role which made him famous. He will play the bashful, awkward country boy who comes to the big city.

The return of Ray to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios has an interesting angle. These were the old Triangle studios before their purchase by Goldwyn, and it was with Triangle that Ray, guided by the late Thomas H. Ince, started his climb to stardom.

Regarding the signing of Ray, Rapf said:

"The signing of Ray evidences again the policy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to use the very best artists obtainable for our pictures. We feel that his association with us will not only add lustre to his laurels but will materially enhance the picture in which he appears."

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Miniature Stage in Lobby for "Madame Sans Gene"

A "fountain of publicity" fittingly expresses the miniature foyer display conceived by Manager E. B. Roberts for his showing of "Mme. Sans Gene." It was his ingenuity which converted the fountain in the Majestic foyer into a miniature stage with a setting depicting the terrace of an old French chateau, similar to one shown in the production. One saw Gloria Swanson as "Mme. Sans Gene," arrayed in her coronation gown, posing at the head of a flight of stone steps, against a background of majestic marble pillars and a vista of smooth lawns. Along the terrace wall and at sides of steps natural greens added a touch of realism.

The effect was accomplished by blocking in the space between the gold archwork above fountain and its base, with beaverboard painted to represent scene described above, adding the small cut-out of Miss Swanson. The star's name, title of photoplay and play dates were printed across the top of display directly underneath the gold arch.

The marquee of the theatre carried a large flasher sign with two medallions of the star's head at either end. These were 3 ft. high and 3 ft. wide, with purple and white coloring. Their size and coloring made them conspicuous for some distance from the theatre thereby enhancing their drawing power.

The Sans Gene Gold Coins were distributed in a novel fashion by a local drug store, who featuring a "Mme. Sans Gene" Sundae, gave a gold coin to each customer buying one of these. This store also gave away 200 metal novelties on the attraction.

An additional 200 coins were distributed at the University Weekly German two days before opening by a little girl dressed in an old fashioned costume who recited the following doggerel:

"I come to bring you medallions of gold,
Struck off to America's Queen.
They tell of a wonderful story bold,
Gloria Swanson in 'Madame Sans Gene.'
This picture comes to the Majestic day after tomorrow—
If you see it not, you'll be filled with sorrow."

Miniature projection on a small screen in the lobby advertised "Man and Maid" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Charles F. McManus' Strand theatre, Pasadena, Calif.

An excellent window tie-up was secured with a specialty shop which had a double window display, one of beautiful gowns and wraps, another with hats. A lovely photograph of Miss Swanson as "Mme Sans Gene" was displayed on a small easel, artistically draped with a beautiful shawl. A small card placed below photo carried star's name, title of photoplay, etc.

Empty Window of Advantage to "Charley's Aunt"

In exploiting "Charley's Aunt" at the Stratford theatre, Poughkeepsie, Manager E. A. Zorn used an empty store window located on a prominent corner to good advantage.

In this window was a specially painted display card covering the entire front, with a phonograph installed inside, the transmitter of which was placed over the transom. A laughing record was used, its playing attracting a world of attention.

The standard billing was employed with 200 half sheet cards, and 2,000 throwaways of four different colors and copy. Newspaper space was increased considerably, the campaign starting well in advance.

"Circe" Given Candy Kiss Tie-Up in Evansville

Three thousand candy kisses, advertised as the Mae Murray kisses, were recently distributed in envelopes exploiting the showing of "Circe the Enchantress" at the Strand theatre in Evansville, Ind., in consequence of a tie-up with a local candy manufacturer arranged for by Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. Girls dressed in white gave these kisses away on the main street on the Saturday preceding the opening. A great number of out-of-town people, who come into Evansville to do shopping Saturday afternoons, were reached in this way.

An entire window display of the latest gowns was contributed by the best department store. This exhibit featured an oil painting and an art card. Oil paintings were placed in other windows along the main street, and 1,000 heralds were distributed. The showing was exploited on 4,300 pay envelopes used by thirty of the leading factories and department stores, and the town was liberally posted. A vigorous newspaper campaign supplemented these efforts. Three slides and a trailer were used, and there was a special lobby display.

French Gold Coin Used for "Madame Sans Gene"

The week preceding the showing of "Madame Sans Gene," the cashier at the Imperial, Asheville, included in the patron's change a French period Gold Coin advertising "Sans Gene." In addition to distributing the coins through the box-office, Manager Turner had them dropped alongside of people on the streets, where their clink and brightness attracted instant attention. This novel advertising idea conceived by Paramount's Sales Department proved an excellent publicity medium for the attraction.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was started well in advance with special window cards, 5,000 close-ups, 8,000 magazine programs, 1,000 heralds and 2,000 special Gloria Swanson Paris Postcards, carrying a picture of the star.

N. Y. Hotel Postcard Used for "Sally" in New Haven

Three thousand postcards, carrying on the back an ad for the Breslin Hotel, New York, with pictures of the building, its dining room, lounge, etc., were used by Manager H. Browning of Gordon's Olympia Theatre, New Haven, to publicize First National's Colleen Moore picture "Sally."

The postcards were addressed to a selected list of patrons—mostly men—in New Haven. Each card carried the following message, written in ink, in a woman's hand-writing: "Will be in New Haven all week of March 29th at 146 Temple Street. Call 1755. 'Sally'." The cards were mailed from New York so they would carry the New York cancellation stamp.

Manager Browning states that he obtained excellent results with this stunt. He wrote to First National: "To say that it was a success is putting it mildly. For three days prior to the opening of "Sally" and throughout the entire week of its engagement, hundreds of calls came pouring in over the phone, inquiring as to who was "Sally" and what she wanted. A few men called chiding us saying that we nearly broke up their homes as a result of their wives reading the cards; wives called to ask what "Sally" wanted of her husband. To all these queries we replied that "Sally" was the title of Colleen Moore's latest photoplay that was coming here the week of March 29th. There wasn't a minute's rest between these calls, as soon as one hung up another would call. This necessitated our appointing one of the usherettes here as "Sally" and have her do naught but answer the phone's incessant ringing."

Manager Browning also employed the cross word puzzle contest which he has found so excellent a means of exploiting his attractions. The cross word contest was used in the Yale Daily News pictorial supplement and in the New Haven Shipping News.

Cut-out figures in lobby frame at the Criterion theatre, New York City, for "Beggar on Horseback" (Paramount). Cloth was draped on the figures as shown and at night the lights from the inside border of the frame made a most pleasing effect.

Heavy Campaign Given "Fool"

Showing at Keith's Palace, Cleveland, Supported by Strong Publicity Line-Up

CAREFULLY planned and aggressively executed exploitation was given the recent engagement of "The Fool" at B. F. Keith's Palace theatre, Cleveland. A few of the highlights of the campaign, as executed by Manager John F. Royal, follow:

Special screenings were arranged for priests, ministers, rabbis and for captains and social workers of the Salvation Army. The picture was also shown to presidents and heads of electrical workers, iron molders, paperhangers, and the heads of all labor unions in Cleveland. Not a few of the clerics who were invited to see the picture, spoke approvingly of it from their pulpits.

An airplane was chartered to fly over Cleveland and towns in the vicinity, dropping small paper parachutes that bore an envelope carrying a card to which one penny was attached, and bearing the following copy:

This penny and five more will pay your street car fare to see "The Fool," the truly remarkable photodrama at B. F. Keith's Palace.

Due to the fact that one of the main characters in "The Fool" is of Polish nationality, this angle was played up heavily in ads taken in Polish and foreign language newspapers.

Another stunt that attracted more than the ordinary amount of attention was the use in advantageous windows about the downtown district, of a small clown bust supporting a card announcement of the attraction. A number of 30 x 40 and 40 x 60 enlargements were used in special locations as well.

An elaborate prologue was staged at the opening of the picture, consisting of a medieval church setting, similar to the set used in "The Miracle," and in which the Orpheus Choir, a body of fifty men sang "The Crusaders," "Holy Light" and other selections, also singing through certain sequences of the film.

Newspaper Essay Stunt on "I'll Show You the Town"

"Show San Francisco to your fellow townsmen and win a prize." That was the gist of a contest worked out by the Granada theatre in co-operation with the San Francisco Call for "I'll Show You the Town." The announcement continued:

"There are in San Francisco many hidden away corners with a romantic appeal; many forgotten thoroughfares; many quaint and strange houses; many industries and public buildings of national importance. There are countless places and things of general interest, places and things hunted out by visitors, but probably known to few of us who live here."

The story of these out-of-the-way corners of San Francisco was to be told in 150 words and for the ten best there was a cash award of $5.00 each. The winning contributions made interesting reading matter for the Call.

An "I'll Show You the Town" contest will strike a responsive chord in almost any city in the United States of any size. If there is one thing the average American likes to do, it is to show other folks his town, from the new Masonic Temple to the recently broken ground for the Union Station. It should not be difficult to induce the leading paper in any town to sponsor such a stunt.

Special Front Built for "Man and Maid" Run

For the first time in exploitation annals of East Liberty, Pa., a special front was built for the Cameraphone theatre when "Man and Maid" played there recently. This innovation attracted much attention to the run, as did a cross-word puzzle contest staged by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, who distributed 5,000 heralds printed with the puzzle in the theatre and on the busiest streets of the city.

Window tie-up in a Cleveland furniture store to aid "The Fool" (Fox) at B. F. Keith's theatre, Cleveland.

House Well Decorated for "Flirting with Love"

Manager Jack Rowley, when he booked "Flirting with Love" as one of the attractions at the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas, decided to put over a big campaign. Cuts of Colleen Moore and readers boosting "Flirting with Love," appeared in the newspapers; slides and trailers on the screen of the Royal theatre, lithographs on the billboards and stands of pictures and lithographs in the lobby of the theatre. Then he obtained the aid of a clever young Mexican artist, Manuel Ayala, who carried out the ideas of Manager Rowley on a "front" for the Royal theatre that attracted the attention of everyone.

In the center of the double-door entrance of the theatre was placed a large hand-painted sign, size 4 x 6 feet, with gray background and lettered in black and red, bearing in a side panel below a cut-out likeness of Colleen Moore the words, "Look Who's Here." Then the big sign read: "Don't Come if You Don't Want to Laugh. Colleen Moore in 'Flirting with Love.' (Then a large heart in the center, flanked by two smaller hearts on each side.) Right in Here Today." On each end of the theatre front were large lithographs, with stands of lithographs and framed pictures in each side door entrance, while in the panels between the doors, on each side of the central entrance were frames of pictures.

Suspended from the outer front of the marquise, in front of the large electric sign, hung suspended a massive heart with a cut-out of Colleen Moore in the centre and a huge arrow piercing the large heart (made of beaver board painted red). On each end of the marquisesette hung garlands of large red hearts.

"Spaniard" Showing Billed as "Sheik Week" in Ads

Capitalizing on the feminine appeal of "The Spaniard," and the popularity of Richard Cortez, the star, Manager Kingsmore billed this attraction as "Sheik Week." Two hundred block one sheets, announcing this fact to the public, were sniped all over Atlanta. All newspaper advertising played up strongly the romantic character of the photoplay, with special appeal to the ladies.

A novel feature of the campaign was the distribution of a card resembling an admission ticket to a Spanish bull fight. This card carried title, cast, theatre and play dates, proving itself a profitable advertising medium.

The Howard lobby was artistically decorated with the Spanish colors, which together with cut-outs from the lithos, made a very impressive exhibit.

Whitman's Exploitation on "The Fighting Ranger"

Herman Whitman, manager of Keith's Greenpoint theatre, Brooklyn, put on excellent explotation when he played the beginning episode of "The Fighting Ranger," and incidentally collected first prize money in Universal's contest for serial exploitation.

As a special attraction, he engaged Montana May, a cowgirl, who stood in front of the house in costume and gave a ten-minute rope demonstration on the stage during the performance. She also acted as judge in a roping contest for which "Fighting Ranger" baseballs were awarded as prizes.

An announcement that the first 100 children to appear at the theatre in Indian, cowboy or cowgirl costumes would be admitted free brought out more "wild westerners" than Brooklyn has seen in many days.

The entire front of the Greenpoint was decorated with signal flags which extended from the roof to the marquee, and two banners were swung across the front. Cut-outs and half sheets signs covered the lobby.

"Seven Chances" Exploited Well in Birmingham

A tie-up achieving front page space in the press in Birmingham, Ala., was recently put over by C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, in connection with the appearance of "Seven Chances" at Loew's Temple theatre. Haug tied up the showing of this picture with the popular local baseball team by inducing the Birmingham Age-Herald to print the pictures of two members of the team each day for seven days. This "Know Your Team" contest was announced daily on the front page of the Age-Herald, and became enormously popular. Twenty inches of space altogether were devoted to the engagement daily by the Age-Herald.

Haug also tied up with the Birmingham Post for a Keaton cross word puzzle contest. Tickets were awarded for the correct solutions received. This competition also aroused keen interest.

Five thousand pen wipers exploiting the picture were distributed to school children of the city and fifty street car cards were carried by the Birmingham street cars throughout the week. One hundred 1-sheets were posted and fifty window cards were used. Fifteen Red Top cabs carried banners exploiting the showing as well.

Manager Vinson of Loew's Temple theatre extended active cooperation to Haug throughout the entire campaign.

Jack Turner Makes Flight as "Air Mail" Stunt

Jack Turner, Manager of the Galax theatre in Birmingham, Ala., soared well above the usual run of exploitation stunts when he piloted his own plane from Birmingham to Chattanooga and back to demonstrate the feasibility of a plane postal route and incidentally, to pave the way for his forthcoming attraction, "The Air Mail." Turner took advantage of a current local agitation for an air mail service and turned to good account his experience as a pilot in the World War. By means of co-operation of the newspapers, especially the Age-Herald of Birmingham, he got a remarkable amount of publicity for his stunt, much of it front-page space.

It so happens that the whole city of Birmingham is in the midst of a campaign to obtain the early establishment of the Chicago-New Orleans route, via Nashville, Birmingham, and Montgomery. The subject is being agitated widely both in business and in legislative circles. What could be more appropos? Into this ready-made setting Turner stepped, volunteering to make a test flight to Chattanooga carrying letters and packages of the Age-Herald, and blazing the trail for Alabama's first air mail delivery. He had himself sworn in as a carrier by the local postmaster, and with the eyes of all Birmingham focused upon his undertaking, he made a triumphant flight and brought back to Birmingham in his own plane the film of "The Air Mail," as well as a quantity of regular mail destined for the Alabama city.

Turner was greeted like a conquering hero and had a regular brass-band reception on his arrival in both cities. Considered from every angle his flight was a marked success. He made the trip to Chattanooga in 2 hours and 10 minutes, just half the running time of the fast trains between the two cities, thus proving the advantages of an air mail and he gained an amount of publicity and a type of publicity that could not fail to help his picture.

The Hippodrome theatre at Okmulgee, Okla., built this elaborate street float for "The Lost World" (First National), which could not fail to centre the attention of the town on the picture at the "Hip."

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Short Subjects and Serials

Stan Laurel Will Direct Clyde Cook

A number of items of interest come out of the Hal Roach studio this week. Among these is one to the effect that Stan Laurel has turned director and will guide Clyde Cook in his next Roach comedy for Pathe release.

H. M. Walker, title editor at the Roach studios has completed the titling of "A Punch in the Nose," "Good Morning Judge" and "Bigger and Better Pictures."

Louis Foster who started as a property boy for Roach is now assistant to F. Richard Jones, vice-president and director-general of the Roach studios.

Title is Restored for Herrick Picture

"It Might Happen to You" has been restored as the title for the first of the Herrick two-reel "Fragments of Life" series to be released by Davis Distributing Division. This was the original title, which later was changed to "Sympathy."

These scenes are from "Episode No. 5" of the "Play Ball" serial released through Pathe.

Edna Marian in scenes from "Speak Freely," a century Comedy distributed by Universal.

Pathe Fixes Week's Releases

Program Scheduled for Week of August 9 Headed by "Kivalina of the Ice Lands"

THE PATHE release program for the week of August 9th will be headed by the Earl Rossman photodrama of the Arctic, "Kivalina of the Ice Lands." In addition there will be a two-reel Hal Roach comedy, a chapter of the Patheserial, "Play Ball," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables," a Pathe Review and Pathe News.

Rossman spent two years among the Eskimos in the making of "Kivalina of the Ice Lands."

"The Iron Nag" is a two-reel comedy made by Mack Sennett with Billy Bevan and Ruth Taylor in leading roles. As the title implies it is a humorous story of the race track. Others in the cast in addition to Miss Taylor and Bevan, are Andy Clyde, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson, and Leo Sulky. Del Lord directed the comedy.

"The Decoy Wire" is the title of the fourth chapter of "Play Ball," the Patheserial written by Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants. Allene Ray and Walter Miller continue their exciting experiences in the featured roles.

"Sons of Swat," the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" reveals intimate close-ups of the big leaguers in action and also glimpses of boys on the back-lot diamond. It was produced by J. L. Hawkinson.

Pathe Review No. 32 presents: "Four-Footed Fortunes," showing the yearly shearings on an Arizona sheep ranch; "Boston, the Hub City," scenes in Pathecolor; and "The Breton Bride," another of the popular "Here Comes the Bride" series.

Completing the Pathe program of August 9th are: "Bubbles," one of the "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," and two issues of Pathe News.

Release stills from "Beware," an Educational-Mermaid Comedy with Lige Conley.

Release stills from "Innocent Husbands," a two-reel comedy starring Charley Chase and offered by Pathe.

Educational Special Due Soon

Scientific Expedition Pictures Will Reveal "Wild Beasts of Borneo"

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES will shortly release a two-reel special under the title of "Wild Beasts of Borneo." The two reels were selected out of many thousands of feet made during a two year scientific expedition into Borneo by Lou C. Hutt, well known Pacific Coast cameraman.

The expedition headed by Hutt, on which he was accompanied by his wife, was made with the avowed purpose of taking no animal life unless it was absolutely necessary for self-protection.

The motion pictures made by this expedition were originally made into a five-reel feature, which recently made a hit in a number of theatres in and around San Francisco. It is the cream of the "shots" in this five-reel subject that have been selected and re-edited as Educational's Special "Wild Beasts of Borneo."

Educational is preparing for exceptional exploitation on this two-reel subject and will provide exhibitors with a press sheet, including a number of newspaper ads, as well as with a full line of accessories.

Among the outstanding scenes in the special, are a number of exceptional "shots" of a herd of the sacred white elephants made possible only by the use of a lens so powerful that it makes the object appear ten times nearer than it actually is; "shots" showing the trapping of a big leopard; the catching of savage crocodiles and the capturing of a mighty python, which was found wound about the limb of a tree and which was unravelled and caged at great hazard.

To Release Century Comedies

Four, Starring Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian, Al Alt and Eddie Gordon, Due in August

CENTURY COMEDIES has four two-reelers ready for release during the month of August. Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian, Al Alt and Eddie Gordon are the stars.

The first to reach the screen will be "After a Reputation," starring Edna Marian, who has been borrowed by the Universal Pictures Corporation to play an important role in one of the forthcoming Second White List Jewels, "The Still Alarm." "After a Reputation," was directed by William Watson. Matty Roubert plays the principal supporting role. This comedy will be released through Universal Exchanges August 5th.

The second release will be "Paging a Wife," starring Al Alt. Charles Lamont directed. Included in the cast are Hilliard Karr, Charles King, and Lillian Worth. It will be released August 12th.

The third Century Comedy for August will be a Wanda Wiley vehicle. It is called "Won By Law," and shows Miss Wiley in an entirely new type of comedy.

Bob Reeves has the chief supporting role in this comedy. Others in the cast are Lillian Worth and Frank Whitson. It will be released August 19th.

The last Century release for August is "Crying For Love," starring Eddie Gordon. Noel Smith directed it. Eddie has the role of an adventurous young bride-groom, with husky Blanche Payson playing the bride.

The August Centuries mark the wind-up of that company's 1924–1925 product.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Overland Limited
(Gotham-Lumas Film—6389 Feet)

A GENUINE thriller! Wherever speedy, punchful melodrama is popular, this well-directed, sensational tale of railroad life will surely meet with instantaneous approval. There's a capital cast, excellent photography and one vivid, intense situation piles on top of another with a rapidity and forceful appeal that fairly takes the onlooker's breath away.

Hero David Barton is a consulting engineer for the railway, on which his father Big Ed Barton, drives the road's crack train, the Overland Limited. David's plans for a bridge over a mountain gorge are accepted, it is built and his dad takes out his train for the first trip over the new bridge. David's rival, Bruce Miller, with accomplices, weakens the structure. Unknown to Miller, the latter's mother is a passenger on the train, also David's sweetheart, and a lunatic pugilist, Farrell. The maniac pug breaks away from his keepers, gains the engine and knocks both engineer and fireman unconscious. Big Ed recovers just in time to uncouple his engine and apply the brakes as they dash toward the damaged bridge, and the locomotive topples into the gorge; cars are derailed. All of which seems to bear a strong resemblance to one of those old-time stage melos which roused the gallery gods of a past generation to wild outbursts of enthusiasm. However that may be, it's great screen audience stuff, so skillfully manipulated by director and players that we miss our guess badly if it fails to make a big box office score.

THEME. Stirring melodrama, replete with heart interest, in which villain, jealous of young consulting engineer, plans to wreck bridge across gorge which latter has built.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Maniac Farrell's journey across top of train to engine, his attack on inmates of cab. Recovery of engineer Ed Barton, scene in which he uncouples engine, applies brakes. Big thrill where the Overland is seen thundering toward sure destruction on damaged bridge.

DIRECTION. Has handled his material with fine accuracy of detail and brought sympathetic interest well to the foreground. Stresses melodramatic episodes with tremendous force, makes story convincing and guides it into whirlwind climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. It should be practical to win the support of such organizations as the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen in boosting this picture. Get in touch with the secretaries of the local branches in your section. As for your patrons in general, you can dwell upon the sweeping melodramatic action of the picture, its unswerving heart interest and never-failing suspenses. They will not be disappointed.

SUMMARY. An intensely human as well as marvelously exciting film. The sort of thing that is certain to please the masses and entertain even the most critical fans.

THE CAST

David Barton	Malcolm McGregor
Ruth Dent	Oliver Borden
Violet Colton	Alice Lake
Big Ed Barton	Ralph Lewis
Bruce Miller	John Miljon
Pugilist Farrell	Charles Buddy Post

Story by James J. Tynan. Directed by Frank O'Neil.

SYNOPSIS. David Barton, railroad consulting engineer, constructs bridge over mountain gorge, despite opposition of rival for hand of Ruth Dent, one Bruce Miller. David's father, Big Ed, is engineer of Overland Limited, making initial trip across bridge. Miller and confederates plan to damage bridge. Unknown to Miller his mother is passenger on train, also Ruth Dent and a maniac pugilist, named Farrell. Latter escapes from keepers, gains engine, knocks out cab occupants. Big Ed recovers in time to uncouple engine, which crashes into gorge. Cars are derailed, Miller's mother killed. Miller confesses, exonerating David. Big Ed lives to take Overland over new bridge.

The Half-Way Girl
(First National—7570 Feet)

THOSE peevish souls continually given to hostile criticism of the silent drama on the grounds of slavish devotion of producers to conventional stories running in familiar grooves, will find nothing to back up their pet theory in this picture. For this film is anything but conventional. It is even a trifle daring in spots, not foolishly so, but just enough to bring out in bold relief the bizarre coloring and evil shadows of its Oriental atmosphere.

For one thing it demonstrates convincingly that a white girl couldn't very well find a worse spot to be stranded in than any portion of that vaguely mysterious region referred to by Kipling as—"East Of Suez." That's what happens to Poppy La Rue, American chorus lady, cleverly portrayed by Doris Kenyon, when the theatrical venture with which she is connected goes to pieces. If occasionally it might appear that the narrative is a little farfetched, one remembers that the Far East has never been listed historically either now or in the past as being severely handicapped by moral ethics.

So that the efforts of plantation-owner Jardine to make Poppy his mistress, failing which he employs official aid to drive her into what we would call the town's red-light district, are quite convincing when viewed in a comparative light. There is considerable pathos, as well as human venom, in all this, and real love interest develops when the girl meets Douglas, a young Britisher who has temporarily gone to the bad. Poppy's escape on the steamer where Jardine again threatens her, the burning of the ship and her final rescue is sheer lurid melodrama, but wonderfully effective.

THEME. Colorful drama depicting fateful adventures of American chorus girl stranded in Far East—her persecution by lustful admirer and narrow escape from being compelled to lead life of shame. She eventually finds safety.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Artistically appealing Oriental atmosphere. Poppy's first encounter with villainous Jardine and later with debauched but honest Englishman whom she learns to love. Her exile as undesirable person into town's segregated quarter, after she has assisted lover to get away when he slays man in self-defense.

DIRECTION. Makes the most of Oriental settings. with darkly mysterious backgrounds, shows good judgment in piecing situations smoothly together. Gets admirable work out of principals and support. Achieves satisfactory climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress the horror of situation in which helpless heroine finds herself at the mercy of a man who wants to make her his prey in the Far East. Tell your patrons this tale is crammed with heart interest. Feature Doris Kenyon, who does fine work as the girl in the case.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house, if correctly exploited.

SUMMARY. Nothing commonplace about this picture. The acting is sincere and convincing by all characters concerned. Emotional phases not overdone, melodramatic punches deftly administered. Well mounted.

THE CAST

Poppy La Rue	Doris Kenyon
Philip Douglas	Lloyd Hughes
John Guthrie	Hobart Bosworth
The Crab	Tully Marshall
Jardine	Sam Hardy
Gibson	Charles Wellesley

By E. Lloyd Sheldon. Directed by John Francis Dillon.

SYNOPSIS. Poppy La Rue finds herself penniless in Far East when theatrical company she belongs to is stranded. Jardine, plantation-owner, failing to make her his victim, utilizes Government official pressure to exile her into district of prostitution. She falls in love with wastrel young Britisher, helps him flee when he slays man in self-defense. Later, forced into city's bad quarter, she escapes on board steamer on which Jardine is passenger. Again threatened by him, she is saved when ship catches fire and blows up. Is finally reunited to lover, who has reformed.

Not So Long Ago

NEW YORK in the fifties, old-fashioned, graceful dances, quaint costumes, a sweet little love story and bit of melodrama, comedy of the unexpectedly odd order—all this is included in the picture in which Betty Bronson, erstwhile elfish star of Peter Pan, makes her second bow to the screen public. Sidney Olcott directed, and here and there one is reminded of his work in a former production—"Little Old New York," which proved such a success. Mr. Olcott has an almost uncanny flair for reproducing Gotham atmosphere, whatever may be the period, with absolute fidelity and life-like appeal, and to his possession of this faculty "Not So Long Ago" owes its principal charm.

The plot is of gossamer texture, light in the extreme, yet its interest takes hold at the start and never relaxes grip until the dainty seamstress heroine has won her wealthy lover, and her old daddy, who invents a horseless carriage, run by steam, an ancestor of the modern auto, achieves success and sees his twin enemies of poverty and public derision confounded. It does not class as a great picture, but there is no doubt whatever that it is one with direct audience appeal, awakening both sympathy and laughter. And it gives Miss Bronson a chance to prove that she is something more than a mere "flash in the pan," (no pun intended) and that Paramount has a real star in this young girl, who qualifies not only as a beauty, but a recognized emotional actress and clever comedienne.

Ricardo Cortez registers as an extremely stately and handsome lover. Other telling character sketches are those contributed by Laurance Wheat, a great bit of low comedy stuff, and Dan Crimmins, as Betty's old dad.

THEME. Heart interest drama, interpolated with comedy. New York locale. Period 1850. Depicts struggle of poor old inventor to construct horseless carriage and daughter's romance with wealthy lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Old inventor's manipulation of and troubles over construction of steam-propelled carriage. Artistic settings of New York in the fifties. Beginning of Betty's romance and day dreams of wealthy lover. Shots of old-fashioned bicycle built for two. Elaborate ball-room scene, with old-fashioned dances. Tough comedy bits put over by Laurance Wheat.

DIRECTION. Faultless. Has mingled sentimental charm and humorous episodes beautifully and kept action moving smoothly and rapidly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try tie-ups with libraries and book stores on novels dealing with life in the fifties. Also, tieups with auto dealers, showing ancient cars up to present development. Feature the bicycle of bygone days in its many stages.

DRAWING POWER. Should pull 'em in anywhere, suitable for city and country big and little houses.

SUMMARY. Well directed and acted, atmosphere capital. Slight plot built up into highly entertaining picture, without resort to padding tactics.

THE CAST

Betty Dover ..... Betty Bronson
Billy Ballard ..... Ricardo Cortez
Jerry Flint ..... Edward Davis
Sam Robinson ..... Laurance Wheat
Ursula Kent ..... Jacqueline Gadson
Michael Dover ..... Dan Crimmins

Adapted from Play by Arthur Richman. Director, Sidney Olcott.

SYNOPSIS. In New York, 1850, Michael Dover toils to invent a horseless carriage, propelled by steam. Poverty-stricken, his daughter Betty works as seamstress in home of wealthy Mrs. Ballard, where she sees and falls in love with handsome Billy Ballard. Betty is sought by Sam Robinson, a braggart. Sam discovers Betty's secret, tells her father and accompanies him to see Billy. Betty gets there first and Billy tells her father his intentions are honorable. Billy visits Betty. Old Michael borrows from moneylender, offering his model as security. Sam and his gang attack Billy and are soundly thrashed. Sam tells Billy's mother of her son's entanglement with Betty, who is discharged, after girl learns Billy is engaged to another woman. In a last endeavour to stall off foreclosure of note held by money lender on his model, Michael agrees to a race between the machine and Sam, the latter to walk against it. The machine wins, but blows up later. Billy comes to the rescue and redeems note. He tells Betty his engagement is broken and they embrace.

Before Midnight

(Henry Ginsberg Dist. Corporation—5895 Feet)

(Reviewed by Ray Gallagher)

FOLLOWERS of society crook melodramas will find this first-rate entertainment. While the theme is not entirely new it is well handled and sustains the interest to the end—a surprise climax. When a picture of this type accomplishes this it can surely be said to have accomplished its purpose. In a few places it may strain credulity in an effort to build suspense. The instances are few and on the whole the production has been built along box-office lines.

John Adolfi, the director, loses no time in introducing his characters and keeps things moving at a lively clip. In developing the mystery element he has also managed to hold the love interest and has trimmed his sequences of all unnecessary detail. He gives it a good mounting and keeps his players well in hand.

The plot has lots of action. It all takes place between morning and midnight of the same day, and this does not permit of a slackening of pace. All the ingredients that have made this sort of picture popular are contained in the story. It deals with the efforts of a girl, who, to keep her brother from prison, is forced into an agreement with the manager of a private detective agency to report on the actions of a man, a supposed crook. They both attend a week-end party and fall in love. The situations they find themselves in lead each to suspect the other. It develops that the man suspected of trying to smuggle in a priceless gem has really been investigating the manager of the detective agency before investing his money in said agency. He traps the man tracker with a bribe paid in marked bills and clears the way for a happy ending.

William Russell, as the supposed crook, gives a thoroughly convincing performance. He is given good opportunity to display his prowess in the fight sequences. Barbara Bedford, as the girl, plays her role with understanding. Brinsley Shaw and Alan Roscoe make their parts real. The photography is adequate. The week-end party at the wealthy home introduces some rich backgrounds. A band of bootleggers adds color and the rescue by the hero of the girl from drowning is a thrill.

THEME. Entertaining crook melodrama revolving around a girl, who, to keep her brother from prison, agrees to aid a private detective in capturing a supposed crook. She falls in love with the man and they find happiness when he traps the dishonest detective and clears himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good action creating a deal of mystery and suspense. The surprise ending. The scene in which hero rescues the girl from drowning when she is run down by speedboat.

DIRECTION. Creates a very good vein of suspense and keeps story at tension point. Might have injected more comedy relief. Gives it good mounting. All in all the director has done a good job.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title lends itself admirably to a teaser campaign and one could be used effectively. Throwaways with the words: "What Happened Before Midnight?" is one way. A tie-up with local jeweler could be worked out, since a good part of the action deals with the smuggling in of a famous jewel.

DRAWING POWER. Anyone enjoying crook melodramas will be well pleased with this one. A good offering for average houses.

SUMMARY. An interesting and entertaining picture. An exciting line of action balanced with pleasing love interest. To make it timely a band of bootleggers is introduced into the plot. The party at the home of the wealthy hostess permits of some rich bacgrounds.

Helen Saldivar to keep her brother from prison, enters into an agreement with Durand, manager of a detective agency, to watch Tom Galloway, whose mysterious actions lead to the belief that he is a crook. The young couple, attending a week-end party, fall in love. Circumstances arise that for a time makes each doubt the other's honesty. The atmosphere is finally cleared up by Tom, when he traps Durand with a bribe paid with marked bills and it develops it was all an investigation of Durand's activities before Tom bought the agency employing him.

Never the Twain Shall Meet

(Cosmopolitan-Metro-Goldwyn—8143 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FEW productions with the loveliness of the South Seas for background have equalled this film for sheer natural beauty. It was photographed right on the spot where most of the action takes place, the scenic Paradise of the blue Pacific, and director Maurice Tourneur, always a real artist when it comes to developing atmosphere, has endowed the picture with haunting charm. Those Hawaiian wedding episodes, for instance, with brown, lithe Papuan maidens weaving to and fro in glamourous dances, are so bewitchingly realistic that the slightly artificial plot becomes instantly convincing under their influence. You feel that most anything could happen amid such mystically beautiful surroundings.

Yet the tale, on the whole, is craftily woven, and does not run in the usual rut of South Sea romances. Of course, there is the usual white man who succumbs to the enervating lure of the tropics by beginning to "go native," but he will pass with the fans, for no South Sea movie would seem correct to them without him. And Tamea, the little half-caste, exceedingly primitive lady, prettily portrayed by Anita Stewart, who casts a spell over one lover and later takes up with another, is a delight to the eye as she flits beneath the palm trees. Transplanted to San Francisco she is still a seductive barbarian, but she belongs in the magical settings of her island home, and one feels glad when she gets back there.

There's a good deal of pathos in the yarn which will please the sentimentalists, but this is relieved by bright glints of timely comedy here and there, and the net result is a picture furnishing very good entertainment. For a while back South Sea films were somewhat of a drug on the market, so many were being produced, and exhibitors fought shy of them. So this is in the nature of a revival, and we fancy, a successful one, for there are many important points in which the Tourneur production stands head and shoulders over its predecessors in this line.

THEME. Treats of American who yields to South Seas lure, lives with native girl, deteriorates under tropical spell but is finally regenerated.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Exquisite tropical scenic shots and realistic atmosphere. Going of Tamea to San Francisco. Death of her father. Tamea's meeting with Pritchard, her flight back home. Pritchard's arrival on island and wedding to Tamea. The native dances and quaint marriage ceremonies.

DIRECTION. Excellent. Has wrought all the beauty of the tropics into the tale and kept the action moving briskly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Where possible a prologue with tropical atmosphere should be staged, with native dances and Hawaiian melodies. Make it plain that the picture was made, so far as its South Sea scenes are concerned, in actual location. Play up the native wedding episode, the curious dances, the thousands of dusky warriors who participated in the production.

DRAWING POWER. Tale's passionate trend and voluptuous dances of native maidens may render it unfit for service in certain communities where the family trade is strictly catered to. In the good-sized towns and large cities it should go over big.

SUMMARY. A genuine work of art in every way. The scenic beauty of the picture is its principal asset, but the story holds its interest throughout, and is pleasingly balanced by crisp bits of comedy.

THE CAST

Tamea	Anita Stewart
Dan Pritchard	Bert Lytell
Mark Mellenger	Huntly Gordon
Maisia	Justine Johnson
James Muggridge	George Siegmann
Gaston Laarrieau	Lionel Belmore

Author, Peter B. Kyne. Director, Maurice Tourneur.

SYNOPSIS. Tamea and her father Gaston arrive in San Francisco from the South Seas, where he ruled the island of Riva. Gaston is discovered to have leprosy and drowns himself. Tamea is taken charge of by his friend Pritchard. Tamea falls in love with him, but leaves for Riva. Pritchard follows and weds her in native fashion. Pritchard declines morally under the tropical spell. His friend Mellenger arrives at the island with Maisie, Pritchard's former fiancee. She offers forgiveness. Tamea relinquishes Pritchard, who goes back with Maisie. Mellenger remains to love and console Tamea.

The Gold Rush

(United Artists—Ten Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

EXHIBITOR and public naturally expected much from Charlie Chaplin's new picture, and their expectations are fully realized in his triple role of author, director and star, as set forth in this superb dramatic comedy. It is safe to prophesy record-breaking box office engagements where "The Gold Rush" is booked. Nothing Chaplin has yet presented to the screen possesses such indications of future golden triumphs.

In plot values it entirely surpasses any former features in which he has appeared. The laughs are as thick as plums in the proverbial pudding, but in and out of the comedy stuff Chaplin has woven dramatic touches imparting thrills and pathos in rich quantity which go over in great style against an Alaskan background of blizzards, mountains and lonely canyons which is wonderfully impressive and a sterling example of perfect camera technique. Charlie, as a tramp prospector, is seen in the never-to-be-forgotten, familiar rig of drooping pants, battered derby and crooked cane. He is, of course, the outstanding figure of the production around which all action centers, but quite equal to the demands of an exacting role, in fact his many admirers are sure to agree that he has never given a performance so replete with artistry and strenuous appeal. When all is said and done, there is only one Chaplin, an assertion absolutely clinched by this production. During his many activities in the Far North this jovial tramp gets mixed up with outaws, dance hall girls, participates in a regular medley of wild adventures, and winds up by securing a partner in a rich gold mine, going back home a multi-millionaire, dressed up to the eyes, and incidentally winning the girl of his dreams. Space does not permit of detailed description of the big scenes, and individual acting of the talented players in support of the star. Suffice it to say that the picture is all-powerful in the elements which go to making of a huge box office success. It is at once a classic and certain money-maker.

THEME. Comedy drama. Alaskan settings. Depicts comic and romantic adventures of tramp who joins gold, rush, winning fortune and girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Atmospheric effects of frozen North. The great blizzard. Charlie cooking one of his famous shoes when he and pardner are starving. McKay's battle with outlaw. Death of latter in mountain slide of ice and snow. Dancehall scenes. Charlie's preparations to entertain girl on New Year's Eve.

DIRECTION. Gets every possible inch of value out of funny and serious situations. Works in clever gags as timely fillers. Stresses thrills and delivers pathetic touches with unerring judgment.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Little needed except to play this up as Chaplin's best picture and masterpiece.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any theatre in the land, large or small. A real box office winner.

SUMMARY. A remarkable production in which Chaplin outdoes all his previous efforts in the entertainment line. Outstanding quality its uniform excellence.

THE CAST

Lone Prospector	Charlie Chaplin
Big Jim McKay	Mack Swain
Black Larson	Tom Murray
Georgia	Georgia Hale
Hank Curtis	Henry Bergman
Jack Cameron	Malcolm Waite

Author and director, Charlie Chaplin. Photographed by Roland Totheroh and Jack Wilson.

SYNOPSIS. Lone tramp touring Alaska during big gold rush gets caught in blizzard. He takes refuge in cabin of Black Larson, outlaw. They are joined by prospector McKay, who has found rich vein of gold. After altercation with proprietor McKay remains. Blizzard continues and inmates cut cards to decide who will go in search of food. Larson goes, meets and kills two officers, loots their food supply, proceeds and finds McKay's claim. McKay and Charlie finally leave. Former goes to town, latter seeks claim. Hank Curtis stakes Charlie to meal and leaves him in charge of his shack. McKay collides with Larson, who is killed in a snow-slide. At a dance-hall Charlie falls in love with girl named Georgia. McKay returns and takes Charlie to look for his mine, promising him half-share. They stay over night at the cabin, which is swept to verge of cliff by storm and escape with difficulty. The claim is found Charlie and McKay go back home millionaires. En-route Charlie meets and wins Georgia.

Romance Road

(Granada Production-Truart—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS one was made obviously for the smaller houses. It reminds us of films of other days both in plot and construction and character interpretation. The story could be told in two reels but is stretched out for a goodly 5,000 feet by injecting a lot of unnecessary business. A youthful American returns from France—broke. He walks from New York to his upstate home where he finds an enthusiastic welcome but no job. He is forced to accept work in a garage after telling his aged mother he has been appointed secretary to the rich Mr. Van Tassler, whose daughter soon falls in love with the hero. However the villain and an aunt make the future look dark for the young former service man until he invents a device to separate water from gasoline. A former buddy markets it. There is much money as a result and the wedding comes as a climax.

Raymond McKee is a likable chap and a good actor, but he had an impossible proposition here. He is, however, the one bright spot in the picture. The supporting cast is mediocre, the work of Marjorie Meadows being too "sweet" and she is far from being "at home" as yet in front of the camera. The picture is filled with much "hokum," the adoption of a lame dog, the arrival of kittens in the O'Brien household, the welcome home of Pat by his mother, etc. There is some interest in the climax in which the hero and heroine supposedly are kidnapped by a gang of hooded fellahs and prepared for their end. But it all turns out to be just a hallowe'en hoax, with the hero's wartime buddy as the responsible person.

The settings are fair, the continuity the same and the photography ordinary. The work of "Hash," the dog will have some appeal for animal lovers as the little canine does some clever work at times. There are a few moments of comedy, especially when the hero pushes the villain into a mud hole, and when he steps on the "gas" and dashes away from the snobbish youth after the heroine also drives away from him on a lonely country road.

Don't promise your patrons too much on this one. It is O. K. on a double bill or if you change your program several times a week but it won't do for the intelligencia. But, of course, it wasn't made for them.

THEME. A comedy drama dealing with the rough road to fortune encountered in a rural setting by a returned service man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The return of the hero to his upstate home town. The refusal of the bank president to re-install the hero in his old job. The snubbing of the soldier at the garden party. The scene in which the heroine drives away from the villain, who is also passed on a lonely road by the hero. The framed kid naping of the couple at the climax.

DIRECTION. Very ordinary. Has failed to make characters very convincing, but has had the handicap of a weak plot and poor cast. Has given the production a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Raymond McKee as the hero of "Down to the Sea in Ships." Tie up with local Legion Posts on the military theme. Arrange window displays in auto supply stores using stills of McKee working on carburetors and cars. Plaster highways leading into town with title of picture.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller downtown houses, the towns and second class community theatres.

SUMMARY. Just another program picture possessing nothing of originality and having little entertainment in its rather hackneyed plot. A fair background and a cast of unknown players, except for Raymond McKee.

THE CAST

Patrick O'Brien ..... Raymond McKee
Buddy ..... Billy Bletcher
Mary Van Tassler ..... Marjorie Meadows
Arthur Waddington Watts ..... Dick Gordon
Mother O'Brien ..... Gertrude Claire

Directed by Fred Windemere. Photographed by Lenwood Abbott. Edited by Frank Ware.

SYNOPSIS. Returning from the war, Patrick O'Brien finds his job not waiting for him as promised when he enlisted. He gets a job in a garage, where he invents a device to improve carburetion and wins the daughter of the rich Van Tassler, in spite of the plotting of the villain and a snobbish aunt.

The Home Maker

(Universal-Jewel—7755 Feet)

A DOMESTIC problem picture, extremely human and natural in tone, the sort of thing which will make the average man or woman ask—"what would I do under such conditions?" Therefore its appeal has a wide range, all the more so because the excellent acting of all the players brings out its sympathetic points and strikes right home to the hearts of the onlookers. It is another example of what fine results can be obtained from a simple plot dealing merely with the lives of ordinary people, when properly handled. Here are no thrills, ornate sets or wonderful scenic shots, just good photography, appropriate surroundings, but a story that grips you.

Credit must be given King Baggot for his skilled work in directing the feature, but he made one mistake—that of piling on superflous footage. Much of the detail in the opening reels regarding the hard time heroine Eva has over the double problem of training the kids and getting her housework done could have been eliminated and the action thereby quickened up a whole lot. However, even this error in judgment doesn't by any means kill off the interest, so appealing are the characterizations outlined by principals and supporting cast. Of course the film brings up the oft-debated question of whether a woman's place is in the home or business field, but whatever may be the opinions held by spectators on that subject they are bound to be entertained by the feature.

Some feminine patrons may find a pleasurable hint of satirical humor in the situations showing how hubby Lester, who made rather a mess of his business bookkeeping job, proves a success at the task of staying home and looking after the kiddies, while wife Alice displays her efficiency on the outside. As a matter of fact, Lester, while he arouses one's pity, looms up as somewhat of a dub at that, for he even fails when he tries to commit suicide, only managing to acquire paralysis of the legs. But as things turn out, this is really a blessing in disguise and a genuine note of pathos is injected toward the final when he begs the physician not to reveal the fact that he is cured, lest the smooth course of family life should be ruffled.

THEME. Domestic problem, involving unhappiness of husband and wife, each dissatisfied with his or her labors in life, until their positions are reversed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Wife's early struggles with her household duties. Husband's dislike of his employment and scene when he not only fails to achieve promotion but is discharged. Situation where Lester, shrinking from informing wife of his bad luck, attempts suicide. Episodes where, though paralyzed in legs, he manages by virtue of his affection for children to keep them in order, while Eva scores a success in business circles.

DIRECTION. Except that he spun the production out to rather unnecessary length, King Baggot has done very well, maintaining its interest from start to finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A tieup with book-stores on Dorothy Canfield's novel of the same title, from which picture is taken, can be arranged. Stress the question of whether a wife should stick to her home tasks or venture into the business world. Wee Billy Kent Schaffer gives a really surprising performance and should be featured, as well as the principals, Alice Joyce and Clive Brook. You can list Miss Joyce's work as one of the finest character sketches she has ever favored the screen with.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for both first-run and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A film which radiates human sympathy and possesses general and sure appeal to the masses.

THE CAST

Eva Knapp ..... Alice Joyce
Lester Knapp ..... Clive Brook
Stephen ..... Billy Kent Schaffer
Dr. Merritt ..... George Fawcett
Mrs. Prouty ..... Virginia Boardman

Author, Dorothy Canfield. Scenario by Mary O'Hara. Director, King Baggot.

SYNOPSIS. Lester Knapp, clerk, attempts suicide when discharged and his legs becomes paralysed. His wife Eva, who hates housework, obtains position and becomes successful business woman. Lester's love for his children results in making them happy. Lester regains use of limbs, but begs doctor to keep it a secret, for fear domestic unhappiness should be renewed. The physician's wise verdict establishes everything on a satisfactory basis.

Eve's Lover

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE up-to-date modern business woman who has made a success in her chosen career, avoided sentimental attachments, but finally falls a victim to the tender passion, thereby becoming involved in a net of complications, is a well-known screen figure. She makes her appearance again in this picture, which is interesting enough to please a majority of movie patrons, despite its somewhat shopworn theme. The heavy drama is nicely balanced with bright comedy effects and this helps a whole lot, even if the story tells nothing particularly new.

Outside of dyed-in-the-wool feminists, most folks who witness the struggles against adverse fortune of heroine Eve Burnside will sympathize with that lady when she yields to the affectionate protestations of the temporarily worthless Baron Maddox, only to discover later that he carries the handicap of a doubtful past out of which comes a former light-of-love to disturb her domestic peace. Irene Rich plays the role of Eve with keen understanding of its dramatic values, and Bert Lytell shows to great advantage as the sophisticated, debonair Baron, whose slogans of "I am crazy at adventure!"—"I am crazy at blondes!"—fully explains his attitude when he makes love to her. Even when you know the Baron to be an unmoral sort of chap, you can't help admiring him some. Therefore, when he turns on the plotters who forced him into their schemes, faces the mob of strikers threatening "Eve's" steel mill plant with destruction, wins them over and saves the day, and husband and wife acknowledge their mutual love, a decidedly pleasing climax is attained.

The principals are well supported, the action moves rapidly, and the big mob scene at the close is remarkably well photographed and a forceful bit of realism.

THEME. Presents successful business woman, owner of steel-plant, who is wooed and won by fascinating Baron. Heart interest drama with many complications.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Development of Eve's love affair with Baron, their marriage, the honeymoon, tropical views. Scene where Baron's former flame shows up, and Eve hears him confess he merely wed her to save himself from prosecution on criminal charge by villain. Situation showing strikers about to destroy plant, rescue of wife by Baron and his appeal to mob which disperses it.

DIRECTION. Shows tendency at times to dwell too much on characterizations at expense of action, but on the whole satisfactory. Builds up situations very neatly in leading up to climax in last reel. Has mounted picture pleasingly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange tieup with local newspaper on woman's page, discussing effect of business woman's outside activities on home career, always a subject of interest to readers. Make canvass of women's organizations in favor of this life drama of one of their sex who successfully operated steel plant, yet yielded to the call of sentiment. The title possesses advertising possibilities. Play up Irene Rich, Bert Lytell, Clara Bow, Willard Louis.

DRAWING POWER. Besides possessing advantages of a strong cast, the story is of peculiar interest to the feminine contingent, whose influence will bring in male patrons. Properly exploited the picture should prove good attraction for average house.

SUMMARY. The plot, although conventional in theme, never actually flops at any time and preserves its interest fairly well up to the climax, which is very effective. Film is an example of how old material can be worked into amusing entertainment by expert handling.

THE CAST

Eve Burnside.....Irene Rich
Baron Geralde Maddox.....Bert Lytell
Rena.....Clara Bow
Austin Starfield.....Willard Louis

Author, Mrs. Clifford. Scenario by Darryl Zanuck. Director, Roy Del Ruth.

SYNOPSIS. Successful business woman weds Baron, who is tool of plotter trying to oust her from control of steel-mill plant. Husband's former flame makes trouble for pair. Wife overhears conversation which convinces her husband is worthless. Agitators force strike in mill. They are about to destroy plant when Baron arrives, rescues wife and placates mob. Husband and wife are reunited.

The Ranger of the Big Pines

(Vitagraph—5800 Feet)

THEY imparted a new touch to an old plot in this picture by basing the principal action on a feud between a cattle baron and Forest Rangers. As every follower of Western melodrama knows, it's usually the cattle and sheep men who fight out their intensely mutual dislike. The film will probably be welcomed wherever the lure of straight shootin' and generally vigorous action, which includes man-handling and a dash of romance, intrigues the patrons and sends them home satisfied.

Also this film differs from the average Westerner in that it depicts the new West, as opposed to the old, when the men were of a more primitive type and a Federal Forest Ranger an unknown quality. Nevertheless, the cowboys are still to the fore, maybe not as strongly inclined to kill on sight when the spirit moves them, as were their predecessors of a vanished generation, but extremely forceful individuals just the same. And there is quite enough doing in the rough-house line to please the admirers of the red-blooded stuff. Kenneth Harlan plays the hero of the great outdoors, as exemplified by the Rocky Mountains and thereabouts. He is in love with the young daughter of Lize Weatherford, a hearty, rugged female who runs a small hotel at Sulphur Springs. Virginia, the daughter in question, doesn't think much of her childhood home when she returns from college, but she does fall in love with Ranger Cavanagh. When the cattlemen plan a descent on Cavanagh's cabin, Virginia proves that she comes of real pioneer stock by scrapping alongside her lover. He finally takes her back East and swears off on the ranging proposition.

Harlan is better as a lover than a fighting hero, although he does very well in the Cavanagh role. He has been essaying much milder parts for a long time back, and probably felt a bit strange when portraying a "slam 'em as they come" person. Helene Costello, daughter of the well known screen veteran, Maurice, is prettily appealing as heroine Virginia. Support adequate, with Eulalie Jensen an impressive figure as the rude but loyal Lize.

THEME. Romantic melodrama, local Western cattle country. Cattle Baron pursues feud against hero, a Federal Forest Ranger. Latter defeats enemies, wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenic beauty of this picture, its really beautiful long shots, and impressive mountain backgrounds will appeal to every true lover of nature. Episode where Virginia returns from college to her childhood home and meeting with her affectionate, if uncultured mother, conveys strong pathetic suggestion. Mother's repulse of unwelcome cowboy suitor, Virginia's resignation to conditions and her love affair with Cavanagh cleverly developed. Surprise finale when girl and Cavanagh fight off the Gregg gang, and it turns out that old man who aided them was really her father, an ex-convict.

DIRECTION. Adequate. Keeps action going tolerably fast, hadn't an extraordinarily strong plot foundation to build on, but manages to maintain interest throughout.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a melodrama of the new West, with love romance in evidence, fine scenery and generous quota of thrills. Feature Kenneth Harlan, Helene Costello, Eulalie Jensen.

DRAWING POWER. Hardly subtle enough for critical audiences, but suitable for houses where exciting—open-air action suits the popular demand.

SUMMARY. A pleasing picture of its type. Different from average Western, with more variety than usual in plot.

THE CAST

Ross Cavanagh.....Kenneth Harlan
Virginia Weatherford.....Helene Costello
Lize Weatherford.....Eulalie Jensen
Sam Gregg.....Will Walling
Joe Gregg.....Lew Harvey
Redfield.....Robert Graves

By Hamlin Garland. Scenario by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton. Director, William Van Dyke. Photographed by Allan Thompson.

SYNOPSIS. Virginia Weatherford returns from Eastern college to childhood home of Sulphur Springs, where her mother Lize runs a rough-and-ready hotel. Girl disappointed with but makes best of surroundings. Falls in love with Forest Ranger Cavanagh, who is at feud with cattle Baron. Virginia rallies to lover's aid when cattlemen attack his cabin. They are aided by old man Edwards, who is killed and turns to be an ex-convict and Virginia's father. Cavanagh takes girl and her mother with him to the East, where he really belongs.

PLANS and contracts were announced this week for two new theatres for Houston. Work has started and when completed one theatre will represent $1,000,000 investment and the other a $150,000 investment.

Jesse H. Jones will build a 3,000 seat theatre for Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Texas, at the cost of a million dollars. It will be located on the south half of the block bounded by Main and Travis and McKinney and Lamar and will be one of the finest in the south. Jones agreed to build this theatre for Southern Enterprises last fall when they took over the management of the Melba Theatre, Dallas, Texas, which is owned by Jones. The stage will be on the Travis street side with the entrance on Main street, giving the theatre the full run of a city block. The inside of the theatre, according to Alfred C. Finn, architect, will be after the Egyptian style throughout. If present plans hold it will be the future home of Paramount pictures and will open for the public early in September, 1926. Excavation work is now under way and other contracts will be announced in a short time.

The second theatre to be announced this week will be located at 914 Preston avenue, and will be erected by Theo D. Polemanakos, James G. Gafcales and associates. Work is now under way and the 000. It will be fitted throughout with modern equipment. The interior decorations and architecture will be Spanish design. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,660, 860 downstairs and 400 in the balcony. William Ward Watkins, the architect, announced that the theatre would be opened by October 15th. It will be a popular price theatre and play a popular program.

Mr. Polemanakos, the manager, is well known in the theatre world of south Texas, having been manager of the Olymphus theatre since it was erected several years ago, prior to that he was connected with the Crown theatre.

Plans are set and invitations have been posted for the Great Movie Ball which will be held at the City Auditorium Saturday night, August 1st. The local theatre owners are putting forth a great deal of time and money to put the Great Movie Season over with a bang in Houston.

Edna W. Saunders, concert director and road show manager, has left for a motor trip through Kentucky and other central states. She will return to Houston early in September and plans to open for the fall season October 1st

John Victor, manager of the Mission theatre at Abilene, has announced that his theatre will go from a two a week schedule to full time. The house has been cost will be approximately $150,- completely overhauled, new equipment added and the force of employees increased.

Martha Francis in First National's "Scarlet West."

The H. T. Hodge circuit, operating theatres in Abilene, Winters, Merkel, Ballinger and Stamford, have purchased a building on Main street at Winters and will open a theatre there about the first of September. F. H. Hodge, who manages the Queen theatre in that city, will also be in charge of the new house and plans to show pictures of the highest class.

Manager Harry Kitterman opened the New American theatre at Orange, Texas, on July 15th with an elaborate program.

Construction of P. A. Preddy's new theatre at Robstown, Texas, has reached the point where equipment is about to be installed. Mr. Preddy also operates the Elaine at this point.

The Mission at Dalhart recently had a $1,500 fire that damaged the electric piano and scenery. The blaze was discovered after theatre closing and it is believed that a lighted cigarette was the cause. No insurance was carried on this part of the equipment.

Jeff Custer, of Slaton, Texas, plans to open his new theatre about September 15th. The seating capacity will be 700.

Texas oilfields, near Holliday, are to have a new motion picture theatre, according to plans announced by a partnership under the name of Senter & Senter. Equipment has already been contracted for.

The Gem theatre at Dumas, recently destroyed by fire, has been rebuilt and it is planned to reopen the house the latter part of July. W. I. Fish is the manager of the Gem.

John A. Snider, and son who operate the Grand theatre in Bessemer, Ala., paid Atlanta a brief visit for a few days this week.

J. N. Thomas, of Southern Enterprises, stopped in Atlanta Thursday, on his way from New York to Jacksonville.

Harry Kirschgessner, of Producers Distributing Corporation, was in town for a few days this week. He is in this territory for the purpose of transferring the Carolina records from the Atlanta office to the new Charlotte exchange.

The Naomi theater, operated by C. A. Adams and L. S. McDaniel, will open in Glenwood, Ga., in the near future, as construction is practically complete.

The new headquarters for the local Paramount force are practically complete, and, according to an announcement from Dave Prince, branch manager, the office force will move from 51 Luckie street to its new home 110-112 Walton street, by Tuesday of next week. The new exchange is one of the largest and most completely equipped in the South. It is a two story brick building occupying 4,000 square feet of ground space.

Minnesota

H. E. ROSENQUIST of the New York office is busy at the Universal headquarters here putting in a new card system to facilitate the handling of the heavy work. It is said the layout will tell at a glance everything the bookers want to know about a house or its program. Universal paid a lot of money for the copyright on this index and is spending a lot more installing it. Rosenquist has been here 10 weeks and has two or three more weeks work with a staff of stenographers and clerks before it will be finished.

C. A. Brady, Jr., traveling auditor for Pathe has just finished a five weeks' visit in Minneapolis and has gone on to Chicago.

E. J. McErlane, assistant manager of United Artists Minneapolis office has taken up golf to help him stand the strain. He has already broken 200.

Miss Corinne Sather of the same office is taking a well earned vacation.

Hal Daigler, manager of the Capitol theatre in St. Paul, is on his way back from Seattle where he has been visiting his folks and touching up the fishing.

Fred Knispel who used to be manager for Vitagraph in Minneapolis, is now assistant district manager under Cecil Mayberry with Producers Distributing company here.

George Bromley of Chicago has taken over the management of the State theatre at Alexandria.

Miss Corinne Sather of the United Artists staff in Minneapolis is on her vacation this week.

Miss Elsie Berends, chief inspectress at the Pathe offices is visiting her mother in Wisconsin.

Miss Anne Griffin, cashier of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, is taking a fortnight off and Miss Frances Levine of the staff is on a trip to Chicago and Milwaukee.

Miss Frances Greenberg, contract clerk of the Vitagraph forces is spending a pair of weeks at the Great Lakes.

The Vitagraph organization is in a furore as a result of the arrangement for taking over the Warner Brothers product. Tom Burke, manager, has been on the road all week but things began to fly when he returned and some new announcements are expected when the smoke clears away.

Mrs. Elizabeth Schulz of the Universal organization has returned from a two weeks' outing and Miss Blanche Maricle, contract clerk, and Miss Hilma Gumboult have started for their annual vacation.

Charley Howard, Associated Exhibitors' representative, has taken on three extra salesmen, George Levine, L. H. Conway and H. J. Gibson and is making a drive through the territory cleaning up new business.

Eddie Johnson, Pathe's booker, left work in competent hands this week end and is off for the fishing grounds in Wisconsin.

Opening of the Milwaukee office of the Fox Film Corporation has made a difference in Minneapolis. Part of Wisconsin and the northern Peninsula of Michigan have been taken away and given to the Milwaukee force leaving the Minneapolis organization to concentrate on Minnesota, North and South Dakota, northern Iowa and a strip of Wisconsin running about to Eau Claire. Paul Schulz who has had the Michigan territory and part of Northern Minnesota has been transferred to the Wisconsin headquarters. He has been with the Fox outfit here for two years.

Eph Rosen, manager of the Film Booking offices in Minneapolis, has just returned from the Iron range and Superior. He report business surprisingly good in the range country with the mines opening up to take on from 1,000 to .1,500 new men. There is a rumor, he says, that Cavour Hartleigh, owner of the property on which the Duluth Orpheum theatre is located, will run an arcade through from that theater to Superior street, the main street in the city, to take advantage of new business brought to the district by the building of the New Duluth hotel.

The theatre has been handicapped by the fact that patrons were compelled to climb one of Duluth's steepest hills to reach its entrance.

L. A. Hummell, former branch manager for Universal in Sioux Falls and earlier representative of First National, has joined the F. B. O. staff here as key center man for the territory working out of Minneapolis.

Not long ago, according to Eph Rosen, a funny looking individual blew into the F. B. O. headquarters in the Film Exchange building and began to burst through into the private office. He had a complexion like a Chippewa Indian and was immediately sized up as a country exhibitor who had been earning the payroll by participating in the festivities of the harvest fields. Then somebody let out a yell for the stranger was recognized as Leo Ryan, cashier of the office, who had been spending a couple of weeks in Iowa.

Benny Berger of the Metropolitan theater in Grand Forks will be back at work soon. He reports the birth of an 8-pound boy.

The new Garden theatre at Hibbing opened last Wednesday, July 1st, after the difficulty between the Edelsteins and their landlord had been amicably settled. The house was scheduled to open May the 1st and Edelstein's lease expired on that date at the Victory. The Victory was closed and the party who built the new Garden refused to allow the Edelsteins to go into the new building before it was entirely completed and yet charged them rent on the property. There are rumors to the effect that Edelstein will bring suit for the two months rent that he had to pay before the building was finished. The Garden is an attractive house with a seating capacity of 450 and is located on Howard St., about three blocks from the F. & R. State theatre.

New York and New Jersey

A NUMBER of theatre openings are scheduled for the latter part of July and during the month of August. The Woodrow, at 610 Wilson Ave., Brooklyn, will start on a three day a week schedule and go into full time about September 1st. The Bluebird, being built by Kerman at Livonia Ave., Brooklyn, is expected to be heady in two weeks. The Lyons theatre at Morristown, N. J., will open on July 27th, and the Hamilton, in Brooklyn, on Saturday, July 25th.

Bill Brandt, who has taken over the Montauk in Brooklyn, is laying out considerable money on alterations. Both the Montauk and the New Carleton, the latter under construction, will be ready for business in the early fall.

Mount Vernon will have a new 1,500 seat theatre that is expected to be ready about the first of December. It is being built on 5th Street and by the owner of the Little Photoplay House, which is located in the same city.

George Marrow, of the Harry Harris Enterprises, is managing the West End on 125th Street. Fred Deolinger, the former manager has recently resigned.

Louis Rosenthal who operates the Lyceum and Colonial theatres in Orange, N. J., will reopen his houses Labor Day. Mr. Rosenthal has expended about $25,000 on alterations and everything will be in tip top shape on the opening day.

Herman Barbash, formerly associated with the Herman Rachmiel Circuit, and a recent manager of the East Side Jewish Theatre, is back at his old stand at the Sheffield. Mr. Barbash feels at home there and is glad to be back with his former associates.

The Rachmiel Circuit's new theatre that is under construction at Livonia and Saratoga Aves., Brooklyn, will be ready about the first of November. It is a strictly modern theatre and the seating capacity about 2,500.

It is reported that Matthew Christmas of Yonkers is about to take over two new houses in Westchester County. They are under construction and nearly complete.

According to Joe Hornstein, and Joe ought to be pretty well posted, there are at least one hundred theatres under construction in this territory. And, as usual, Joe is getting his share of the new equipment installations in local theatres. Recent equipment orders furnished by Howell's include the Supreme Theatre, Brooklyn, the New Embassador, being built by Rachmiel, Walter Reade's Asbury Park houses, and Bill Brandt's Montauk and New Carleton.

E. H. Metzger, owner of the Park theatre at Caldwell, N. J., probably one of the finest suburban theatres in this country, was a caller among the exchanges this last Tuesday.

Vacations are in order with local exhibitors and A. Phillips, Secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Brooklyn, also operating the Central and Wilson theatres, has gone for a two weeks rest at Fleischmans, N. Y. Harry Saunders, brother of Rudy Saunders, left last Saturday on a two weeks trip. Dave Mannheimer will go to Saratoga about August 17th and Frank Valli who runs the Fugazy theatre on West Houston Street, left recently on a pleasure tour of Europe.

Miss Sylvia Goodman, who helps run Joe Seider's office, returned last Monday from a pleasant two weeks spent in the mountains. Al Moley, of the same office, is also entertaining hopes of getting away from his booking sheets for awhile.

It is reported that the Electra theatre, located at 74th St. and 3d Ave., Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, will be taken over by the Shore Road Theatre Corporation about Aug. 1st.

Brooklyn is to have two more new theatres, one in the Boro Hall section that will be combined with an office building, and one in the suburbs at Ralph and Sutter Aves. The Montour Realty Company are the purchasers of the site of the former while Shapman & Shapman, architects, will supervise the construction of the latter, which will have a seating capacity of 2,800.

Buffalo

JOHN FARREN, manager of the Victoria theatre, Rochester, official umpire and chief funmaker at the annual outing of the Rochester Motion Picture Theatre Owners' association, put on his famous hill climb up the slopes at Point Pleasant, where the outing was held, Tuesday, July 21, for a five dollar bill, but the event wasn't staged until after the 50 or more attendants had exhausted themselves in a baseball game. Therefore the entry attracted only six of the "younger bloods." John Stritzel and Lester Lipsky were in at the finish in a dead heat, but John snatched the five just as Lester was clutching for it.

The hill climb came as a climax of a big day of fun. Arch McCallum, manager of Fay's theatre, started off the afternoon by a win in a shoe race. Without a formal program the fillum fellahs had an afternoon of job, most of it in the ball game. Managers of the Rochester theatres lined up against managers of the Buffalo film exchanges with John Farren again the center of the picture as umpire. Pitchers came and went but the scoring went on and on. Bill Calihan, manager of the Regent and a major league player for a time in his youth, put the Rochester nine ahead for a time with a magnificent slide into third after sending two runs across the plate. The advantage, however, was not destined to remain with the Rochester nine, for the Buffalo men picked up their bats with a vengeance. The outcome was never in doubt after Harry Levy brought the winning run over with a fast fall-away slide into the home plate.

The day started with a dinner in the Point Pleasant hotel, at which R. F. Woodhull, president of the M.P.T.O. of A., was the guest of honor. Michael Commerford of Scranton was also present. Jules Greenstone, president of the Rochester organization and Michael F. Carr, secretary, were in charge of the arrangements. Among those present were: A. A. Elliott, Hudson; Sid Allen, Medina; Charles Loodarn, Universal; Bill Rowell, Fox; Paul Shaver, Pathe; Harry Levy, Associated Exhibitors; Richard C. Fox, Freedom Film; Frank Spreeter, Auburn Theatre Supply company; Charles M. Klein; William Schwab, Hoosiac; F. J. A. McCarthy, First National; Henry E. Wilkinson, Marr & Colton Organ company; "Cuckoo" Arnold, Universal exploiteer and these Rochester exhibitors: Bill Calihan, John Farren, H. W. Shannon, J. J. O'Neil, Arch McCallum, Sol Schaffer, T. A. Aspenleiter, V. O. Aspenleiter, F. J. Koch, Mike Carr, C. W. Block, George Caffrey, George Evans, Cass F. Stahley, William Stahley, George J. Kress, Bert Falk, Sol Tischkoff, Max Fogel, George Frank, John Stritzel and John J. Johnston.

The Regent theatre in Corning, N. Y., which has been closed for some time, is being renovated and repaired for formal opening some time in September. The house is to be operated by the J. Meyer Schine Theatre corporation, which organization also controls the State and Princess in the same city. The house will be under the direct supervision of Charles J. Rose, district manager.

The mayor and members of the city council of Buffalo have been served with an order directing them to show cause in supreme court why they should not be compelled to issue a permit to the Riverside Amusement company for a moving picture theatre at 822-824 Tonowanda street. The council has refused the permit. Property owners near the site objected to the house.

Perhaps the biggest news of the week is that Charlie Bowe, veteran theatre man of Buffalo, where he now manages the Frontier, is to be married this fall. The news has shocked both exhibitors and exchange men but it only goes to prove that you can keep a good man down. Charlie was "on the job" way back in the days when they used to show films of speeding trains in stores in lower Main street.

Alan Forrest, signed to a new contract with Jackie Coogan Productions, released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

H. P. Lally of the Regent and Capitol in Dunkirk, N. Y., is down in Florida taking a peek at that much boosted real estate. Wonder if H. P. is going to open a theatre down there?

The musicians' union in Jamestown, N. Y., has started something. The men have been receiving $45 for a seven day week. Now they want the same amount for a six day week and $9 extra for the seventh day. The exhibitors will fight the move.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplays corporation, Buffalo, announces the completion of his fall lineup. Mr. Samson also announces the engagement of E. J. Hays, formerly a member of the Producers Distributing corporation sales staff as a member of the Bond staff.

A model of the proposed open-air theatre in Delaware Park, Buffalo, has just been completed by R. J. Kinkel, architect of the department of parks and public buildings, and now is on exhibit in his office in Elmwood Music hall. The theatre is designed in terms of landscape architecture rather than construction and the tiers of seats which will run across the curvel slope will be terraced in turf. The cost of the project is estimated at $25,000.

Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, has returned from a motor tour to the Thousand Islands and is all set for the busiest season in the history of the big Buffalo house.

Norman L. Sper, better known to exhibitors in western New York, as just plain "Jimmy" has resigned as manager of the Buffalo exchange of Dependable Pictures corporation and has been succeeded by Alan S. Moritz, who has been associated with several distributors in the Buffalo territory and who recently has been operating the Ritz, formerly the Lumberg theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y. The resignition of Jimmy came as a shockto his friends. Jimmy has been taking on the duties both of manager and staff for a long time. He has not as yet announced his plans for the future, but says he is considering several offers.

Work is progressing rapidly on the mammoth new Shea Buffalo theatre. The walls are almost complete and the roof is on. The imposing front is up and the marquise in place. The interior work is also going ahead rapidly and the house will soon be entirely ready for the work inside.

Jim Fater, Rochester district representative for the Buffalo First National office, is looking much happier since that suit against him for bumping another car, has been dropped. Saw Jim touring 'bout Kodak Town the other day in a new Hudson coach and beaming as only a 250 pound man can beam.

Capacity houses were the order of the first week of the new Palace theatre in Lockport, N. Y., and Manager George T. Cruzen was showered with compliments on the splendid staging of the program. It was Old Home Week in the Lock City and there were thousands of visitors in town, all of whom were enthusiastic over the splendid temple of amusement.

MRS. FLORENCE ACKLEY LEY, head of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company which controls six theatres in that city, was in charge of the singing program which was a feature of the annual outing for blind persons, conducted on July 23 by the Dauphin County Association for the Blind. The outing included also boat ride on the Susquehanna river and a picnic at Island Park. Forty-one blind persons were the guests of honor.

Carr & Schad, Inc., of Reading, which controls a big chain of picture theatres in that city and Lebanon, is cooperating with The Reading Times in conducting the 1925 contest to select the girl who will represent the city as "Miss Reading" in the annual beauty show at Atlantic City the second week in September.

The Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls many theatres in the hard coal mining regions, has awarded to Breig Brothers, of Scranton the contract for the erection of its proposed new theatre and business building in Hazelton. The architects are L. Lempert & Sons, of Rochester, N. Y.

Pictures are being shown twice a week this summer in the auditorium of Gartner's Casino, at Parkland, which has been leased for the season by H. J. Mack and Edward Gabriel.

It is expected that Peter Magaro, prominent Harrisburg motion picture exhibitor for twenty years until last May when he sold his Regent Theatre to the Marcus Loew interests, will return about September 1 from Europe where he has been traveling since early summer. He is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Magaro, and Marino Acri and the latter's daughter. Mr. Magaro will devote his activities, upon his return, to the operation of his big dancing hall, the Coliseum, and to his extensive real estate interests in Harrisburg.

Fred Shafer, of the New York office of the United Artists' Corporation, was in Harrisburg on July 21, visiting the newspaper offices in the interest of publicity for forthcoming productions by these stars.

Miss Mary Judge, who holds an important post in the general offices of the Comerford Amusement Company, in Scranton, has recently returned to that city after a vacation passed at Delaware Water Gap.

Albany

HAROLD FILKINS, a well known salesman connected with the F. B. O. exchange in Albany, is recovering from a recent operation for appendicitis. Mr. Filkins was in Mechanicville, talking with Exhibitor Tweedy of that place, when he complained of feeling ill. His condition became rapidly worse and Mr. Tweedy brought him to his home in Albany and a doctor was called. Mr. Filkins was then rushed to a local hospital and operated upon.

Fred W. Mausert is rushing work on the theatre which he is building in Glens Falls. The balcony has been completed and it now looks as though the house would be in shape to open in the early fall.

A committee consisting of J. H. MacIntyre, as chairman; Jack Krause, Leon Medem and Herman Stearn, has completed arrangements for the annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade, which will be held on September 15, at Luther's hotel on Saratoga Lake. One of the features of the day will be a baseball game between the exchange managers and the salesmen. Gene Tunney, the well known fighter, will do his training at Luther's, and will naturally be the center of attraction at the coming outing.

Abe Stone, Walter Roberts, Jack Krause and Louis Buettner made up the Arbitration Board at a meeting last Monday, which lasted for four straight hours, and which will be the last for another month or so.

By being away on his vacation, C. R. Halligan, who is connected with the local Universal exchange, lost out on a couple of broilers which John Mattice, of the Novelty in Middleburg, brought with him when he came to town the other day. Mr. Halligan and Mr. Mattice have been friends for many years. Mr. Mattice lugged the broilers back home and remarked that the next time he came to Albany, he hoped to find Mr. Halligan at his desk.

There is a brand new house being erected these days in Coxsackie. Ground has already been broken and it is expected that the theatre will be in shape for opening in the fall and in time to catch the fall and winter business.

Vincent Fisher, booker at the F. B. O. office, has just returned from an automobile trip to Washington, D. C., on which he was accompanied by his mother. Lee Marcus, general sales manager for F. B. O., spent a day in Albany last week, conferring with Herman Stearn, local manager.

Now that the trout fishing is just about over, Harry Lazarus, of the Auditorium, in town during the past week, is recounting tales of the bass he is taking near Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Lazarus, with their four-year-old son, will spend a couple of weeks this month at Lake George.

L. L. Connors, who is running a theatre in Cambridge, and one which suffered considerably from fire two weeks ago, is now on the road as a salesman for F. B. O., although continuing to run his theatre. This part of the program is being ably taken care of by Mrs. Connors and the boys. Mr. Connors will cover the section north of Albany.

Mike Kallet, who is running the Strand in Rome, has a summer home at Old Forge, where he is spending much of his time these days.

Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, is taking his vacation this week, indulging in an automobile trip to New York, and winding up at Lake George. Mr. Veiller deserves a vacation, however, having suffered all kinds of agony for several days from an infected tooth.

It looks as though Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose in Troy, would soon be charging a straight 15 cent admission seven days out of the week. He is now running what he terms professional tryouts on Friday nights, playing to capacity with 15 cents to everyone. He is now charging fifteen cents four nights a week, although the Rose was originally a ten cent house.

When Lew Fischer completes the improvements now under way at the Bradley theatre in Fort Edward, he will run vaudeville along with the pictures. During the past week, a contract was let for a new lighting system in the house as well as the complete redecorating of the interior.

T. Roy Kiefer, the well known conductor of the orchester at the Troy theatre, is just back from a week's automobile trip through the New England states. During his absence, the orchestra was handled by John Gamble.

Ted O'Shea, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in Albany, hasn't had a vacation in seven years, and doesn't intend to take one this year. Mr. O'Shea asserts that he was not only extremely busy just now but also extremely healthy and between the two he can not figure out any reason for even a week's rest.

The Majestic theatre in Elmira, after having been closed for a month, is scheduled to reopen the forepart of August with Benjamin Berinstein looking after the details. Julius Berinstein, a brother, who runs the Palace in Troy, plans to resume his matinees during the week as soon as business picks up at the collar factories.

Dave Epstein is manager of the King theatre in Troy, which is now being run by James Rose. Mr. Rose is a firm believer in advertising of both the newspaper and lobby variety. He now has a half dozen houses in Troy and elsewhere and reports business as being satisfactory in all of them.

Montague Glass, who did titles for Fox version of John Golden stage success, "The Wheel."

L. J. Carkey, who has been serving as manager of three theatres in Carthage, has just been appointed a district manager for Schine brothers, and will make his home hereafter in Little Falls. He will be succeeded in Carthage, by his brother, George J. Carkey, who has been associated with him for some time past. It is understood that the Schines have decided upon combining their many theatres into districts of a dozen or more houses each, placing a district manager over each group, and giving each theatre a house manager, who will report to the district manager, and who in turn will be held responsible by the Schines for the conduct of the houses generally.

Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold theatre in Troy, is planning to hold an Old Home Week, starting on August 16, at which time he will employ whatever professional talent may be home during the summer. Pictures will be run along with the acts, with plenty of prizes and plenty of contests. Mr. Golden has just returned from a week spent at his former home in Boston.

Accompanied by his two sisters, Benjamin Berinstein, of Elmira, has been enjoying an automobile trip of two weeks to Chicago.

A report to the effect that a stock company would replace pictures at Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, was denied during the past week, with the statement that the same policy as at present would prevail at the Hall during the fall and winter months.

The Troy, Lincoln and Mark Strand theatres in Albany and Troy, are participating in the Greater Movie Season, being about the only large houses in this section to take advantage of the proposition.

W. W. Mase, who runs the "Mase" theatre in Prattsville, was among the visitors along Film Row during the past week. Thomas Bush and F. A. Sullivan, of Middleburg, were also in town.

Mrs. Francis McGraw, who owned the Gem theatre in Little Falls for several years, and who recently sold her house to the Schine brothers, will continue to be in charge. The little theatre is still running and will continue to do so.

Abe Stone, of the Delaware and Arbor Hill theatres in Albany, is back from a 1,000-mile trip that took him to New York City, Atlantic City, Washington, Gettysburg and other places. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stone, their baby and his mother-in-law.

Bob Wagner, veteran showman and former manager of the Gateway theatre in Little Falls, is busy these days in buying up all outstanding stock in the theatre which was recently taken over by the Schine brothers. The house is scheduled to reopen early in August and with a brand new sign, as well as many improvements within, the house will be more attractive than ever.

Miss Agnes Riley, a bookkeeper in the Fox exchange, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Loon Lake. Employees in the local Pathe exchange, are now planning for another picnic, but no definite date has yet been fixed.

Basil Brady, manager of the Pathe branch in Buffalo, and Harry Knappen, of New York city, a special feature representative, arrived in Albany during the past week, and in company with Leon Medem, local manager, swooped down on the Schine brothers in Gloversville for an entire day.

Sam Hochstim, who has a theatre in Hudson and his brother, Ed, who peddles Pathe product out of Albany, may some day become the "Warner brothers" of the industry, for both of the young men plan to become producers as soon as the way opens and the necessary cash and opportunity are forthcoming.

Business continues to be good at all of the local motion picture theatres, largely through the fact that the evenings are cool and that there has been a great deal of rain during the month of July. Many persons who had planned on leaving town on vacations, have changed their minds on account of the weather, and this has brought additional business to the theatres. Some of the exhibitors, pleased at the attendance, and seeking to stimulate the same, are showing pictures that ordinarily would be held for the winter months.

Bringing back no fish, but returning with tales of wonderful scenery and many strikes, Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, is once more on the job after a week spent in Canada.

Saenger Amuse. Opens Million Dollar House

Strand, Shreveport, La., Embodies Latest Theatre Design; Has 2,200 Seats

THE Saenger-Ehlrich Enterprises, Inc., recently opened a new million dollar theatre in Shreeveport, La., that is held forth as an example of the most advanced science and art of modern motion picture theatre design and appointment. This new house has a seating capacity of 2,200 and is named the Strand. A complete detailed description of this amusement palace has been submitted to the News and is herewith published as a source of reference for other exhibitos contemplating building elaborate houses of their own:

Combines Beauty and Utility

The exterior of the Strand represents a grouping into a beautiful and practical construction plan the best elements of the leading playhouses of this and other countries.

Emile Weil, architect for the Saenger Ehrlich interests, has traveled afar. In these travels he has visited some of the world renowned homes of the drama, show palaces, the boasts of great metropolitan centers of this and other countries. He selected detail of construction and adornment which have been incorporated in the exterior lines and interior embellishments of the Strand.

The Strand represents, exclusive of ground value, an investment of fully one million dollars.

For one and one-half years this theatre has been in the course of construction. The period of time spent in construction is indicative of the thoroughness and painstaking attention to details.

The builders desired a theatre beautiful, elaborate, elegant and safe, with every comfort provided and in every line and decoration a delight to the eye.

Compels Attention

Seen from the exterior, the Strand compels the attention of the passerby. The great dome, artistic by day and beautiful in its varied colored myriad lights by night, attract the eye. But in this lighting as in the announcement signs about the marquise and the wall signs, there is a dignified softness, nothing garish, yet attracting the eye to the messages and beauties of construction.

The Crockett Street side of the Strand is embellished with a great Gothic arch, patterned along the lines of the Cathedral windows of great European centers. The keystone of the arch tells the message and there is an inscription, hewn in the stone and gilded, which further declares the purposes of this great temple of art, namely to furnish wholesome amusement for progressive people.

The lobby of the Strand is in solid marble and genuine travitine stone walls. The floor is laid with marble blocks. The ticket windows are practicable and in harmony with elaborateness of the lobby in general. Gazing above the eye sees lights of many colors twinkle as the stars in the firmament.

Marvelous Painting

Saenger Amuse. Opens Million Dollar House

when the Old World was in the heyday of its glory.

From the lobby one steps into the great foyer. One is compelled to hesitate involuntarily by the scene of beauty.

There are great mirrors, in golden frames. Rich carpets, cover the floor. Draperies, damask, silk and velour, of soft tones add their touch and in the center there is a fountain with a mirrored background in which the waters are reflected, deep red and blue, glow being produced by artistically conceived and arranged lighting effects.

There are a number of chandeliers. Each has many globes. Each sparkles resplendently through the crystals. And leading above there are wide stairways, the steps of solid marble and the balustrades of marble and artistically wrought metal.

From the foyer stairs lead down also into the men's smoking room where every provision is made for their comfort. The smoking room is a circular room with lavatories adjoining.

From the foyer one enters into the lower floor auditorium of the theatre. Throughout the house the aisles are carpeted. The carpet is costly and soft of tasteful design.

All Seats, "Good Seats"

All 2,200 seats are "good-seats" that is they are comfortable, upholstered in genuine leather and with visibility unobstructed to each. There are no posts in the Strand to mar the view.

Off the stage, there are great loges, or boxes, handsomely draped and beautifully decorated. These boxes, uppers and lowers on each side are capable of comfortably seating nearly 200 persons.

The orchestra pit is ample. A feature of the Strand musical equipment is the Robert-Morton-Duplex organ. The acoustics of the theatre are so excellent that the sound swells and rolls through the great structure, delighting every ear with the mellowness of the music.

There is the stage. The proscenium arch 46 feet wide and 52 feet high is among the largest stages of the country. The drop curtain is of costly material.

Cooling System

So many degrees colder than without, the message which is taken "with a grain of salt," in the case of the average theatres. is a presentment of truth in the case of the Strand.

The cooling and ventilation' system of this great theatre is the last word in perfection. The spectator coming from the sultry and torrid outside, can be assured every comfort while in the theatre.

Henry Seel, for many years connected with the Saenger Organization is the Managing Director of the Strand, and Howard L. Swain, Supervising Manager of Saenger Amusement Co's Shreveport Theatres, is the Strand's Director of Publicity.

Rousseau Bros. Building New Theatre Near Granada, S. F.

Following in line with the success of the Aztec and Egyptian Theatres, San Francisco, Rousseau Bros. are building another theatre to add to their holdings, several doors from the Granada Theatre. The house will be slightly larger than the twin theatres, and it is planned to open about July 15th and to call it the Pompeian. It will be under the supervision of Max Graf.

Ontario Theatre Destroyed in $200,000 Blaze

Howard Hager, owner of the Regal Theatre at Hagersville, Ontario, lost his theatre on the night of June 14 when the handsome building was destroyed by fire which started in adjoining premises from unknown cause. The total property loss, including the adjacent structures, amounted to $200,000. It is the announced intention of Mr. Hager to rebuild the theatre without delay.

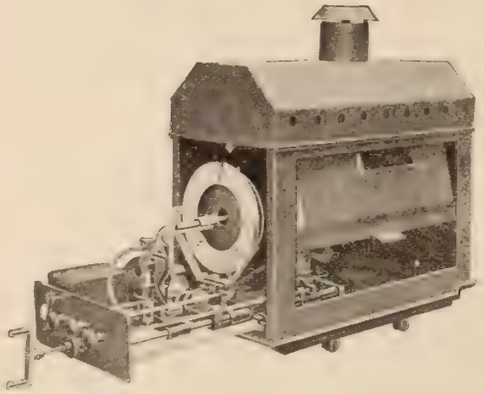
EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

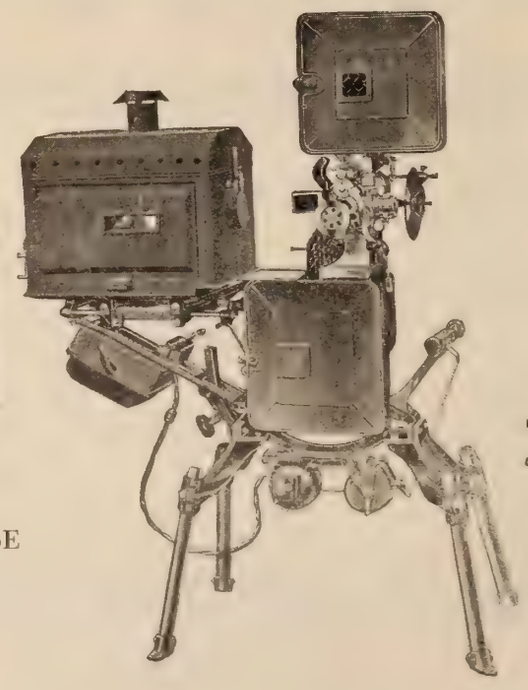
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

POWERLITE

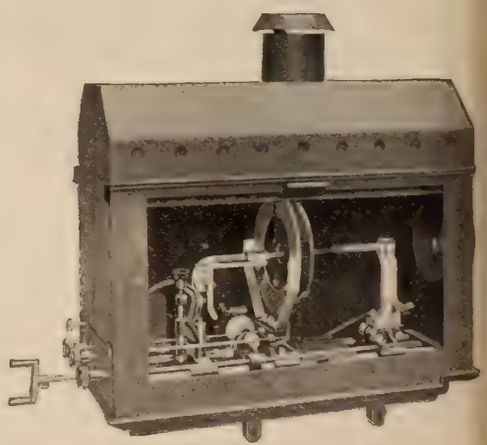


This company has long been fully aware of the value of the reflector lamp but did not feel justified in placing one on the market until a lamp of this type could be offered to the motion picture industry which would fully live up to the reputation we have established for Power's Projectors and Power's Products. In offering Powerlite we feel that a reflector lamp has finally been produced which overcomes the serious defects of the earlier lamps and in addition has a number of important improvements and patented features which will win the strong approval of exhibitors, managers and projectionists.

Control apparatus is very neat and compact and is attached inside the lamphouse, thus eliminating the necessity for extra shafts, gears and control handles. Constructed so that perfect control of the arc is secured and carbons fed intermittently and automatically upon an infinitesimal rise of voltage brought about by the burning of the carbons. Control apparatus is thoroughly protected and it is impossible for the current to reach the motor until the arc is struck regardless of whether the line switch is open or closed. This permits the control motor to be wound for proper arc voltage and to operate positively at full voltage as soon as it is brought into the circuit. The control mechanism forms part of the lamp itself and only the necessary controls project from the rear of the lamphouse.



The method of inserting carbons will be found a real convenience to the projectionist. It is merely necessary to press a lever, insert carbons into the carbon holders FROM THE SIDE and release the lever. The carbons are then locked into position ready for operation without the use of tools. Vertical adjustment of the negative carbon and lateral adjustment of the positive carbon have been provided for in a manner which will be found very satisfactory to the projectionist and Powerlite also permits an exceptionally long carbon trim. An improved friction device allows the arc to be struck and fed without unlocking it from the motor feed system.



Special attention has been given to the design and construction of the mirror which has been made according to our own specifications. Improved insulated mirror supports and latch allow the mirror to be readily removed for cleaning. A radical departure and a great improvement in lamphouse construction has been made in Powerlite by having the door slide quickly and easily into the top of the lamphouse. This action is similar to that of the door in a sectional bookcase and leaves the interior clear and accessible for the projectionist's manipulation. The lamp slides easily into or out of the lamphouse and this will be found extremely convenient when cleaning or making replacements.

Powerlite can be attached in about five minutes to Power's, Simplex or Motiograph and no lining-up or similar adjustments are required.

REFLECTOR LAMP

SHOWING POWERLITE REFLECTOR LAMP READY FOR OPERATION

POWERLITE REFLECTOR LAMP

Lamphouse

Powerlite lamphouse is of ample capacity and this is extremely important as the reflector lamp requires a certain minimum space in order to secure the most efficient results.

Stereopticon attachment may be easily swung into position for projecting slides, operating in a manner similar to that of the ordinary arc lamp.

Entire lamphouse is finished in black crystallized lacquer and makes a very attractive appearance.

ECONOMIES

Practical tests and actual use in thousands of theatres have definitely shown the tremendous economies effected by the use of the reflector arc lamp. The figures given on this page may therefore be accepted without doubt or hesitancy, and investigation will fully substantiate all statements made.

Powerlite Reflector Lamp using approximately 20 amperes actually delivers more light and of a better quality than the ordinary arc lamp using 75 to 80 amperes direct current. This means that an immediate saving is effected of 75% in current consumption alone in addition to the superior results obtained upon the screen. A house using 75 ampere arcs (ignoring entirely the fact that two of them are burnt for a portion of the day and taking only one into consideration) paying for current at the rate of 5c per kilowatt and running ten hours a day for one year, by using Powerlite Reflector Lamp will effect a saving of over $1,000 in current.

A large saving is also effected in carbons as the ordinary D. C. arc using from 70 to 80 amperes requires 7/8 x 12 positive carbons and 7/16 x 6 negative carbons. At least two negative carbons will be used for each positive carbon consumed. Using 1,000 positive carbons per year at $161.00 per thousand and 2,000 negative carbons at $72.00 per thousand, the amount paid for carbons during the year would be approximately $305.00. As against this 1,000 sets of carbons for the reflecting arc will cost at the most $85 and only one negative is necessary for each positive consumed. Figuring that only 1,000 sets of carbons are used per year (and this estimate is fairly conservative) the carbon saving with Powerlite would be $220.00 — a saving of approximately 70%.

The method of carbon support in the Powerlite permits the stubs to be burned extremely short and this of course prevents unnecessary waste. Other economies are also effected through the elimination of condenser breakage and on such items as carbon holder replacements.

Powerlite Reflector Lamp will also be found more reliable than the ordinary reflector lamp and its simplicity and convenience will make a strong appeal to the projectionist.

The economies secured through the use of Powerlite seem so extraordinary and the figures are so startling it may be difficult at first to believe they are not exaggerated. Making reasonable allowances for the size of the house, the number of hours the projectors are operated and other conditions of a similar nature, the figures will be found approximately correct but we will be very glad to furnish further detailed information based upon the current consumed in any particular theatre.

Inquiries and Comments

A Comeback

SOME little while ago we gave a rather lengthy friendly criticism of a letter from an Ohio projectionist who tried in rather vague terms to convince us that the projection in certain Ohio theatres was something above the ordinary. This in support of his contention that the small town projectionist was, as in many cases, as fully qualified to render top-notch work as his big city brother.

It appears that Brother Johnson, of Washington, C. O., Ohio, possesses a persevering nature for he comes back with another letter intending to justify himself and at the same time making himself a little more explicit concerning his idea of good projection.

He writes as follows:—

"Dear Sir:—

In response to your article concerning "Friend Johnson", must beg to advise you that the letter you received was not intended to "bawl" you out. On the contrary, I believe your article seemed to give me the biggest part of the bawling out.

However, we won't argue about that, so we will just call it even. The letter that was typewritten happened to be written on a friend's machine and my not knowing it thoroughly, in addition to the ribbon being twisted explains why part of the letter was in one color and the rest in another.

Agrees

I am not near a typewriter now or I might try the same over again.

I will agree with you in most of your articles and feel that you have given a clear explanation of how the city fellow excels the small-town man. I do believe, however, that you have exaggerated things in some parts of your article and in my opinion you seemed to believe that I might not have good judgment when I really do see good screen results.

Here is what I call perfect projection and I think you will agree with me: a good steady picture and sub-titles; a bright steady light all over the screen; practically no flicker; clear pictures and sharp definition; excellent changeovers. Don't you think that these fulfillments would be good enough for any large theatre in any large city?

Well these conditions were observed in the theatres I mentioned and in the order in which I listed them. You know, after a fellow has been in the projection game for many years he may easily pick out a good many minor faults of other projectionists which may not even be apparent to the public.

Some projectionists think they can fool the public but in my mind a poorly projected picture will easily ruin the entire meaning of a play and people seeing this will surely leave the theatre dissatisfied. Am I not right?

So brothers, let's get together and pull the same way. Give the public the best possible in the way of projection as I do not think that anyone willingly wants to put on a jumpy, poorly lighted picture on the screen.

I hope this gives you the information you have been wanting."

Relieved

Well, Friend Johnson, we are certainly relieved to learn that the vivid color scheme used in your last letter was not caused by an impassioned desire to annihilate us as we surely thought that was what you were longing to do. We cannot recall ever having compared the small-town and big-city men's qualifications in these columns, so were at a loss to account for it. Probably some one else put this bee in your bonnet.

As for our implying that you were incapable of judging the quality of projected pictures or could not recognize a well projected picture when you saw one, why, such a thing was never intended. Far be it from us to cast aspersions on fellow "critters'" knowledge. Life is too short for such things.

Not So Good

The principle thing we were interested in was securing a concise statement of your ideas of the projection merits in the theatres you mentioned, not so much for our sake, as for that of the other readers of this department. The mere statement that a thing is so may be all right but unless considerably amplified by details, provides dry reading.

While admitting that the things you mention as being requisite for good projection are so, we still do not agree with you that they alone indicate first class workmanship and this is the point we have been trying to get home—a statement of all the conditions.

Give an experienced man a high powered arc and it is comparatively easy for him, by exercising care, to do the things you mention. That is merely the part of a machine attendent and calls mostly for care and patience.

The mark of a true projectionist, however, rests in his ability to project pictures efficiently with no waste effort or excess power. It goes without saying that the screen results should, at the same time, be all that could be desired.

For any particular size of theatre there is a certain screen intensity which is desirable from the standpoint of picture brightness and comfortable viewing. To secure this intensity with any given optic system requires just so much electrical power—no more. In order to secure the desired screen brightness at a minimum power cost requires that each and every element in the optic system clear to the screen be of the correct type and properly used. If this is not so, a loss will be incurred and the system will be inefficient. In other words, the projectionist will not be doing first class work.

So in any future letters describing the excellence of any projectionist's work do not forget to include a description of his optic setup starting with the diameter of the arc crater, through the various elements, clear to the screen.

Engineering Report Gives OK for Comerford Theatre Site

Engineers who made examinations of the site of the proposed West Scranton, Pa., theatre to be erected by the Comerford Amusement Company, to determine whether there was any danger of a cave-in due to coal mining operations in that vicinity, have reported that the location is a safe one, the underground void having all been packed with fill. As a result the work of razing buildings on the site has begun, and one large structure is being moved across the street to make way for the theatre, which is to be a large, modern structure with a seating capacity of 2,000. Actual building operations will be started early in August, according to plans of the company, and it is hoped to have the theatre ready for formal opening about the first of the new year.

Wilmer & Vincent House Remodelled for Vaudeville

Walter Vincent, of New York, one of the heads of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company, was in Harrisburg on July 17, inspecting the company's six theatres there, and particularly the Orpheum which is being reconstructed, almost from the ground up, into a vaudeville house that will seat 2,500. Earlier in the week his partner, Mr. Wilmer, was in Harrisburg on a similar errand. They were shown about the properties by C. Floyd Hopkins, their Harrisburg representative.

Omaha, Nebraska, to Have a $50,000 Picture House

Plans are being drawn by John & Alan McDonald, 2nd Floor, Standard Oil Building, for the erection of a motion picture house to be erected on a site 50 by 128 at 50th and Dodge Streets, Omaha, Nebraska, at a cost of $50,000. The owner is A. R. Hansen, 4901 Dodge Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Lobbies Are the Show Windows of Motion Picture Theatres

By S. Weinstein, Pres., Menger, Ring & Weinstein, Inc.

IN order to properly understand the functions of the frame as a means of displaying pictures attractively, a realization must be brought about of the fact that the exhibitor is not like the average merchant along the avenue, who simply places his wares in the window and lets them do the rest, be it a well shaped pair of shoes, an attractive shirt, a modish dress, or a well finished piece of furniture; they all have their economic as well as aesthetic appeal, even in the matter of food. It has been recognized by leading restauranteurs that an appeal to the palate alone is not enough—they have learned to lay their sea-food and other delicacies in the window, not only temptingly, but artistically, so as to appeal to your sense of beauty in addition to tantalizing your palate.

Not so with the exhibitor; he cannot display his wares; all he can do is show you pictures of it, and whatever he is able to show, must carry with it an appeal to your sense of beauty,—to that part of us that is not so materialistic—that something within us that loves pretty flowers, beautiful sunsets, poetry, and music.

It will readily be seen that the frame surrounding the exhibitor's wares must possess beauty of design, harmony of color, symmetry, and warmth. From time immemorial it has been recognized by artists and painters the world over, that the frame is an essential part of the picture; it serves as a background and border; it gives a picture perspective and finish. To such an extent have the old masters appreciated the value of the frame that a good many of them were in the habit of making the frames for their paintings, and in fact, this is what has brought about the vogue for the highly carved artistic frames that can be seen in the famous art galleries of the old world, also in the great museums of this country.

It is quite customary for artists of the present day to select the frames for their paintings; they will not intrust the selection to even the most advanced framing establishments, but prefer to personally supervise every detail, knowing what a great bearing the frame will have on the final appearance of the picture.

It is astonishing what a change a well selected piece of plush will make, if placed behind even a simple frame. A snipe, framed tastefully, and mounted on an attractive background, will assume a dignity and poise approaching a work of art. Some of the gelatines and photos, if placed in a well set off frame, assume the proportions of masterpieces. A very startling effect can be secured by cutting out a head or figure from a one-sheet or three-sheet poster, and mounting it on a plush background in a frame.

Of late, very artistic cards, highly colored and well executed by expert letterers, have become the vogue, amongst the higher grade theatres; indeed, it is a known fact that one theatre in New York is paying a card writer $300.00 per week for work that could be classed as works of art. comparable in quality to some of our high grade illustrations, but even such cards must have the proper setting and background in order to show to best advantage.

S. M. P. E. Convention Oct. 5-8 at Lakewood Farm Inn

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers has announced that the semi-annual meeting will take place October 5, 6, 7 and 8 at Lakewood Farm Inn., Roscoe, New York.

The Society held a spring convention at Lakewood Farm Inn a year ago last spring. The members attending that meeting were so pleased with the place that many special requests have been received by the board of governors which influenced the selection of this mountain resort for the coming convention.

Rex Hedwig Laboratories Print Fight Films

The motion pictures taken of the Greb, Wills and Shade bouts at the Polo Grounds in New York City, on the night of July 2, for the benefit of the Italian Hospital Fund, were processed at the Rex Hedwig Laboratories. At the close of each fight the negatives were rushed to the laboratory, where they were immediately developed, printed, cut, assembled, and early Friday afternoon they were thrown upon the screens of leading theatres throughout the New York Metropolitan area.

Opens First of Five Theatres at Long Beach, Cal.

The Brayton theatre, Long Beach, Cal., has opened and is the first of a string of five houses that are to be operated by the Brayton Holding Co. This house has a seating capacity of 1,000 and has installed a Marr & Colton organ. The decorations are Spanish throughout.

Joe Howard, formerly of Rickards and Nace and West Coast Langely, has been retained as general manager of the newly formed company. Construction on the second theatre will begin immediately upon completion of this house.

$35,000 Addition Planned by Moller Organ Co.

Growth of the business of the M. P. Moller Organ Company, of Hagerstown, Maryland, manufacturers of pipe organs used in motion picture theatres, has resulted in the announcement, on July 21, of plans for the enlargement of two departments of the plant, in that city. The two additions are to be built at an expenditure of $35,000. One of the additions will be to the erecting room and the other one will connect the offices with the erecting room.

Record Earnings Shown by Morgan Lithograph Co.

The Morgan Lithograph Company, according to preliminary unofficial reports, closed its fiscal year June 30, 1925, with the best showing that it has made in its fifty-nine years of successful operation. The report states that the Morgan Lithograph Company alone, before giving effect to the result of operations of the companies which it has recently purchased, earned for the fiscal year aproximately $500,000 net before Federal taxes. The newly acquired companies and the contracts which they hold, the report states, will double the present volume of business of the Morgan Company, which will be largely reflected in the net earnings of the combination for the coming year. The outlook, the report states, is very bright.

Storm and Burnouts; But Show Goes on or Bust

HERE'S an instance that serves to explain why this industry has a fashination to all who ever enter its folds. The appeal of showwomanship—the show goes on or bust spirit is witnessed in these few following lines.

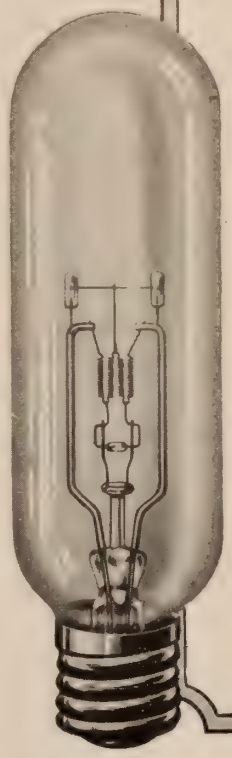
The Amuzu Theatre, Oakland City, Ind., writes:

Due to a severe electrical storm our compensarc converting system was burned out during performance. Next morning at eight o'clock, we called Joe Bommerscheim of E. E. Fulton Co., Indianapolis. Leaving Indianapolis at nine-thirty, by hard driving Mr. Dommerscheim made the distance of about two hundred miles arriving here at three o'clock. By starting time we had installed a new Mazda Projection system and lost but the one night, that of the mishap.

Winter Garden, Jamestown, Installs Marr & Colton

Peterson & Wood, the well known exhibitors of Jamestown, N. Y., have just purchased another Marr & Colton organ for their Winter Garden Theatre, Jamestown.

This organ is a two-manual with all the modern tone colors and effects. At present the theatre is closed, for redecoration and installation of organ. It will be re-opened about August 15th.



New Theatre at Indianapolis to Cost $175,000

Indianapolis is to have a new theatre to be erected on College Ave., north of 42nd Street at an approximate cost of $175,000. The plans for the new theatre building are now being drawn, and the construction is to be of brick and concrete and erected on a plot 80 x 160. The seating capacity of this theatre is to be 1,200.

Plans Being Drawn for New House in Michigan

Plans are being drawn for the erection of a theatre building on plot 100 x 200 to be erected at Schoolcraft and Carferry Avenues, Brightmoore, Michigan. The structure is to be of brick and stone. The owner of this new house is LeWin Development Co., 1003 Hofman Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

New High Intensity Studio Arc Placed on Market

A new high intensity lamp has just appeared on the market, for which many advantages are claimed. This lamp is presented by Max Mayer, New York City, whose electrical connection with the film producing industry is well known.

These lamps, manufactured by Hall & Connolly, of New York, under the Sperry patents, are entirely automatic and will operate, it is said, for a full half hour without any attention whatsoever. The striking or starting device is instantaneous in action and so arranged that it will not break the carbon crater in striking.

Extreme steadiness and silence of operation are obtained by an ingenious compensated constant feed mechanism.

The permanent accurate alignment of the carbons and new manner of mounting of lamp and mirror, result in overcoming the usual ghost or shadow in the light beam.

Much thought and practical study have been given to every detail in the design and construction of this lamp with the result that exceptional sturdiness and serviceability are claimed along with a considerable reduction in weight over similar units.

A specially designed mirror mounting provides for a great spread of light beam without shadow and without objectionable lengthening of the lamp housing.

The first three of these lamps have been in constant use in the Paragon Studios, Fort Lee, N. J., for over two months.

Kansas City Letters Protest New Theatre Building

The City Plan Commission of Kansas City has received nine letters of protest against the proposed construction of a motion picture theatre at Fifty-ninth street and the Paseo, which is unusual in the records of Kansas City. The letters protested against the proposed modification of the zoning law to permit the construction of the theatre.

The modification was requested by G. M. Baltis, who filed a petition of 160 property owners in the neighborhood in support of his request, which has been taken under advisement.

"A Slave of Fashion"—M. G. M., Capitol, N. Y.

Daily News: "If you were to have your choice for the ideal starring story for Norma Shearer you couldn't do better than 'A Slave of Fashion.' It's a Cinderella story with 5th Ave. trimmings. The sub-titles fairly snap with humor and the direction is as smooth as Norma's hair. Norma Shearer, a gal that's good for a twenty-four hour look, never tires one. Lew Cody is suave and charming as the gentleman who discovers he had a wife on his return home."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Norma Shearer is making her bow as a full-fledged star in 'A Slave of Fashion' this week at the Capitol Theatre and is demonstrating (as if a demonstration were still necessary) that she deserves her elevation. Miss Shearer has been very much present in previous pictures, but this reviewer cannot recall one in which she was more engaging. Miss Shearer and Cody come off with the principal honors, but Vivia Ogden shines in the small part of the girl's aunt."

Telegraph: "Norma Shearer again proves versatile in a story cleverly directed and sumptuously dressed. The whole affair is extremely well done, in the better class of movie fare, with Norma Shearer proving conclusively her value as a box office attraction. The writer must admit that Cody is better in a sympathetic role than as the deep-dyed villain of old. 'A Slave of Fashion' will please our feminine movie goers."

Journal: "Major Edward Bowes, the managing director of this ever popular playhouse displayed his accustomed keen judgment when he picked 'A Slave of Fashion.' It would be difficult to find a film to furnish Miss Shearer with a finer vehicle for attainment to stardom. It is an eye-filling picture throughout—plenty of action, plenty of romance, plenty of everything. You will enjoy 'A Slave of Fashion'."

Herald-Tribune: "Norma Shearer is far too beautiful and alluring! She dazzles the eye. 'A Slave of Fashion' is a good story. Lew Cody is the hero instead of the villain, and William Haines is the villain instead of the hero. An exciting picture!"

'The Fool"—Fox, Keith's Palace, Cleveland

Times: "This picture should be as effective as a good sermon. It is films like this to which reference is made when we speak of the educational value of the screen. Filmdon is overcrowded with trash and superficialty, but when pictures like 'The Fool' are produced we get a glimpse of the power that could be influenced for the raising of the standard of screen entertainment.

"We have always held that preachment should find no place on the stage or screen, and our indorsement of 'The Fool' is not because Channing Pollock has woven his story around religion and the tenets of Christianity, but rather because he has carefully avoided anything that might savor of preachment."

"Declasse" First National, Palace, Philadelphia

Philadelphia Inquirer: Corinne Griffith is a very charming and personal lady. She gives a most impressive performance in 'Declasse.' The picture is, to our mind, a real success."

Philadelphia Record: "While the screen production of 'Declasse' does not have Ethel Barrymore for its Lady Helen as did the stage production, there is ample compensation in Corinne Griffith's interpretation of that pathetic character. Miss Griffith has the charm and manner that well fitted her for membership in the noble Varick family. The interest was well sustained."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Corinne Griffith compares as favorably as any actress we can think of to Ethel Barrymore as Lady Helen Haden. Miss Griffith has sympathy, interest and intelligence coupled with the appearance of the gallant lady whose tradition was to choose 'death rather than dishonor.'"

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Miss Griffith is a beautiful and accomplished actress and is ably supported by Lloyd Hughes."

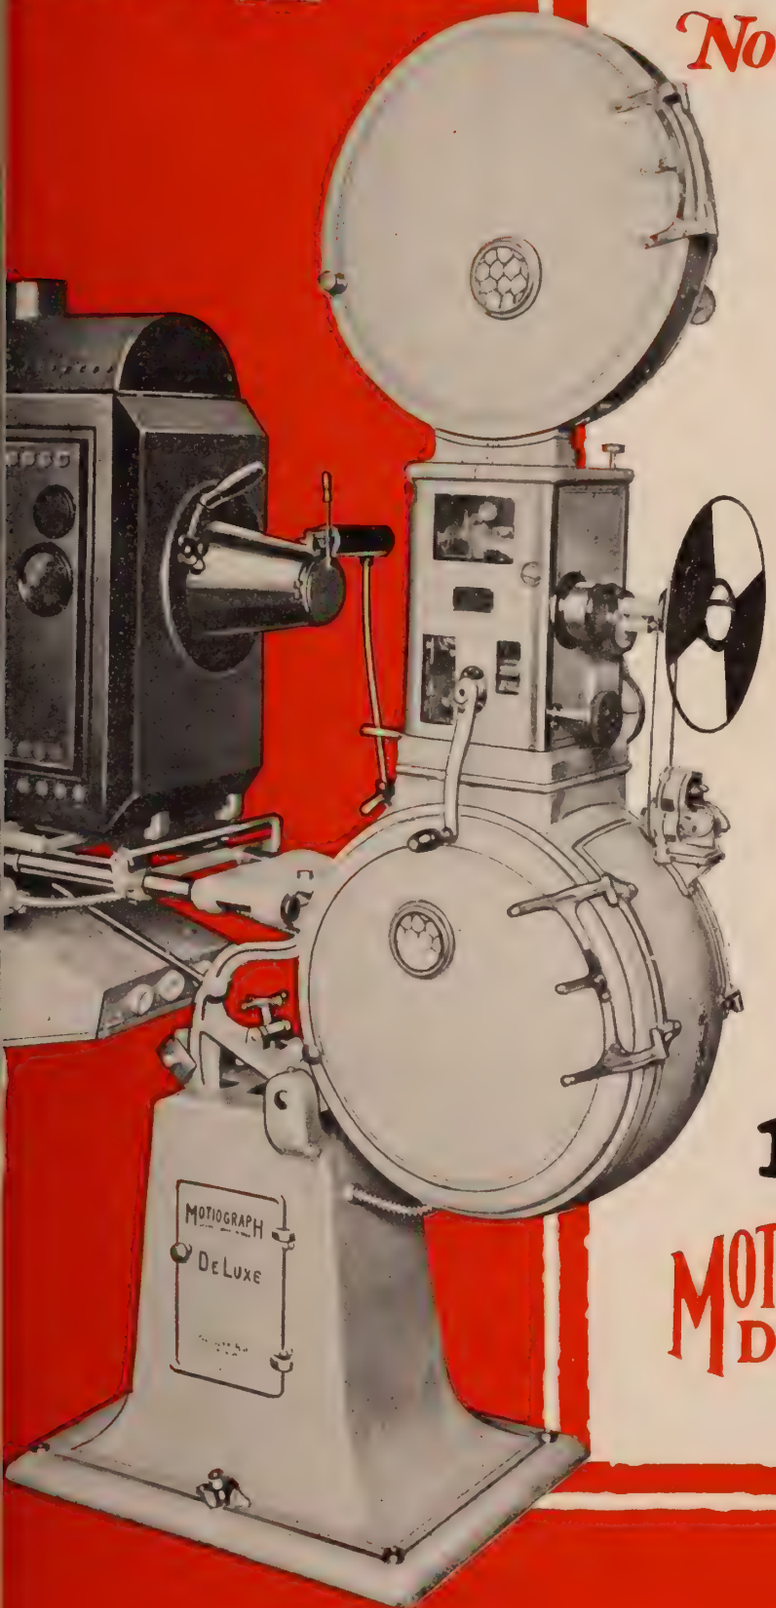
"Soul Fire" First National, Stanley, Philadelphia

Record: "The romance of the tropics was such a glorious one that Philadelphians were greatly assisted in forgetting their weather woes. 'Soul Fire' has many merits as a picture besides the work of its stars, and was produced in a most skillful manner. It had not only engaging scenic accessories, but was marked by splendid acting by all who took part."

Inquirer: "At least three things—and maybe four, make the picture on this week's bill at the Stanley worth seeing. And that's a good batting average. First of all, Richard Barthelmess is the male star, and there is much to be said for the picture besides. Its plot is unusual. Each episode is full of interest and there is a real meaning in the whole plot."

Public Ledger: "A picture which contains much of the too-seldom-found gold and a reasonably small amount of the usual motion picture dross is 'Soul Fire.' Four things make it notable: The unusual way in which the story is told, the excellent work done by Richard Barthelmess, the unique screen type of Carlotta Monterey, and the splendid lighting which makes the scenes stand out. The role of young Eric Fane, is one of the best that Richard Barthelmess has had and he gives to it that delicacy and tenderness which seem peculiarly his own."

Evening Ledger: "'Soul Fire' reverses the usual order of things. It is a highly successful photoplay adapted from the stage play 'Great Music.' Richard Barthelmess deserves the lion's share of the credit toward the success of the film's adaptation. It is one of the best roles he has had since 'Tol'able David.' Barthelmess' soulfulness, his peculiar faculty for interpreting such sympathetic characters is shown in this picture."



Public Bulletin: "A pleasing portrayal by Richard Barthelmess. He very capably demonstrates his versatility on the screen."

Sun: "Richard Barthelmess in the best picture he has had lately."

Now Why!

1. Workmanship and material are the best obtainable.
2. An Instantaneous Mechanism "Title Brake" that controls projector speed without changing setting of speed control.
3. Accessible—the prime factor for ease of operation.
4. Film tracks and tension length over five inches long, resulting in perfect projection at all speeds.
5. A Heavy Duty Projector, for it performs uncomplainingly and without constant attention.
6. Can be equipped with every conceivable attachment for "stunt" work or De Luxe type performances.
7. A beltless motor drive, directly connected, eliminates scores of trouble-giving parts.
8. As near five-proof or hazard-proof as human ingenuity can make it.
9. Automatic mechanism pilot lamp for ease of threading film in frame.
10. Various models for every projection requirement, each complete in itself, eliminating attachments and adapters.

"The HOME MAKER" SETS

"The Home Maker"

Universal Produces, With Alice Joyce and Clive Brook, One of the Finest Pictures Ever Made

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"The Home Maker," with Alice Joyce and Clive Brook, will be an outstanding picture of the coming season. Exhibitors will throw their hats in the air and cheer when they see its effect upon their audiences, for in addition to its unquestionable box-office value, it is the sort of clean, wholesome, gripping domestic drama which will do the reputation of the whole industry a world of good. Universal has been making some fine pictures lately and "The Home Maker" will be near the top of the White List, if it doesn't lead them all.

This is a box-office picture par excellence for all audiences. It is hard to conceive an audience that will dislike it. The drama is simply done but so tense and absorbing in its import that it will hold the eyes glued on the screen. Women will eat it up, and cry, and men will like it fully as well as the women, for it does man no injustice by putting woman on an unscalable pinnacle.

"The Home Maker's" many points of interest—and its wonderful exploitation angles—may be analyzed without a single justifiable criticism except that of length, and on that point there is ample ground for argument. The general opinion of reviewers who sat enthralled throughout its 7,755 feet was that it might be cut a few hundred feet, but nobody insisted that eliminations were imperative. Possibly the critics couldn't believe that here was a picture which couldn't be criticized. Oh yes, two of the subtitles are too flowery.

King Baggot is responsible for "The Home Maker" and Universal owes him a flock of congratulatory telegrams and a museum of medals.

The picture is really wonderful in the simplicity of its story and settings and acting. It is a perfect emotional unit from start to finish. An accident in which the husband is crippled and a fire threatening loss of life might have been over-stressed, but they have been carefully subordinated to the telling of the story.

"The Home Maker" opens with scenes of ordinary domestic routine. The wife is performing her daily work, stopping only to reprove

the children. In this role Alice Joyce is perfect. She does the ordinary things which we see done from day to day, does them simply and naturally, yet rivets attention on herself. The same is true of Clive Brook. These two accomplished artists—may their tribe increase—bring a wealth of humanity to the picture that assures the utmost in realism. We cannot for the moment recall any picture which is so real as "The Home Maker."

While the entire cast does expert work, two other members deserve especial mention. Martha Maddox is superb as a sour-faced, dyspeptic old maid. Her work is restrained like that of the others, but remarkably effective.

The other player? Say, you must see little Billy Kent Schaffer. In this picture he ranks with Jackie Coogan, not as Jackie is now, an experienced actor, but as he was when about Billy's age—four years. Little Billy is called upon to sulk and he does it in such delightfully realistic fashion that women's arms will go out toward him; he is called upon to smile and there was never a more winning baby seen on the screen.

In closing, a word about the exploitation angles of this picture. They are there—big and self-evident. The wife takes the husband's place as the wage-earner, having failed to inspire happy children; the husband, a business failure, succeeds in the home. In the end, smiles replace scowls on the children's faces and there is joy.

Don't fail to book this picture. It will please your patrons as few pictures have done; it will do your prestige as a theatre owner untold good. Book it, boost it, get the clergy to see it, for they will preach about it, and you'll live in the hope that the gods will be kind and give you another picture just as good sometime in the not too distant future.

LATION!

FIGURES don't lie—and figures definitely and unqualifiedly prove Gene Stratton Porter the most widely read of all authors.

The sale of her novels is one of the phenomena of modern publishing. In twenty years over TEN MILLION copies of her books have been sold, which have been read by FIFTY MILLION people!

Five of her Nature Novels have had an average sale of over 1,500,000 each. THIS IS HER GREATEST NATURE NOVEL!

For the past four months the story has been running serially in McCall's Magazine, and accompanying each installment has appeared one of the full column ads shown on the opposite page. The circulation of McCall's Magazine is 2,000,000, with an estimated reading public of five times that figure!

This novel comes off the press August 17th—just before the release of the picture—AND EVERY JACKET OF EVERY COPY CALLS ATTENTION TO THE PICTURE!

The average sale of a popular novel is from 4000 to 5000 copies. The publishers are printing 150,000 copies in the first edition!

They are putting behind it the strongest selling campaign they have ever put behind a novel—AND EVERY PIECE OF ADVERTISING MATTER IN THIS SELLING CAMPAIGN IS DIRECTLY TIED UP WITH THE PICTURE!

Gene Stratton Porter's "Keeper of the Bees" directed by J. Leo Meehan is the greatest box office proposition exhibitors have been offered in a decade—because it has that most substantial of all values—circulation!

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, AUGUST 15, 1925 NO. 7

The Meeting at Detroit

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is not printing a detailed story of what happened at the recent session of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A. at Detroit. This, we are perfectly willing to admit, is an unusual procedure for a publication dedicated week in and week out to the recording of the vital news of the industry.

In this instance, however, we depart from established custom for what seems to us a perfectly justifiable reason. We do not believe the interests of exhibitor organization are served, or will be served, by the printing of acrimonious remarks passed by exhibitor leaders in the heat of argument.

The perpetuation of quarrels is often found more in the relentless medium of type than in the quarrels themselves. One statement leads to another statement until the result is a mountainous mass of printed words.

To those who have submitted statements for publication on the Detroit meeting, may we say that we have considered them carefully, and wish to be understood as intending no discourtesy in not putting them in type. We believe the course we are following will appeal to all reasonable men as constructive and helpful.

What we have to say here is all that we shall say about the Detroit meeting—unless the situation changes greatly. We prefer to record the simple fact that the Detroit meeting accomplished these results, about the authenticity of which, we believe, there can be no controversy:

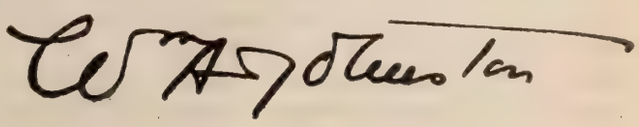
The appointment of an Administrative Committee, consisting of A. Julian Brylawski, M. E. Comerford, Nathan Yamins, Harry Davis and Jake Wells. Glenn Cross was originally named on the committee. He resigned and was succeeded by Mr. Yamins.

The Finance Committee was re-named. It is composed of Sydney S. Cohen, Harry Davis and M. E. Comerford. The work of Joseph M. Seider on contract and arbitration matters was unanimously endorsed.

The Administrative Committee was empowered to engage a business manager. It was further authorized to make expenditures up to $5,000 on a majority vote of the committee, and a sum not to exceed $25,000 on unanimous vote.

A committee, composed of Messrs. Seider, Cohen and Yamins, was appointed to handle the copyright situation and was empowered to engage counsel.

A special committee to negotiate an equitable contract with the Independent Motion Picture Association was named. It consists of Messrs. Brylawski, Seider, R. R. Biechele, Davis and Yamins.



Independence Week was endorsed. A resolution of thanks was extended to Messrs. Cohen and Davis for their work.

The committee to represent the M. P. T. O. A. on the Board of Trade and Commerce was named as follows: Sydney Cohen, Nathan Yamins, L. M. Sagal, Harry Davis and J. J. Harwood. W. A. Steffes and A. Julian Brylawski were originally named on the committee. They resigned, and were succeeded by Messrs. Davis and Harwood.

These, we say, appear to be the definite results of the Detroit meeting.

If there is one thing the exhibitors of this country need above all, it is a firmly-knit national organization. Much good work has already been done by the exhibitor body. Still greater work lies ahead of it, waiting to be done.

In the interest of the exhibitor—and in the interest of the whole industry—we want to see the M. P. T. O. A. go ahead and fulfil its destiny in the highest degree. And we believe we are contributing to its welfare by refusing to contribute the destructive quality sometimes found in the printed word.

On the Subject of Art

GILBERT SELDES, critic and essayist, writes an article for The Nation, generally considered a "highbrow" publication, on the subject of "Art in the Movies." This question of art and the screen troubles a great many people, but Mr. Seldes seems to have some pretty clear ideas worth listening to. Here is what he says:

"The hardest thing a critic of the movies has to face is the accusation that he wants to make the movies artistic. The reason this is a crime is, of course, that art doesn't sell; and the critic, whenever he has the good fortune to talk to a professional, feels the underlying hostility which means 'you want to bankrupt me.'

"The last thing I want to see is a movie made for the pleasure of a few aesthetes. I have been assured that we shall come to it; that a chain of little movie houses, like the little theatres, will give new vitality and new artistic standards to the movie; and that gradually the movie, like the commercial theatre, will incorporate the good discoveries of the artistic groups. This is possible; but unless there is a great confusion of terms, it seems to me unnecessary. 'Art' when used roughly about the movies usually means good interior decoration, Duse-like restraint in registering emotions, and the elimination of banal plots and incidents. It also suggests a great infusion of 'artiness;' the whole attitude of movies for the few is arrogant and patronizing. Regard the mechanics of the stage and you are instantly aware that at its best a play can have only a few hundred auditors at one time; look at the mechanics of the film and you see that, while you can have a movie for one spectator, the natural thing is to have hundreds of thousands simultaneously—the limit is really the product of multiplying the number of prints by the number of spectators; it approaches infinity. I am in favor of its doing so.

"The confusion, I suspect, arises from our habit of saying that a film is inartistic when we dislike the plot, a standard we might as well apply to the 'Vanities of 1925.' We say it, again, when the methods used are a little obvious, when, in order to show us that a husband is no longer in love with his wife, a director can think of nothing but having the gentleman thumb his nose at the lady in public. But these are largely matters of intelligence; the directors may be right in assuming that their spectators do not understand a shrug of the shoulder, and the whole notion that subtlety is the basis of art is open to question. It is possible that the moving picture can handle only broad effects; it is certain that a satisfactory picture can be made with them.

"The artistic elements can exist in a film without for a moment touching upon the subject in such a way that the spectator is made uncomfortably aware of them. The structure of the whole film, the relation of part to part, the rhythm of the action and its variations—all these can give a picture artistic qualities, and they are as possible in a slap-stick comedy as in a super-spectacle.

"We get further if we ask of a picture only that it be technically a good picture—that it utilize the capacities of the camera to the full. In this respect the most interesting films made in America today are the quarter, half, or one reel 'short subjects' which usually follow the news of the day. Sometimes they are scenics, sometimes trick photography, sometimes drawn pictures or combinations of drawn and photographed pictures; and they are always interesting. The aesthete of the films hardly recognizes them, because they offer very little scope for imagination, in the story sense, or for composition; and none for plot. But these films are made with complete mastery of the instrument. The last one I saw in the way of trick photography was a joy. It represented a cow in a meadow. The cow walked. Presently the fore part lengthened itself and then again collapsed, or walked away entirely from the hind quarters; a moment later the cow was facing itself and walked head-on into itself. The whole thing was pure movie and was done with perfect skill.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

GREATER Movie Season on Broadway got off to a fine start by registering three pictures this week fairly entitled to rank as "super-features." A much-abused and over-used phrase, due to rough handling by the publicity sharps, but in the present case hitting the mark squarely. The films in question are—D. W. Griffith's production for United Artists, "Sally Of The Sawdust," at the Mark Strand; "Kiss Me Again," directed by Ernst Lubitsch for Warner Brothers at the Picadilly, and "The Unholy Three," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at the Capitol, directed by Tod Browning. Each of the trio is a really great picture in the true sense of the word, and each director has distinguished himself according to his own individual style. It would be foolish to try to make comparisons, just as futile as if one were to criticise three excellent paintings—marine, portraiture and landscape—each the work of an acknowledged master of the brush, with a view to praising one at the expense of another.

With regard to the productions in question the point is that in each case the audience responded warmly to the picture's distinctive appeal. Alternate tears and laughter greeted the sentimental and comic interludes of "Sally," unrestrained mirth reigned as the deft, light Lubitsch creation of sparklingly bright Continental comedy unfolded on the screen; and the weird, bizarre atmosphere, fierce melodramatic urge and occasional glinting humor of "The Unholy Three" held the on-lookers spell bound. Truly a triple triumph for the silent drama, achieved just at the right time. We do not recall any previous occasion where the Broadway houses made such a three-ply killing both from the artistic and commercial standpoint. It is worth noting that a revival of a former Griffith success—"Orphans of the Storm" graces the Cameo screen, and that "Sally" and "Kiss Me Again" are being held over for another week.

Flo Kennedy, of the Ziegfeld Follies, one of the five impersonators of "Krazy Kat" (M. J. Winkler) in the Philadelphia Greater Movie Season parade.

The International Beauty Trio Al Christie will use in "Marriage Lucy" (Prod. Dist. Corp.), Jean Lorraine, American, Doris Wynn, English, and Yola D'Avril, French.

Frank Lloyd's "Wings of Chance" company, producing for First National on location.. Those included are:. Philo McCullough, Anna Q. Nilsson, Viola Dana, Vistor B. McLaglen, Dorothy Sebastian, Ben Lyon, Claude Gillingwater, Director Frank Lloyd and William Conklin.

Al Rockett, assistant to Richard A. Rowland, and George Archainbaud, First National director, accompanied by their wives, leave Hollywood to return to New York.

Aileen Pringle, playing in "The Mystic" (Metro Goldwyn), has created a brand new bob, with her hair drawn back on one side over the ear.

SOME FAMOUS ACTIVITIES

THE producing units of Famous Players-Lasky are in full swing these sultry days. Thomas Meighan is quartered on the old sod, having invaded Ireland with his company, where exterior scenes will be made for "The Imperfect Imposter." His leading lady, Lois Wilson, is en-route from Hollywood to join the Meighan forces. James Cruze is in Cheyenne, Wyoming, with a company of 300 players, filming "The Pony Express;" in Arizona, at Keyenta, the Indian trading post, Richard Dix heads the enormous cast which will participate in the making of "The Vanishing American," in which 10,000 red men will take part, and D. W. Griffith, accompanied by Carol Dempster, James Kirkwood and Harrison Ford, has returned from Chicago, after filming exteriors for "That Royle Girl," dealing with Jazz-life in the Windy City.

Nor is that all, for in the big timber regions of the State of Washington, Irvin Willat, Billie Dove, Jack Holt and Montagu Love are making lumber-camp scenes for "The Ancient Highway;" Bebe Daniels is at Hollywood, ready to start on "Martinique;" Victoria Fleming has completed "A Son of His Father" in Arizona, and Betty Bronson, under direcion of Herbert Brenon, is filling the title role of "A Kiss For Cinderella" at the Astoria studios.

FOUND BY EXPLORER WHITE

THEY tell the tale thus: Jack White, producer of Mermaid Comedies (Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.) went for a drive through San Bernardino, Cal. He was merely on pleasure bent, but, possessing an unerring eye for both beauty and business, he sighted a damsel of such exceeding fairness, that he slammed on the brakes, stopped abruptly, hot-footed it down the road in pursuit of the lovely stranger and then and there made her a proposition to appear in pictures. The girl, finding that he was in deadly earnest, satisfactory camera tests were made and the engagement of Helen Marlowe as leading lady in Educational-Cameo Comedies, followed.

WALTHALL IN IMPORTANT ROLE

HENRY WALTHALL has been cast for the part of Captain Brandt, a featured role in "Simon the Jester," adapted from William J. Locke's novel, which George Melford is directing for Producers Distributing Corporation at the Hollywood studios. Lillian Rich and Eugene O'Brien head the cast, in which Edmund Burns and William Platt also appear. Walthall's role, that of a French army officer dismissed from his post at Tangiers, who established a gambling den in the heart of the city is said to give him greater scope for the exercise of his talents than any other he has portrayed since his memorable performance as the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation."

CONCERNING MR. FULD

One of the First National floats in Greater Movie Season parade, Los Angeles. The Battleship Cadets and Master Edwin Hubbell, Wampas mascot, occupied the float.

HARRY CAREY, ABLE SEAMAN

HARRY CAREY has temporarily forsaken the atmosphere of the prairieland, stopped dodging bullets, sworn off on the cowboy regalia and whir of the encircling lariat. For him it is now sea-fog, surging billows and the heave and swing of the Spanish Main, or something that corresponds to that historical marine highway. Which doesn't mean that Mr. Carey has suddenly hoisted the black flag and may be sighted through a spyglass, stalking a gory quarter deck, with cutlass at his side and humming —"fifteen men on the dead man's chest." Nothing of the sort, me hearties!

The mild truth is that, with his wife and two kiddies, he is putting in a well-earned vacation aboard his two-masted schooner yacht, the Ella J. Ludlum, somewhere off the California coast. And if you ask the erstwhile cowboy hero he'll aver that he deserves a rest after the strenuous time he went through making "The Prairie Pirate," his latest Hunt Stromberg feature, recently completed. Next week he deserts the saltry brine and gets back to his ranch to begin work on "The Man From Red Gulch,"

Group of Famous Players officials photographed outside the Peter Pan log cabin erected at the annual benefit Cinema Garden Party in London, Scandinavia; I. Blumenthal, special European representative; J. C. Graham, general European representative; E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department; I. C. Oes, general Scandinavian representative; Carl P. York, Scandinavian distributor; Frederick Martin, director of publicity in London.

Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell, otherwise Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lytell, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars, snapped in the Greater Movie Season parade, Los Angeles, and rushed east by air mail.

F. B. O. OUTING

ECHOES of the last F. B. O. week-end party are still ringing through filmland. The executives came to a sudden decision to take a real holiday, all at once, and left Friday, July 31, to spend Saturday and Sunday in Nathan Gordon's camp at Cape Cod. The guests included Major H. C. S. Thomson; Vice-President J. I. Schnitzer; Advertising Director Nat G. Rothstein; Sales Manager Lee Marcus; Charles Rosenzweig, manager New York Exchange; and Al. Boasberg, sales promotion director; with Bill Shapiro, of Franklin Film Company, Boston, acting as pilot. The event was a huge success in every way, and we wouldn't be surprised if a revival showing followed in the near future.

MEIGHAN IN M. C. ROLE

THEY picked out Tom Meighan for master of ceremonies for the concert held aboard the Leviathan, during his trip to Ireland, and the Paramount star distinguished himself by breaking all records for raising money for charitable purposes on the broad Atlantic. He coaxed $1,902 away from the cabin passengers, whereas the most any other person ever got, acting in a similar capacity at a ship concert, was $600, according to officials of the United States Line vessel. The money will go to the Seaman's Fund, an organization that cares for the wants of deserving sailors and dependents. Many international celebrities were present and Meighan's auctioneering abilities excited universal admiration.

Joseph Schenck and Doug Fairbanks drop over to visit Clarence Brown, director, and Valentino, star, as they start "The Lone Eagle" for United Artists release.

GOULDING'S SPEED TEST

EDMUND GOULDING made a whirlwind finish in picture shooting, breaking all existing records at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. This feat wasn't accomplished in connection with his production, "Sun-Up," starring Pauline Starks and Conrad Nagel, but was merely a flyer, so as to speak, being a trailer, featuring Norma Shearer and Lew Cody for advertising purposes, a one-reeler.

It was 11 A. M. when Goulding got the assignment. The picture had to be finished by 6 P. M. for use in a San Francisco premiere.

One of the floral floats entered by First National in Greater Movie Season parade, Los Angeles. Each First National star was represented by a gold star, and the central piece revolved.

At 12:30 Goulding rushed Miss Shearer and Mr. Cody to three separate locations, used two studio sets, and by six o'clock he had finished 48 scenes. The film was cut and titled by eleven o'clock next morning and sent to San Francisco early in the afternoon. This, we'll say, was some speed stunt, and surely hangs up a new target for Goulding's contemporaries to shoot at.

BETTER FILMS SELECTIONS

PICTURE selections made by the National Committee For Better Films, affiliated with the National Board of Review, for weeks ending July 25 and August 1, include the following: For General Audience: "Havoc," Fox, war picture, starring George O'Brien and Margaret Livingston. For General Audience and Special "Family"—"Not So Long Ago," Paramount, Romance of early New York starring Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez, and "Seven Days," Comedy. For General Audience and Special Family, including Children of grammar school age up—Pathe Review 31, Indian Cathedral, old Spanish Mission in Arizona, etc. Pathe Review 32. Yearly Shearing on Arizona Sheep Ranch, Boston (color), quaint Brittany marriage customs.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A whole lot, and then some over, if you ask Beatrice Burnham, Fox Film actress. For Miss Burnham has changed her previously accepted moniker to the more stately sounding—"Inez Rene." And the idea? She believes the new cognomen is better fitted to her Latin personality and will look much finer displayed in electric lights. She has been cast for the part of Giselle, heroine of Fox's production of Joseph Conrad's sea story, "Nostromo." Here again the name question butts in, for the picture will be released under the title of "The Silver Treasure." George O'Brien, will play the hero, others in the cast are Lou Tellegen, Helen D'Algy. Harvey Clark, Hedda Hopper and Stewart Romo.

O. K. FOR LUBITSCH

WARNER BROTHERS recently presented Gloria Swanson with a print of Ernst Lubitsch's latest production—"Kiss Me Again", for a showing in her own home. In a note returning thanks for the courtesy the Paramount star stated that she considered Lubitsch as unquestionably the greatest master of the screen.

Gloria Gould gilds graven gargoyles gladly—gosh! Anywhere, here is the society leader snapped in the new Metro-Goldwyn Embassy theatre on Broadway where she will be hostess.

Just to prove that baseball isn't an exclusively American game, Alice Ardell, Parisienne appearing in a comedy series made by Joe Rock for F. B. O., goes to bat.

KIDS MAKE OWN FILM

THE members of "Our Gang," famous for their work in Pathe comedies, were given a "free hand" by director Robert McGowan the other day in the producing line and have turned out a polite satire on the business of improving film material, by making a comedy entitled—"Better Movies." McGowan accepted the juvenile suggestions literally, the result being a plot that jumps frantically from San Francisco's Chinatown to the Nile River and Cleopatra's palace and moves "fast and furiously." To prove that they wanted "bigger and better" pictures, the kiddies put more villains, poisonous looks and strange symbols into the coure of events than are found in ten average movies. This great thriller is said by studio executives to be a real laugh-provoker and perfect imitation of the old-time screen melodramas.

Katherine Bennett, who is starting in pictures with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, bears an astonishing resemblance to her sister, Enid Bennett (Mrs. Fred Niblo).

DOUG SEEKS TALENT

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS is in search of a new leading woman for his next production, so far entitled "The Black Pirate." Screen experience is desirable, although she is not required to have attained the heights of stardom. The specifications are for a young woman, about five feet, six inches tall, handsome and of "regal bearing." Harry D. Buckley, personal representative of Mr. Fairbanks, in charge of the "Don Q, Son of Zorro," showing at the Globe Theatre, New York, warns all aspirants for the position not to go to Hollywood. Applications, enclosing letter and photograph, should be sent to Douglas Fairbanks, care of Pickford-Fairbanks Studio, Hollywood, Cal.

Here is the first photo to be released showing Lillian Gish as she will appear in the role of Mimi in "La Boheme" (Metro-Goldwyn).

MARION IN LUCK

GEORGE MARION, JR., now titling pictures at F. B. O. was recently advised that Ann Nichols, author and producer of the record-breaking stage attraction—"Abie's Irish Rose" will produce his musical play—"The Fatal Blonde." The locale is a film studio, with an Irish script boy and Jewish script girl involved. Book and lyrics are by the well-known title-writer and music by Warner Jansen. Mr. Marion, who is the son of the celebrated character actor and stage director, said that he believes Miss Nichols intends to open the play in August. This is the first attraction Miss Nichols has consented to produce since the sensational "Abie" started out to break all long-run records four years ago.

The Charleston craze has hit Hollywood—and who is better qualified to demonstrate it than dainty Margaret Quimby, Universal player?

JGALSWORTHY MAY WRITE SCRIPT

JOHN GALSWORTHY, author and playwright of international fame is likely to join the brigade of celebrated literary lights that have contributed original scenarios to the screen. That is, if the efforts of Associated Pictures Corporation in that direction bear fruit. Associated wants a new vehicle for Barbara La Marr, who played the lead in Sawyer-Lubin's production of "The White Monkey," an adaption of Galsworthy's novel of the same title for First National.

It is intended to have the new Galsworthy story follow "Spanish Sunlight," based on an Anthony Pryde novel, Miss La Marr's next feature, which will be made on the coast and personally supervised by June Mathis.

Even if his bicycle has come apart, Billy Dooley, Christie comedian, keeps right on smiling. Note the new way of wearing the sailor suit.

Greater Movie Season Opens With Bang Over U. S.

Many Cities Report Brilliant Inaugurations

GREATER Movie Season is in full swing. More than fifteen hundred cities and towns are flying the pennant this week and will continue their campaigns throughout August. Brilliant openings are reported generally in telegrams to the national service bureau that organized the drive from the Will H. Hays office.

A salute of guns in Atlantic City; a parade Chicago witnessed by more people than any like event since the Armistice celebration; a radio pageant broadcast from New York; a demonstration in Denver that amounted to a get-together of civic officials, theatre owners and business men on a basis of mutual co-operation; every city with some outstanding achievement by way of emphasizing the public importance of motion pictures. So runs the history of the first national Greater Movie Season backed by exhibitor exploitation of an unprecedented nature.

Personal appearances of D. W. Griffith, Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields and other popular screen players commenced proceedings at the New York Strand. Special presentations at the Capitol, Rivoli, Rialto and Piccadilly carried the "greatest movie" theme; and an intensive newspaper, billboard and front-of-house campaigns brought immediate results at all the seventy-five participating theatres throughout Greater New York.

The drive nationally developed as many surprises as an election. Atlanta, for instance, contradicted the general belief that the season's principal advantages were for first-run-down-town houses.

"Reports from all theatres here indicate from ten to forty per cent increase in business over the past three months," Willard C. Patterson telegraphed. "Community and second run theatres show the greatest increase. The most outstanding feature of our campaign was the splendid co-operation from big business concerns and newspapers, showing that the people of Atlanta hold their picture theatres in high regard. Greater Movie Season is a success. Let's have it every year."

From present indications Chicago staged the most spectacular function. The highlight proved to be the "King and Queen of Movies" Contest sponsored by the Herald-Examiner. Thirty-six hundred young men and women entered and all participated in the parade as Ladies—and Gentlemen—in-Waiting to the winners, Bert Douglas and Anne Teeman. More than a million and a half people thronged the line of march. Exhibitors throughout Chicago reported one of the best Saturdays and Sundays in their experience, proving that already the campaign has taken effect.

Under the direction of Ralph T. Kettering, everything planned was carried to a successful conclusion. Two contests were conducted simultaneously in the Chicago papers—the essay contest being carried on throughout the country in the Chicago Evening American and the "King and Queen" contest in the Chicago Herald and Examiner. All the other publications were very generous in their support. More than 17,920 lines of free publicity were secured in the six Chicago newspapers, which at the regular advertising rates would have cost $54,760. The writing and placing of the stories was handled by Louis P. Kramer, chairman of the publicity committee. Credit for the parade, which is declared to be the greatest thing arranged by any industry in Chicago, goes to Russell Moon of Paramount.

Chicagoans had a second opportunity to pay homage to the movie king and queen and to continue the celebration of Movie Season at Trianon Ballroom when the winners of the royalty contest were awarded the prizes offered by Chicago's leading merchants. Miss Anne Teeman, the striking brunette queen, received a diamond ring, valued at $1,000 and Bert Douglas, the king, received a similar gift. The "royal couple" also received paid-up life insurance policies for $1,000 and parcels of Florida real estate. Other prizes to the value of $10,000 were awarded competitors.

"There can be no doubt that the campaign on Greater Movie Season has helped to bring together various factions in the motion picture industry," says Louis P. Kramer, chairman of the publicity committee. "Exhibitors and their executives, who were at sword's point before the start of the campaign, are now working in harmony, having learned the value of unified effort through Greater Movie Season. The campaign has also aided business in general. One newspaper handling the Chicago contest has increased its advertising through the month of July by more than four hundred columns over the same period of last year, and has built circulation instead of falling off as most newspapers do during the summer period when people are away on vacations. The industry has not only benefitted, but has made many friends who now fully understand the value of motion pictures and motion picture theatres."

Three hundred Michigan theatre-owners conducted the campaign simultaneously and according to H. M. Richey, "reports indicate a remarkable public interest. It has been a big job but it will be worth the effort."

No less than fifty special window displays were arranged in Detroit. One enterprising Michigan exhibitor in a town of twelve thousand is offering two automobiles as prizes to his patrons; while in Lansing, where the effort behind the national contest is particularly aggressive, twenty valuable local awards have been secured.

Minneapolis, St. Paul, Oklahoma City, Tulsa and Louisville have deferred their season for two weeks in order to develop full publicity impetus.

Telegraph dispatches from other centers where the season has opened follow:

ATLANTIC CITY—A salute of fourteen guns one for each theatre, fired by the Janeway Battery Saturday morning formed the opening shots of Greater Movie Season. This brought thousands on the run to the beach where boy scouts displayed large banners reading, "Atlantic City Welcomes Greater Movie Season Which Opens Today." From there the parade moved down Atlantic Avenue. All theatres and most of the exchanges were represented by floats; theatre employees marched, together with platoons of militia, scouts and mounted police. The country for twenty miles around is twenty-four sheeted; the fronts of street-cars carry one-sheets; and the Greater Movie Season slogan is born on the windshields of over two hundred jitneys as well. There are fifty thousand visitors in Atlantic City at present and with the intensive three weeks' campaign that has been directed at them all houses and the two piers are getting extra money.

NEW ORLEANS—The season has been launched auspiciously, ably supported by ninety per cent of the leading theatre owners. The campaign has been sound and practical and without unnecessary trimmings. It is felt that exhibitors have learned much that will prove valuable next year.

DES MOINES—"The public is in accord with our campaign and know that greater and better motion pictures are to be shown during the coming season," said A. G. Stolte, of the A. H. Blank Enterprise whose efforts have been largely responsible for the successful opening of Greater Movie Season here. "The present line-up of attraction being booked from August to December promises exceptional business, and we are convincing the public of the sincerity of the Greater Movie slogan."

DALLAS—The season opened with capacity audiences all day. Newspapers have given splendid editorial support. While no actual figures regarding box-office increases can be quoted, Si Charninsky of the Capitol, for one, declares himself thoroughly sold on the movement and looks forward to it as a yearly event.

French Production Alliance for "U"

Laemmle Signs Contract for Joint Filming in Paris of " The Man Who Laughs "

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures corporation, has signed a contract with the Societe Generale de Films, Paris, for the co-production by the two companies of "L'Homme qui Rit" ("The Man Who Laughs") by Victor Hugo, according to announcement this week by Rene Batigne, managing director in New York for the French firm.

The contract was signed by Mr. Laemmle, who is now in Europe on his annual trip, and the Duke d'Ayen, president of the Societe Generale de Films, the holding company of the producers of "The Miracle of the Wolves."

This move comes as a striking confirmation of predictions made in the series of articles now running in Motion Picture News on the European situation, to the effect that American concern would find it advantageous to enter into alliances with European producers and distributors for the mutual production of pictures of an international character.

The Victor Hugo story, "The Man Who Laughs," has long been sought by American film companies, but the rights were controlled by the European firm. In most European countries, a copyright runs for 99 years after the death of the author, making the situation in regard to the classics quite different than in America.

John Barrymore appeared on Broadway a few years ago in a version of "The Man Who Laughs," which attracted some little attention at that time. The story is a vivid one, dealing with a man who is punished for a small offense by being slashed across the face with a sword, widening his mouth to a hideous and perpetual grin. This provides the basis for a dramatic and moving tale.

The Duke d'Ayen and Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, signing the contract for the production in France of "The Man Who Laughs," as told here.

An important feature of the production contract entered into is the fact that Universal will select the cast, to be made up of American and French players, with a leading American male star in the lead. Universal will also have a hand in the general supervision of the production. Fuller details of the precise arrangement will be made public shortly.

Universal will distribute the picture in America, while the French company will presumably handle it in France in the same manner as "The Miracle of the Wolves" was distributed.

Plans for the production of "The Man Who Laughs" have been under way for some time by the Societe Generale de Films, and were actively under discussion at the time the Motion Picture News representative was in Paris. It was particularly desired to find a subject which would be a worthy successor in importance to "The Miracle of the Wolves," and the directors felt that "The Man Who Laughs" was especially suitable from this standpoint.

The alliance with Universal for the production and distribution of the picture will increase the scope of these plans, since with American distribution assured it will be possible to film the story on the most elaborate scale.

Positive Exports Show Striking Gain

Department of Commerce Figures Indicate Firm Upward Trend in Film Shipments

PRELIMINARY figures just issued by the Department of Commerce show that exports of positives from the United States for the month of June reached a total linear footage of 20,803,969 at a declared value of $598,199. This is slightly over 2,000,000 feet more than was sent abroad for the month of May and over double the quantity exported during June, 1924.

Slight Negative Drop

For the month of June, 926,944 linear feet of negatives were exported at a declared value of $142,284. This is about 100,000 feet less than were sent overseas during May and a little less than 75,000 feet under what were exported during the same period last year.

For the fiscal year which comprises the 12 months ending June 30, 1925, preliminary Department of Commerce figures show exports of positives to the amount of 210,452,587 linear feet valued at $6,739,786. This shows a net increase of over 67,000,000 feet over exports of positives for the preceding fiscal year.

With respect to individual countries the United Kingdom with 47,000,000 feet approximately as against about 13,000,000 feet the year before topped the list. Next came Canada with 22,000,000 feet in round numbers—about 4,000,000 feet more than the year before—with Australia third. Her total was also about 22,000,000 feet, or 5,000,000 feet more than for the fiscal year 1923–24. Argentine, France, Brazil and Japan followed in order with figures from 10,000,000 to 16,000,000 feet—except Japan, which took about 7,000,000 feet. These all showed gains over last year—France more than double—with the exception of Japan, which showed a slight loss.

Exports of negatives for the fiscal year under consideration reached a total of 9,393,589 linear feet valued at $1,894,314 as compared with 7,319,635 linear feet valued at $1,187,093 for the fiscal year 1923–24. France, Germany and the United Kingdom continue to be our largest customers for these.

Large Gain for Year

While it does not afford any direct comparison, it is interesting to note that American exports of positives for the fiscal year topped by over 40,000,000 feet exports of positives for the calendar year 1924, while exports of negatives for the fiscal period reached about 1,000,000 feet above similar totals for the calendar period.

United Artists Buy Into German Distributor

AS a further step in its recent program of extension, United Artists this week announced the completion of a deal giving that corporation a large interest in the Internationale Aktien-Gesellschaft, a German distributing concern.

The deal was closed on Tuesday of this week by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists.

Included in the deal is a hand in the management of the company's holdings, comprising six exchanges in Germany, a building in Berlin and sixteen productions of German make. United Artists will have representation on the board of directors of the Internationale A.-G., and will participate in the administration of both distribution and production.

The sixteen German productions acquired in the deal will be viewed by Joseph M. Schenck, who will pass upon their suitability for release.

"Schaufenster-Theatern" Seen as European Objective

First Runs Needed Abroad By American Firms

By L. C. Moen

WHEN American executives go abroad these days, they are not on pleasure bent, or at least not entirely. European affairs are in a state of flux—anything may happen—and many anxious eyes are directed from America across the sea. Not only are some of the European companies rousing themselves but the American firms are beginning to compete with one another in real earnestness.

An expression has been coined in Germany which sums up the present objective of the leading American companies abroad (identical, incidentally, with their objective at home). This expression is "Schaufenster-Theatern" — Show-window Theatres.

As explained last week in part, the "battle of theatre seats" is assuming much the same complexion in Europe that it bears here, further complicated by certain peculiarities of the Continental situation. I stated last week that the heaviest contenders at the moment are the three leading producer-distributor-exhibitor firms, Famous Players, First National and Metro-Goldwyn.

But there are others. Albert Warner is abroad for Warner Brothers. Winfield R. Sheehan is on the other side and will probably remain there most of the summer in the interests of Fox. Schiller and Rubin are in Europe for Metro-Goldwyn. Abe Berman and Nathan Burkan are looking into matters for United Artists. Carl Laemmle is abroad for the summer as usual. Vogel has been arranging matters for Producers Distributing Corporation.

All of this affords some clue to the deep interest in the European market prevailing at the moment. And by way of clearing the ground for what is to follow, let us consider briefly the position in which some of the leading American concerns find themselves:

Famous Players: As stated last week, this concern occupies easily the strongest position of any American concern in the European field. Having been the first to approach the problem seriously, it is strongly entrenched, with many theatres and a powerful distributing organization. In the matter of production abroad on a reciprocal basis, which will be dealt with at length later, it also has some little experience to serve as a guide in future ventures. Is working independently of European concerns, building its own complete organization.

First National: This company has also built its European revenue up to a considerable point, partly through European distributors and partly through its own exchanges. Its activities seem to be tending toward a development similar to Famous Players, with its own first run houses, exchanges and perhaps some production abroad. This is pure conjecture, however, and the general plans of First National may be said to be in the stage of investigation and consideration rather than definite action. One or more of the principal executives will probaly go abroad shortly to study conditions and lay plans for an offensive to meet the competition of Famous Players. This will be vitally necessary, if the company is to compete with Famous Players on the home market. With Famous Players grossing a million dollars a month in the foreign field, First National must build its own European income up to something like that figure if it is to compete successfully at home on the American market.

Metro-Goldywyn: Through its alliance with Gaumont, this concern immediately leaps into a more important position in the foreign market. If it can continue to work in association with, or through, such concerns as Gaumont in France, Ufa in Germany, Le Mat in Scandinavia, and others, it will probably be unnecessary for this company to build theatres abroad, though it would not be surprising if some production affiliations developed.

United Artists Interested

United Artists: This company's interest in a reciprocal producing and distributing arrangement has been publicly announced. United Artists, handling a relatively limited number of pictures each year, could easily accommodate a few high grade foreign releases each year, provided that they were produced under suitable supervision—and provided that it obtained important first run representation abroad. Had the deal with Ufa, for instance, materialized United Artists would have obtained important first run showings in Germany in return for distribution here of certain pictures made by Ufa under United Artists' editorial supervision. This deal did not go through, for certain reasons, but other important developments may be expected. Much of the United Artists' product is likely to be of great value on the European market, particularly in view of a development which will be dealt with at length later—the waning importance of the program picture in Europe. William S. Hart (known abroad as "Rio Jim") and Chaplin are easily two of the very biggest stars with the European public, and their pictures for United Artists will carry the remainder of the product.

Warner Brothers: By the acquisition of Vitagraph, this company obtained a group of foreign offices that materially strengthens its position. Albert Warner recently announced abroad that his company would like "show window theatres" in London, Paris and Berlin, for exploitation first run purposes. This company's type of product embraces much that is likely to be popular abroad, including the Ernest Lubitsch and John Barrymore productions.

Producers' Status Abroad

Producers Distributing Corporation: Now handling its foreign affairs through William Vogel—but keep your eye on this company. John Flinn had some little chance to view the European situation while still with Famous Players, and is in a position to approach this field intelligently and forcefully. Some important distributing connections have already been made, and this concern might easily become an important factor abroad, particularly if it were to enter into reciprocal distributing arrangements here.

Universal: This is another of the pioneers in the European field. Universal covers England and the Continent, central Europe and the Far East pretty completely. Laemmle stated at the Milwaukee convention that it was the foreign revenue which had enabled Universal to keep its head above water, and there is no questioning this company's importance abroad in its field. Owns theatres in London and Leeds, England, but has not gone into this heavily. Operates its own exchanges, largely. Meanwhile, watch for some important developments in a production way in connection with Laemmle's trip.

Fox: Much of this company's strength, also, has come from its pioneer work abroad. Fox has its own exchanges throughout Europe and the Far East, covering much the same key points as Universal. The Tom Mix tour brought considerable publicity to Fox, which will probably be reflected in the interest in these subjects. This company is strongly entrenched in its own particular niche in the foreign market. Winfield R. Sheehan is now abroad, reorganizing and strengthening the field force, and some interesting announcements may be expected upon his return.

Film Booking Offices: This company has many strong connections abroad and has excellent distribution in certain areas. The head of the company, Major H. C. S. Thomson, is one of the best informed men in the American industry on European conditions, and his next trip abroad is likely to see some important moves toward strengthening this firm's position.

Greater Movie Season Opens

INDIANAPOLIS—Greater Movie Season opening on Sunday was a big success at all theatres. In addition to special advertising space, the season was featured in individual displays. The campaign here illustrated so graphically the manner in which public spirit and enthusiasm can be developed by a co-operative drive, that city officials and business men will adapt the working plans for a civic demonstration to be known as Greater Indianapolis week, scheduled for September.

TOLEDO—All theatres participating in Greater Movie Season have started off to increased business, according to F. E. Walters of the Temple Theatres, who controlled the campaign. The mayor issued a general proclamation which was published in all newspapers. Theatre-fronts are decorated and a huge banner is stretched across the main thoroughfare. The Toledo News-Bee, conducting the essay contest, is offering thirteen hundred and seventy-three prizes in addition to the three national awards.

Encouraged by the campaign's success, the large theatres intend to carry the season through into September.

The Greater Movie Season was inaugurated in Cincinnati last week with only six of the city's movie houses participating. These are the Capitol, Walnut, Strand, Family, Lyric and Palace and are all of the I. Libson Circuit of theatres. The theatres were decorated both out and in and all in all they presented an appearance of a gala occasion.

The Greater Movie Season campaign in Atlanta broke last Sunday, and is now swinging its way along to a new era in the picture houses. The town was placarded with twenty-four sheets, all the theatres decorated with banners and pennants, advertising the season, and the newspaper advertising was backed up with substantial stories, furnished by Earle E. Griggs, publicity director, and his assistant, Ernest Geyer.

A Six cylinder closed motor car, a Baby Grand piano, a Trip to Los Angeles and return for two, a Diamond studded wrist watch, a Combination radio Columbia phonograph, a Gold engraved pass to all theatres in city, and Personally autographed photographs of movie stars; those are the list of prizes which Kansas City exhibitors will offer in connection with the Greater Movie Season national essay. The Kansas City Star, with a daily circulation of 500,000, has agreed to "carry" the contest by reprinting the winning essays on "What The Movies Mean To Me."

Plans for the three-week celebration in Kansas City in conjunction with the Greater Movie Season campaign practically are completed. Mayor Albert I. Beach, who is on a vacation, has been requested to issue a proclamation, while more than 200 billboards will be used for four showings, there already having been 2,000 pennants purchased and hung about the city.

Greater Movie Season is starting off in a manner that is highly complimentary to the four theatres of Salt Lake city that are putting forth the utmost in effort and capitol to make it an epochal event in motion picture circles of this section. The Kinema Paramount Empress, Pantages and Victory theatres are the houses that are behind the movement.

Special productions, programs and prologues are being featured the opening week of the drive. Indications point to a splendid success locally for the Season.

Greater Movie Season in Detroit and Michigan in general promises to be a huge success. Every theatre is presenting especially selected programs. The essay contest is being conducted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan in conjunction with the motion picture department of the Detroit Times.

One of the longest and largest parades ever held in the history of Denver marked the opening of Greater Movie Season. Thousands of people lined the downtown streets and watched a pageant of cars and floats interspersed with bands and orchestras which extended for a length of three miles. At exactly eleven o'clock A. M. six bombs were exploded from the roof of the Denver Post and the giant procession began to march. The parade was led by the Denver City Officials, a squadron of mounted police, the United States Army band from Ft. Logan followed by a company of soldiers, and a representation from the Denver Fire Department. Then came scores of floats, bands, orchestras, and highly decorated private automobiles, followed by "Diamond" Jack Alterie and a half hundred yelling cowboys.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officially inaugurated the Greater Movie Season on the Pacific Coast Monday evening at Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles with a gala occasion marking the presentation of "The Unholy Three."

Mayor Cryer represented the city and introduced Fred Niblo who spoke on behalf of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization and acted as master of ceremonies, introducing Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf and the M-G-M stars, including Lon Chaney, star of "The Unholy Three," Marion Davies, John Gilbert, Lillian Gish, Ramon Novarro, Mae Murray, Norma Shearer, Buster Keaton and Jackie Coogan as well as Eleanor Boardman, Aileen Pringle and Pauline Starke.

"Greater Motion Picture Week" was launched in St. Louis, Mo., Saturday, August 1, under very favorable circumstances.

The weather was ideal for amusements; cool enough to make an indoor show desirable, but not too cold for the venturesome ones who preferred the alfresco style of entertainment.

The week's offering of pictures was in keeping with the spirit of the season.

St. Louis was given some splendid outside aid in putting over Greater Motion Picture Week when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's famous trackless trans-continental train breezed into the city via the McKinley Bridge on Friday, July 31, and participated in the opening of the festivities on the following day.

New Companies Are Granted New York Charters

Newly incorporated companies planning to enter the motion picture business in its various branches in New York state, and chartered during the past week by the secretary of state, included the following: Dependable Film Corporation, capitalization not specified, Charles S. Goetz, Betty Goetz, William Goetz, New York; The Village Follies Attractions, Inc., $100,000, William Kaufman, Israel Finkel, Ida Shmunis, New York city; 45th and Broadway Corporation, David Blum, Irving M. Greenfield, Matie Hammerstein, New York.

Bomb Damages Detroit Picture House

The Imperial theatre at 7030 Michigan avenue in Detroit, is the latest to be damaged by a bomb explosion. The missile, which police said was planted in the box office of the house, wrecked the entire front of the structure as well as damaging windows in the neighborhood. No reason has been ascertained for the affair.

Rothacker Making Picture of Labor History

This history of the development of Labor will be the subject of a film which the American Federation of Labor has commissioned the Rothaker Film Mfg. Co. of Chicago to produce. The feature which has been in the course of production for over a month will be completed in six weeks.

U. S. Supreme Court to Review Eastman Case

THE United States Supreme Court will be asked to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals denying the right of the Federal Trade Commission to order the Eastman Kodak Company to dispose of certain laboratories which the commission held were secured for the purpose of fighting efforts to bring about the use in this country of foreign motion picture film.

The court upheld the commission's order requiring the Eastman Kodak Company and the Allied Laboratories' Association to abandon the agreement under which the latter would import no foreign film if the former refrained from operating its laboratories.

The Eastman Kodak case was bitterly fought by the respondents and has been before the commission for a long time. Establishment of the laboratories for producing positives came about, the commission was told, when the kodak company learned that certain laboratories were using imported film, and the company threatened to put its laboratories into operation and "cut under" independent laboratories unless the latter agreed to restrict themselves to the use of Eastman film.

Following the decision of the commission, the Eastman Kodak Company carried the case to the courts, where that part of the commission's decision requiring the abandonment of the agreement was upheld. The court held, however, that the commission exercises administrative and not judicial power and is without authority to order that a citizen sell property acquired in the course of business.

Storey Wins Promotion With Pathe

Is Appointed to Newly-Created Office of Assistant General Manager, While Two Other Executives Also Advance

JOHN E. STOREY has been promoted to the newly created office of Assistant General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and three others have won executive promotion as a result. Storey will assist Elmer Pearson, Vice-President and General Manager of the company.

Storey will be succeeded in the office of general sales manager by Harry Scott, who has been serving as feature sales manager. The post of feature sales manager will be filled by Pat Campbell, special feature representative. These promotions became effective Monday, August 3rd.

According to the Pathe announcement the past year has witnessed so overwhelming an increase in the duties and responsibilities of General Manager Pearson, that officials of the company decided to create the new post of Assistant General Manager.

Storey has been with Pathe for so long a period and has been so closely associated with the firm's personnel and administrative activities that he is admirably qualified to assist Mr. Pearson in the work of directing the sales and production affairs of the company.

Storey is a Canadian by birth and received his education in Northern New York. In his early business career, he spent a number of years in the executive offices of Middle West Railway companies. In the Fall of 1915, he decided that the motion picture business was a coming industry and made up his mind to break into it. He entered the employ of the Vitagraph and spent seven months as a salesman for that company in Kansas City under Mr. Pearson who was then Vitagraph Manager in that city. Then followed a year as Branch Manager for the George Kleine System in Kansas City.

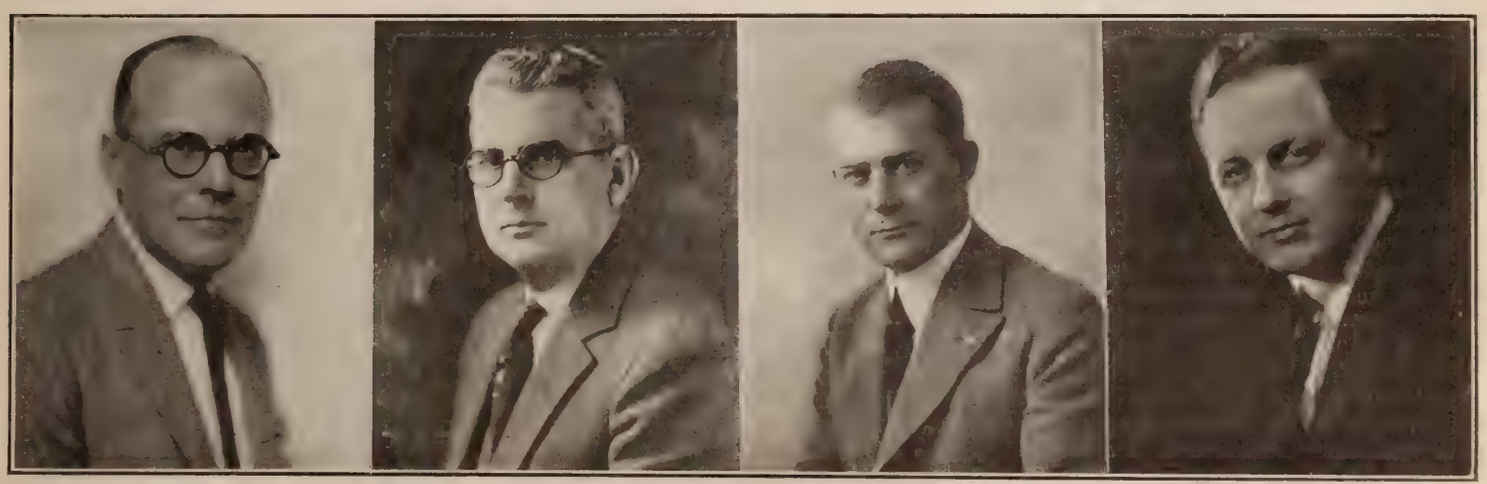
About that time he joined Pathe and served for a year as Pathe Branch Manager in Kansas City. From this point he was promoted to the position of Pathe District Manager in charge of all Pacific Coast and Western Branches. Afterwards, he was called to the Home Office to act as Assistant Manager of Exchanges. When Pathe took over Associated Exhibitors, Inc., Storey was the man selected for the responsible post of Sales Manager of that organization, and later, when Arthur S. Kane and his associates took control of Associated, Mr. Storey returned to Pathe as General Representative with field supervision over Branches, from which position he was promoted to be General Sales Manager.

The new Pathe General Sales Manager, Harry Scott, was appointed Feature Sales Manager in October, 1923, after a long and varied career in amusement enterprises. For a number of years he was actively identified with theatrical interests and for five years was press representative for Ringling Brothers' Circus. Leaving the circus business for motion pictures, he made his first film affiliation with George Kleine for whom he managed Branch Offices in Columbus, Dallas, and Philadelphia. He was later promoted to the post of Eastern Division Sales Manager for the Kleine organization which he held for some time. At the termination of his connection with Kleine, Mr. Scott joined the Goldwyn organization for which he served as Special Representative.

Later he joined First National and for four years managed its Detroit office, resigning to become Detroit Branch Manager for Pathe. After nearly a year in this capacity, he came to New York where he was appointed New York Branch Manager for Educational, and later was made Manager of Distribution for Ritz-Carlton Pictures from which post he rejoined Pathe as Feature Sales Manager.

The new Feature Sales Manager, "Pat" Campbell, signs his name P. W. Campbell, but is known to newspaper men, exhibitors, exchange men, critics and reviewers the country over as "Pat" Campbell. In 1914, Campbell served as General Manager for his aunt, Mrs. Pat Campbell, the famous English actress, on her American tour, and later as Manager for George Tyler Productions in association with A. L. Erlanger. Then he entered the motion picture business and became affiliated with D. W. Griffith for whom he was General Sales Representative, handling the sale of all Griffith super-features of recent years.

From the Griffith organization, he went to Pathe as one of the Special Feature Representatives appointed by Mr. Scott in June to promote the new Harold Lloyd feature, "The Freshman."



Chicago Musicians Ask Big Increase

CHICAGO UNION MUSICIANS already probably the highest paid in the country, have presented demands for a new wage and working agreement to start September seventh, when the present agreement expires, that are regarded exorbitant and unreasonable and will be bitterly resisted by the Chicago Exhibitors Association, headed by Business Manager Jack Miller. The demands include a twenty-five per cent wage increase, a guarantee of fifty-two weeks work a year, fifty per cent of scale added for musicians playing more than one instrument, the use of seven men in orchestras where four are now employed, and that any musician proving satisfactory after a two weeks tryout shall be retained for the full year. The minimum scale now paid is $52.50 for a thirty-two hour week with forty four weeks employment guaranteed.

Three Personnel Changes in Paramount Branches

George W. Weeks, Paramount distribution head, announces three changes in exchange personnel during the past week. M. C. Hughes, branch manager at Pittsburgh is succeeded by J. E. Fontaine, Cleveland branch manager, who in turn is succeeded by E. H. Brauer, branch manager at Columbus. Carl Weeks, salesman in the Columbus exchange, has been promoted to branch manager at Columbus.

Mr. Hughes has been in poor health for nearly a year, and returned to his duties at Pittsburgh this spring after a leave of absence of several months. On his return to work he found his condition had not improved sufficiently to enable him to carry on, and on his doctor's orders he asked to be relieved.

Cecil B. De Mille Denies All Affiliation With Famous Players or Others

CECILE B. DE MILLE in a letter to Miss Ray Lewis, editor of The Spotlight, declares that his production activities are absolutely independent, and that Producers Distributing Corporation is not connected with Famous Players, directly or indirectly.

"In your issue of July 4th, you published an editorial headed, 'Cecil De Mille, Is Your Distributing Company Independent? Please answer'.

"My answer is definite, without evasion or subterfuge. The producers Distributing Corporation is not connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, either directly or indirectly. My production and releasing activities are absolutely independent, without connection or alliance of any sort with the three firms mentioned in your editorial.

"It has been stated by some that I myself might be unaware of such an affiliation. This is untrue and impossible.

"I have become an independent producer because I sincerely believe that independent production and exhibition must be maintained if this great business of ours is to continue to progress and prosper."

Censor Violation Fines Drop

Pennsylvania Statistics Show Only $240 Collected During Past Year

EVERY year since motion picture censorship was established in Pennsylvania, with the single exception of 1918, the amount of money collected in fines for violation of the Act under which the Board of Censors operates, has shown an annual decrease, until in the last year it was reduced to a mere $240. This is a drop from $2,635 collected in 1917. The only year since then in which this amount of fines was exceeded was 1918 when the total was $4,075.

These facts were disclosed by a statistical report of the board's work for the last fiscal year which has just been issued from the Capitol at Harrisburgh. In the last year 22 subjects involving 116 reels of films were disapproved by the board, and within the year the censors approved 10,608 subjects embracing 16,720 reels.

There were 23,704 eliminations, covering 3,034 subjects and 15,282 reels of film ordered and made. The board collected $97,210 from all sources and expended $61,169.

Under the motion picture act all films first must be approved by the board before they may be exhibited in the State. This is done in the general office at Philadelphia and a charge of $2 a reel is made for all reels of 1,200 feet or less, the same rate applying to examinations of both original and duplicate copies. In addition the board has a corps of inspectors throughout the State who visit the picture houses to determine whether or not cuts and deletions ordered by the board have been made.

Members of the board include Harry L. Knapp, Philadelphia, chairman; Catharine A. Niver, Charleroi, and Henry S. Richardson, Philadelphia.

July Capital Decreases

Month Shows Slight Increase in Number of Charters Filed

ONE hundred and forty-two new charters were issued to corporations during the month of July, according to a survey published by The Film Daily this week. This is an increase of but seven over the previous month. The amount of capital involved during June, however, is overwhelmingly greater than that of last month. July is listed with $27,591,000 while the June group showed a total of $103,640,900 in active capital.

New York State leads in the month's charters with 66; California comes next with 21, and Delaware is third with 13. Nine corporations were granted charters in England and one in China. Delaware with $16,640,000 leads the field in listed capital.

Exhibition proved itself again the most active branch of the industry inasmuch as 62 theatre units were chartered. Production followed with 30, and distribution with 16. The remaining 38 were claimed by exporting companies, laboratories, realty concerns, libraries, importers, and holding companies for studios.

Below is a resume of corporate activity since the first of the year:

Month	No. of Cos.	Capital	Not listing Capital
January	166	$66,809,000	53
February	86	21,241,000	23
March	222	36,946,440	63
April	115	42,582,500	35
May	232	29,010,721	74
June	135	103,640,900	30
July	146	27,591,000	42
Totals	1,102	$327,821,561	320

Whitman Bennett Studios Moved to Brooklyn

The Whitman Bennett moving picture studios and the Bennett Book and Binding Company announce the removal of their quarters from 537 Riverdale Avenue, Yonkers, to 3021 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn.

Canada Statistics Show Per Capita Tax

Statistics recently issued in Canada serve to indicate how the amusement taxes in the respective Provinces of the Dominion fall upon the individual person, figures being given which show the per capita average for the tax.

British Columbia, which has comparatively few theatres, leads in this respect according to the figures for 1924 just designated. The amusement tax there for the year was 95 cents per head. The people of Manitoba came next with 46 cents per capita for the year and it is interesting to note that the Manitoba average is less than half of the amusement tax per head paid by the residents of British Columbia.

The Province of Ontario, with its numerous theatres and large population, had an amusement tax total which figured out at 43 cents per capita. Alberta, in fourth place in the standing, collected 35 cents per capita in the amusement tax for 1924. Nova Scotia was fifth with an average of 26 cents per person while New Brunswick was sixth with 16 cents per head. Prince Edward Island, the tiny island Province on the Atlantic Coast, collected amusement tax which averaged five cents per person.

Would Ban Film on Cars and Busses

A ban upon the transportation of moving picture films on street cars and busses has been asked of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia by the Washington Film Board of Trade. This action has been asked as a means of preventing any disaster such as occurred upon a Boston street car some time ago.

In making its request to the commission, the film board of trade points out that moving picture films are a potential fire danger, and that accidents might occur through no fault of the person carrying them.

Commission Refuses Plea of West Coast Theatres

Following a hearing on the question of its jurisdiction, the Federal Trade Commission at Washington has denied a motion by attorneys for the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to quash the complaint against the organization, and will probably hold hearings for the taking of testimony early in October. The West Coast Theatres have been given an extension of time to September 15 in which to file answer to the commission's formal charges.

New Roxy Corporation Files Charter

THE charter of the new Roxy Theatre Corporation was filed in the offices of the Secretary of State at Albany, New York, during the week, and reveals S. L. Rothafel as president of the corporation and W. E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager.

The corporation was formed for the purpose of building and operating the recently announced chain of motion picture theatres in New York City. The first of these to be erected will be "The Roxy" at Seventh Avenue and Fiftieth Street. It will have a seating capacity of 6212 and will be opened to the public in the Fall of 1926.

Building of Big Theatres Continues

Baltimore, San Francisco, Chicago and Omaha Figure in Important News of the Week

IMPORTANT theatre news of the week centers in Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, and Omaha.

Three large houses are to be built in Baltimore, according to well founded reports. The companies involved in the planned building operations are: the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, the Marcus Loew Interests of New York and an unnamed company which is represented by Thomas D. Soriero, formerly general manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests in Baltimore.

According to H. C. McGuirk, a director of the Stanley organization, that company is planning not only to build another playhouse, but is contemplating the purchase of a theatre already built.

Mr. Soriero is keeping very silent concerning his plans and the company he represents but it is understood that he plans a large theatre and office building on North Howard Street.

The Loew Interests formerly had the Hippodrome theatre there, which is now operated by the Keith Interests of New York, through F. C. Schanberger. But the present report is that he will build another playhouse when a suitable site is found.

In Chicago, Balaban & Katz will build a $4,000,000 theatre on Washington boulevard, Crawford and West End Aves. It will be the first for the newly-organized company owned by B. & K. and Lubliner & Trinz. Novel features will be a miniature theatre for children, a kindergarten, nursery and playground. A jeweled tower will rise seven stories above the street. The new house will be in Spanish Renaissance style. Orchestra pits and organ consoles on elevators, a big freezing plant and a new kind of indirect lighting will be used. Construction begins in the Fall. Rapp & Rapp are the architects.

Another big house for Chicago is announced by Harry Reckas, who will build a 2,200 seat theatre, to cost $1,000,000 at Thirty-Fifth and South Halstead streets.

With the return to San Francisco of Sam Harris and Irving Ackerman of Ackerman & Harris a $4,000,000 theatre program was announced. The latest program calls for a $1,000,000, 2400 seat theatre in Portland, Oregon and new structures at Los Angeles, Oakland, Fresno, San Leandro and Hayward. The Fresno house will be completed within three months.

Announcement has just been made by Herbert L. Rothchild, who recently sold the Granada, California, Imperial and New St. Francis theatres to the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation, that he has purchased the Coliseum and Alexandria theatres from the Levins. These two houses are among the largest residential motion picture palaces on the Pacific Coast.

Sid Grauman, Hollywood theatre owner, while in San Francisco stated that he had under consideration there a site on which to build a monster new motion picture house.

San Francisco's boom in theatre building reached a new high mark with the announcement of Samuel H. Levin, of plans for the construction of four new theatres in the neighborhood sections of the city. Ground was broken this week for the new theatre at Balboa street and Thirty-eighth avenue; ground is about to be broken for a second at Divisadero and Hayes streets; the third at Polk and Broadway and the fourth at Fillmore and California streets, will be started as soon as leases on existing buildings expire. The houses will seat between 1,200 to 2,000 persons.

Omaha is promised another imposing downtown motion picture theatre. Sam H. Goldberg and W. R. McFarland, representing the World Realty company, signed a 99-year lease for the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Douglas street, 132 x 132 feet, and in the heart of Omaha's "white way."

The corner of this site is now occupied by an old two-story building and part by the Empress theatre which is operated by the World Realty company. The announced plan is to erect a 12-story theatre and hotel building or theatre and office building. The new building will necessitate wrecking the Empress theatre.

Terms of the lease provide for payment of $55,000 a year for first five years; $61,000 a year for 25 years thereafter and $60,000 a year for the succeeding years. The value of the lease is placed at $6,000,000. The World Realty company now holds nine 99-year leases on properties occuiped by their downtown theatres: World, Moon, Sun and Empress. They also operate the Muse, located just outside of the downtown district.

This is the second large motion picture theatre deal in Omaha during the last few weeks. Recently A. H. Blank of Des Moines, head of A. H. Blank Enterprises, Inc., signed a lease for a tract at Twentieth and Farnam streets, where a large movie theatre will be erected without delay, according to announcement.

Harmony Move in New York M.P.T.O.

At O'Reilly's Suggestion, Leaders of Three Zones Will Meet to Form Plans for Co-Operation

CHARLES L. O'REILLY, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and a former head of the New York State M. P. T. O., is taking the first step toward bringing back harmony within the ranks of the state association and a complete cooperation to all three zones. The other two zones met recently in Syracuse, and elected William Dillon, of Ithaca, as president of the New York State M. P. T. O. New York city and the metropolitan area had no part in the election of Mr. Dillon, the zone being without representation at the meeting.

In his letter to President Dillon, Mr. O'Reilly has taken the first step in closing a breach that has existed for several months, suggesting that a conference be held in the near future as a means of bringing reconciliation among the exhibitors. Mr. O'Reilly suggests that the conference include Jules Michaels, chairman of the Buffalo Zone; Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone, Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls, as well as himself, Mr. O'Reilly to represent the exhibitors from the metropolis.

No decision has yet been reached as to the time or place for such conference, although President Dillon as well as Mr. Michaels and Mr. Buettner are heartily in accord with the idea. Owing to the fact that August is more or less given over to vacation, the conference will probably not be held until the last of the month or the fore part of September.

In his letter to President Dillon Mr. O'Reilly congratulated Mr. Dillon upon his ascendancy to the office and likewise assures him of his support. Mr. O'Reilly continues by saying that it was at his suggestion that the state headquarters be moved to Albany, and then goes on to say that he is in hopes that something will be done to the end that the present duplication of dues from exhibitors in New York state will become a thing of the past. Mr. O'Reilly recites that in order to be a 100 per cent organization exhibitor in New York state at the present time, dues must be paid to three separate and distinct organizations and that the method is being condemned by exhibitors on the grounds that it is costly and absolutely uncalled for.

The idea of doing away with the necessity of exhibitors paying their dues to three organizations, appears to have appealed strongly to President Dillon, for in his reply to Mr. O'Reilly, he places particular emphasis on this one point, stating that he is favorable to a conference such as Mr. O'Reilly suggested. President Dillon suggests that delegates from the zones in New York state meet with delegates from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce on matters of statewide importance, a scheme that would do away with the necessity of exhibitors paying dues to two organizations in this state, allowing them to belong to the national organization if they saw fit.

President Dillon is emphatic, however, that the exhibitors must still run and control their own organization under the zone idea. Mr. Dillon concludes by stating that everyone of the upstate exhibitors can be banked upon to get behind any movement that would further protect the theatre owner's existence.

Additional Representation is Provided By Change in New Jersey M. P. T. O.

THE board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, at a meeting held in New York last week, created an associate directorate to take care of the additional representation necessitated by the growth of the organization.

The following members were elected to fill the new post: Lew Newbury, Belmare; E. Thornton Kelly, Palisades; J. J. Unger, Newark; A. W. Hill, Paulsboro; L. Morton Lewis, Atlantic City; and Lew Audobon.

The following resolutions were also passed:

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, in meeting assembled in New York on Tuesday, August 4th, 1925, that we commend the courageous stand of these directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who stood steadfast in their support of the Play Date Bureau and so preserved the cause of the independent theatre owner, producer and distributor.

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, in meeting assembled in New York on Tuesday, August 4th, 1925, that the work of Sydney S. Cohen as a theatre owner leader, be commended and that we offer Mr. Cohen our hearty congratulations and appreciation for his efforts to protect and advance the cause of the independent theatre owner of this country.

Schwartz is Extending Chain

Plans Eight Additional Houses for Long Island With Three Starting This Summer

A. H. SCHWARTZ is making elaborate plans to add materially to his theatre chain in Brooklyn and Long Island with the addition of eight houses, three of which will be under way before the Summer is over.

The first of the Schwartz houses will be under construction at Flushing in the near future. In fact the work of demolishing the old buildings on the theatre site is now under way. This house will have a seating capacity of 2500 and in addition to the theatre the building will contain stores and offices.

The plans call for a large stage, and while the exact policy of the house has not yet been determined, it will be possible to present vaudeville, picture or legitimate attractions.

At Avenue U and Coney Island Avenue, Schwartz's organization is now building the foundation for a 2000 seat vaudeville and picture house. This theatre, scheduled to open early in the spring of 1926, will provide a high class playhouse for a section of Brooklyn that up to the present time is without any form of amusement.

The plans for another Schwartz house, at Kings Highway and Flatbush Avenue, have been filed in the Building Department, and the excavations will be started in August. These two theatres in conjunction with the Kingsway, Farragut, Albemarle, Rialto, Linden and Century will give Schwartz eight houses in Flatbush.

Following closely upon the 3 houses above mentioned will be theatres in Freeport, Huntington, Baldwin, Corona and Fort Washington, with others to be added in the near future.

In addition to these Long Island houses, Schwartz is now operating the Merrick and Rialto Theatres in Jamaica.

Weinberger Quits Schulberg

Resigns Post as Sales Manager to Broaden His Field of Operations

MACK D. WEINBERGER, one of the best known figures in the sales end of the motion picture industry, it became known this week, has resigned as Sales Manager of B. P. Schulberg Productions. No announcement of Mr. Weinberger's future plans has yet been made though it is known that his action of this week comes as a result of a desire to broaden his field of operations and is in perfect harmony with the Schulberg organization.

J. G. Bachmann, in charge of distribution for the latter concern, is enthusiastic regarding the results obtained by Mack Weinberger in securing nation-wide representation for the Schulberg product during the past year.

Previous to his connection with the Schulberg organization Mack Weinberger held many responsible positions in the sales field, principally with national sales organizations and including a number of years as Sales Director of the D. W. Griffith enterprises. He is known from coast to coast, both by exhibitors and territorial buyers, and in particular has a specialized knowledge of the Eastern field.

In and Out of Town

FRED F. SULLY, Philadelphia correspondent of Motion Picture News, sailed on the De Grasse, August 5, for a five weeks' trip to Europe.

H. J. Lorber, special representative for Paramount, sailed for Paris enroute to Stockholm.

JACK Cohn of Columbia Pictures is in Maine on vacation.

SAM Sax arrived in New York this week after a two months' stay in Los Angeles.

COLVIN W. BROWN, vice-president in charge of distribution for F. B. O., returned this week from a trip to Minneapolis, Detroit and Cleveland. The News last week erroneously referred to Mr. Brown as vice-president in charge of production.

E. BRUCE JOHNSON, foreign manager for First National, is back from an extended trip abroad.

H. Goerz, raw stock manufacturer, is in New York from Germany via Mexico City.

BEN BLUMENTHAL, of Export and Import is returning to New York from Europe on the Paris, due August 12. Gilbert Miller is on the same boat.

Artclass Opens Office in Indianapolis

Louis Weiss announces that the Artclass-Renown Pictures Exchange in Indianapolis will be open for business this week at 432-434 North Illinois St.

This Artclass Exchange will be under the active direction of Renown and will be temporarily controlled by the Chicago office.

Mack D. Weinberger, who has resigned as sales manager for B. P. Schulberg.

Lord's Day Alliance Will Ask Sunday Ban

The Lord's Day Alliance, a reform organization in New York State, has already served notice on the New York State Legislature, that it may expect to have for its consideration next winter, a bill that will prohibit practically all forms of amusement and recreation on the Sabbath. In many respects the bill will be similar to the Jenks measure which was introduced during the last session of the Legislature, and which was referred to a committee with a subsequent hearing that was plainly disappointing to its supporters.

When the bill is introduced next winter, however, its advocates declare that it will have the support of the churches generally throughout the state and will be in a much stronger position to demand consideration than the one of last winter. Around the Capitol, it is not expected that the bill will receive much consideration, owing to its drastic features.

George E. Guise Resigns Miles Managership

The resignation of George E. Guise, general manager of the Charles H. Miles theatres in Detroit, was received with regret by his numerous local friends during the past week.

Coming to Detroit in 1919 as publicity director for the Majestic theatre, a former motion picture house, he was made manager of that house within four weeks. Later he was transferred to the Orpheum theatre and it was from this post that he was appointed general manager by Miles in April, 1921. Guise before coming to Detroit spent ten years as a newspaper man in Minneapolis.

Censors Fail to Close Los Angeles Night Shows

Censorship which has been bitter in its fight to close the all-night shows of Los Angeles theatres suffered another set-back when the local City Council tabled the motion of the censor board for four weeks on the grounds that no action could be taken at present because of the lack of evidence to prove the contentions of the prosecution.

Prominent club women and ministers testified that the all-night theatres were guarded by matrons, that nothing offensive or immoral was found and that the houses should be permitted to run under the same right that night restaurants and taxicabs operated.

Reichenbach Will Open Own Offices

HARRY L. REICHENBACH, exploiteer, has organized his own company to represent and exploit stars and attractions of the independent stage and screen world. The organization has taken offices in the Straus Building in New York and will launch their activities about August 10th.

Marc Lachmann will be associated with Reichenbach in the new venture. Both have had wide experience in this field. They will personally exploit and publicize each of their clients in campaigns that will cover the world.

Comerford Goes Abroad for Six Weeks' Tour

M. E. COMERFORD, head of the big Comerford Circuit in Pennsylvania, sailed for Europe this week on the Berengaria on a six weeks' tour. He was accompanied by Mrs. Comerford, their daughter, Miss Muriel, and Mr. and Mrs. William Cadoret.

Mr. Comerford recently returned from the meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. Directors at Detroit, where he played a prominent part and was elected a member of the new Administrative Committee.

Luxury Taxes Harmful to Austrian Production

According to a recent report to the Department of Commerce from its Vienna office, the decision of the Sascha Film A. G. to suspend its production in Austria, transferring it to Germany, is a symptom of the difficulties under which Austrian film products are at present laboring.

Viennese motion pictures are harmed to a great extent by the burden of high luxury taxes and the erection of new modern theatres has not been undertaken. According to recent reports the possibilities of exploitation of a film in Austria are even less than in the Balkan States.

In Austria, according the the film associations, the production of films and moving pictures meets with extreme indifference on the part of the authorities as contrasted with the interest shown in other lands and as a result the profit from such productions is extremely small.

Famous Players Canada Head Urges Use of Organ

W. F. Davis, former proprietor of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and now attached to the Toronto headquarters staff of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has adopted the policy of urging upon theatre managers to make more use of the organ exclusively in playing with the feature picture of a programme. He believes that a big orchestra playing wonderful orchestral music, detracts from a feature film, and that a softly-played organ can play with a feature photoplay better than anything else. His advice, which he himself followed at the Winnipeg Met., is to use the orchestra for musical specialties and also to play with the short film subjects, such as the news weeklies and the comedies, when considerable jazz can be injected into the proceedings.

Charles G. Branham to Manage Atlanta House

Charles G. Branham, former newspaper man and at one time connected with the old S. A. Lynch enterprises, arrived in Atlanta, Tuesday, to assume the office of manager of the Howard theater, succeeding Howard Waugh, who resigned last week. Mr. Branham is widely experienced in the theater business, and comes to Atlanta from New York where he held the directorship of theaters for the Famous Players-Lasky Canadian corporation.

Pathe: Being the outgrowth of what was once the subsidiary of a European firm, this company, too, has access to strong connections in certain parts of Europe. The short subject situation, which will have to be dealt with in a later article, is slowly improving in Europe, a fact which will boost Pathe's importance abroad as the revenue from short subjects increases.

Educational: As in the case of Pathe, this company will be in a position to profit as the market for short subjects improves in Europe. At the moment, short subjects are largely "fillers" and paid for as such, as was true five years ago in America.

This will give some sketchy notion of what the leading American firms are doing abroad, without considering the European firms that will also play an important part in the coming struggle.

The next consideration is the nature of the market and what methods must be adopted in dealing with it. This will be taken up in succeeding articles, subdivided according to the natural political, racial and economic complexion of Europe, as follows:

Paris and the French Market, including France, Spain, Italy, Belgium, the French colonies, portions of Africa, and the so-called Latin peoples generally.

Berlin and the Central European Market, including Germany, Austria, Holland, Scandinavia, Hungary, Russia, the Balkans, and the Germanic group generally.

London and the British Empire Market, including Great Britain, Australia, India, and the British possessions generally.

The nature of these widely different markets, their business methods, domestic production, public taste and economic condition will be taken up in my next three articles.

Pathe Cameraman Killed in Crossing Street

Charles C. Pritchard, Pathe News staff cameraman was killed last week when hit by an automobile while crossing the street in front of his home in Chicago. He was resting up following his last assignment, the Scopes trial in Dayton, Tenn.

Pritchard had been on the staff of Pathe News for seven years and in that time covered some of the biggest stories and most dangerous assignments. He came through them all without mishap.

Ben Verschleiser Buys Los Angeles Site

BEN VERSCHLEISER announces the purchase of a site in Los Angeles, at the corner of Ninth and Hill streets, for the erection of a modern motion picture theatre for the exclusive run of independent productions. Construction will begin immediately.

Associated with Mr. Verschleiser in the project are George Davis and Sam Briskin of Banner Productions, Henry Ginsberg of the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation, and Sam Verschleiser, supervisor of production for Banner.

Sinclair Lewis Signs With Paramount

JESSE L. LASKY announces the signing of Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," "Babbitt" and "Arrowsmith" to a contract calling for the story of New York City for the Paramount production, "New York" which is to be produced in connection with the 300th anniversary of the eastern metropolis next spring. Allan Dwan will direct the picture which will be a pictorial history of New York City from the time when Peter Minuit bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 up to the present day.

"I feel that, in signing Mr. Lewis for this gigantic task," said Mr. Lasky, "we have secured the writer who, above all others, is qualified to do it as it should be done. He is a New Yorker, a student of everything that pertains to the city, tireless at research, and, as shown by his writings, a master of detail. I am convinced that in his story he will do for New York and its people what 'The Covered Wagon' did for the pioneers, what 'The Pony Express' is doing for the heroes of the West in those days, and what 'The Vanishing American' will do for the Indian.

"In my opinion the combination of Sinclair Lewis as writer and Allan Dwan as director cannot be equalled for this picture. Mr. Dwan knows his New York and its history as perhaps no other director does, and he has an interest in and a love for the city that will spur him on to efforts which even he, with the many great pictures he has made to his credit, has never surpassed."

Independents Report Sales

Many Contracts Are Closed for Both Local and Foreign Territories

LOCAL territorial and foreign sales of Independent product showed considerable activity during the week with a number of transactions reported.

Prior to leaving for the East, Sam Sax, of Lumas Film Corporation made a trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco for the purpose of closing a deal for the distribution of the series of twelve new Gotham productions which his organization is distributing for the 1925-26 season.

A wire from Sam Sax announces that negotiations have been completed whereby Progress Features, with offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Honolulu, T. H., will handle the Gotham output this season.

The territory involved in the deal comprises the states of California, Arizona, Nevada and the territory of Hawaii for the following subjects: "The Overland Limited," "The Police Patrol," "A Little Girl in a Big City," "His Master's Voice," "The Part Time Wife," "Racing Blood," "The Shadow On the Wall," "Hearts and Spanges," "One of the Bravest," "The Sign of the Claw," "The Forest of Destiny" and "The Speed Limit."

The deal was made between Sam Sax for Lumas Film Corporation, and E. Edwards for Progress Features.

Simmonds-Kann have also closed a deal with Soleil Levant Films, of Brussels, for the rights to "Charley's Aunt" for Belgium.

The United Kingdom and also Scandinavia will be distributed by Ideal Films, Ltd., of London.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" For "U"

Picturization of Famous Story Has Long Been a Laemmle Ambition

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" will finally make its appearance on the screen under the supervision of Carl Laemmle, it was announced at the New York offices of Universal this week.

The filming of the popular story has long been a cherished desire on the part of the producer who delayed this long only because of the belief that the southern states might protest such a production. After a survey of several months, centering below the Mason-Dixon line and sounding out the feeling towards Harriett Beecher Stowe's novel, it has been found that resentment against the theme is now a matter of the past and that such a picture would be welcomed.

No indications as to the time of release of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" are yet to be had. Word has gone from Mr. Laemmle to Raymond L. Schrock, general manager of Universal City, to assign the best scenario men on the lot to the preparation of the script for the new super production, without delay. As soon as the continuity is completed the Universal City staff expects to start camera work, as it is intended to have construction work on the initial sets under way as soon as the outline of the production has been drawn up. The picture will have an all-star cast.

National Exploitation for Mills Picture

A national campaign has been planned by the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., with the cooperation of the Montgomery Circulation Service of St. Louis for the advertising and exploitation of the Marilyn Mills picture, "Long Odds."

A contest will be started shortly and the details run in paid space in sixty magazine and 600 newspapers throughout the country.

Hart to Start First for United Artists

William S. Hart will start his first production for United Artists at Universal City August 10th with Wallace Kerrigan serving as production manager and King Baggot directing. "Tumbleweeds" is the title of the picture. It is an adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan from the story by Hal G. Evarts, which ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

Harriet Hammond Signed by Hunt Stromberg

Harriett Hammond has been signed by Hunt Stromberg to appear opposite Harry Carey in "The Man from Red Gulch" and also for the stock company he is now organizing for the eighteen features he is scheduled to make this year for Producers Distributing Corporation. Trilby Clark was recently placed under a similar contract.

Betty Jewel in the Cast of "Invisible Wounds"

Ray Still Under Contract to Chadwick

Chadwick Pictures Corporation still have Charles Ray under contract, according to announcement from that office. He is said to have been loaned to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for one picture. On completion of that production he will return to Chadwick and start work immediately on the first of the remaining pictures he will make for the company.

Helen Jerome Eddy in "The Dark Angel"

Helen Jerome Eddy is announced as the latest addition to the cast of "The Dark Angel" which George Fitzmaurice is making for Samuel Goldwyn.

Paul Panzer to Star in "The Ancient Mariner"

Paul Panzer has been chosen by William Fox to play the title role of "The Ancient Mariner," a special adapted from the famous allegorical poem of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, it was announced at the New York offices of Fox Film Corporation.

Henry Otto, the director, has selected the island of Santa Cruz of the southern coast of California as "location" for some of the marine sequences.

Woven into the sea fantasy of the English poet is a modern story which the Fox company has delegated to separate direction. The completed picture, in its broad, comprehensive sweep, will visualize the projection of the present day application of truth on the ancient poetic parable.

Cast and Director Named for "Man From Red Gulch"

Edmund Mortimer has been chosen by Hunt Stromberg to direct Harry Carey in "The Man From Red Gulch." It will be the second Carey feature that the director has made.

In addition to engaging Mortimer, Stromberg has also selected Harriett Hammond as Carey's' leading lady in this production, and Frank Campeau, Mark Hamilton, Lee Shumway, Doris Lloyd, Virginia Davis and Mickey Moore for the supporting cast.

"The Man From Red Gulch" was adapted for the screen by Harvey Gates from Bret Harte's colorful western story "The Idyl of Red Gulch." It will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation in November.

Cast for "We Moderns" is Completed

First National announces the completion of the cast to appear in support of Coleen Moore in her next feature, "We Moderns," an adaptation of Israel Zangwill's stage play. M-G-M Completing 26 Films

Half of Coming Year's Product is Finished or in Course of Production

ANNOUNCEMENTS from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios disclose the fact that half of the coming season's product has either been completed or put in the course of production. This means that 26 of the total of 52 promised features have seen the light of construction.

After two years of work, "Ben Hur" is approaching its final stages, according to M-G-M officials. "The Big Parade" which Laurence Stallings, co-author of "Wat Price Glory," wrote for John Gilbert is rapidly being finished. King Vidor is directing. Edmund Goulding has begun work on "Sally, Irene and Mary" which was adapted by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton.

Joseph Von Sternberg is starting Mae Murray in "The Masked Bride"' in which she will be supported by Basil Rathbone, the young English star. Buster Keaton will soon be homeward bound from Kingman, Arizona, where he is closing up the detail of "Go West," written by himself in collaboration with Raymond Gannon and Lex Neal. Kathleen Myers is his new leading lady. Rex Ingram is working on the Ibanez novel, "Mare Nostrum," in which Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno have the stellar roles.

Robert Z. Leonard is starting Richard Connell's "A Little Bit of Broadway." With two productions to think about, he has begun preliminary work on "Paris," Carey Wilson's original story. Frank Borzage is completing "The Circle" from W. Somerset Maugham's stage play, while Tod Browning is performing a like duty in behalf of "The Mystic."

William Wellman is directing "I'll Tell the World" by George Scarborough and Annett Westbay. Hobart Henley is starting the picturization of Cosmo Hamilton's "An Exchange of Wives."

"Dance Madness," too, is in its embryo state. S. Jay Kaufman wrote it and Max Marcin adapted it. Monta Bell is directing Marion Davies and Conrad Nagel in "Lights of Old Broadway," Lawrence Eyre's story which Carey Wilson adapted to the screen.

"The Midshipman," directed by Christy Cabanne and starring Ramon Novarro, is nearing the production port.

The Franz Lehar operetta, "The Merry Widow," with Mae Murray and John Gilbert awaits only some minor transpositions by Eric von Stroheim before it is announced for release. Victor Seastrom is working on "The Tower of Lies," taken from "The Emperor of Portugallia," a celebrated novel by Selma Lagerlof. Meanwhile Benjamin Christianson is starting "The Light Eternal."

Jackie Coogan and Sally O'Neill are competing with their elders in activity. On July 15 Jackie starts "Old Clothes," with Eddie Cline directing.

Karl Dane and Mathew Betz Join "Don't" Cast

Earl Dane and Matthew Betz have been selected by Alf Goulding to round out the cast of "Don't," the Rupert Hughes story which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is producing. Sally O'Neill and Bert Roach have been assigned the featured roles in the picture.

Paramount Production Active

Fourteen Companies Are Working on Both Coasts Under Heavy Schedule

PARAMOUNT is at the height of its busiest production schedule with fourteen companies working every day at the coast and Long Island studios. Two of the biggest pictures on the schedule, now in the making are "The Vanishing American" and "The Pony Express."

"The Vanishing American" is being made on the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona with George B. Seitz directing under the supervision of Lucien Hubbard who supervises all Paramount-Zane Grey productions. Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery are the featured players.

James Cruze Camp has been established at Cheyenne, Wyoming, for many of the scenes of "The Pony Express." The featured players are Betty Compson, Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence and Wallace Beery.

Pola Negri is hard at work in her latest starring vehicle "Flower of Night," under the direction of Paul Bern.

Bebe Daniels is busy getting ready to start in "Martinique" under the direction of William K. Howard. Betty Bronson left for New York last week to begin on "A Kiss For Cinderella."

William de Mille has selected the cast for his new production, "New Brooms." Featured players are Neil Hamilton, Bessie Love, Phyllis Haver and Robert McWade.

"The Best People" is being filmed under the direction of Sidney Olcott and is featuring Warner Baxter, Kathlyn Williams, Esther Ralston, Margaret Livingston, Joseph Striker and Edward Davis in the cast.

High in the Cascade Mountains near Leavenworth, Washington, Irving Willat is directing a company filming "The Ancient Highway." Featured players are Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Montagu Love.

Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim," is ready for the first crank of the camera under the direction of Victor Fleming. Percy Marmont will play the title role.

Malcolm St. Clair is directing "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," with Adolphe Menjou, Florence Vidor, Lawrence Grant and Andre de Beranger as featured players.

"The Lucky Lady" is now in production, featuring Lionel Barrymore, Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Marc McDermott, and directed by Raoul Walsh.

D. W. Griffith is making his first production for Paramount under his recently signed contract, "That Royle Girl." Carol Dempster has the title role playing opposite James Kirkwood.

Herbert Brenon has just launched the production of the Sir James M. Barrie classic, "A Kiss for Cinderella" in which Betty Bronson is starred.

Lois Wilson to Play Opposite Meighan

Lois Wilson has been selected by Jesse Lasky to play opposite Thomas Meighan in his next Paramount picture and will sail next week to join the star in Ireland. For fully a month Meighan, Miss Wilson and the Paramount Company will work among the picturesque hills of Kerry County. The picture will have for its background the famous Lakes of Killarney, Muckross Abbey, Rose Castle and Blarney Castle. Some of the scenes will be made on a celebrated race course near Dublin.

Miss Wilson has just finished work in "The Vanishing American," Zane Grey's epic of the American Indian and has spent many weeks on the Navajo Reservation in Arizona for scenes of the picture.

Thomas Meighan has already sailed, accompanied by Director Victor Heerman, who has two recent Meighan successes, "The Confidence Man" and "Old Home Week," to his credit, and Tom Geraghty, supervising director of Meighan's productions.

"Girl Who Wouldn't Work" Release Set

"The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," second of the Preferred Pictures for the new season, is scheduled for release August 15th. The picture is an adaptation of the English novel by Gertie D. Wentworth-Jones and will be the first directorial work of Marcel De Sano. Featured in the cast are Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite De La Motte, Henry B. Walthall, Lilyan Tashman, Forrest Stanley, Tom Ricketts and Winter Hall.

Six Comedy Units for F. B. O.

Demand for Two-Reel Fun Films Warrants Increased Production Plans

SPURRED on by unusual success with its program of two-reel comedies, F. B. O. production forces announces its intention to remain actively in the short subject field and has already formulated plans for an increased schedule during the 1925-26 season.

Headed by "The Adventures of Mazie," a series of twelve episodes based on the stories by Nell Martin which appeared in Top Notch Magazine, and which will again star Alberta Vaughn with Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke in support, F. B. O. announces that another series will soon be started on its lot, called "Fighting Hearts," which is being written expressly for the company by Sam Hellman, well known humorist.

"Fighting Hearts," like "The Adventures of Mazie" will be distributed as twelve two-reel episodes. "Amazing Mazie," No. 1 of the "Mazie" series was concluded this week. Ralph Cedar is directing from the continuities of Doris Anderson. Joe Rock is making two new series of twenty-six comedies for the releasing company.

The first series of 13 will be known as "Standard Fat Men" comedies and will feature fat men on the screen. Mr. Rock plans to use almost a ton of heavies in each picture, and the catch-line "A Ton of Fun" will be used extensively in the advertising and exploitation of the productions. Work on the first comedy of this series, as yet untitled, was completed today, and featured in the production are "Tiny" Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross, and "Fatty" Karr. Billie Rhodes, famous comedienne, also appears in this comedy. The production is now in the cutting room and as soon as it is titled will be shipped to the F. B. O. branches for release on September 6th.

The second series of thirteen two-reel comedies will be known as "Blue Ribbon" comedies, and will feature Chester Conklin, Hank Mann and Vic Potel. Joe Rock's latest star discovery, a young woman from Paris who was recently "christened" Alice Ardell, will play opposite the stars. She is a fetching female who doesn't speak a word of English but whose sense of humor is easily discernible on the screen.

The Bray Studios will contribute 26 short subjects to the F. B. O. program. These twenty-six novelties will consist of thirteen Dinky Doodle Cartoons and thirteen comedies which will be known as "Unnatural History" cartoons. The Dinky Doodle Cartoons will be burlesques of fairy tales and burlesques of the best known feature productions of the current year. "Don Q" will be the first.

"Ving" Fuller, popular sports cartoonist formerly with the New York Graphic, will act as one of the animators associated with Waltz Lantz in the production of these two series.

Complete Cast for Lloyd's First Paramount Feature

With the signing of two of the screen's "strong" men, Production Manager John L. Murphy announces the completion of the cast for Harold Lloyd's first Paramount release.

Noah Young, for six years associated with Lloyd in "heavy" characterizations returns to the comedian's fold, after an absence of two years. Young has been engaged for the principal "heavy" part of the new Lloyd yarn, which is to be laid largely in the slums of any big American city.

Constantine Romanoff, the noted wrestler, has also been engaged for a "strong man" part.

Jobayna Ralston, recently signed again as leading lady for Mr. Lloyd has been cast in a part that will afford her the same scope as "Girl Shy" or "The Freshman." Sam Taylor is directing, the scenario work being handled by Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan, John Grey and Clyde Bruckman.

Lloyd hopes to have two pictures completed by next May so that he can take a long delayed European trip with Mrs. Lloyd and perhaps Mildred Gloria.

John Wenger's Life and Works Published

The life and works of John Wenger, art director for the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres, New York, who was commissioned to design the settings for the largest open air stage in the world at the municipal opera at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, has just been published. It was written by Eduardo Formaro, the celebrated poster artist, and tells of the designers rise from obscurity to his present position in the realm of his art.

Wenger is known for his settings not only in motion picture theatres throughout the country but also for his scenic creations for the Ziegfeld Follies, the George White Scandals and numerous other Broadway productions. The volume contains reproductions of many of the sets he has designed.

"Just Suppose" Purchased for Barthelmess

Inspiration Pictures has purchased screen rights to the A. E. Thomas stage play, "Just Suppose," as a vehicle for Richard Barthelmess for release through First National. It will be screened as the next Barthelmess picture to follow "The Beautiful City," now in production.

"Just Suppose" was produced on the New York stage in 1920 with Patricia Coolinge in the featured role. It is to be re-produced on the Broadway stage again this Fall as a musical comedy.

"Nightie, Nightie Nurse" to Be Started

SYD CHAPLIN is to start work at once in his next feature comedy for Warner Brothers. "Nightie, Nightie Nurse" is the title, and the story is by Robert E. Sherwood of Life Magazine. The picture will be directed by Charles F. "Chuck" Reisner, who also directed Chaplin in his last comedy, "The Man on the Box."

Phantom Challenge Accepted

Thurston, Magician, Agrees to Produce Phantom at Astor New York Opening

UNIVERSAL'S challenge to scientists, mediums and conjurors throughout the world to produce a phantom during the prologue of "The Phantom of the Opera" which opens at the Astor Theatre in New York, September 6th, has been accepted by Thurston, the magician. The challenge carries with it a thousand dollar offer to anyone who can successfully conclude the test.

Thurston has made several stipulations regarding conditions under which he will endeavor to produce the phantom. Among them are: he will be required to give no advance public demonstration; that his presence will not be required at the theatre; that he be allowed to produce any kind of phantom that lies within his power; that the orchestra be discontinued at a certain specified time, which he will advise the day before the opening, and that the stage and theatre be thrown into absolute darkness during that period.

The Universal challenge was broadcast throughout the country six months ago. Famous scientists were approached to assist in the quest it is claimed. Among these were Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge, Camille Flammarion, before his recent death, and Dr. Walter F. Prince, president of the American Society for Psychic Research. They did not suggest anyone who would accept the challenge.

Many prominent and obscure mediums and conjurors have exhibited their talents for Universal's "phantom committee," but with no success. Thurston's acceptance arrived just as the committee was about to abandon the idea.

Chadwick Will Release Three

Theda Bara, Charles Ray and George Walsh Pictures Due in September

THREE of the seventeen Chadwick pictures for the coming season have been set for release in September. They are "The Unchastened Woman," "Some Pun'kins," and "The Prince of Broadway." "American Pluck" and "The Wizard of Oz" are August releases.

The first of the September pictures to go to the exhibitors will be "The Unchastened Woman," which will bring Theda Bara back to the screen after an absence of five years. It is an adaptation from a Broadway stage success and was directed by James Young. In the cast with Miss Bara are Wyndham Standing, Dale Fuller, Eileen Percy, John Miljan, Harry Davenport, Eric Mayne and Mayme Kelso.

Charles Ray in "Some Pun'kins" will be the second of the Chadwick September releases. It is an original story written especially for the star and was directed by Jerome Storm. The cast includes Duane Thompson, George Fawcett, Hallmar Cooley, Bert Woodruff, William Courtright, Fannie Midgley and Ida Lewis.

"The Prince of Broadway" is the third of the September releases and George Walsh's second production for Chadwick. It is an adaptation of the play of the same name.

First Nat'l Active in East

Richard A. Rowland Departs for the West for Important Staff Conferences

FIRST NATIONAL will begin early activity at its eastern studios on the preparations for the production of twelve features on its new program, according to a statement by General Manager Richard A. Rowland prior to his departure for the west coast this week. Further plans call for the immediate work on another twelve pictures in Hollywood.

Mr. Rowland's departure for western headquarters is for the purpose of conferences with John McCormack, newly appointed manager of the west coast production; Mrs. Florence Strauss, who has been responsible for the purchase of considerable First National material; and June Mathis. Following this meeting the acquisition of new story material will be announced.

Mr. Rowland stated emphatically that there was no truth in current rumors that First National had adopted a policy excluding the purchase of outside productions.

"Contrary to reports that have arisen from time to time," he said, "First National continues and will continue to welcome the best of the product made available by outside sources."

Work will begin shortly in the east on "The Knockout" starring Milton Sills and "The Pace That Thrills" featuring Ben Lyon and Mary Astor.

Robert T. Kane is ready to start shooting "Invisible Wounds" in which Blanche Sweet and Ben Lyon appear, and Sam Rork is well along with plans for the first Leon Errol production, "Clothes Make The Pirate." "The Beautiful City" starring Richard Barthelmess will soon be ready for release under a new title.

Warners' First Eight Ready

Order is Fixed Although Release Dates Are Not Yet Determined

WARNER BROS. announces the release order of their first eight productions for the 1925-26 season. The exact date of release will be announced later.

"The Limited Mail," adapted from Elmer E. Vance's stage play, is to be the first of the "forty classics." It will star Monte Blue.

"The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" comes second and will star Irene Rich. It is an adaptation of Gertie de Wentworth James's novel of domestic life and political intrigue.

The third is "Below the Line," featuring Rin-Tin-Tin. It is from the magazine story by Charles A. Logue.

Patsy Ruth Miller will star in "Rose of the World," a dramatic offering picturizing the novel by Kathleen Norris.

The sixth release is the first Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore comedy on the schedule, "His Majesty Bunker Bean" from the play by Lee Wilson Dodd, which was based on Harry Leon Wilson's novel.

It will be seen at the Piccadilly Theatre in New York opening Saturday, August 15th, and at the Symphony in Boston opening Sunday, August 16th at $1 tops.

"Winds of Chance" was given a preview showing at the Playhouse, Great Neck, Long Island Tuesday night of last week and was seen by many notables of the film world. The principal members of the cast are Anna Q. Nilsson, Ben Lyon, Viola Dana, Victor McLaglen, Hobart Bosworth, Claude Gillingwater, John T. Murray, Charles Crockett and Dorothy Sebastian.

Planning "The Unchastened Woman" Premiere

Chadwick Pictures Corporation is planning for the world premiere of "The Unchastened Woman," Theda Bara's first production for five years. It will be given at a Broadway playhouse. The general release of the picture, which was completed two weeks ago, is scheduled for September.

"The Unchastened Woman" is an adaptation by Douglas Doty of Louis K. Anspacher's Broadway stage success of the same name. In the supporting cast to Miss Bara are Wyndham Standing, Dale Fuller, Eileen Percy, John Miljan, Harry Northrup, Mayme Kelso and Eric Mayne. The picture was directed by James Young.

"The Golden Strain" Kyne's First Story for Fox

"The Golden Strain" is the title under which Peter B. Kyne's first story for Fox Film Corporation will be released. It was formerly announced as "The Thoroughbred."

George O'Brien will star and the direction has been assigned to Victor Schertzinger. An all-star supporting cast has also been selected.

Another change of title from "Part Time Wives" to "Married Cheats" is announced by Fox.

Betty Compson to Work for Associated Exhibitors

Associated Exhibitors have signed Betty Compson for the leading role in LeRoy Scott's story, "Counsel for the Defense" which will be produced on the West Coast under Burton King's direction.

Original Sea Story for Elaine Hammerstein

JOE BRANDT, president of Columbia Pictures, who has several picture story successes to his credit has written an original screen story for Elaine Hammerstein. It is titled "S. O. S., Perils of the Sea" and will be directed by Frank P. Hogan. The story was written only after Brandt had discussed it from all angles with Director Hogan and Production Manager Harry Cohn.

Warners Announce Three Title Changes

Three title changes of pictures on the 1925-26 schedule are announced by Warner Brothers. "The Easiest Road," now in production with Marie Prevost in the stellar role is now "Seven Sinners." This is an original story by Bradley King.

Sunset Will Release Twelve

First of Two Series of Six Features to Be Distributed September 1st

SUNSET Productions of Hollywood are to release twelve features during the coming season. They are to be in two series of six each and will be distributed on a six weeks' schedule starting September 1st.

The first series will be known as "Six Epics of Frontier Days," with the pictures titled as follows: "With Buffalo Bill on the U. P. Trail," "With Kit Carson Over the Great Divide," "With Davy Crockett at the Fall of the Alamo," "With Daniel Boone Through the Wilderness," "With Sitting Bull at the Spirit Lake Massacre," and "With General Custer at Little Big Horn."

The first two of these productions have already been completed and have in their casts such players as Roy Stewart, Cullen Landis, Henry B. Walthall, Marguerite Snow, Kathryn McGuire, Sheldon Lewis, Earle Metcalfe, Fred De Silva, Billy Franey, Milburn Moranti, Eddie Harris, Hazel Howell, Charlotte Stevens and Nelson McDowell.

The second series to be offered by Sunset feature Dick Grace, the stunt aviator. Two of this series have also been completed under the titles of "Wide Open" and "The Flying Fool." In support of Grace are Wanda Hawley, Gaston Glass, Grace Darmond, Harry Belmore and Eddie Barry.

Anthony J. Xydias, president of Sunset Productions has started on a sales trip of some of the important distributing centers with prints of the completed pictures of both series. Among the exchanges that have already contracted for the series are Aywon in New York, Specialty Film Exchange in Dallas and Greater Feature Exchanges in the Northwest.

Backed by a Guarantee

YOU will have available from Associated Exhibitors next season a minimum of twenty-four productions and a maximum of thirty.

Picture for picture, value for value, individually or as a group, we challenge the industry to match them—to rival the smashing action of "Manhattan Madness"—to equal the heart appeal of "Under the Rouge"—to surpass the gripping drama of "Headlines"—to produce better entertainment than "Camille of the Barbary Coast"—to eclipse "Fifty-Fifty"—to approximate the known value of "Never Weaken"—to outdo "His Buddy's Wife"—even to approach the comedy, thrills and drama of "Keep Smiling."

We're out in the open. We invite comparisons—not of our productions with others, but of all others with ours.

We have the greatest aggregation of big money stars ever offered by an independent, supported by as big production value as money can buy.

Boasting, you say?

But don't forget that we back up our boast, not with promises, but with a guarantee—a real guarantee—a guarantee that's clad in iron.

Who else gives you as much? Who else guarantees your box office? Who else has any interest in you except as a source of rentals?

Line up this year with the concern that has confidence enough in its pictures to guarantee them—that pledges you a square deal—that uses your money to underwrite bigger and better product, not to build opposition houses.

Play the game so you can't lose.

Sign up now for the twenty-four best pictures your audiences have ever seen.

Woody Discusses Assoc. Exhibs. Guarantee

JOHN S. WOODY, president of Associated Exhibitors, in a detailed statement issued this week discusses the various aspects of the new guarantee offered exhibitors by his organization. He expands on the added advantages it holds for the exhibitor who books on a minimum basis of twenty-four pictures without previewing.

The statement follows:

"Annual statements are usually written in superlatives. Mine is written in negatives.

"We are making a guarantee of next season's product and it has been interpreted in some quarters as applying unreservedly to any and all conditions. This, of course, is wrong. We're trying to make the guarantee mean something, which it could not possibly do if it was without limitation of any sort.

"What is desired is to give the exhibitor who buys without screening definite assurance against being oversold and to provide him with specific means of obtaining redress. If the buyer is too sanguine about values, if the product is misrepresented, or if for any other reason the pictures do not measure up to box office standards which are established by competing product, he can apply for an adjustment. And if he doesn't get it promptly he can take us before his local Film Board of Trade and bring us to time.

"Many persons told me during the Milwaukee Convention that they did not understand how we could afford to make any sort of guarantee of results from motion pictures. A few persons have even asked where the joker is. There seem to be so many tricks practised that such a simple thing as a guarantee doesn't always get credit for being even an evidence of good faith.

"The peculiar thing about our warranty is that in order for it to serve us advantageously we must release pictures of such high average quality that a guarantee is unnecessary. In other words, what leads us to say to exhibitors that they can obtain adjustments, if adjustments are justified, is our confidence that nobody who runs our pictures will ever find it necessary to apply for redress. Frankly, we don't expect the guarantee to cost us one cent.

"But don't forget that if we should unfortunately find it necessary to make price concessions after pictures were played, we would be doing nothing more than is done by merchants, distributors and manufacturers in other lines of business. If we can't deliver product which will stand the market test we have no reason to expect success. And if we sell Class C pictures for Class A rentals, the exhibitor is entitled to redress.

We are not only willing but anxious to have our productions compared with other pictures, yet we are not in a position to say that rentals, days of the week, and other important factors in determining box office results need not be taken fully into consideration in determining whether value has been given.

"And the point I want to emphasize above all others is that Associated Exhibitors does not guarantee individual pictures. I've seen all of our first ten releases for the 1925–1926 season and personally I consider them good, trustworthy pictures. But I'm not guaranteeing what the box-office results would be from playing them individually.

"If there were any individual in the world who could say with definiteness, in advance, that a certain story, made in a certain way, under certain direction and with a designated cast would be generally successful at the box office, then the issuing of guarantees would be simple. But the known fact of the matter is that every production is to a certain extent an experiment. Hence, so far as relationships of the exhibitor and the distributor are concerned, the only fair method is to figure results on a basis of averages.

"I think it also should be clear that a theatre which insists upon previewing before buying does not need, and is not entitled to, a guarantee. It has happened in my personal dealings that an exhibitor and I have differed in opinion about the value of a picture. He may concede it is a pretty good production, but may have doubts about whether it will appeal to his special patronage. Knowing what the picture is doing nationally, and feeling that the exhibitor is mistaken in his contention, I have not infrequently given individual picture guarantees. But cases of this sort are very different. Guarantees such as these are given to effect sales in the face of honest belief that the pictures ought not to be used. I certainly would not give a guarantee to an exhibitor who had seen a picture and bargained for it on a basis of what he considered it to be worth. Nor do I imagine for a moment that any reasonable buyer would expect such a concession.

Assoc. Exhibs. Offer New Iron Clad Guarantee

THE new feature of the 1925-1926 sales policy of Associated Exhibitors is the guarantee that its productions will compare favorably in box office value with any other program of pictures used by the same theatre.

This guarantee, which is given to all purchasers of a minimum of twenty-four productions, specifies that the buyer will be entitled to an adjustment of rentals if the box office returns from any group of eight or more Associated Exhibitors' pictures are not as large as the returns from any other brand of productions used in the theatre during the same months and on the same days of the week.

It is especially provided in the guarantee, a copy of which appears on this page, that it may be used by the exhibitor in Film Boards of Trade actions and will be binding against the distributor.

Associated Exhibitors' sales policy, according to an official statement, has been designed to provide for buying either with or without previewing and in individual units, small blocks or large groups.

The exhibitor who desires to preview can see at least eight pictures at a time, all several weeks prior to release date, and may use this product over a four-month period.

The exhibitor who does not care to preview may purchase the entire season's output, and because of the fact that he buys upon the distributor's representation of quality, in advance of box office testing of values, he will be covered by the distributor's guarantee.

It is stipulated that the guarantee is not given if pictures are previewed or if less than twenty-four are purchased. The explanation for this is that the buyer who looks at the pictures before purchasing is banking on his own judgment and should know what he is doing. The reason given for not applying the guarantee to sales of fewer than twenty-four pictures is that the guarantee is not intended to cover individual releases, but is based upon averages—upon general expectations from a season's product.

Jay A. Gove, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors.

To make honest guarantees possible, it was necessary to provide more than ordinary production safeguards. And these were established, it is asserted, through the cooperation of producers and the distributor. The production contracts are said all to make definite provisions for meeting market requirements.

It is the belief, both of Associated Exhibitors and of the producers whom it represents, that every reasonable precaution has been taken to insure high grade productions of uniform quality. But it is conceded by the distributor that even the most extraordinary safeguards will not prevent errors and that the greatest care which it is possible to exercise will not invariably produce big box office successes.

Hence, the arrangement for advance deliveries which make previewing possible. Hence, also, the decision to give a guarantee and thereby force the pictures to measure up to reasonable requirements or pay the penalty in revenue losses.

The first eight pictures, and part of the second group, have already been delivered and all of the first eight have been shipped to the exchanges. They have been passed upon, in completed form, by a reviewing committee comprising fifteen persons and have been accepted unanimously. Some of them have had as many as four or five theatre previews before audiences and it is declared that in all instances, they have been well received.

Of the second group of pictures there probably will be ten. All of these are either completed or nearly so. They are to be available for screening in September or October and will be scheduled for release during December, January, February and March.

The third group is contracted and has reached the stage where final discussion of production plans are being conducted. It will be released during April, May, June and July.

Detailed statements of costs are required from producers, this being the basis upon which valuations are fixed. Auditors, representing the distributor are in the studios from the moment production starts until it is completed. According to Associated Exhibitors, it appears that the first eight productions have cost between $850,000 and $900,000, or an average of around $109,000.

The least expensive one has involved an outlay of close to $60,000 and the biggest one about $200,000. The cost of selling, physical distribution and advertising, added to the production cost, with a percentage for profit, will place the average exhibition value at between $200,000 and $300,000.

24 Features and 4 Specials for Assoc. Exhibs.

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS has assembled for the 1925–1926 season a formidable array of productions to assure e hibitors a substantial box office success.

Heading the Associated Exhibitors' first group of eight is "Never Weaken," starring Harold Lloyd, which will be released the first part of August. "Never Weaken" is one of the "Popular Demand Series" of Harold Lloyd successes. It is directed by Hal Roach and Fred Newmeyer and presents Mildred Davis, the present Mrs. Harold Lloyd, in the leading feminine role with Roy Brooks, Mark Jones and Charles Stevenson in the supporting cast.

Also scheduled for August release is "Manhattan Madness" with Jack Dempsey, World's Heavyweight Champion, and his wife, Estelle Taylor in the co-starring roles.

George Seigman, Frank Campeau, Nelson McDowell, Bill Franey, Dean Markham, Theodore Lorch, Tom Wilson, Glenn Cavender, Jane Starr, Robert Graves, Christian Frank and Harry Tenbrook are also in this cast.

"Camille of the Barbary Coast" will appear on the program for August as a Hugh Dierker production with Mae Busch and Owen Moore heading the cast. This feature is adapted from Forest Halsey's published story of underworld life in the old Barbary coast section of San Francisco. Besides the featured players the cast comprises Burr McIntosh, Fritzi Brunette, Harry T. Morey, Dorothy King and Tammany Young.

Monty Banks, star of Associated Exhibitors' box-office success, "Racing Luck," makes his debut on the 1925–1926 program in "Keep Smiling." This is a motor-boat story by Monty Banks, Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman. The feature comedy was produced under the direction of Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt. Anne Cornwall will appear opposite Monty Banks, and the supporting cast will comprise Robert Edeson, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Martha Franklin, Syd Crossley, Glen Cavender, Ruth Holly and Mrs. Tom Forman.

Hope Hampton is starred in "Fifty-Fifty," a colorful society drama with scenes laid in both France and America. The story is an original by Allan Dwan. In the support are such box-office names as Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glaum. The feature was produced by Henri Diamant Berger. Arthur Donaldson, J. Moy Bennett, Jean Delval and Gaby France also appear.

Lewis H. Moomaw's initial contribution to the Associated Exhibitors' 1925–1926 program will be "Under the Rouge," an underworld drama. Much of the action transpires amid the rugged settings of Oregon where the picture was made. Tom Moore and Eileen Percy head an all-star cast which includes Mary Alden, William V. Mong, James Mason, Claire de Lorez, Chester Conklin, Eddie Phillips, Tom Gallery, Bruce Guerin, Aileen Manning, Peggy Prevost, William Dills, Stanley Blystons and Carmelita Geraghty.

"Headlines" is a dramatic chapter from the experiences of a woman reporter on a metropolitan newspaper. The cast will include Alice Joyce as the star, and in the support are Harry T. Morey, Elliott Nugent, Ruby Blaine and Virginia Lee Corbin.

"His Buddy's Wife" is a story by T. Howard Kelly, which the Smart Set Magazine published serially. Glenn Hunter has the featured role and is supported by Edna Murphy, Douglas Gilmore, Flora Finch and Marcia Harris. Tom Terriss directed. "I Do" is a Harold Lloyd revival. "Lover's Island" is another Howard Kelly story from the Smart Set. The cast is headed by Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood and Louis Wolheim. It was directed by Henri Diamant Berger.

"Two Gates" is a crook melodrama from a story by Henry Chapman Ford. Clara Bow heads the cast and is supported by Ralph Lewis, Forrest Stanley, John Sanipolis, William V. Mong, Eddie Lyons, George Cooper, Helen Dunbar and Arthur Rankin. Arthur F. Beck produced the picture and Wallace Worsley directed.

"Among Those Present" is a three-reel Harold Lloyd production; one of the Popular Demand Series.

"Two Can Play" is a Saturday Evening Post serial from the pen of Gerald Mygatt. Clara Bow plays the girl and Allan Forrest the boy. Nat Ross is the director. "Who Said So?" is another Monty Banks feature comedy.

"The Miracle of Life" is a high-class, well-mounted, problem society drama. Olga Printzlow wrote the story. In the cast are Mae Busch, Percy Marmont and Nita Naldi. The director is S. E. V. Taylor.

"The Pinch Hitter" is a big production of a well known and highly successful subject. Glenn Hunter plays the lead. Oscar Price is the producer. "The Lady from Hell" was made by Stuart Paton and the cast includes Blanche Sweet, Roy Stewart, Frank Elliott and Ralph Lewis. It is a part-Western story.

A Strongheart Production is to be produced by Howard Estabrooke and Jane Murfin. "A Million Dollar Doll" is from the novel by Mrs. W. N. Williamson. It is a St. Regis production for Winter delivery.

"Hearts and Fists" is a most exceptional Northwoods drama with thrills enough for a serial. It is based upon a novel by Clarence Buddington Kelland and was first published serially in the American Magazine.

"The Clod Hopper" stars Glenn Hunter and exhibitors can well imagine what he will do to a role of this sort.

"Blue Beard" is from the novel by Owen Johnson and is to be made by St. Regis following "A Million Dollar Doll."

"Shine Inside" is another laugh film in which Monty Banks will have the support of a big cast of fun makers.

"A Woman Scorned" was made in England with an American cast and under an American director. Cosmopolitan Productions, Ltd. is the producer. "Her Husband's Wife" is a society drama for delivery early in the Spring of 1926.

Assoc. Exhibs. Present Noted Group of Stars

IN casting their pictures for release through Associated Exhibitors the coming season, the producers have lined-up an imposing array of stars and featured players, all of whom have large screen followings. In addition, many of them are equally known for their notable successes upon the speaking stage.

Stars who will be seen in Associated Exhibitors' pictures include such favorites as Alice Joyce, Harold Lloyd, Hope Hampton, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Mae Busch, Monty Banks, Wallace Beery, Clara Bow, Blanche Sweet, Edna Murphy, Eileen Percy, Milton Sills, Nita Naldi, Glenn Hunter, Midred Davis, Tom Moore, Owen Moore, Anne Cornwall, Louis Wolheim, James Kirkwood, Marjorie Daw, Claire Windsor, Theodore Roberts and Strongheart.

Featured players in support of the above named stars include Henry Walthall, George Siegman, Harry T. Morey, Virginia Lee Corbin, Chester Conklin, Arthur Donaldson, Elliott Nugent, Roy Stewart, Frank Campeau, Robert Edeson, Flora Finch, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Mrs. Tom Forman, Ralph Lewis, Louise Glaum, James Mason, Nelson McDowell, Burr McIntosh, Bull Montana, Jack Raymand, William V. Mong, Malcom McGregor, Tammany Young, Percy Marmont, Noah Young, Dean Markham, Dorothy King, Capt. Jack Irwin, Marcia Harris, Robert Graves, Douglas Gilmore, Martha Franklin, Bill Franey, Gaby France, Mary Alden, J. Moy Bennett, Ruby Blaine, Glenn Cavender, Syd Crossley, Claire de Lorez, Tom Gallery, Carmelita Geraghty and Forrest Stanley.

Harold Lloyd will make his stellar appearance in three comedies of the "Popular Demand Series" entitled "Never Weaken," "I Do" and "Among Those Present."

Mae Busch is a star in "Camille of the Barbary Coast" and "The Miracle of Life." Her rapid rise as a screen favorite is proof of her popuarity. She has appeared largely in Metro-Goldwyn releases previous to her engagement for Associated Exhibitors' productions. Owen Moore is her associate star in "Camille of the Barbary Coast" and Burr McIntosh, Harry T. Morey, Tammany Young, Dorothy King and Fritzie Burnett assist; while "The Miracle of Life" offers Percy Marmont and Nita Naldi in support.

Glenn Hunter has star roles in "His Buddy's Wife" and "The Pinch Hitter" and "The Clod Hopper." Edna Murphy shares honors with him in the first named and Flora Finch, Douglas Gilmore and Marcia Harris are in support. In the other features Hunter will be surrounded with similar strong casts. Hunter has attained fame as "Merton" on the stage and screen and also in several big feature films.

Hope Hampton stars in "Fifty-Fifty" and "Lovers' Island" with probably several others to follow. Miss Hampton's screen popularity has been in the ascendancy with each succeeding film appearance. In "Fifty-Fifty" she is associated with Lionel Barrymore, Louise Glaum, Arthur Donaldson, J. Moy Bennett, Jean Delval and Gaby France; while in "Lovers' Island" are numbered such famous names as James Kirkwood, Louis Wolheim, Douglas Gilmore, Flora Finch, Flora le Breton, Gaby France and Jack Raymond.

Monty Banks stars in "Keep Smiling" and two other features "Who Said So?" and "Shine Inside." This star's work in "Racing Luck" established him in a high place with audiences. In "Keep Smiling" Banks has in his support Anne Cornwall, Robert Edeson, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Mrs. Tom Forman, Glenn Cavender, Syd Crossley, Ruth Holly and Martha Franklin.

Tom Moore appears to advantage as a star in "Under the Rouge." Eileen Percy appears opposite him and the cast also has Mary Alden, Claire de Lorez, Chester Conklin, Bruce Guerin, Carmelita Geraghty, Eddie Phillips, Peggy Prevost, James Mason, William V. Mong, Tom Gallery, Aileen Manning, William Dills and Stanley Blystone.

Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, holds a star role in "Manhattan Madness" with Estelle Taylor as his leading woman. Dempsey is not new to the screen but appears as a feature star for the first time in this attraction. The Dempsey cast is large: George Siegman, Frank Campeau, Nelson McDowell, Jane Starr, Bull Montana, Christian Frank, Glenn Cavender, Tom Wilson, Robert Graves, Bill Franey, Dean Markham, Harry Tenbrook and Theodore Lorch.

Alice Joyce, one of the early favorites of the cinema who is at the height of her popularity, stars in "Headlines," a newspaper story. Miss Joyce's screen successes date from the Kalem days, and her name is sure to attract the real movie fans to the theatre. Harry T. Morey, Malcolm McGregor, Elliott Nugent, Ruby Blaine, Virginia Lee Corbin, Johnny Hudgins and his revue and Miss Nobody from Nowhere are prominently cast.

Clara Bow one of the brightest of the newer constellation of stars will be seen in "Two Can Play" and "Two Gates." Miss Bow will be remembered for her work in "The Adventurous Sex" for Associated Exhibitors. In "Two Can Play," Allan Forrest heads the supporting cast and in "Two Gates," Ralph Lewis, John Sanipolis, William V. Mong, Eddie Lyons, George Cooper, Helen Dunbar, Arthur Rankin and Forrest Stanley are listed prominently.

Blanche Sweet and Roy Stewart will have the leading roles in "The Lady From Hell," which is based upon a story entitled, "The Lord of Double B." They are supported by Frank Elliot, Ralph Lewis, Margaret Campbell, Templar Saxe, Edgar Norton, Hardee Kirkland, Ruth King, Allan Sears, Mark Hamilton, Hilliard Karr, Ine Gomez, Fred Walton, Fred Pynm, Lee Bates and Mickey Moore.

Strongheart, noted canine star will be seen in an outdoors picture full of opportunity for him to exhibit his almost-human ability to carry the action at high speed.

Popular Authors Write Assoc. Exhibs. Stories

POPULAR authors, a number of them responsible for "best sellers" have supplied the stories for the group of feature screen attractions which will be distributed by Associated Exhibitors the coming season.

Mrs. W. N. Williamson, Owen Johnson, Gerald Mygatt, Olga Printzlow, T. Howard Kelly, Charles T. and Frank Dazey, Forrest Halsey, Alan Dwan, Henry Chapman Ford, C. Gardner Sullivan, Clarence Buddington Kelland and Dorian Neve are some of the authors represented on the Associated Exhibitors' program.

Mrs. W. N. Williamson wrote the novel upon which "A Million Dollar Doll" will be based. Owen Johnson's novel provided the story of "Blue Blood," another St. Regis production.

T. Howard Kelly wrote the two Smart Set Magazine stories, "His Buddy's Wife" and "Lovers' Island."

Forrest Halsey wrote the underworld novel of the Barbary coast which provided the story basis of "Camille of the Barbary Coast" in the first group. This was directed by Hugh Dierker with Mae Busch and Owen Moore starred.

Charles T. and Frank Dazey, originally wrote the story of "Manhattan Madness" for Douglas Fairbanks. This action story has been adapted as a vehicle for Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor and was directed by John McDermott. This feature is in the first group.

Alan Dwan, noted director as well as a screen author of repute, wrote the original story of "Fifty-Fifty" which has been produced with Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glaum in leading roles, under the direction of Henri Diamant Berger.

Olga Prinzlow is the author of the published story which was adapted by Marion Leonard as "The Miracle of Life" and is being produced and directed by S. E. V. Taylor, with Mae Busch and Nita Naldi as stars. Miss Printzlow is well known as a screen author.

Dorian Neve wrote an original newspaper romance entitled "Headlines" which St. Regis Pictures is producing with Alice Joyce and Malcolm McGregor heading the cast. E. H. Griffith is the director. "Headlines" is in the first group of Associated Exhibitors' features.

C. Gardner Sullivan, one of the veteran screen editors, is the author of "The Pinch Hitter" in which Oscar Price will star Glenn Hunter. Originally written as a vhicle for Charles Ray, this story reveals the experiences of a bush-leaguer who made a big-time team.

Gerald Mygatt's Saturday Evening Post story of romantic adventure, "Two Can Play" will be produced by Nat Ross with Clara Bow and Allan Forrest leading the cast. Mygatt is known for his popular magazine stories.

Henry Chapman Ford is the author of the original crook melodrama "Two Gates" which Arthur F. Beck will both produce and direct. Clara Bow and Ralph Lewis head the cast of players.

Sam Taylor wrote the original stories of the Harold Lloyd Popular Demand Series, "Never Weaken," "I Do" and "Among Those Present." This author has established a reputation for his ability to devise funfilms of feature calibre. Hal Roach and Fred Newmeyer directed the pictures named and Mildred Davis appears opposite Lloyd in all three.

Clarence Buddington Kelland wrote the American Magazine story which will be produced as an outdoors drama under the virile title of "Hearts and Fists." This American serial will provide the basis of a feature in the third group.

Herman Raymaker and Clyde Bruckman are the authors of the Monty Banks starring vehicle "Keep Smiling" which is being sponsored by Howard Estabrook. Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt co-directed. Anne Cornwall appears opposite Banks, in this first group feature.

Monty Banks, himself, wrote the stories for his three starring vehicles.

Highlights from the first group of eight features to be released by Associated Exhibitors. Upper row: Harold Lloyd in "Never Weaken"; Monty Banks and Anne Cornwall in "Keep Smiling"; Mae Busch and Tom Moore in "Camille of the Barbary Coast." Center row: Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy in "His Buddy's Wife"; Eileen Percy and Tom Moore in "Under the Rouge." Lower row: Alice Joyce in "Headlines"; Hope Hampton in "Fifty-Fifty"; and Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor in "Manhattan Madness."

"The Iron Nag"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS Mack Sennett comedy is of the slapstick variety with the story just incidental to the gags of which there is an abundance. It is a race track story with the locale in Kentucky and features Billy Bevan and Ruth Taylor, the former as the jockey and Miss Taylor as the "girl." Though possessing a slim story the numerous bits of hokum interspersed throughout the reels should cause a number of laughs.

The story opens with an animated description of a horse race by the Colonel which raises his audience to fever heat and his colored servant, holding a "bottle," shakes it so that it finally pops causing the inevitable wet results and a scolding from the Colonel's wife. At this juncture the Colonel receives a telegram announcing the arrival of his race horse accompanied by its jockey so the party repairs forthwith to the stables. There is considerable hokum injected at this point revealing the desertion of the real jockey and Bevan's involuntary substitution; also the playfulness of the horse who succeeds in breaking his way out of his railroad berth much to the discomfiture of the bystanders. Then follows the chase in which the Colonel's wife, drawn in an invalid chair by a dog is pursued by the rest of the party in the usual "flivver" and the horse race in which Bevan triumphs although beset by various handicaps.

Bevan gives a humorous performance and Ruth Taylor is pleasing in a role that doesn't give her much to do. Andy Clyde as the Colonel and Sunshine Hart as his wife turn in excellent performances as do the rest of the cast consisting of John J. Richardson and Leo Sulky. It was directed by Del Lord.

The Cast

Billy Bevan, Ruth Taylor, Andy Clyde, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson, Leo Sulky.

A Mack Sennett production directed by Del Lord.

The Story.—A Kentucky Colonel, in the midst of describing a horse race to his guests, is appraised of the arrival of his race horse accompanied by its jockey who, however, has deserted it but his place is taken by a tramp wanted by the police. Mistaking him for the real rider the Colonel asks him to ride the horse in the coming meet which the jockey, upon perceiving a sheriff, agrees to do. After many mishaps both jockey and horse are thrown into jail but escape in time to enter the race which they win after much trouble.

Classification.—Comedy of the slapstick variety.

Summary.—A fast moving comedy of the slapstick order which, though having a poor story, manages to entertain due to the numerous gags injected. It is well directed and has a good cast.

"Crying for Love"
(Century-Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is one of those comedies whose humor lies principally in some one plunging out of a three story window or a fast moving automobile. It is just a conglomeration of slapstick and gag stuff with Eddie Gordon as the featured comedian. Eddie is funny enough, but would doubtless be better in a vehicle which did not so continuously clamor for laughs.

Small of stature himself, the story makes Eddie the hubby of an Amazon twice his size, who uses him much as a handball player would a handball. She batters him from one side of the room to the other, tosses him out of third story windows, lovingly banishes him from a fast moving auto and cuts other little playful capers that would be funny to a man with a grouch the day following a bad night before.

Just to make it a fifty-fifty break Eddie is tipped off to a few strength-giving pills that result in making him the real master of the house, after which wifie is subjected to some of the same humiliations he suffered earlier in the picture. Among these she takes her dive out of the same three story window, after which she is the subdued clinging vine one sometimes reads of in fiction.

The Cast

The Husband.....Eddie Gordon

A Century comedy directed by Noel Smith.

The Story.—After many turndowns Eddie finally succeeds in winning this Amazon for his bride when she discovers her former fiance flirting with a flapper on his way to the Amazon's home for the wedding. After the bride has flattened everyone in the place for no reason at all the pair depart on their honeymoon in a flivver, from which she playfully or otherwise tosses hubby. Later at a house warming this dainty bride continues to humiliate hubby until he is tipped off to some strength-giving pills, which he swallows and then assumes command of the situation. He becomes the real boss of the household as the wife takes a three-story dive through the window.

Classification.—A slapstick comedy.

Summary.—This is a comedy rather too coarse in its efforts to get laughs. The situations are hardly as funny as they were intended to be and the comedy of a type that might interest children too young to attend picture houses.

"The Best Man"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

JOSIE SEDGWICK is again the star of this western which abounds with romance, intrigue, suspense and a dash of comedy. It is the usual type of story that Miss Sedgwick has been doing such good work in. It deals with the discharged foreman of the cattle ranch who turns rustler and is eventually turned up by Miss Sedgwick. The story is a bit more logical than some that have gone before, but at that, can hardly be considered too critically.

Then there is the not unusual angle of the society girl snob and her fiance visiting the ranch from the east for the first time; the dislike of the girl for the roughness of the west and the liking for the same country by her fiance, who becomes enamoured of the western girl and decides to remain on the ranch when the girl returns to her eastern home.

There is plenty of action to the story and it always finds Miss Sedgwick in just the right place at just the right time. With the assistance of the visitor from the east she rounds up the rustlers after the pair have gone through some exciting exploits.

The Cast

Jacqueline Canby.....Josie Sedgwick
Nina Wilson.....Lola Todd
Gerald Morton.....Ernest Gillen

A Mustang picture directed by Ernst Laemmle and photographed by Ben Kline.

The Story.—Jacqueline Canby, known as Jack, daughter of the owner of the MC ranch discharges one of the hands when he shows the white feather in breaking a bronco. He organizes a band of cattle rustlers. Jack, with the assistance of Gerald Morton, a visitor from the east with his fiancee, Nina Wilson, turns up the rustlers after some wild adventures. Gerald becomes enamoured of her and decided to remain on the ranch as his former snobbish fiancee returns to her eastern home.

Classification.—A two-reel western with plenty of fast action, romance and intrigue.

Summary.—This western has a story somewhat better than the usual run. It holds the interest throughout as it is well acted and well directed. It has the usual number of thrilling adventures and should prove a good attraction wherever the western flourishes.

"Tame Men and Wild Women"
(Hal Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul A. Yawitz)

AT THIRTY-ONE, the hero was still under the impression that fairies roamed the streets at night and that there was a Santa Claus. But one day his kindly old mother took him on her knee and imparted the truth to his virgin ears. "No, my son," she said with a tear in her eye, "There ain't no Santa Claus no matter which way you look." The poor lad burst into a flood of tears; the disillusionment was too much for his soul. And from that day forth he became the gay young blade of his neighborhood. His spirit was free from the childish traditions of fairies and Santa Claus.

Such is the opening sequence of this hilarious two-reeler which features a new, but stolidly comic face, that of Arthur Stone. This mimic has all the tricks of comedy in his sleeve even when he is only wearing a waistcoat, and he displays them to a fulsome advantage.

Cut-backs to the days of his father and grandfather, both of whom (poor wights!) were killed in the rush to get into favor with a fair vampire, are about as funny as anything you will show in your theatre this season. And Stone's scenes at the military academy where his mother sends him for safe-keeping afford unusual merriment.

A capable supporting cast with the shapely Marie Masquini round out an excellent two-reel entertainment.

The Cast

The Hero.....Arthur Stone
The Heroine.....Marie Mosquini

A Hal Roach Comedy, directed by Marcel de Sano.

The Story.—When thirty-one-year-old Arthur learns from the lips of his mother that "there ain't no Santa Claus." his dillusioned soul begins to see the necessity of feminine companionship, and so safeguard him against the dangers to which his male ancestors had all been exposed, he is sent to a military academy. There he falls in love with the daughter of the General whose regard for the cadet is not what it should be. After many amusing incidents, Arthur gets Marie into the church and all ends happily.

Classification.—A fast moving fun-maker with many new gags.

Summary.—This is a comedy that will please every audience. The situations are, of course, farfetched and in places strained, but the general effect is one of intense humor and mimicry.

"Lucky Stars"
(Mack Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul A. Yawitz)

A curb astronomer advises the naive Harry Langdon to go in search of his fortune under the guidance of a star that the telescope has picked out for him. Harry gathers his few earthly belongings and sets forth on his way in life only to meander into the pernicious hands of an itinerant snake-oil salesman. With this much for a beginning much might have been expected of the story but it develops into insignificant and meaningless hokum held together by nothing other than the two reels of raw stock.

There is something deliciously artistic in the movement of this comedian; he has the understanding which most comics lack; and to this reviewer, it seems more than shameful that so meager a story and so inept direction should be given him.

The bulk of the humor rests upon the time-worn slap-stick that results when the quack doctor gives a crowd of burly Mexicans several bottles of medicine in which has been mixed a dangerous chemical. When the bottle drops it explodes and with it the possibility of holding audience interest.

Langdon is supported by Natalie Kingston, a more than beautiful Miss of Spanish type, but the cutter (or perhaps it was the director) decided they would have as little of her as necessary. And so you have less of her than is necessary to give the comedy a touch of pulchritudinal. pleasance.

THE CAST

The Hero.....Harry Langdon
The Heroine.....Natalie Kingston
The Quack Doctor.....Vernon Kent

A Mack Sennett Comedy, directed by Harry Edwards.

The Story.—Harry sets out to seek his fortune when he runs into Dr. Healy a traveling purveyor of snake-oils and cure-alls. He becomes an assistant to the "professor" and when they reach San Tobacco in the heart of Mexico, they set up their stand and begin a sale to the populace. The success of their venture injures the business of the local druggist to such an extent that his beautiful daughter decides to take matters into her own hands. With a dagger she plans to put an end to the lives of the intruders, but the mob, who has been poisoned by the medicine into which her lover has clandestinely dropped a secret chemical gets to the pair of fakers first.

Classification.—A comedy which will appeal to Harry Langdon because of his past performances. The humorous situations are two few to make this a commendable mirth-maker.

Summary.—With a little effort the producers might have made of this an excellent comedy feature. The gags carry little punch and the action is constantly slowed up for no palpable reason. Harry Langdon's work is amusing when he is given free rein of a situation, and may get the laughs in the neighborhood theatres.

"The Tourist"

Tuxedo-Educational—Two Reels

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is the first of the series of Tuxedo comedies starring Johnny Arthur and if it is indicative of what is to follow the series should be a profitable one for all hands. By way of a change in these short comedies, here is one that tells a real story with some form of continuity and that does not sidetrack itself in interspersing an abundance of good comedy and gags. Both the gags and the comedy work into the story naturally.

William Goodrich has done a splendid job with the directing and the cast does the rest with the good story. Unfortunately there are not enough comedies of this type. There is a touch of melodrama to it, great quantities of comedy and enough suspense to keep the interest at a high pitch.

Johnny Arthur is the hero and Helen Foster the girl who save the home of Helen's parents after the discovery by a pair of crooks of the value of a well on the premises. There is a very humorous and at the same time exciting dash for the tax collectors office to meet the delinquent taxes and save the home. This race is between Johnny and Helen in a broken down flivver and the two crooks in a touring car. The former pair outwit the crooks and win the race despite the fact that the flivver winds up the chase without a motor.

The Cast

The Tourist.....Johnny Arthur
The Girl.....Helen Foster
The Mother.....Joy Winthrop
The Villain.....Glen Cavender
The Other Villain.....George Davis

A Tuxedo comedy written and directed by William Goodrich and photographed by Byron Houck.

The Story.—Johnny Arthur the tourist, picks up the girl walking back from an auto ride. She invites him to dine with her folks. The pair of crooks are also dining there and discover the value of a well on the premises. Helen's parents are warned that unless the taxes are paid that day the property will be forfeited. Johnny overhears the crooks plotting and with Helen in the flivver starts for the tax office at the same time the crooks start in their touring car. Both machines meet with difficulties, with the flivver the eventual winner.

Classification.—A fast-moving comedy with a logical story, replete with humorous incidents and plenty of suspense.

Summary.—This is a comedy with an exceptionally good story that holds an even pace while the gags and situations are splendidly worked out. It is a well directed picture with a good cast and should prove a good attraction for almost any type of house.

"Bubbles"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS issue of the Aesop's Fables delves into the possibilities of soap bubbles as a means of conveyance and likewise the trouble they can cause as borne out by the mice and their two-legged friend, the farmer. It is a well done conglomeration of foolishness with a number of sure-fire laughs. HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Sons of Swat"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS number of the Sportlight series produced by J. L. Hawkinson shows intimate close-ups of the 'big-timers' in baseball, Ruth, Cobb, Walter Johnson and John J. McGraw among others. The reel opens with 'shots' of the training camps in the South showing the players limbering up for the long drive with the bright particular stars of the game demonstrating just how its done. Embryonic big leaguers, both the country boys and the city youngsters are shown hard at it. This reel should prove of interest especially at the present time. HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Pictorial Proverbs"

(Educational—One Reel)

LYMAN H. HOWE has added another good one to this Hodge Podge series. There have been some better in the series, but this one is fairly interesting from start to finish. It is devoted to the visualization of well known proverbs, such as "Let the Cobbler stick to his Last," which is visualized by a Mexican cobbler making sandals. Others of the proverbs pave the way for some exceptional scenic shots and still others are of an educational nature. The reel shows scenes and activities in many parts of the world. It should be appreciated in any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Thirty Years Ago"

(Short Films Syndicate—One Reel)

HERE is a real gem among novelty short subjects—a release that should be of intense interest to those in the industry and still packs a great entertainment wallop for the public. Particularly at this moment, when the Greater Movie Season slogan, "They're Better Than Ever," is being displayed, the public should eat this up. Some of the old Edison negative, marvelously well preserved, has been dug up and assembled into a reel that shows what the movies were in tne early days and just how they have progressed. The first is "The Kiss," 25 feet long, made in 1895 with May Irwin and John Rice. Then comes "The Old Maid in a Drawing Room," of 1898, "Street Car Chivalry," of 1900—and as the mighty climax, the never-to-be-forgotten subject, "The Great Train Robbery." "Thirty Years Ago" is genuinely funny and a great bet.—L. C. MOEN.

The Season's "Outstanding Novelty" says M. P. World

The Editor's Views

WE have just enjoyed a real treat. And with it, come upon what strikes us as the outstanding novelty for presentation as part of Greater Movie Season.

With the cooperation of those pioneers, Thomas A. Edison and E. S. Porter, "The Great Train Robbery" and a number of still earlier releases have been combined in a single reel novelty that is certain to arouse no end of discussion during the industry's jubilee celebration.

Here is ready-made ad. copy. "The first word—and the last word in motion pictures"—a linking up of the short reel novelty to the current feature. Here is certain copy for photoplay editors.

And, aside from business thoughts, for picture men here is a treat that you don't want to miss. It will bring back many happy memories, give you many a chuckle.

Christie Studios Finish Four

Educational Ready for the Greater Movie Season With First of Product

THE Christie Studios completed the first subject in each of four series of two-reel comedies for Educational in time for first run showings during the intensive August campaign on Greater Movie Season.

The first of these Christie comedies to be completed was "Soup to Nuts," featuring Neal Burns. Shipment of the prints has practically been completed. Supporting Burns in this picture are Vera Steadman as leading lady, Bill Irving and Gale Henry. This is the first comedy directed at the Christie studios by William Watson.

Walter Hiers' first comedy in the new series is titled "Off His Beat." Hiers is supported by Evelyn Francisco, Jack Duffy, Bill Blaisdell and Baby Brown. Archie Mayo directed.

Bobby Vernon makes his first appearance in the new season in a comedy, titled "Watch Out." Frances Lee, working in her first picture at the Christie Studio, is seen in Bobby's support as leading lady. Walter Graham directed this picture from a story by Robert Hall.

Jimmie Adams begins his first starring series in "Be Careful." Adams has been playing featured parts in Christie Comedies for more than two years and before that was seen on the Educational program in Cameo Comedies and Mermaid Comedies, but this is his first release under his own name.

Harold Beaudine directed "Be Careful." Molly Malone, recently signed as leading lady in the Adams Comedy series, has the chief supporting role and Eddie Baker, Christie "heavy," and Lincoln Plumer have other important parts in the cast.

Scenes from the Educational comedy "The Tourist."

Pathe Short Subject Schedule

Harry Langdon's Latest Two-Reeler Heads the Program for the Week of August 16th

PATHE has the usual complete schedule of short subject releases for the week of August 16th. It is headed by Harry Langdon's lastest two-reeler and includes a chapter of the Patheserial, "Play Ball," a Pathe Review, an "Aesop Film Fable," "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News.

The Langdon comedy is titled "Lucky Stars." It was produced by Mack Sennett and directed by Harry Edwards. Langdon is supported by Natalie Kingston and Vernon Dent.

Arthur Stone heads the cast of "Tame Men and Wild Women," a Hal Roach two-reel comedy. He is supported by Marie Mosquini, Helen Gilmore, Martha Sleeper, Louise Carver, Marvin Lobach and Sammy Brooks. Marcel de Sano directed.

"Face to Face" is the title of the fifth chapter of the Pathe-serial "Play Ball," written by manager McGraw of the Giants and adapted to the screen by Frank Leon Smith. In this episode, Allene Ray and Walter Miller, the stars, are supported by Harry Semels, J. Barney Sherry, Mary Milnor, Wally Oettel, and Franklin Hanna. Spencer Bennet is directing.

Pathe Review No. 33 offers a trio of subjects: "The Feast of the Harvest," a Thanksgiving celebration of an African tribe; "The Fortress of the Church," Avignon, the religious capital of ancient Gaul shown in Pathecolor views, "Spartan Sports," a novelty produced by the new "process-camera," invented by Pathe Review Staff Cameraman Alvin V. Knechtel. "Soap" is the latest of Paul Terry's "Aesop's Film Fables."

Humorous moments from the Fox Imperial comedy "On the Go."

Short Subject Exploitation Is Bringing Results

Box-Office Receipts Grow With Added Advertising

THE campaign on the part of short subject producers and distributors to convince exhibitors of the value of proper exploitation for these short reel subjects is bringing splendid results. In many different sections of the country the short product is being given additional display in all advertising matter and the reaction at the box office is reported most satisfactory.

This is shown convincingly through a canvass of the advertisements of most of the leading theatres in about twenty-five cities in the Central Pennsylvania territory.

In those same cities, however, the canvass discloses, practically none of the theatres has introduced exclusively "short subject" programs. All of them are clinging to the idea that one long feature is essential to the success of every program.

"This," as one progressive Harrisburg exhibitor said, "may be due to ultra-conservatism and timidity about breaking away from established custom. Perhaps all the Central Pennsylvania exhibitors need is a pioneer in their territory to try the experiment of introducing programs made up entirely of 'short subjects' to show that such a policy can be adopted with profit."

Despite this conservatism, however, the canvass of the 25 cities shows unmistakably that exhibitors are waking up for the first time to the value of vigorously exploiting the "short subjects" which they are running in connection with long features, and which heretofore had been practically neglected in the advertising.

As voicing the attitude of many other exhibitors, Samuel A. Keubler, manager of the Colonial theatre, one of the leading Wilmer & Vincent houses in Harrisburg, said:

"The campaign for 'short subjects' is pointing the way to state exhibitors as to how they can take advantage of an opportunity they have long neglected. It is educating them to a realization that the 'short subject,' even when incidental to the five or six-reel feature film, is well worth bringing to the attention of the public through the medium of advertising.

"The exhibitor is beginning to understand that often the incidental 'short subject' has just as much drawing power with the public as the main film, if only the public is kept informed what the titles of the short subject are.

"It is now becoming recognized that too often in advertising a picture program the 'shorts' were not mentioned at all. The exhibitors regarded them as mere 'fillers' to stretch out the program to the required length, and nothing more. They failed to see in them the potential pulling power for increasing box office revenue which they actually possess. Now that their value in that respect is actually being recognized the exhibitor is wondering why he never thought of it before.

"This is true particularly when he pauses to realize that vaudeville houses for years have been advertising their complete programs, including every number, and not merely the headliners.

"Among other theatres the Wilmer & Vincent motion picture theatres of Harrisburg are now exploiting their comedy attractions and other 'short subjects' in addition to the main features films, not only in their newspaper advertisements but in their lobby poster displays and on the billboards."

The canvass of central Pennsylvania cities shows the following detailed results affecting most of the leading theatres:

Among those that during the week of July 27 to August 1, inclusive, mentioned in their newspaper advertisements their 'short subject' comedies or other 'short subjects' by name, in addition to the main feature, were: In Allentown—Lotus, Pergola-Nedson, Rialto, Orpheum, Hamilton and Victor; in Scranton—State, Regent; Wilkes-Barre—Shawnee; in Greensburg—Strand, Rialto; in Milton—Ligionaire, Bijou; in Columbia—Alto; in Mahanoy City—Elks Theatre, Victoria; in Hazelton—Grand; in Pittston—American; in Altoona—Strand; in Shamokin—Majestic, Victoria; in Hagerstown, Md.—Palace; in Harrisburg—Loew's Regent, Colonial; in York—Hippodrome, Wizard, Scenic; in Carlisle—Orpheum, Strand.

Among theatres that mentioned "short subjects," without naming them, while naming the main feature, were: In Scranton—Strand; in Mt. Carmel—Arcade; in Chambersburg—Rosedale; in Altoona—Olympic, Capital; in Lebanon—Capital.

Among theatres which mentioned only the feature film were: In Sunbury—Victoria, Strand; in Greensburg—Grand; in Columbia—Opera House; in Hazelton—Feeley; in Johnstown—Nemo, New Park, Majestic; in Pittston—Roman; in Shenandoah—Lyric; in Hagerstown, Md.—Colonial, Nixon's Academy; in Harrisburg—Victoria; in Williamsport—Keeney's.

In the advertisement of the Alto theatre, Columbia, one-third of a ten-inch newspaper advertisement was devoted to exploiting the "short subject" portion of the program, and the Victoria, Shamokin, devoted much space to the advertisement of an added attraction in the form of a musical entertainment featuring Miss Mary Shaw, "a clever young Winter Garden star." The Elks Theatre, Mahanoy City, gave as much space in a big display advertisement to the "short subject" features of the program as to the exploitation of the main feature film.

The short subject program made its initial bow to Cleveland Thursday, July 30th at the Lincoln theatre to a tremendous and enthusiastic audience composed of many adults as well as children. The management of the Lincoln theatre played the program three consecutive days.

The Cozy theatre will be the second Cleveland motion picture house to give the short subject program a try-out. Manager Bob Wilkinson has booked ten reels of short novelty and comedy subjects to play the Cozy theatre September 13 and 14. The program consists of the following: "Boobs in the Woods" with Harry Langdon; "Good Morning Nurse," a Sennett comedy; "The Love Bug," an Our Gang comedy; "Royal Four Flush," Spat Family; "Sure Mike," a Martha Sleeper; and "The Window Washer" an Aesop Fable.

Wilkinson has ordered a big bunch of Carnival one-sheets for display in the neighborhood. He has also ordered a lot of special window cards and heralds for neighborhood distribution. Wilkinson has not just booked a novelty program and then waited for business to roll in. He's going after the business.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Minister in Sermon Gives "Chickie" Publicity

The management of Col. Fred Levy's Kentucky theatre in Lexington, Ky., got much valuable publicity for "Chickie," by arranging with Dr. J. Archer Gray, minister of the Maxwell Presbyterian church of that city to preach a sermon on "Modern Girls" in which reference was made to "Chickie," coming to a local theatre. The Lexington Herald, on Monday morning, carried a column report on the sermon with the clergyman's mention of "Chickie" embodied in it.

The sermon was advertised in advance by large display advertisements in the Lexington Daily newspapers.

Contest Provides Display for "The Rag Man"

A Jackie Coogan rag patch contest, conducted by C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, in connection with the showing of "The Rag Man" at the Schade theatre in Sandusky, O., recently attracted widespread attention to the run. A large mat of Jackie was printed on heralds and distributed among the school children, prizes for the best colorings being offered. The best colorings were mounted on a 3-sheet board and exhibited before the Schade theatre, where they aroused much interest.

The town was well posted in addition, and there was a vigorous campaign.

Heavy Herald Campaign is Given "The Fool"

The St. Louis engagement of "The Fool," at the King's Garden theatre, that city, received a splendid campaign at the hands of Al J. Marks and the Fox exploitation forces.

Among the stunts employed was a unique method of distributing special circulars about town, by a systematic house-to-house campaign. Fifty boys were used to distribute the heralds. Each boy wore a large printed card on his cap reading: "'The Fool,' starts Saturday, King's theatre."

The Cleveland public library aided "The Iron Horse" (Fox) at B. F. Keith's theatre with this display of books on railroading.

Seven big cars were used to transport the boys to different sections of the city. The cars carried banners reading: "The Fool—Not the Owner of A Star Car 'The Fool' will be at the King's theatre—next week." The cars constituted—in themselves—a good exploitation parade.

To make doubly certain that no section of St. Louis was overlooked in the "flyer" campaign, the city was divided into districts. On one day the West Side and part of the North side was worked, while the following day was devoted to cleaning up the South side and balance of the North side. The East side of the city was handled by boys on foot and on bicycles.

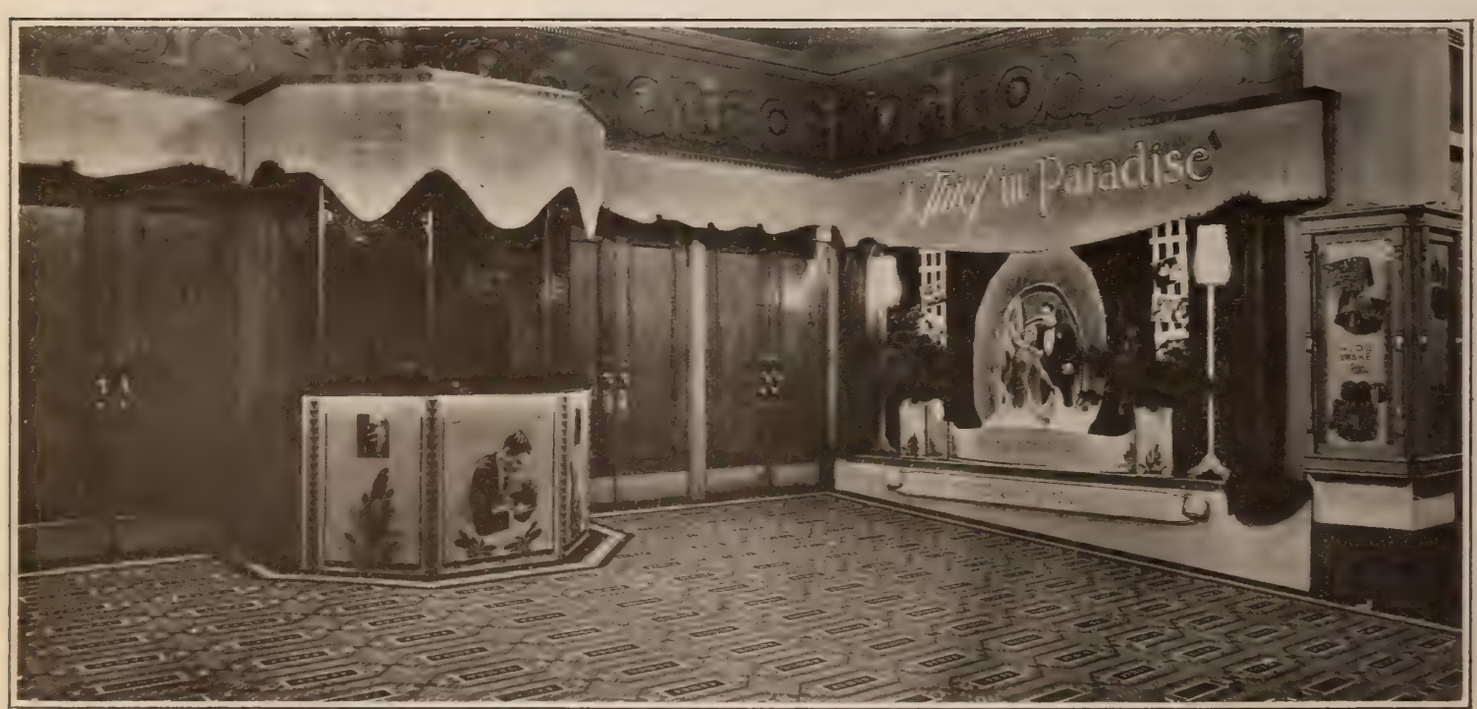
The effectiveness of this stunt lay in the fact that the exploitation instead of being worked on the downtown streets of the city, or in the vicinity of the theatre—as is generally the case, was in reality brought to the very doorsteps of every home in the city. The bannered cars, the boys bearing signs, and the heralds themselves comprising three separate and distinct exploitation mediums that could not fail to attract attention.

"Ten Commandments" is Given Strong Support

"The Ten Commandments," playing the Sterling, Greeley, S. C., recently, gained many new friends for the theatre.

Manager C. T. Perrin held an advance screening for about thirty ministers with result that the picture was recommended from the pulpit of the various churches. In addition, a front page write-up appeared in the daily paper regarding the photoplay.

Greeley's leading department store had a very attractive display in their large double window on the main street. The windows of an empty store, also in the business section, were completely covered with paper on the attraction. Being located in conspicuous places, both windows proved excellent publicity agents for the photoplay at the Sterling.



Newspaper space was increased considerably and the usual billing augmented by the use of 27 extra one's 9 three's, 3 six's, 5 twenty-four's and one set of 11 x 14 photos.

An advance lobby was put in which played up strongly the coming of "The Ten Commandments," followed up by an appropriate display during photoplay's run.

Beauty Shop Display Given "The Manicure Girl"

For his showing of "The Manicure Girl," Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska, Augusta, had a miniature beauty shop, complete in every detail. In the center of display was a table at which a young lady sat giving a young man a manicure. Cut-outs of other men and women, as well as of furniture used in a manicure parlor, completed the display which was mounted in a shadow box extending across lobby. Illuminated by colored glass, it was most effective.

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was augmented by six prominent drug store window displays put in three days prior to opening and remaining up during picture's run. Cut-outs and 8 x 10 stills were used.

Artistic lobby display used at Dolan and Ripley's new D. & R. theatre, Alberdeen, Wash., on "A Thief in Paradise" (First National).

"Up the Ladder" Contest Stirs Up St. Louis

There are several homes in St. Louis where Maurice Davis doesn't dare poke his head these days. That is if the owners know that this zealous Universal exploitation man was responsible for a recent contest in the St. Louis Times.

The contest tied up with "Up the Ladder." In the picture the husband climbs the ladder of success but gets rather dizzy as he nears the top. To bring him to his senses his wife knocks the support—a mere matter of cash—out from under him.

Maurice's contest asked this intriguing question and offered passes for the best answers: "Should a wife climb the ladder of success with her husband, or should she be content to stay at the foot?"

When the various wives and husbands started writing essays on the subject, the excitement began, but although many homes are reported to have come near to breaking up over the question, William Goldman's Kings and Rivoli, playing the feature, gained the benefit of much publicity.

Theatre Front Masked for "Heart of a Siren"

Manager Gracean Pedley of the Strand Amusement compaany's interests gave "The Heart of a Siren" a mask theatre front for its showing at the Empress theatre in Owensboro, Ky.

Half a week in advance of the showing the mask was put in place; also a billboard above the marquee. Both remained up until the final curtain on the showing.

The mask consisted of two large painted peacocks on either side of the entrance with a large spread fan carrying the title of the picture above the entrance.

Manager Pedley finds this theatre front mask a valuable and effective method of exploiting pictures. Beaver board is used for this purpose and it can be used again and again it makes a very economical method of exploitation. A local artist is employed to paint the mask.

Simple but effective street ballyhoo for "I'll Show You the Town" (Universal) at the Olympic theatre, Bufffalo.

Human Interest Story Wins Space for "The Monster"

When "The Monster" played recently at Loew's State theatre in Los Angeles, Hal Reed, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, ran an excellent story in the local dailies recounting the exploit of one of the girl ushers of the theatre, who volunteered to operate the projector when the operator took sick. His account of how the girl's providential knowledge of projection machines saved the theatre from closing in the midst of a performance made front page space.

Two announcements of the run were made over the radio, and the Culver City studio trucks, as well as the West Coast trucks, 40 altogether, carried double full sheet cards on both sides. The town was lavishly posted, one hundred 24-sheets among other posters being used. Ten thousand heralds were distributed and two slides and two trailers were brought into play.

A vigorous press campaign completed this drive, generous space being secured in all Los Angeles papers.

Men Roll Huge Dice as Ad for "Seven Chances"

In advertising "Seven Chances," Manager Guy O. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, followed a suggestion broadcast from the theatre advertising department, with the exception that instead of using one man to roll a large dice about the streets of Jacksonville, he had two men roll two dice, each about a foot square.

One man was dressed to represent 'Buster' Keaton, while the other was made up as a negro. They would start rolling the dice, and after a crowd had collected, offer a pass to the Arcade to anyone rolling a 'seven.' The stunt was a tremendous success, the free tickets doing the trick.

The lobby display was a direct tie-up with the ballyhoo. A huge motor driven revolving dice was placed in the center of the lobby where it proved a fitting climax to the publicity getting street stunt.

The Harmony Duo, who are fast becoming popular in Jacksonville as Arcade entertainers, appeared in a special prologue. The offering was preceded by the two artists singing a duet, after which the curtains were drawn back on a setting consisting of an oval picture frame against a background of metallic drapes. In this oval the entertainers did their act, which went over to big applause.

"Spirit of U. S. A." Helped by Runaway Horses Stunt

H. L. "Shake" Davidson of the Burford theatre, Arkansas City, Kas., exceeded even his own expectations the other day in attempting to exploit "The Spirit of the U. S. A." The "plot" was to have several army 75s drawn through town, heavily p'accarded, but an hour before mounting the signs the horse ran away and scattered signs for eight blocks.

"As far as attracting attention is concerned, I probably would have been arrested had there been any more attracted," said "Shake".

Display sign on the side of the Capitol theatre in Little Rock, Ark., advertising "Lady of the Night" (Metro-Goldwyn), as planned by Manager R. T. Newton.

A Series of 12

Sennett Productions in all that the name implies.

Sizzling with humor like hot fat in a pan.

Fast stepping. Not a dull moment.

Pretty girls—and Graves himself.

Seen him? Big and handsome. Clever. Funny because he makes himself John J. Dumbell himself.

When Sennett takes a comedian out of a crowd and makes him a star it means something.

How can you make every dollar possible if you don't advertise him to your public?

Once in a dog's age there flashes upon the horizon a girl who is a real comedian, funny in her own right.

Think over the women stars of stage and screen, and try to count up the genuine mirth-makers.

Alice Day is not only beautiful; she's funny.

That's why Sennett, champion picker of comedians, has promoted her from the ranks of the featured players to stardom.

Look at these new Alice Day comedies at the nearest Pathe exchange. When you get through laughing you'll sign 'em up.

Are YOU cashing in on the wide-spread popularity of the Mack Sennett comedies?

Where the summer crowds gather on the beaches people say of a pretty girl with a stunning figure, "She looks like a Mack Sennett girl." When editors want to dress up their picture pages with the prettiest girls obtainable, there you'll find the famous Sennett beauties.

Think of the vast publicity these comedies have had in the press and among the public. They are standard in quality, inimitable in style, fun and beauty.

How are you going to get the utmost out of them if you don't tell the public about them in your advertising?

ANOTHER SCREAM FROM LANGDON

I REGRET that vaudeville had but one Harry Langdon to give to the motion picture. It isn't posssible that there is another comedian as good hiding out in the two-a-day, for the studio scouts must have ransacked the boards for such. This Langdon is no mere find. He's a Klondyke.

Langdon was at McVicker's last week in "Plain Clothes." Now if you haven't seen "Plain Clothes" you haven't seen Langdon. If you thought he was funny in that police uniform of his you were mistaken. He was just rehearsing. He wore that uniform just so that he could show you how much funnier he could be without it.

I've watched each of the present day long distance comedians toddle their respective ways through the minor lengths into the sometimes doubtful glory of the "features" and I'm torn just now between hoping that Langdon does and doesn't get by in the big picture they say he's making. If he can make more money in the long pictures, I like him well enough to wish him success. But speaking for myself and nobody else I hope he decides finally to content himself with leading the short subject field by the present healthy margin. I don't think he could be any funnier in the long pictures, and the record is that most of the boys who try it are never quite the same.

I'd like nothing better than to tell you the funny stuff in "Plain Clothes." There's some queer streak in each of us which makes us like to tell such things, even when we know that we're ruining our listener's good time. But to tell you about this comedy would be criminal. You've got to see it to appreciate it; and you've got to see it

MILTON J. GOLDBAUM, who travels Southern Illinois for the Columbia Pictures Corporation, reported that he was robbed of $150 in cash, two diamond rings valued at $3,000, a suit case containing considerable clothing and the company's Ford sedan by two men on a highway near Harrisburg, Ill., on the night of July 30. The Ford was later recovered some distance from the scene of the robbery. The diamonds were insured. He furnished the authorities a description of the robbers. Mr. Goldbaum was held up and robbed of cash and jewelry at Springfield, Ill., several years ago.

W. P. Walker has sold the Palace theatre, Creal Springs, Ill., to M. Whitehead and has taken over the theatre at Vienna, Ill.

Harry Weiss, manager of the First National office, and newly elected president of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade, was host at a dinner-dance given for the employees of the exchange on July 25th at the rathskeller of the Bevo Mill. A handsome silver loving cup was awarded to Lester Bona, city salesman, for winning a sales contest. Weiss was given a beautiful Gladstone bag.

Miss Miriam Less, secretary to Harry Weiss, manager for First National, is vacationing in Arkansas.

Baltimore

GLADYS SIEBERT, chief usherette at the New theatre for a number of years, is now at her home recovering from an operation.

Patronage at the two moving picture theatres in Hampden, Md., a suburb of Baltimore, has fallen off considerably since several of the cotton mills of Woodberry closed down. Both the Ideal and the Hampden have felt the exodus of mill workers very much. At the present time there is only one cotton mill in operation and it is on part time. Formerly there were about four with another mill during the war in operation for special parts of machines.

J. E. Hendricks, manager of the Boulevard theatre, is now recovering from two very serious operations which were performed upon him at the Church Home and Infirmary, several weeks ago. It was thought at one time that Mr. Hendricks would not survive.

Julius Goodman, manager of the Ideal theatre, Hampden, Md., drove up to Camp Perry, near Thurmont, Md., in his big car on Thursday, July 30, to see his little son who has been enjoying life there. On his way he stopped in Washington, D. C., to get several films and carried a portable projection machine to give the 108 boys at the camp a moving picture show. He says most of the boys at the camp threatened to leave unless they could see a movie. Camp Perry is run by the Bolton street synagogue. Mr. Goodman's wife is now in the Catskills with her uncle and has their youngest child with her.

William E. Stumpf, manager of the Garden theatre, is now enjoying a two weeks vacation and his work is being done by George List, of the Whitehurst organization during Mr. Stumpf's absence.

Walter L. Hanrahan, house manager of the Parkway theatre, one of the Combined Whitehurst Interest group of playhouses, is spending his vacation during the week of August 3, in New York, visiting the various studios. He will go to the Fox, Famous Players and Trio studios to see how pictures are made.

The New Lyceum theatre, which was practically destroyed by fire last April, will be taken over by William Cook, undertaker, and turned into an establishment for his own use if the plans which are now under way, go through.

An option has been taken by Mr. Cook on the property from the James L. Kernan Company, the owners, who formerly conducted the playhouse for legitimate attractions and occasionally for feature moving pictures. Lowell Sherman and George Fawcett were members of a stock company that was popular there years ago.

The price under consideration is said to be about $90,000. The lot measures 60 by 180 feet and is located on North Charles street, near Preston.

Albany

MONDAY, September 14, is to be declared a legal holiday along Film Row in Albany, as the annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade is scheduled for that day. In all probability all the exchanges will be closed the entire day although some may be open for a few hours during the morning. Tickets for the outing are now being sold by the exchange managers, salesmen, as well as the secretaries of the Film Board of Trade and the Zone Committee. Exhibitors throughout the entire territory are reported to be buying tickets and as the outing is open to everyone in the business, there should be a crowd of several hundred, including many from other places.

Mrs. Fred Garfield, of Jamestown, who was formerly Marie Wheeler, and who for several years was prominent along Film Row, one time as manager of the Merit exchange, was a pleasant visitor in town during the week, on her way to Westerlo to spend her vacation with relatives.

R. G. Wyckoff, a traveling auditor for Fox, after spending two weeks at the local exchange, has returned to New York city.

Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, and L. J. Shearer, of the same city, constituting the Cohoes Amusement company, purchased the Majestic theatre in that city last week, a 1,000-seat house which the company has been leasing for the last ten years. As a rule the theatre has been closed each summer, but the fight pictures recently shown on one of the Saturday nights, brought such crowds that the company has decided to open the house each Saturday night with pictures until the fore part of September, when the regular seven day a week program will get under way. The company showed its public spiritedness last Wednesday night, when it donated the entire proceeds from an entertainment given at the theatre for the benefit of several families whose homes were destroyed by fire a week or two ago.

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, one of the heads of the Schine circuit, is reported on Film Row to be about to forsake the ranks of bachelorhood. Some of the film exchange managers in Gloversville last week, were notified by Mr. Schine of the coming event. Mr. Schine opening a box of cigars as he made the announcement.

Uly S. Hill, managing-director of the Strand theatres in Troy and Albany, accompanied by his son, Norman, figured in an automobile smash up one day last week. According to Mr. Hill, he was forced out of the road by a drunken driver, his car overturning and smashing the fenders and windows, but without seriously injuring the occupants. Mr. Hill's hand was cut by broken glass, but otherwise he was not hurt.

Abe Stone has surrendered the lease of the Delaware theatre in Albany, and is now devoting his entire time to the Arbor Hill theatre. The Delaware will be operated by the owner of the property.

George Cohen, a well known exhibitor in Newburgh and Poughkeepsie, made his first trip last week to Albany's Film Row. As a general thing Mr. Cohen buys all of his pictures from the New York city exchanges. With his old friend, Charles Walder, now heading the Fox exchange here, Mr. Cohen decided to drive up to Albany and place some of his business here.

There is one thing absolutely certain and that is that Charles Walder, local manager for Fox, does not believe in the hoodoo of 13 nor Friday. Mr. Walder moved into a house last week which he purchased some little time ago, and which contains thirteen rooms, the moving being done on Friday. When asked why he had so many rooms, Mr. Walder replied that he would now be in a position to bunk in the film salesmen when they arrived in town and found the local hotels already filled.

John Garry, who was married a few weeks ago, and who manages the Empire theatre in Glens Falls, has just been forced to undergo an operation for appendicitis in one of the hospitals in that city. Mr. Garry was stricken shortly after the evening show and was taken to the hospital a couple of hours later.

Oscar Perrin is as pleased as a child with a new toy with the improvements that have lately been made at the Leland theatre in Albany. With handsome dark red carpets, with new lighting fixtures and with many other little features that add to the attractiveness of the house, the theatre, despite the fact that it observed its 100th anniversary last May, ranks as one of the most popular in the territory. Mr. Perrin will take no vacation this year and will begin his fall program of big pictures the latter part of August.

Julius Boxhorn, who conducts the orchestra at the Mark Strand in Albany, was heard to declare last week that he will never return to Europe except on an occasional trip. Mr. Boxhorn likes the United States and likes Albany, but when it comes to rainy Sundays, that's a different story. Since coming to Albany, Mr. Boxhorn has bought himself a car and spends pleasant Sundays in touring over the country.

Ormond Roberts, Louis Buettner and Uly S. Hill, acting with Alec Herman, Jack Krause and Ted O'Shea, constituted the Arbitration Board at a special meeting last week to clean up outstanding matters that had been dragging for some little time.

William Benton's new house in Mechanicville, is progressing satisfactorily with the roof completed and the exterior well along. It will seat 1,200 persons. Mr. Benton is looking forward to big business in Saratoga Springs this month on account of the races.

Osmyn Brownell, who has been connected with the Hippodrome and Strand theatres in Carthage, has been selected as a student in the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, and will leave for New York city about August 14.

Ed Hochstim, a well known salesman for Pathe out of Albany, luckily escaped serious injury one night a short time ago when he fell asleep at the steering wheel as he was on his way back from Saratoga Springs. The car left the road and struck a telegraph pole being so badly damaged that the repair bill set Mr. Hochstim back about $130.

Leon Medem, manager for Pathe in Albany, was in New York the latter part of the week, conferring with the Peerless booking agency relative to pictures for its houses in Glens Falls and Amsterdam.

Little or nothing is being heard these days of the proposed theatre which was to have been built in Mechanicville by public subscription, and which, according to first reports, was to be leased to the Schine brothers. Ground has not been broken for the house and no one seems to know exactly what the status of the venture is.

Film salesmen returning from Utica, declare that Nate Robbins of that city, wears a broad smile these days since his selection as head of the New York State Theatrical Enterprises, and the absorption of his houses in Watertown, Syracuse and Utica, by the Famous Players.

Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, was along Film Row during the past week. W. W. Farley, who has just disposed of his theatres in Catskill and Schenectady, to Famous Players, returned to Albany the other day from a short trip to Florida, but left almost immediately on a ten days' vacation, not disclosing his whereabouts. It is reported that Mr. Farley has become interested in Florida real estate.

Clever work on the part of Fred Hathaway of Utica, connected with the Robbins houses in that city, brought him a check for $25 from the Universal Film company. It is said that Mr. Hathaway put over some very clever work in connection with a run of a serial.

C. R. Halligan, of the local Universal exchange, is back at his desk, following a two weeks' vacation, one of which was spent on an automobile trip through northern New York with Ray Smith, a salesman. Mr. Halligan was much impressed with the hospitality of north country exhibitors.

After three or four days in New York city, Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, returned to Albany on Thursday and with Mrs. Veiller motored on to Lake George to spend the remainder of his vacation. In Mr. Veiller's absence, the theatre has been handled by Ben Stern, the assistant manager of the Troy.

Jake Golden will participate in the Greater Movie Season, having arranged a most attractive program for the Griswold in Troy. Following a conference with Strand representatives in that city it has been decided not to start the season until August 8. The Griswold is being re-seated as well as recarpeted and improved in other ways.

Carbon copies of by-laws recently drafted by the Buffalo Zone, have recently been sent to the nine exhibitors constituting the officers and board of directors of the Albany Zone. In each instance, the exhibitor has been asked to either approve or reject the by-laws, or offer any suggestions which might serve as amendments. The draft received from Buffalo covered about two typewritten sheets, but owing to suggestions of value that have been received from exhibitors in the Albany Zone, it is quite possible that when the final by-laws that will govern both the Albany and Buffalo zones and bring about greater coordination, are adopted that they will be much longer. It is expected that there will be a meeting of the Albany Zone sometime the latter part of August or September, when exhibitors will be back from their vacations and at this meeting the by-laws will be discussed and action taken.

ART SCHMIDT was here last Thursday and Friday. That's not just a statement of fact. It's an event. Everybody's glad hand was out to bid him welcome. He's on his way to the coast with his family.

Stanley Hatch from the First National home office is temporarily in charge of the local First National exchange. He'll be here several weeks at least. Probably at the end of that time E. A. Eschman will be around and will appoint a permanent resident exchange manager to succeed Norman Moray.

Norman Moray, who resigned as manager of the local First National exchange to enter the real estate brokerage business in Miami was overwhelmed with gifts just prior to his departure. The Film Board of Trade presented him with a beautiful wrist watch—in the hope, no doubt, that he will see what time the train leaves Miami for Cleveland—and the entire First National force gave him the finest traveling bag they could buy. So, coming or staying, Moray hasn't a chance in the world to forget Cleveland.

Ethel Epstein, assistant manager at the local Fox exchange, has left for a two weeks' vacation. She's gone to Swampscott. But neglected to state whether she is visiting the president's family.

Joe Lee is no longer with the Fox publicity department. He resigned last week to ally himself with Harry Houdini who is opening a big new show in Pittsburgh on September 12th.

Joe Shea succeeds Joe Lee as special Fox exploiteer in this territory. Shea has been doing special publicity work for Fox in New York.

Harry Rathner of Astor Pictures, New York, was in town over the week-end.

Harry P. Decker arrived in Cleveland last week to take over the management of the local Warner Bros. exchange. He succeeds J. E. Beck. Decker was in Cleveland eight years ago, with the Metro Pictures Corporation. Since then he has been in the east with Metro and with Warners.

L. J. Joseph is the new proprietor of the Zane theatre at Zanesville. Joseph recently leased the house from L. H. Williams.

Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer are building a new 2000-seat motion picture theatre on West 25th St., at Broadview Ave., in Brooklyn, a residence suburb of Cleveland. The building which will have 110 feet on West 25th St. and 250 feet on Broadview, will contain, in addition to the theatre, five stores, a bowling and billiard room and office space. Nicola Petti of Cleveland is the architect. Both Fine and Kramer are connected with the Ohio Amusement company, which operates one of the largest neighborhood circuits in the city.

The Opera House at New Philadelphia, owned and operated by the Skirboll Brothers of the Ohio Educational Exchange and Goldseal Productions, is in process of undergoing a complete transformation. Bill Skirboll states that the whole front of the house is being torn out to make way for a new and elaborate lobby and front entrance. The entire auditorium is being treated to several coats of paint and varnish. New rest rooms for ladies and club rooms for men are being added and furnished in the most modern manner, and a new organ is being installed. About the only thing that will remain unchanged will be the name over the front door.

The old Toledo Theatre, Toledo, right next door to the Rivoli, will be known as the Palace when Ed Souerbeir gets through spending $150,000 in converting it from one of the oldest to one of the newest theatres in the town.

The Stillman theatre, Cleveland, closed its summer season this week. And on August 9th, will open it's winter season. The difference between the summer season and the winter season at the Stillman is one of price and policy. In the winter, the Stillman is the home of continued runs at 75c top price. In the summer, the feature changes every week and the top price is 50c.

Maurice Spitalny, musical director at the Stillman theatre, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City.

The Film Bldg. register was not much used last week. The only out-of-town exhibitors who signed up were Judge H. T. Palmer, Lyric theatre, Fairport Harbor; John G. Furrer, Harkness Theatre, Clyde and Sam Shea, of the Old Trail, at St. Clairsville.

"Tim" Roberts, of the White Way theatre, Mansfield, has just opened a new house in Mansfield called the Ritz. It's not a large house,—has about 500 seats—but everything in the house is of the best. The theatre was opened to the public for the first time on July 21st.

William Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland, offered his patrons a Vaudeville Carnival this week. He gave them two extra high class acts of vaudeville, advertised extensively, and stirred up business in a most satisfying manner.

Canada

THE co-operative arrangement between First National and F. B. O. in Canada whereby the two operated jointly in the same offices in various exchange cities of the Dominion has ceased to exist and the F. B. O. organization in Canada is once more identified with Canadian Educational Films, Limited, for co-operative releasing arrangements in the various key cities. In other words, Film Booking Offices of Canada and Canadian Educational Films, Limited, are again united in jointly occupied exchange offices for co-operative releasing.

P. C. Taylor continues as general manager of F. B. O. in Canada while O. R. Hanson is general manager of Canadian Educational as before, both of these officers being under the same roof in their offices on Victoria Street, Toronto.

Mr. Taylor announced, in commenting on the new arrangement, that F. B. O. had intended open-up its own exclusive exchanges in Canada within a few weeks because it had been found that the offices occupied with First National had become congested through the great quantity of films and advertising matter handled by both organizations. The opportunity arose, however, whereby F. B. O. could re-effect its joint occupation of offices in the Canadian cities with Canadian Educational and this was agreed upon, thus obviating the necessity of opening new offices.

When Manager H. E. Wilton of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, heard from one or two patrons that there were folks at home who could not walk because of age or infirmity but yet who would enjoy attendance at a moving picture theatre, he began to study the situation with the view to adopting a plan which would facilitate matters for the physically incapable. He hit upon the idea of using a double-exit door on a side street as a special entrance for the old folks, this door giving access quickly to rows of seats near the front of the house where the old folks could also see without difficulty. Then he made it known by word of mouth to a great number of regular patrons and the side door is now being used frequently for those who cannot walk.

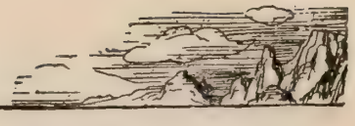
The last remaining space on the 12th floor of the Royal Bank Building at the corner of King and Yonge Streets, Toronto, has been taken over by Famous Players Canadian Corp., to provide further room for its Canadian headquarters. The home office now covers 6,250 square feet of floor area, it is pointed out, and it is asserted that the offices are located on the most valuable commercial site in the whole Dominion. The Royal Bank Building at Toronto is the highest office skyscraper in the British Empire.

The second half of the season's schedule in the Toronto Motion Picture Baseball League opened August 4 with four strong and well-balanced teams again participating in the series, these being Regal Films, Limited; Associated First National; Famous-Lasky Film Service; and the Famous Players Canadian Corp. The first-half series was won by Regal Films, Limited.

When the City of St. John, N. B., recently staged the unveiling of its war memorial as a public function, Manager W. H. Golding of the Imperial Theatre decided to conduct a ceremony in the theatre itself which would co-ordinate with the ceremony in the park, thus offsetting the counter effect of the feature.

At a signal from the park, the performance in the Imperial Theatre stopped and the orchestra rose to its feet. A bugler sounded "The Last Post" call simultaneously with this part of the public function and this was followed by the playing of the National Anthem and other incidental details, the audience joining in with the singing. Manager Golding was praised for his public spirit and the incident served to hold the theatre up to a good light.

H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager for Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, with headquarters in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has returned to Winnipeg after spending several weeks in New York City and Toronto for the purpose of gathering ideas for the presentation of many new releases in the Famous houses throughout his large territory. He returned to the Manitoba Capital in time to assist in the re-opening of the Metropolitan Theatre on August 3 as a combined moving picture and vaudeville house.



ANNOUNCEMENT is made that a brand new moving picture theatre is to be built in Toronto, Ontario, by the Bloor-Runneymede Theatre Company. The new house, according to plans, will seat 1,300 persons and will be located on Bloor Street in the heart of the new Runneymede residential section. The proposed theatre will be known as the Runneymede Theatre.

The Globe theatre, Toronto, reopened Monday, July 20, after a lay-off during which the house was renovated. This theatre, which is one of the older of the downtown houses, is owned by Arthur Cohen, an official of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

The headquarters of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada at Toronto, Ontario, have been moved from the Lumsden Building, to the 19th floor of the new Metropolitan Building, one of the latest skyscrapers of the Ontario. The president of the organization is Col. John A. Cooper.

Salt Lake City

THE Hotel Utah is the scene of an important sales conference the latter part of this week of representatives and executives of Pathe. Those in attendance are William Frazier, manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation; Ben Fish and Frank Harris, special representatives of Harold Lloyd; W. S. Wessling, Western division manager; William Jenner, manager of the Los Angeles Pathe branch; Walter Koefelt, branch manager at San Francisco; C. M. Van Horn, Denver branch manager; W. C. Calkins, Butte branch manager; L. A. Samuelson, Seattle branch manager; L. M. Cobbs, Portland branch manager, and W. G. Seib, manager of the offices here.

L. L. Savage, traveling booking inspector for Pathe, is at the local office checking up on the bookings. While here he will relieve Charles Epperson, local booker, while the latter goes on his vacation. Chick is going to make the scenic belt of Southern Utah.

Ed C. Mix, manager in this city for Associated Exhibitors, is making a swing over the Cache Valley section of Utah, and southern Idaho.

Max Roth, representative for the home offices of Fox at New York City, is covering a lot of work locally at this branch since his arrival here two weeks ago.

Art A. Schayer, Fox resident manager, will be back at his desk the latter part of this week after making a thorough trip through the Montana territory. Charles L. Walker has been doing duty as office manager while Art has been away.

H. Bradley Fish, doing special work in this territory for Universal, is out in the territory with Milt Cohn, special selling representative out of the local office. They are working at present in Idaho.

Gilbert E. Rosenwald, special representative for Universal, is covering the Southern Utah section with Joe McElhinney, salesman in that part of the country.

R. S. Stackhouse, local manager of the Warner Brothers branch, left for a trip to Montana. G. C. Jones, booker, has charge of the office during his absence.

Alan Burke, who has charge of the local DeLuxe Feature exchange, is back after a trip through the southern part of the state.

L. C. Skelley, who has been connected with the local DeLuxe Feature exchange since it opened several months ago, is returning to Denver next week.

C. F. Parr, resident manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, is making the key centers of Idaho and Montana. C. C. McDermott is selling in southern Utah.

Manager Parr announces that he has added a new salesman to his force in the person of Dave Schayer, assigning him to the Idaho territory. He succeeds Dave Frazier who was promoted last week to special representative for Prod. Dist. Corp. Mr. Schayer left yesterday on his initial trip.

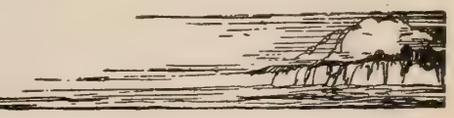
Paul F. Berger, home office representative for Metro-Goldwyn arrived in this city Wednesday from Denver, in company with Dave Bershon, newly appointed manager of the Western Division, succeeding Harry Lustig. They are conferring with George L. Cloward, manager of the local branch, on policies governing distribution of the new pooduct.

Manager Cloward has returned from a long tour of Idaho and Montana.

Out of town exhibitors who were seen on the local film mart this week included: S. M. Duggins, who operates the Casino theatre at Gunnison, Utah; Harmon and Lou Peery, owners of the new Egyptian theatre, Ogden, Utah; John Rugar, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Park City, Utah; S. B. Steck, owner of the Lyceum theatre, Ogden, Utah; J. B. Ashton, operating the Columbia theatre, Provo, Utah; C. M. Pace, who recently opened the New Pace theatre, Delta, Utah; George Lindsay, owner of the Star theatre, Eureka, Utah; Steve Deal, proprietor of the Star theatre, Springville, Utah; F. T. Duval, manager of the Gem theatre, Murray, Utah and John W. Johnson, running the Iris theatre, Midvale, Utah.

W. K. Bloom, selling out of the local F.B.O. exchange, is traveling the Montana territory. Bloom will work for the next few weeks in the Utah section, while Joe Solomon will be transferred to the Idaho country.

L. A. Davis, manager of the F. B.O. office here, leaves next week for a swing over the Nevada territory.



Carl Stearn, resident manager for United Artists, returned from a trip through the key centers of Idaho and Montana.

C. G. Epperson, working the Idaho section out of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange returned from his territory. He has been sent out to the Southern Utah country for a few days before returning to his own stamping grounds.

Louis Marcus, Western division manager, for Famous Players-Lasky, left yesterday for New York City, where he will devote the next two weeks to special business.

Buffalo

RAIN or shine, the members of the Rochester Theatrical association are always available for an outing. This was evident when 25 members of the organization gathered one day last week at Point Pleasant for the annual outing. Headed by Jack Farren, manager of the Victoria, the party arrived at the Point early in the afternoon. Chicken dinner was the first thing on the program and by the time the last course was served, the sun shone once again, drying up the field adjacent to the inn so that the sports could be conducted. The program began with a baseball game between the Burnupskis and the Putmeoutskis, and ended with the former winning. The rest of the program was varied, prizes being given in each event. E. M. Fay was awarded a prize for being judged the handsomest man on the ground, and Harry Abbott received a token for being judged the homeliest. In the Has-Been race Clifford Smith took first prize and W. K. Corris was second. The other contests and the winners were: Three-legged race, Floyd Mennelley; Fat man's race, Howard Shannon; ball throwing contest, Julius Greenstone; 100-yard dash, A. B. McCallum. The picnic was arranged and directed by Jack Farren and Howard Shannon. Just before the program began, Mr. Farren was presented with a purse of silver. The association includes the managers of the Lyceum, Eastman, Victoria, Regent, Piccadilly, Strand, Corinthian, Gayety, Fay's and Empire theatres.

While a crowded house in the Piccadilly theatre, Clinton avenue, north, Rochester, sat through a showing of the feature picture the other night, fire of undetermined origin swept through the rear of the shop next door, resulting in $5,000 loss. Guards were placed at the theatre doors, in case of emergency, and no one was allowed to enter, although at no time was the theatre endangered. The patrons were not informed of the proximity of the blaze and not until they left the theatre at the conclusion of the show did they realize there had been a fire so close.

Shea Hippodrome fans were enthusiastic in praise of the music program offered last week by the Russian National Orchestra which gave several numbers but were forced to respond with several more at each appearance. It was one of the classiest numbers ever offered on the music end of the bill. The orchestra played the Eastman in Rochester and Charlie Hayman grabbed it for the Strand in Niagara Falls, following the Buffalo "Hipp" run.

Henry Murtagh, organist at the Lafayette Square theatre, Buffalo, is sporting a big Cadillac sedan. If Henry ever returns to dear old California whence he came a year or so ago to accept an engagement at the Lafayette, he'll probably be able to drive back in a few hours. But it looks as though Henry likes Buffalo very much. He has made many friends here.

Buffalo and western New York theatres are not worrying about cooling systems in their houses just now. The weather has been cool enough for many weeks and business has been better than average for this time of the year.

William A. Dillon of Ithaca, N. Y., president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., is planning with B. R. MacMillan of the staff of the Cornell Medical College to make a moving picture of Congressman Clarence MacGregor, chairman of the Committee on Accounts of the 68th congress, who is now at Cornell University taking a summer course in economics. Mr. MacGregor is a real friend of the exhibitors, he having been prominent in aiding the elimination of the admission tax. Mr. MacGregor's home is in Buffalo.

Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Buffalo office of Producers Distributing corporation, and president of Western New York Theatrical Enterprises Inc., has returned from a vacation up in the Perry Sound district of Canada, where his party brought down a 235 pound bear and hooked 200 pounds of yellow pike. Fred is having the bear skin made into a coat for this winter.

Keith's theatre in Syracuse has definitely embarked upon a new combination policy and it is rumored that the Temple, the Keith house in Rochester, may follow suit.

O. F. Hollander has been appointed manager of the Buffalo branch of Warner Brothers, succeeding C. W. Anthony. The change came as a distinct shock to Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men. Mr. Anthony had been with the Vitagraph company for eight years, four of which were spent in Buffalo as branch manager. During this time, Mr. Anthony earned an enviable reputation as a square shooter, good fellow and live wire manager. Mr. Hollander has been with Warner Brothers in Omaha.

Norman L. Sper, former manager of the Buffalo Dependable office, has started out with Jerry Herzog of New York in a motor car for Florida where both expect to clean up millions in the real estate business.

Maurice Chase, president of Chase Pictures corporation, expects to announce the location of his Buffalo office next week. Several sites are being considered.

New York and New Jersey

ADOLPH OSTERMAN, of the City and Grand theatres, Newark, who has recently returned from a pleasure tour of Europe, was a caller among the exchanges on Tuesday. Also, A. Weissman, who operates the Summer theatre at West Hoboken, and Fred Faulkner, of the Claridge and Strand.

The Opera House at New Brunswick has been closed for the balance of the summer months and will be reopened September the 15th.

Alexander Okin of the Cranford theatre, Cranford, N. J., has gone up to Sullivan County for a two weeks' rest mainly on the recommendation of Ed Carroll of Associated Exhibitors. Ed thinks that the auburn mustache has caused Mr. Okin's slight indisposition and that both Alec and the Moustache need the tonic qualities of mountain air.

W. C. "Bill" Herman, of the Big U Exchange, has been reported along Exchange Row, as being a very apt player of the well known game of "bridge," evidence of this taking place on the Jersey Central between North Asbury Park and New York. If any one has any doubts about it they are invited to get aboard the 5:08 out of New York or the 8:18 out of North Asbury.

Dave Snapper and Sam Perry, both prominent North Jersey exhibitors, were in town doing some booking this last Tuesday.

Pathe salesmen have received word from Frank Lovejoy who recently left with a trailer outfit for a tour through Canada. He has reached Quebec and is going along in fine shape.

The real estate boom at Rockaway Beach which has been given so much front page space in New York newspapers, has not missed the film trade. Several years ago, Hy Gainsboro, local exhibitor, had a piece of Rockaway property forced on his hands in lieu of a debt of a few thousand dollars. The other day, Hy sold the land for $90,000, as the reports have it. This represents a considerable profit. It is also said that Joe Weinstock, while ruminating over the newspaper reports, decided to investigate the reported conditions and hied himself to the real estate curb at Rockaway where he made a handsome cleanup.

Arrow Shusterman who operates the Cozy and Bijou at New Brunswick, has taken a cottage at Bradley Beach where he will spend the balance of the summer.

Miss Lottie Bartini, secretary to Pete Carroll, Eastern representative for Mack Sennett, was a recent visitor at the Pathe Exchange.

In Milton Kussell's New Jersey division of Famous Players Exchange, the following change has taken place on the staff. John Thurlow, who has been making the smaller Jersey towns, will take up Joe Lee's old duties, it being previouly announced that Joe Lee had resigned and gone over to Fox. Al Davis is coming down from the Albany branch to fill the position left open by the promotion given to John Thurlow.

John A. Hammell, manager of the Famous-Player Exchange, is expected to leave next week for a swing over his district.

There is another familiar face around Harry Buxbaum's office in the Capitol Theatre Building. Miss Sadie Robinson, who was with Mr. Buxbaum at First National, has recently joined the Fox Exchange staff and will renew her old duties as secretary. Miss Robinson's old position at First National is being capably filled by her sister, Rosmary. Miss Sonia Ballin, Dave Gross' secretary, has also followed over to Fox, and Al Mendelson, former booker at Famous-Players, has recently become a member of "Bux's" rapid fire staff.

Actual construction on Jack Ungerfeld's new theatre at Portchester will start this week.

William Waldholz, booker for Pathe for the past six years, has left on a two weeks' vacation. Miss Gussie Koffler will take care of his duties while he is away.

There is a fine writeup in the August first issue of the Commercial News Record relating to the ability of Harry Buxbaum, New York Exchange manager for Wm. Fox. The article harks back to the days when the film business was in its infancy and there is no doubt that Mr. Buxbaum has had a world of valuable experience. Things are humming around the Fox Exchange offices these days and since "Bux" has been there, he has closed seventy per cent of his territory.

Airtight pitching by Jakie Miller plus heavy artillery work with the bat on the part of Tom Ryan and Frank Kisis, and sensational fielding by Ed Conlan, were responsible for a 5 to 1 victory by Fox Film Corporation's baseball team over the nine representing First National Pictures, in a game played at the Clason Point Military Academy Field, Saturday, July 25th.

Miller fanned twelve of the rival batsmen and allowed but three hits, while his teammates got to J. Power, the First National twirler, for a total of ten safeties, Ryan and Kisis contributing two each. Conlan brought the Fox followers to their feet when he ran in from center field to nab a Texas Leaguer just beyond the infield.

Rawley and Company are the new owners of the Grange theatre, New York City, and the old owner of the Grange has taken over the Park theatre at 941 East 180th St.

M. A. Edelhertz, who disposed of the Hamilton theatre, city, recently took over the house again. The Hamilton had its opening last Saturday.

F. S. Wollen, of the Hendrix theatre, New York City, has left the city for a two weeks' vacation. H. A. Idsen of the Montauk, has also gone away for two weeks.

The Prudential Film Distributing Co. have moved into their new quarters in the new office building on the North East corner of 49th St. and 7th Ave. The new telephone numbers are Circle 6625 and Circle 6626. The offices are on the sixth floor, and President Joe Seider and his capable staff have certainly made an advantageous move. Visitors will have to get a pass from Al Moley from now on, for along with his other duties, Al is also guardsman of the gate. "Bring your play dates with you."

Henry Huber, formerly connected with the Yost Circuit, is now managing the West End theatre for Harry Harris.

Joe Hornstein left New York on last Friday morning for Camp Chicawah, Harrison, Maine. Mrs. Hornstein and Chester Sawyer are accompanying Joe who is taking the trip in his new Flint. He will be away for a week and in his absence Billy Gluck will be in charge. Joe had the most successful July in the history of the organization and no doubt feels that he has earned a short vacation. Recently he has sold equipment to Louis Rosenthal, well known New Jersey exhibitor, Morris Shain of the Bandbox, and several others.

Dave Solomon, with Joe Hornstein of Howell's C. E. Co. recently won a double prize. Two of them, at $100 per for bringing in the most business for the month of July.

Warner Bros. Baseball Club defeated the Pathe Exchange nine on Saturday afternoon August 1st, by a score of 9 to 4, at Bennett Field, Washington Heights. The outstanding feature of this game was the excellent twirling of Southpaw "Buddy" Morris of the Warner team, fanning eleven of the "Roosters." Good work was also accomplished by Catcher Burke and in fact every member of the Warner team handled their respective positions which aided in winning the game. The Pathe battery was Walsh, pitcher; Quinn and Gray, catchers.

Last Sunday night there was an attempted burglary at Harry Harris's Sunset theatre, 316 West 125th Street. They jimmied their way through the back door and progressed as far as to break the combination of the safe and then evidently due to inexperience in the art of cracking safes, gave up the job and went their way.

The baseball bug has bitten into the moving pictures. They are to have a league of their own which will include the principal producing companies in the metropolitan district.

Preliminary arrangements for the formation of the league will be discussed at a conference of the film baseball managers and one additional representative of eight motion picture firms to be held at Fox Film Corporation studio, 850 Tenth Avenue. The new amateur league will be formed by the following teams: Fox Film Corporation, Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Metro-Goldwyn Corp., First National Pictures, Universal, Warner Brothers, Pathe and United Artists.

The baseball fans who will attend the conference are Fred Bullock, Jr., and Frank Kizis, of Fox Film Corporation; P. H. Cohen and Arthur Loew, of Metro-Goldwyn Corp.; Dave Cassidy and Bob Powers, of Famous Players-Lasky Corp.; Ben Hyatt and Gene Cox, of Universal Pictures; Martin J. Hogan and Joe Kelly, of First National; Philip Abrahams and Joe Hummel, of Warner Brothers; George Ronan and J. E. Cashman, of Pathe; Charles E. Moyer and Harvey Du Boise, of United Artists.

San Francisco

THE Egyptian Theatre, recently opened by Max and Louis Graf, along with the Aztec theatre has been taken over by Morris L. and D. S. Markowitz, prominent San Francisco and Oakland theatre operators. The Aztec has been closed because of real estate movements. The Markowitz brothers also will take over the Pompeii theatre about to be completed and which was erected by the Graf brothers. Max and Louis Graf will devote their energies to motion picture production.

The proposed ordinance regulating theatre crowds through joint action by police and fire departments is about to be sent to the Board of Supervisors.

Manager Eaton of the Bay Point Theatre, Bay Point, is remodeling the front of his theatre.

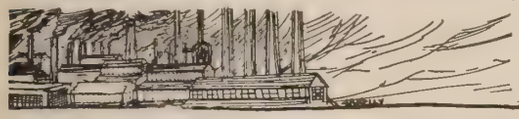
Bill Wheeler, formerly manager for Vitagraph in San Francisco for more than six years, has taken over the interests of Sid Darling of the Majestic Theatre, Willets and all are wishing Bill all kinds of success.

Jack Purvis, manager of the poster dept. of the local Universal office has returned from his vacation, all tanned up.

Kansas City

WORK was begun last week on a new motion picture theatre at the southeast corner of Twelfth street and College avenue, Kansas City, for George A. Maloney and H. H. Barrett, who have leased the building for five years from Gary M. Baltis. Mr. Barrett also operates the Colonial theatre at Thirty-ninth street and Woodland avenue. Fireproof, the new theatre will be of Spanish design with exterior finish of two-tone tan brick and tile roof. A tower will rise at either front corner. The theatre will be 60 x 115 feet. The opening is expected to be about October 1, with a name yet to be selected for the house. Interior features will include a lobby, 44 x 10 feet, a balcony capable of seating 350 persons, a blower fan cooling system and stage, with space at one side of the stage for an orchestra. The two exhibitors will pay an annual rental of $3,900 for the theatre. The house will cost $30,000 and seat 1,100.

Charles Raymond, new manager of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, recently taken over by Paramount, lost no time in slipping in a boost for Greater Movie Season when he was called upon to speak before the Advertising Club of Kansas City at a luncheon at the Hotel Baltimore the other day.



Earl H. Roraback, manager of the World-In-Motion theatre, Kansas City, last week leased the Grand theatre, formerly a legitimate house. The house, which seats about 2,000, having three balconies, will be re-opened soon as a motion picture and vaudeville theatre.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: F. G. Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Laurence Brenninger, Cozy and Crystal, Topeka, Kas.; J. R. Burford, New Burford, Arkansas City, Kas., Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; F. W. Meade, Meade theatre, Kingham, Kas.; Blaine Cook, Perkins theatre, Holton, Kas.; Ed. Peskay, Pen theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.

Long has the name of the Star theatre been familiar with theatre patrons of Ottawa, Kas., but it soon will be wiped out, the name of the theatre, which is owned by C. A. Whitney, to be changed to the Royal.

"Well, well, this is not so hard to take after all," mused Theodore P. Davis of the Liberty theatre, Parsons, Kas., as he received $50 as a second prize for the best exploitation of Universal serials in the entire country.

It not only is Greater Movie Season, but "greater hustling season" along Kansas City's movie row these days. Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manager, returned from a long trip into the territory with a satisfied look, as did C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager. Fred Hershorn, who formerly traveled the Southern Kansas territory for Universal, has been made short subject manager at that exchange. T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager, and E. C. Rhoden, Midwest Film Distributors branch manager, returned from gratifying trips into the territory. Everybody looked up to observe the tan on the face of Miss Gladys Libby, Educational contract clerk, as she returned from her vacation the other morning. C. F. Seming, Educational branch manager, failed to return from the territory, so it is presumed there is a good business reason for his absence.

Central Penn

PAINTERS have been put to work redecorating the lobby and theatre front of the Colonial, one of the leading Wilmer & Vincent picture houses in Harrisburg, as the first step in the management's plan to make extensive improvements before the start of the Fall rush of business. The electric sign over the sidewalk also is receiving several new coats of paint. Bids have been obtained from a local contractor on important alterations to the interior arrangement of the theatre which will include the erection of an additional ornamental stairway leading from the inner lobby to the balcony.

One row of seats at the rear of the first floor of the auditorium is to be removed to enlarge the space there which is to be converted into a sort of lounge and equipped with davenports, floor lamps and other comforts.

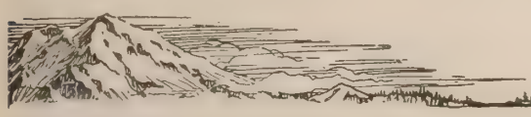
The auditorium is to be recarpeted, the lighting effects to be improved and the stage settings are to be made more ornate. Samuel A. Keubler, acting manager of the Colonial, says it is expected to have the work completed before the end of August, to do which it may be necessary to suspend performances for a few days during the more important part of the work.

Preparatory to his summer vacation trip which will be taken by motor, Charles Campbell, manager of the Victoria theatre, Harrisburg, has just effected an exchange of his Cadillac for a newer touring car of the same make. He will be away from Harrisburg the last two weeks of August and has not yet determined where his destination will be.

Samuel A. Keubler, manager of the Colonial theatre, Harrisburg; Mrs. Bertha Olesen, cashier of the Majestic theatre, and Mr. and Mrs. V. Hummel Brackenridge, constitute a party who went to spend a vacation of two weeks in a cottage at Cly, York county, on the banks of the Susquehanna River. Mr. Brackenridge is business manager of the Harrisburg Evening News.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the six Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, spent three days in the latter part of July in New York City, discussing business with the Wilmer & Vincent executives at the home office.

Floyd M. Gibble, manager of the Majestic theatre, Harrisburg, has been appointed chairman of the entertainment committee of the Lions Club of Harrisburg, for the ensuing year.



The current issue of the Bulletin published by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry, contains an article in which valuable suggestions to owners and managers of theatres and amusement halls regarding precautionary measures to minimize the danger of panic in fires or fire scares. Pointing out that in fire panics the loss of life is more often due to panic than to fire, he emphasizes the necessity of having "adequate exits and aisles of sufficient width for persons to pass quickly out of a building, and exits with bar-type panic bolts which open instantaneously."

He urges the inspection of buildings by competent engineers, and frequent tests of electric wiring and other equipment.

Elmer H. Ley, of the executive force of the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company in Harrisburg, has been made manager of a series of concerts to be given by American artists, that will be sponsored by the Penn-Harris Hotel, in the hotel ball room during the coming musical season.

The children from all the Harrisburg orphanages were the guests of Manager Sydney J. Gates, at Loew's Regent theatre, on the afternoon of July 30. The theatre management provided a souvenir for each child and they also received surprise packages from a local confectionery store.

Maxwell T. Hite, at one time a motion picture machine operator in various Harrisburg theatres, and in recent years conducting his own business as a real estate auctioneer, has opened branch offices in this line at Ann Arbor, Mich., and in an Ohio city.

Seattle

HARRY LUSTIG, recently appointed Western division manager for the Warner Brothers Vitagraph exchanges, paid his first visit to this city last week in his new capacity. During his several days here, he conferred with H. A. Black, manager of Warner Brothers new exchange, and also spent some time with the exhibitors of this territory.

Seattle was favored last week with a visit from none other than Hal Daigler, known by a majority of the theatre and film men of this territory through his former association with various theatrical enterprises in the Pacific Northwest. A number of seasons ago he was acting manager of the Blue Mouse Theatre in this city, and from there went to St. Paul, where he assumed the management of one of the large Finklestein and Ruben theatres. It is from that city that he has come at present—on a vacation trip—from his position with the large Middle West theatre organization. He spent a number of days in Seattle and other Northwest cities before returning to the Twin Cities.

The week of July 22 to August 1 was Knight Templar week in Seattle, being the celebration of triennial conclave of that fraternal organization. More than 50,000 Knights from every part of the nation were present in this city, and theatres each did their share to commemorate the event, naturally reaping additional business because of the great number of visitors that were present.

Salvatore Santaella, well known on the Pacific Coast as a pianist-director of ability, returned to the Strand Theatre last week as director of the Strand's Brilliant Concert Orchestra. Mr. Santaella formerly was associated with that house, having terminated a contract there the latter part of May.

The resignation of Charles E. Feldman as manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange was announced in this city last week, and his post at the exchange at present is being filled by A. J. Sullivan, office manager, pending the announcement of further details.

Negotiations for the building of a motion picture theatre which were reported to have been going on between the Cinema Corporation of America and the Metropolitan Building Company of this city were said last week to have been definitely abandoned.

Atlanta

OF interest to exhibitors and film men throughout the Southern territory is the announcement of the formation of the Eastern Carolina Amusement company, with headquarters in Greenville, N. C., with H. J. Paradis, well known exhibitor in North Carolina, as president, and Jack Marcus, as vice-president.

The newly organized company owns and operates the following theatres: The Oasis theatre, Wilson, N. C.; the Oasis, Kinston, N. C.; the Oasis theatre in La Grange, N. C.; the Colonial theatre, and the White theatre in Greenville, N. C.; and the Colonial theatre in Tarboro, N. C. In addition, the company holds options on many other houses and plans are now being drawn up for two new houses.

The Colonial in Tarboro, is a road show house, with a seating capacity of about 750, and a policy which calls for first run pictures and an orchestra as mainstay. All the theatres operated by the company are to run first run pictures, and are equipped to take care of road shows and vaudeville acts.

J. F. Worsley, formerly connected with the Associated Exhibitors circuit in this territory, and later with Grossett and Dunlap, publishers, with headquarters in Atlanta, has joined the real estate throng in Florida. Mr. Worsley went to Florida to take over the management of the Arcade theatre in Fort Myers. He has left that position and, in fact, the film business, to devote his time to selling real estate for the Harris Realty company. Mr. Worsley is very popular in this territory, having worked out of Atlanta for many years and has a wide circle of friends throughout the south.

Mr. Worsley's position as manager of the Arcade theatre in Fort Myers has been filled by Herbert C. Wales, formerly with Progress and more recently with Universal in Washington. This appointment has been made in the past few days, and takes effect almost immediately.

F. Haygood managing Grand Theatre, Waynesboro, Ga., for R. W. Tyson.

R. W. Tyson, who owns the Grand theatre in Waynesboro, Ga. has secured the services of a capable and experienced showman for this house, and is now able to devote his time to his numerous other interests. The Grand is now managed by F. Haygood, known to a large circle of Southeastern exhibitors, and possessing the advantages of ten years experience in the theatre business. Mr. Tyson had contemplated selling his theatre, but since he has made arrangements with Mr. Haygood to take over the active management, the Grand has remained in his possession.

Without any loss of business and with great smoothness and dispatch the local force of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation moved last Saturday night from the old offices on Luckie street to the new quarters, 110-112 Walton street.

The new headquarters are located in an absolutely fireproof two story brick building occupying 4,000 square feet of ground space. On the ground floor are the ad sales department, shipping and inspection rooms, while the second floor is devoted to the general offices including that of H. G. Ballance, district manager, Dave Prince, branch manager and Ernest Geyer, exploitation manager. The exchange contains five fire proof vaults with a maximum storage capacity for 5,000,000 feet of film or 5,000 reels. This capacity is required for the exchange serves over three hundred and fifty-eight theatres in the states of Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina.

One of the special features of the exchange is the beautifully equipped projection room, which will seat 35 people in comfort.

Added facilities for taking care of long distance phone calls from various points in the territory is the installation of three trunk lines coming into the exchange.

"Marty" Semon, manager of the Forsyth theatre, who is vacationing with his family at Ocean Grove, dropped a line to Willard C. Patterson, of the Metropolitan, this week, to the effect that he was spending "the week-end and everything else" at the attractive summer resort.

Miss Lois Davis, of the local Metro-Goldwyn force, is on her vacation. She drove to Asheville last week, and will return Monday of next week.

Miss Ruth Brown, connected with Metro-Goldwyn's Atlanta office went to Davis-Fischer sanitarium last Saturday for a tonsil operation. She is taking her vacation now to recuperate.

Ernest Geyer, Paramount's live-wire exploitation man in this territory came in from Cornelia and Tocoa, Saturday of last week, and expects to spend the entire month of August in Atlanta concentrating on Greater Movie Season activities.

George H. Dumond, general manager of Warner Brothers theatres is in Charlotte, N. C. this week. He is making a tour of the North Carolina circuit and will spend several days in Charlotte.

E. C. Pearce, formerly owner of the Amuse-You theatre in Winston-Salem, N. C., has been appointed manager of the New Broadway theatre in Columbia, S. C.

S. W. Williamson, formerly of the New Broadway theatre in Columbia, S. C., has been transferred to the Lexington theatre in Lexington, S. C., as resident manager.

H. R. Kistler, of Pathe, was in Florida last week, and put over a big real estate deal through J. F. Worsley, with the Harris Realty company.

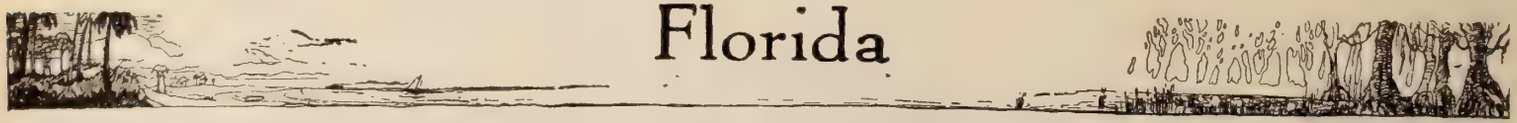
H. G. Butner, of Educational Exchange, is back in Atlanta after a successful trip to the West Coast. Mr. Butner returned the latter part of last week with the news that big theatre activities are under way on the coast and that business looks big for this season.

D. O. Stewart, who opened the Airdome theatre in Tampa, Fla., recently closed it after several days of rain, and will not reopen until after September 1st, when the rainy season is expected to be at an end.

John Ezell, formerly connected with Creole Enterprises, before the merger with Southern States corporation, has now joined the army of fortune hunters in Florida, and is entering the real estate field on his own hook.

Oscar Oldknow, manager of Liberty Film Distributing corporation, is in New Orleans this week, visiting that branch of his company. He will return in a few days.

C. L. Hackworth, who operates three houses in Huntsville, Alabama, came into Atlanta this week for a few days, and visited his long list of friends on film row and in the Atlanta theatres during his stay.



Fred C. Quimby, short subject salesmanager for Fox Film corporation, came into from New Orleans last Saturday and spent two days in Atlanta, conferring with George R. Allison, of the local exchange, and visiting his many friends on film row. Mr. Quimby, who is a frequent visitor in this territory, is one of the most popular men in the industry, and is recognized everywhere as a thoroughly capable film man. Mr. Quimby remained in Atlanta over Sunday, leaving that evening for New York.

Mrs. Henrietta Walker Roberts, who is temporarily handling the editorial end of the Weekly Film Review, in the absence of the editor, Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, has been absent from the office this week on account of the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Henrietta Walker. Mrs. Walker had been ill for some time, but had apparently recovered somewhat. Her death which occurred Sunday noon, came as a distinct shock to her family and wide circle of friends. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Alex Keese, who has held the position of musical director at the Howard theatre for the past nine months, has left Atlanta for Dallas, Texas, where he will take over the directorship of the orchestra of the Palace theatre.

J. T. Hilten manager of the Odeon theatre, Birmingham, Alabama, has just collected his third cash prize in the Carl Laemmle serial prize contest. Mr. Hilten cashed in about six weeks ago, on the first prize of $100, and two weeks later secured a $50 prize on a follow-up campaign on a serial. Last week he was voted a $25 prize on another exploitation stunt on another serial.

Everett S. Haynes, manager of the Central Park theatre, Pratt City, Ala., opened that new house last Saturday. Despite a heavy downpour he played to capacity all day, according to Roy S. Campbell, Universal salesman from Alabama, who was in Atlanta over the week-end.

Florida

VACATION days are here, and most all of the show folks of Tampa are arranging to take a whirl at the annual rest period. This week J. H. McLaughlin, manager of the Franklin, accompanied by his wife, who is cashier at the Victory, left for a two weeks' stay at Ashville. Charles A. Sappal, president of the Maceo Amusement Co., of Tampa, and his wife left for a motor trip of two weeks over an attractive route.

The Circle at Sebring had a fire, caused by the explosion of a reel of film. William Johnson, the operator, and S. Reynolds, the manager, fought the fire and succeeded in keeping it confined to the booth until the fire department arrived. There was no panic, the audience leaving in an orderly manner, and it is stated that the house was emptied in less than three minutes after the alarm.

The Crystalite, at Crystal River, also had a fire, which was caused by defective wiring. A piece of covered wire, directly over the machine, caught on fire, and dropped onto the machine, ignited the film, and burned up an entire eight reel feature, besides quite a little damage to the machines and booth, before the fire was extinguished.

Sebring is to have another theatre. The old Graham residence, which occupied a large lot at the corner of Pine street and Ridgewood drive, is now being razed, and the theatre building is to occupy this lot. The building is to be of the Spanish type, which is the prevailing style in Florida, made of tile and stucco, and space is provided for fifteen stores besides the theatre. A. C. Price, of Bradenton, is the architect.

Milwaukee

PAUL SCHULZ, formerly working out of the Minneapolis branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has been transferred to the newly created Milwaukee branch, from where he will travel the Upper Michigan Peninsula in a sales capacity. This territory is a portion of that incorporated in the field of the new Milwaukee branch office. All departments of the new branch are now under one roof, removal into the neat new quarters having been completed during the past week. They rank among the very most attractive and most efficiently equipped distributing branch offices in the Badger metropolis.

The Alhambra Theatre at Milwaukee is rounding out its career as an independently owned house with flying colors. On August 1, the big theatre will be taken over by its new owners, who will operate for two weeks under the present policy before closing down for elaborate remodeling, to reopen August 29.

E. J. Bregger, operator of the Gem Theatre at Crystal Falls, Mich., made his appearance at Milwaukee's film row during the past week, doing business and swapping yarns with his many friends among the distributors.

Stanley Brown, live-wire manager of Saxe's Strand Theatre at Milwaukee, has left for a two weeks' vacation in the northland. His first stop was at Grand Forks, N. D., where he visited with his mother, going from there to Calgary, Can., where he will show his wife and little son the house in which he began his theatrical career as a stage hand.

Considerable interest was manifested among picture men here during the past few days in the announcement that two large new houses are to be opened in this territory. Close to $200,000 is to be invested in a new theatre in North Milwaukee, while a $60,000 house is being planned for Milwaukee's East Side. Information regarding the new theatres emanated from architects' offices, and no disclosure was made of the backers of the building projects or of the probable operators.

Neil Duffy, manager of the Elite Theatre at Appleton, Wis., is taking a prominent part in the Northern Wisconsin Golf Tournament. 'Tis said he swings a nasty club, and the boys are betting on his coming out a winner.

Sam Abrams, manager of the Milwaukee branch of F. B. O. paid a flying visit to Indianapolis last week, where a sudden illness prevented his wife from coming to Milwaukee to join her husband. As soon as she was past danger he returned to his office here where things are stirring in preparation for the expected visit of Colvin Brown, vice-president in charge of F. B. O. distribution and sales, and M. J. Weisfeldt, division manager. Pearl Nadolny, booker at the F. B. O. offices is enjoying a vacation in the cool of the Wisconsin lake region, while Art Roberts, assistant branch manager, is diligently sweating over her work added to his own.

F. L. Good, for the past six months affiliated with F. B. O. as a salesman out of Milwaukee, has resigned that position to join the new Warner Brothers sales force. A successor is soon to be appointed for him at the F. B. O. office.

Cecil E. Maberry, district manager for the Producers Distributing Corporation, visited at the Milwaukee office last week, where he conferred with Branch Manager Charlie Lundgren in reference to the establishment of a larger office here. The new headquarters are soon to be started, and when completed will be among the best in the city.

Workmen will soon start taking out the old organ from the Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, to make room for the splendid new instrument recently purchased by the Saxe Enterprises for the house. Joie Lichter's Record Makers have been re-engaged for the Strand orchestra pit, where they have reigned supreme for the past three years.

Dale Larisch, assistant manager of Saxe's Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, is strutting around with an expanded chest these days. He shot a 78 on the 18 hole Grant Park Golf Course last week. And why shouldn't he? He's been hobnobbing about the links since he's eight years old.

Cincinnati

E. A. DODGE has opened his new Theater called the Sharon, at Sharon, O. Mr. Dodge also controls the Opera House at New Richmond and the Temple at Whittensville, O.

T. M. Elliot of the Sunset Theater, Charleston, W. Va., was in the city last week making arrangements for his fall program.

Paul Krieger representing First National in Louisville, Ky., spent several days in the city last week in company with Ralph Kinsler of F. B. O. Ralph welcomed the guest as he has been very lonesome since his buddy L. B. Wilson manager of the Liberty, Covington, Ky., went on his vacation.

The local Paramount office is one hard to enter these days. The reason for it all is that Ruth Greenley, an inspector for the exchange, won the beauty prize at Coney Island during the Sixth Street Business Men's Outing last week. The honor was not empty for it carried a cash prize also amounting to fifty dollars. Now all the exchanges in the Broadway Film Building as well as the others in the city are contemplating of holding a beauty contest.

George Ray, has disposed of his Colonial Theater in Washington, C. H. O. and assumed a position as manager with theaters in the South controlled by Famous Players.

Catherine Flavin has resigned from the Famous Players office force and will remove to Chicago to enter into some other field. Laura Lock, maintenance clerk for the same firm has also resigned to enter the printing business in Covington, Ky.

Gladys Roames the pretty operator for Universal is spending her vacation in the Kentucky Mountains.

Jess Wilkox of the Greenbrier Theater, McDowell, W. Va., spent several days around film row last week.

Ted Peckras of the Dreamland Theater, Columbus, O. was another out of town exhibitor to honor the exchanges with a visit.

Cecil Tipton, general manager of the Hyman Theatrical interests with offices in Huntington, W. Va., is spending his vacation in Michigan hunting wild game. Cecil is quite proficient with his blunderbuss and expects to bag a lot of game while away.

L. J. Freckas of the Eastland and Grand Theaters, Ironton, O., bought several large pictures for fall release while in the city last week.

L. Kinsler of the Elite and Muzas Theaters, Dayton, O., was another of the film purchasers around film row recently.

J. S. Davis of the Westland Theater, Portsmouth, O., renewed old acquaintances while here last week.

C. A. Smith of the Sherman Theatre, Chillicothe, O., won the Chillicothe Golf Tournament last week. He is now considered in the same class as a golfer with Manny Nagle of the local Paramount office.

Milton Kress who has been associated with his father Harry Kress in the latter's various theatrical enterprises will shortly enter the Paramount Managers School to prepare himself for a theatrical career. Milt should make good, as his father is considered one of the best showmen in this part of the country.

Ray Frankel of the Frankel interests and N. Schechter in charge of publicity for the firm returned from a visit East last week.

Denver

E. W. FOOTMAN, manager of the Burns theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo., and W. E. Renzelman, former manager of the Wray Theatre, Wray, Colo., were visitors in the City during the past week. Mr. Footman was here buying service while Mr. Renzelman was scouting around looking for a good theatre to buy.

Al Johnson, until recently the assistant manager for Fox has accepted a position as salesman for Famous Players. Al will cover the New Mexico territory.

George Wygant, assistant manager of Metro-Goldwyn, is in Seattle, Wash., attending the convention of the Knight Templars.

Ed Anderson of the Colonial Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., and Bill Delay, operating the theatre in Lusk, Wyo., were visitors in film row during the past week.

C. M. Van Horn, manager of Pathe, returned Monday from Salt Lake City where he attended a convention held for all western managers of Pathe.

The Palm theatre, Denver, suffered considerable damage by fire a few days ago when film became ignited. The fire was confined to the projection booth and was soon extinguished by the fire department. Eight reels of film were almost completely destroyed by fire and water.

Colorado Springs and Ft. Collins, were favored by visits from a number of managers during the past week. Those visiting Colorado Springs were J. H. Ashby, First National; Eugene Gerbase, Universal; S. D. Weisbaum, Film Booking Offices. Those visiting Ft. Collins were R. J. Garland of Metro-Goldwyn, and Chas. Gilmour of Warner Bros.

Harry Levy, Metro-Goldwyn, H. E. Brooker, Fox, and C. E. Pace of Metro-Goldwyn, are salesmen just returned to Denver for a few days' stay after successful trips into the territory.

Lou Marcus was a visitor in Denver during the past week. After spending a few days with the local exchange of Famous Players-Lasky he returned to Salt Lake City. Mr. Marcus is district manager for Paramount.

Frank Bronte, owner and manager of the Gem Theatre, Yuma, Colorado is seriously ill. He is preparing to leave for Rochester, Minn., where he will submit to another operation. His many friends in the Denver territory wish him a speedy recovery.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Her Sister From Paris

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

THIS highly risqué story is the best vehicle Constance Talmadge has had in many a moon. A comedy drama of the lighter type, at times bordering on farce, it is told with the touches of sophistication belonging to the new school of picture-making. Hans Kraly's script gives Miss Talmadge every opportunity to display her talents in breezy fashion.

There can be no doubt that the action skates at times on very thin ice. How to win back a husband's love, through vamping him when he does not know he is being vamped, might very well be put down as the thread running through the plot.

Reactions of a theatre audience should be the reviewer's unfailing guide to accuracy in reporting what a picture is and how much it means at the box-office. The audience is, of course, the test. It means far more than the reviewer's personal opinion, favorable or unfavorable as that may be. In the case of "Her Sister from Paris," there could be no question about the verdict of the audience by; whom the picture was seen. Shown at the Playhouse, Rye, N. Y., the other night, the film brought a decided yes.

The Rye audience responded to all the dramatic situations and burst into laughter at the pointed comic contrasts of character and plot. The suggestive situations were received with the customary sophistication that seems to be prevalent in this day and age. One of the critical film men present observed that a good many of the spectators were likely finding in the picture reflections of their own experiences, distilled, of course, into dramatic action, but reflections nevertheless of what had happened or might have happened to them at one time or another.

It is all very well done. The continuity is remarkably fine. Miss Talmadge demonstrates that she ranks very high both as a comedienne and pantomimist, if any new proof of that were needed.

THEME. Light comedy drama in which a wife "vamps" her own husband to win back his love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent staging and smooth running story. The scenes backstage and in the theatre. The surprise climax. Excellent supporting cast, with particular credit due to Ronald Colman.

DIRECTION. Handles players and material so as to get all possible value out of situations. On the whole, a remarkably fine piece of direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Opportunity for dance prologues, style shows and window displays. Miss Talmadge wears some beautiful gowns and this gives the chance for hook-ups with department stores, etc. Stress the fact that this is a picture which will appeal especially to woman.

DRAWING POWER. A first-run picture for high-class audiences. As for the family trade, that is another question.

SUMMARY. A remarkably well-constructed light comedy-drama. An admirable vehicle for Constance Talmadge, with this point always to be borne in mind: it will please the sophisticated but it may offend others.

THE CAST

Helen Weyringer	Constance Talmadge
"La Perry"	Constance Talmadge
Joseph Weyringer	Ronald Colman
Robert Well	George K. Arthur
Bertha	Margaret Mann

Story by Hans Kraly. Directed by Sidney Franklin.

SYNOPSIS. When Joseph becomes indifferent to her, Helen leaves, and, meeting her sister "La Perry," decides to impersonate the latter in order to win back her husband's love. Joseph and his friend, Robert, both invite the supposed "La Perry" to supper and both make amusing confessions to her. A triangular flirtation develops. Believing his own wife is far away, Joseph makes love to her. She visits his house, and finally promises him her favor if he will admit that he has treated his wife shamefully. The farce is kept going by the fact that she flirts with Robert and thus arouses Joseph's interest still more. In the end, she reveals herself as Joseph's own wife.

Evolution

(Urban-Kineto-Red Seal—4200 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edwin G. Johnston)

HERE'S a picture that every up-to-date exhibitor ought to book—and show—just as soon as possible. Not that it won't be just as interesting several months from now, but with the tremendous nation wide publicity that the newspapers have given the subject of evolution thru the Scopes trial at Dayton, this five reel feature with the proper exploitation, should pack them in, and now is the time to cash in on it.

The story has to deal with the origin of man and it is presented in a remarkably clear manner, simple enough for anyone to understand. Each step of the development of this planet is shown, going back to the swirling star dust, the formation of the earthly mass and the gradual cooling of it by the waters. Then the earliest forms of single cell life are pictured, step by step, taking a more life like form. There has been considerable cooperation from the Museum of Natural History and the development of the prehistoric animals is presented in a fine way. Next in line are apes, baboons and monkeys and so it goes, right down to the first male specimen, the "Java Man." This is followed by specimens of man on thru the different periods, and in reality the production reels off like a well arranged synopsis of Well's Outline of History, that huge book that so many would like to read but are loathe to tackle on account of its length.

The photography is excellent, though the camera man is not named and Max Fleischer has handled a difficult subject in a way that should earn him lots of credit. The entire film has been edited in a way that practically any audience cannot fail to grasp the entire theme.

As a whole, the picture is not only interesting but highly instructive. One of the last sub-titles is, "Some call it Evolution, others call it God's Work," so those in the audience can think the matter over and decide for themselves whether Man was a creation, or whether he reached his present state of development by such a process as is shown in this picture.

THEME. The development of the earth, plants, animal life, and man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fitting prologue, the formation of the earth, and capable arrangement.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Everyone in the entire country has either been reading or has had someone tell them about the Scopes trial that was held at Dayton, Tenn. The newspapers have been full of it—use them. Also, tell your public to see the picture and draw their own conclusions as to what it was all about. This picture fits right in with the whole question and you can't fail to stir up lots of interest if the proper effort is used.

DRAWING POWER. A well edited, excellently photographed film that should do well in the average house with the right amount of exploitation. Could be used as a feature of a program but should go better in conjunction.

SUMMARY. This is a timely subject that has been nationally discussed on account of the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., and while there is'nt any cast, unless the cell life, fish and animals can be called such, there does'nt seem to be need of any. The continuity is excellent and everything follows along easily and naturally. These points combined with photography that is exceptionally good will go a long way toward filling the bill.

SYNOPSIS. There is a fitting prologue showing the present day progress of man and the modern achievements that have been wrought by his hand. Then the battle of the elements, the formation of the earth and it's cooling off. The early cell life and the transformation from marine life to mammal. Next, the prehistoric monsters and their battles, Apes, baboons and orang-outangs fellow in order and right along to the cave dwellings and the first specimen of man.

Lorraine of the Lions

(Universal-Jewel—6700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A FANTASTIC and improbable yarn, but none the less, shot through as it is with melodramatic punches, big thrill stuff and a generous measure of comedy, the changes are all in favor of the film registering A I as a box office attraction. There's quite a run on pictures in which animals, both of the tame and wild variety figure largely, and in this case a gorilla of mighty thews and muscle is an impressive, if not alluring personality.

Yet despite his ferocious appearance this beast, who by the way, is really Fred Humes, disguised in hairy skin and a set of gleaming tusks, gets a large amount of sympathy from the spectators, after he has saved the little heroine's life on several occasions and generally comported himself as a regular guardian. But he is shot at the finish and dies, a victim of untoward circumstances. Patsy Ruth Miller is the heroine who is washed ashore on a deserted island with her gorilla friend and later found by her grandfather, through the instrumentality of Don Mackey, a crystal-gazer, who wins Patsy at the finish. The jungle stuff is uncommonly well handled, the tropical scenery strikingly colorful and Miss Miller gives a performance which is remarkable for restraint and wistful appeal. A bunch of lions are also introduced, but have little to do with the action, the good, old gorilla being principally in evidence. Norman Kerry plays the handsome lover creditably and an excellent supporting cast is in evidence.

THEME. Jungle melodrama, with gorilla as one of central figures and romantic love interest.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Shipwreck scene and landing of circus survivors on island. The beautiful photography, including impressive jungle scenes. Surprisingly lifelike illusion of gorilla as portrayed by Fred Humes. The comedy numbers. Love affair of heroine Lorraine and Don. Storm effects when gorilla is killed.

DIRECTION. Has obtained splendid atmospheric shades, piled up the thrills sky-high, interpolated comedy gags in timely fashion and worked up to a tremendously exciting finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There's an occult turn to the tale which you might use in billing, building on the crystal-gazing incident whereby heroine is found. For the rest, lay especial emphasis on the wonderful jungle scenes, the odd story of the little girl who was reared to maturity by a friendly gorilla, the sweeping melodramatic thrills and romance which develops when the girl meets the man who was responsible for her rescue and safe return to civilized life. Feature Patsy Ruth Miller and Norman Kerry, not forgetting to mention Fred Hume's marvelous characterization of the huge ape.

DRAWING POWER. Has a general appeal, will entertain even the highbrow fans, and score a hit with the great majority. A sure-fire card for juvenile trade.

SUMMARY. Despite its wildly imaginative plot, this ranks as an exceptionally good melodrama and a credit to all concerned in its production. The camera technique is perfect and the views of the island wilderness are particularly impressive.

THE CAST

Don Mackay	Norman Kerry
Lorraine	Patsy Ruth Miller
Bimi	Fred Humes
Lorraine, age seven	Doreen Turner
Colby	Harry Todd
Hartley	Philo McCullough
Livingston, Sr	Joseph J. Dowling

Author, Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Photographed by Virgil Noil.

SYNOPSIS. John Livingston's father disowned his son when latter weds circus performer, but agrees to care for their seven-year old girl, Lorraine. Ship with circus aboard is wrecked, Lorraine saved by Bimi, a gorilla, and landed on deserted island with elephant and cage of lions. John's father, through agency of crystal-gazer Don Mackey, finds Lorraine, who has grown to maturity under the care of Bimi. They take her to San Francisco. Don falls in love with her. During a storm Bimi gets panic-stricken, breaks out of cage in which he is confined, seizes Lorraine and runs off with her. Don, fearing for Lorraine's life, pursues, and rescues her. Bimi is shot and killed, much to the regret of his mistress. Don is about to go away, but is restrained by Lorraine and they are united.

The Unholy Three

(Metro-Goldwyn—6848 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A CROOK melodrama of the finest! Freak characters, oddly fascinating, riot and ramp through a perfectly terrifying atmosphere of mystery, violence and intrigue, which finally swirls into regeneration sunshine, so far as two of the arch-conspirators are concerned. We get the unique combination of a giant, a dwarf who later masquerades as a baby, a ventriloquist and girl pickpocket, with a cheap museum background to begin with, later merged in a criminal confederation operating from a bird-store headquarters. Matt Moore is their clerk, and the only innocent person in the bunch.

The ventriloquist wants to make a financial killing, so that he can wed Rosie, the light-fingered expert, his comrades are simply "out for the stuff", but Rosie complicates matters by falling in love with clerk Hector. Throughout, the suspense tension never slackens, even in the comedy situations where parrots for sale converse sociably with possible purchasers, the ventriloquist being responsible for their chattering powers. Removed to private homes the birds naturally turn out dumbbells, and Lon Chaney, disguised as an aged woman, goes to the residences of the aggrieved customers to demonstrate the talkative ability of the Pollies. She, or he, wheels the dwarf along in a baby carriage and later spies out the locations. These sequences, including a murder committed by the giant, are finely worked out, and there's an awful thrill toward the end in which a gigantic goril'a figures. Lon Chaney carries off chief dramatic honors by his portrayal of the ventriloquist, but the acting as a whole is on an extraordinarily high plane of artistic efficiency.

THEME. Crook melodrama, enlivened by comedy values, bizarre settings and quaint characters.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The museum episode. Scene in bird-store where parrots display wonderful talking powers. Lon Chaney's exploits in female disguise. Rosie and clerk romance. The murder. Situation where dwarf lets loose gorilla, which kills him and giant. The freak characters. Court-room scene.

DIRECTION. Suspense well developed and maintained. Has created wonderful atmosphere and registers thrills with tremendous "kick" to them. Kept continuity intact and action moving at smooth, uniform pace.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill this as an underworld romance of immense melodramatic strength, altogether different from the usual thing and offering some of the strangest characters that ever flitted across a screen. Stress Lon Chaney's performance as a woman, play up the gorilla episode, and feature Mae Busch, Matt Moore, Victor McLaglen, Harry Earles and Mathew Betz.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any theatre, big or little.

SUMMARY. Originality of plot, weird atmosphere and oddity of characters combine to make this an unique and welcome screen contribution. It possesses mass appeal in the highest degree, gripping and holding attention of spectators from beginning to end.

THE CAST

Ventriloquist	Lon Chaney
Rosie O'Grady	Mae Busch
Hector McDonald	Matt Moore
Hercules	Victor McLaglen
Tweedledee	Harry Earles
Regan	Matthew Betz
Jeweler	John Merkyl
John Arlington	Charles Wellsley

Author, C. A. Robbins. Directed by Tod Browning. Photographed by David Kesson.

SYNOPSIS. Three dime museum freaks, giant Hercules, ventriloquist Professor Echo and dwarf Tweedledee are performing while their confederate Rosie picks pockets in the crowd. The midget's bad temper leads to a disturbance ending in a free-for-all fight and the three freaks form a criminal band, Echo being anxious to make a fortune and wed Rosie. They rent a bird store, where the ventriloquist makes the parrots talk to customers. Later, disguised as a woman and wheeling the dwarf in a baby carriage, Echo visits homes of aggrieved purchasers of now silent parrots to demonstrate the birds' talking ability, and the dwarf marks down places where later the trio enter and rob. Meanwhile, Rosie and Hector, the store clerk, fall in love. The giant and dwarf commit a murder and fly to the mountains accompanied by a gorilla. They quarrel, the dwarf lets loose the gorilla, which kills them both. The reformed Rosie and Hector wed, Echo resumes museum career.

Sally of the Sawdust

(United Artists—9500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BIG commercial and artistic success, this latest D. W. Griffith production shines forth on the film horizon as does a planet among stars, when compared with the average attraction. There is no better proof of a feature's quality, especially from the straight box office angle, than when it stirs an audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. And during its initial presentation at the Strand Theatre, New York, "Sally Of The Sawdust" exerted such magical sway over the spectators' emotions that they alternately laughed, wept and cheered with absolute abandon as the story unfolded its varied moods of sentimental lure, mirth, pathos and dramatic intensity.

Undoubtedly Mr. Griffith has added yet another notable achievement to the long list of screen triumphs for which he has stood sponsor. Taking a simple tale, he has invested it with such wealth of heart interest, mingled with merry comedy, such breathless suspense, and mounted it so ingeniously that the most hardened critic can scarcely fail to give generous credit to his superb craftmanship. As to the acting—the characterizations by W. C. Field, as the good-natured, rascally, lovable old circus faker, Professor McGargle; and Carol Dempster, as the vivacious, but pathetic little Sally—are marvels of mirthful and poignant appeal, and the support is well worthy of the talented principals.

THEME. Comedy drama, with realistic circus atmosphere and romantic interest.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent photography. Life of the circus. Field's irrestible comedy. Sally and Pop's adventures beating way on train. Carnival episodes. Sally's love affair. Their arrest. Courtroom sequences and identification of Sally as Judge Foster's grand-daughter. Happy finale.

DIRECTION. Intelligent at all points. Has manipulated his characters with unerring skill, handled dramatic situations and comedy with perfect understanding, and scored heavily in cleverly contrived climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely praise this as one of the season's really great pictures, tell your patrons about its heart-touching pathos, its bright, crisp comedy and list it as a guaranteed Griffith film masterpiece.

DRAWING POWER. There can be no argument as to the ability of this attraction to please. In any kind of house, large or small. in any community, it will prove a box office magnet of irresistible pulling strength. In a sense, it is bound to advertise itself, for those who see it will not rest content until they have induced their friends to do likewise.

SUMMARY. Once in a blue moon a picture makes its appearance which registers so vividly on the imagination that thereafter, for a considerable period, the reviewer unconsciously turns to it for purposes of comparison. This is a case in point!

THE CAST

Sally	Carol Dempster
Professor Eustace McGargle	W. C. Fields
Peyton Lennox	Alfred Lunt
Judge Henry L. Foster	Erville Alderson
Mrs. Foster	Effie Shannon
Lennox Sr.	Charles Hammond
The Detective	Roy Applegate
Miss Vinton	Florence Fair
Society Leader	Marie Shotwell

Adapted From Stage Play by Dorothy Donnelly. Scenario by Forrest Halsey. Directed by D. W. Griffith.

SYNOPSIS. Professor Eustace McGargle is a side-show entertainer with a traveling circus. A young widow trapeze performer, before dying, confides her little girl Sally to McGargle, revealing that she, the mother, is the daughter of a good family, disowned because she wed a circus man. Sally grows up with the circus. McGargle determines to find her people. The circus goes broke. Sally and McGargle beat their way on a train to a town where they get work at a carnival. Peyton Lennox, son of wealthy parents sees and falls in love with Sally. Judge Foster warns society folk running carnival to watch McGargle. Old man Lennox discovers his son's infatuation, appears and denounces the girl. Young Lennox dresses Sally up and has her attend a masked social function. She makes a hit, but when unmasked is ordered out. The professor is arrested for cheating in a gambling game and Sally taken as an accomplice. He is freed, rushes to where Sally is being tried before Judge Foster and proves her identity as the Judge's granddaughter. A general reunion follows.

A Fighting Romeo

(Davis Distributing Division, Inc.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE usual type of standard Westerner, with a ruggedly honest hero, bad men and heroine sorely in need of a strong arm to protect her, cavorting around the "wide open spaces," bullets, whizzing regardless, and broad expansions of plain and mountain scenery for background. Also, a tenderfoot chap, big on brag and short of courage, who finally "finds himself" and redeems previous cowardice by rescuing said hero and heroine at the point of an unloaded Colt, when they are captives in the hands of the villain contingent.

All rather conventional as regards plot, but so far as gunplay, stress of physical combat and fast action go, there's enough and to spare, and fans who care more for this sort of thing than mere story values will no doubt find it sufficiently entertaining. They could have improved the film a whole lot as an amusement factor if a few jolts of comedy had been thrown in to relieve the melodramatic strain. Five straight reels of scrapping and general heroics, without a single moment of joviality are apt to sit hard on the toughest mental digestion. Even the situation where the ancient stunt of having the tenderfoot dance to the accompanying rattle of a six-shooter is utilized, hasn't a shadow of humor about it, for even the saturnine laughs of the victim's persecutors, suggest malice, rather than reckless fun. But Al. Ferguson works hard in the lead and deserves a credit for his energy, if nothing else, and the support is adequate.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Pleasing scenic shots. Episode where Dave Matthews goes East, rescues Jim Warner, son of wealthy friend, from evil associates and takes him West. Jim's introduction to heroine, his bragging propensities and exposure of cowardice before girl. Dave's adventures with rustlers, kidnapping of heroine, and Dave's arrival at cabin where she is held. Trapping of pair by rustlers, and incident where Jim holds up captors with empty gun and redeems himself.

DIRECTION. Has done very well with none too original plot, avoided padding and accentuated thrills with good effect.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise as fast-moving Westerner, with plenty of hard riding and fighting angles, as well as interesting love affair. Feature Al Ferguson, who is fast becoming popular as hero in this particular sort of picture.

DRAWING POWER. Is best suited to the needs of the smaller houses where patrons are strong for rough-and-ready melodrama. Or could be utilized to good advantage as half of double bill.

SUMMARY. Picture one of a numerous class, each of which bears faithful family resemblance to its predecessors. There is nothing new in either plot or development, but the five reels skip along so briskly and players work with such vigor that the net result is fairly interesting.

THE CAST

Dave Matthews	Al Ferguson
Helen McMasters	Elaine Eastman
Buck Connors	Paul Emery
Henry Warner	George Routh
James Warner	F. Schumann-Heink
Gerald Mertagh	William Dills

Author, J. J. Fleming. Directed by Al Ferguson.

SYNOPSIS. Helen McMasters, owner of Paradise ranch, is constantly losing cattle through rustler depredations. Her foreman, Dave Matthews, suspects Buck Connors of being thieves' leader, but has been unable to get evidence to that effect. Dave goes East with shipment of cattle and calls on Henry Warner, ex-ranch owner, now a wealthy man. Warner is worried over the dissipated habits of his son Jim. Dave, intervenes by accident between Jim and a couple of crooks who are fleecing him and takes him West. Jim brags considerably to Helen regarding his courage, but shows the white feather when confronted by Connors. Helen finds one of the gang branding a steer belonging to her. She is captured and held prisoner in a deserted cabin. Jim accidentally overhears a conversation which reveals Helen's whereabouts, overcomes his timidity and goes to aid her. Dave reaches the cabin first, but is surprised by Connors and three of his men. Connors is about to dispose of Dave for good, when Jim gets the drop on the outlaws and forces their surrender. It transpires that his gun was unloaded. Jim becomes foreman and Dave weds Helen.

The Wild Bull's Lair

(F. B. O.—5280 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A WESTERN of a rather different kind from its contemporaries, this picture offers thrills and excitement enough to insure it a hearty reception wherever the red blood stuff holds the fans. That the plot isn't in the least bit probable doesn't matter, for what admirers of this species of entertainment want is action plus—and they get it with a vengeance while the hero is whipping redskins, aiding a lady in distress, bull-dogging a bull and in general comporting himself as a two-fisted, hard-riding, fast-shooting star of movie open-air melodrama should.

Also, there's the celebrated horse Silver King, as great an attraction as ever, who seems to grow wiser with each successive appearance on the screen. The juveniles will surely enjoy this film, as well as adult admirers of Westerns, all the more because, besides the fighting thrills, director Del Andrews has managed to introduce several comedy scenes into the melodramatic trend of the tale which brighten it up a whole lot. These humor episodes bring to the fore a tenderfoot Easterner, whose fashionable clothing makes him a thing of wonderment to the untutored native sons, pretty ancient jests, some of them, but they'll get the laughs anyhow. Among other intelligent feats performed by Silver King, that in which he brings his master out of Slumberland by seizing a towel, soaking it in water and laying it on Fred's countenance, deserves especial mention.

THEME. Western melodrama, with college-bred Indian reverting to type and training wild bull, as well as leading redskins in warfare against whites.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Silver King's exploits. Comedy in which Eastern tenderfoot participates and scene where hero mistakes a cow for the wild bull. Incident where hero finds his girl's father at mercy of bull, attacks and wrestles animal down. The fights with Indians and impressive Western atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Has done very well with lightly-constructed plot, bringing out thrills sharply, providing good comedy relief and keeping action going at brisk pace.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Fred Thomson has a big following among the fans who patronize Westerns and you can boost him and his wonder-horse Silver King to the limit. Feature the scene where Fred sets a trap for Indians by having horse pull on string attached to gun-trigger, so that whenever a redskin shows up against the skyline he topples over with a bullet in him. Stress the Indian battles and Thomson's victory over wild bull.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller theatres. Is bound to please wherever Westerns are in demand and has particular appeal for the children, owing to the presence of the renowned Silver Horse in the cast.

SUMMARY. Picture is out of the common as Westerns go, and cleverly acted, Thomson being surrounded by a remarkably good lineup of supporting players. The result is better characterizations than are usually found in this class of feature and the star is seen at his best.

THE CAST

Dan Allen	Fred Thomson
Eleanor Harbison	Catherine Bennett
James Harbison	Herbert Prior
Yuma	Frank Abbott
Red Fang	Frank Hagney
Silver King	Himself

Author, Marion Jackson. Directed by Del Andrews. Photographed by Ross Fisher.

SYNOPSIS. Red Fang, Indian college graduate, goes back to his people and incites them to warfare against the white men. He heads a band of redskins who live on Skull Mountain, and kill settlers whenever they get a chance. James Harbison, cattleman, has a wild bull from which he breeds a cross-strain of ferocious cattle. The bull escapes and Red Fang keeps him in his lair. The Government sends Dan Allen to investigate and he falls in love with Harbison's daughter, Eleanor. Red Fang informs Harbison that he has found his missing bull, persuades him to come to the stockade and demands Eleanor in marriage. Harbison refuses and is tied to a tree. Eleanor comes in response to a message sent by her father and is also made prisoner. Dan arrives just in time to subdue the bull single-handed, as the animal is about to gore the girl and her father.

The Danger Signal

(Columbia Production—5502 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE elements of human interest and sympathy are widely developed in this production, which isn't by any means so melodramatic as the title would suggest. The big thrill centers in the scene where a runaway locomotive threatens destruction to an express train headed in an opposite direction, when the hero, riding a motor-cycle races against the thundering engine, beats it to a switch, and throws the lever just in time to avert a collision. Down a sidetrack the runaway dashes and smashes into an empty car, while the passenger train whizzes by unharmed.

But apart from this well filmed and breath-taking situation the picture dwells chiefly on the domestic troubles of the hero's mother, a widow, whose husband married her against the will of his millionaire father, and was accordingly disinherited. The grandfather takes charge of one of her twin boys, Ralph, who grows up an utter cad, while Robert, the remaining son, is his mother's only stay and comfort. Complications are brought about by having both lads employed on the railroad of which the old man is president, with Ralph, the bad egg, an assistant superintendent. Also, they both fall in love with the same girl. It is, of course, sufficiently obvious that something will happen to square Robert with the stern grandfather, but the film holds its grip well, just the same, with Jane Novak giving a smoothly-balanced, appealing portrayal of the mother, and Robert Gordon, scoring as the hero.

THEME. Domestic drama, interspersed with melodramatic punches which include a near-collision scene on railroad.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene in opening reel showing young mother surrendering one of her twin boys to hostile grandfather. Events depicting her love for remaining son, and hero's gallant fight against poverty. Rivalry of brothers for heroine Laura. Scene where escaping convict runs away with engine, and is shot dead. Hero's pursuit on motorcycle and winning of race to switch, which he throws in time to avert collision with express.

DIRECTION. Has turned out a very appealing drama in which the characters seem real and built up the action by stressing the story's sympathetic values and avoiding excess melodramatic pressure. Thus, the narrative is put over in far more convincing style than is usual with railroad pictures, and the big punch scene of the runaway engine comes out all the stronger by contrast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title should draw railroad men and you can promise patrons in general a very satisfactory hour's entertainment. Dwell upon the love of the mother for her children and self-sacrifice in their behalf, as well as the romantic side of the story. Above all play up the near-collision scene. Jane Novak, Dorothy Revier, Robert Edeson and Gaston Glass should be featured.

DRAWING POWER. Is classy enough to meet requirements of first-run houses and should meet with well-deserved success in neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Registers far above average feature, is well produced in every respect, an excellent attraction.

THE CAST

Mary Browning	Jane Novak
Laura Whitman	Dorothy Revier
Cyrus Browning	Robert Edeson
Ralph Browning	Gaston Glass
Robert Browning	Robert Gordon
Mrs. Whitman	Mayme Kelso
John Moran	Lee Shumway
Pudgy	Lincoln Stedman

Author, Douglas Z. Doty. Directed by Erle C. Kenton.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Browning, widow, surrenders one of her twin boys, Ralph, to the care of his grandfather, who opposed her marriage with his son. Ralph grows up a wastrel. Robert works hard and finally gets employment on railroad where Ralph is Superintendent. Both fall in love with Laura Whitman. The ensuing conflict results in Robert losing his job. But Robert's chance comes when an escaping convict runs away with an engine and is shot dead at the throttle. The engine dashed down the track where the express is almost due. Robert pursues on a motorcycle, cuts in ahead of the flying engine and throws a switch which shunts the runaway on to a side-track and the express thunders safely by. Robert and mother are reconciled to the wealthy grandfather and Robert wins Laura.

The Trouble With Wives

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE familiar figures of a jealous wife, interfering mother-in-law, falsely accused hubby, and well-meaning, if slightly chuckle-headed friend, prance amusingly through this comedy of domestic entanglements. There are no particularly original angles to the plot, but deft directorial work and intelligent acting by principals and supporting cast tend to make the picture a very entertaining attraction. If the film has a fault it lies in the fact that the footage is a trifle excessive, but this minor defect doesn't amount to much as a handicap.

One of the outstanding lights of the picture is the clever performance given by Ford Sterling in the character of the busy-body friend. Without detracting from the admirable work of Tom Moore and Florence Vidor as hero and heroine, it can be confidently asserted that Mr. Sterling breaks even with them for dramatic honors. The latter's scene where he gives the young wife a confidential line on her husband's career prior to their marriage registers as a most hilarious bit of pantomime, all the more effective because there isn't a single subtitle utilized to help the action along. Tom Moore is his own genial self as the ill-used husband, a character to which he manages to impart a touch of wistful helplessness in the midst of the infernal complications in which he becomes innocently involved, that really makes you feel sorry for him, even while laughing at his discomfiture. Florence Vidor, always charming, wins a good deal of sympathy in much the same way as Moore does, and the support is excellent.

THEME. Comedy drama of domestic complications caused by wife's unfounded yet reasonable jealousy of innocent husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scenes showing how loose talk of husband's best friend with wife arouses latter's suspicions. Dinner table episode where Hennessy accidentally reveals to wife that he and her husband have visited the other woman's apartment. Numerous entanglements into which husband guilessly falls. Climax at summer hotel, when wife finds girl she suspects married to Hennessy.

DIRECTION. Could have eliminated a couple of situations which come pretty near under the head of "repetition," thereby knitting events closer together and improving action. But on the whole a creditable piece of work, especially when light texture of plot is taken into consideration.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Scenes in apartments of the "other woman." Can be played up. Florence Vidor wears a number of handsome gowns which are the last word in fashion, a fact that should interest your feminine patrons. Bill this as a bright comedy of domestic troubles in which Tom Moore, Ford Sterling and Florence Vidor are seen at their best.

DRAWING POWER. Has universal appeal and should go well in all theatres.

SUMMARY. Light, but amusing entertainment, good hot weather attraction that creates mirth and doesn't force people to think too hard.

THE CAST

Grace Hyatt	Florence Vidor
William Hyatt	Tom Moore
Dagmar	Esther Ralston
Al Hennessy	Ford Sterling
Grace's Mother	Lucy Beaumont
Prey	Edward Kennedy
Maid	Etta Lee
Butler	William Courtright

Authors, Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair. Photographed by L. Guy Wilky.

SYNOPSIS. William Hyatt is proprietor of an exclusive shoe-shop. He and his wife Grace are happy until William's best friend, Hennessy, informs her that Will has his lunching with Dagmar, pretty shoe-designer from Paris. William squares himself with wife and mother-in-law, but more trouble develops when Hennessy mentions before Grace that he and Will have been to Dagmar's apartment. It was a purely business visit, but Grace doesn't think so and a storm breaks. Other blunders enmesh William and the perfectly innocent Dagmar in a net of suspicion, and matters grow so warm that William leaves home and goes to a summer hotel. Grace, now furious, decides to divorce her faithless spouse. She follows to the hotel, but to her surprise and relief finds Hennessy and Dagmar there in the guise of bride and groom. The Hyatts are reconciled.

Wild, Wild Susan

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

FOLKS who crave action will find plenty of it in this newest Bebe Daniels' starring vehicle. The picture sure lives up to its title. It is pep plus, and just the kind of entertainment that every member of the family can enjoy. There is nothing here to tax the gray matter, no deep mystery, no problem to solve, just pure unadulterated fun.

The plot has to do with Susan Van Dusen, who craving excitement and adventure, deserts the family fireside and becomes a detective. She meets up with a youth, a member of a family she dislikes, but who introduces himself under another name. He has taken up the profession of chauffeur in his search for new material for his book. The two become very friendly, but this friendship threatens to be broken when the hero arranges to have Susan try and locate "Tod Waterbury." Tod, of course, is himself. Members of family arrange a hoax to cure Susan of her desire for adventure and the climax comes in a rush of laughter.

There is much merriment in the opening sequence in which Bebe complicates a traffic jam in Fifth avenue and later heads several fire fighting apparatus through the busy streets. There is also much humor in the rides which Rod La Roeque, as the chauffeur, takes Bebe in his cab. The latter finds herself on the floor of the bus most of the time through Rod's fancy starting. Audiences will also forget their troubles when they see Bebe dressed up in male attire preparatory to going forth to corner a gang of bold bandits. They will also enjoy the climax in which Susan discovers that the hunt for the crooks was just a hoax. The wild elevator ride should also start a gale of laughter.

THEME. Straight comedy dealing with the fair offspring of one of the families in the Blue Book, who, craving adventure, gets all she wants and more, and then finds that the chauffeur she's in love with is also a blue blood.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Bebe's interpretation of the role of Susan. Her jump from an ocean liner to the gang plank as the boat moves away. The sequence in which she leads the fire apparatus through the traffic jams. Susan's rides with La Rocque in the latter's taxi. The runaway elevator. Bebe's donning men's clothes. The climax. The fair detective's first capture.

DIRECTION. Edward Sutherland has accomplished the aim of the producers—to get speed into the action. He has started things off with a punch and ended them with a wallop.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Bebe Daniels. Arrange tie-ups with local Packard's agencies. Packard cars are used in several scenes. Have a young lady drive a sporty car about town with appropriate advertising.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the best houses and popularity of star should attract business. Also O. K. for community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. A clean, wholesome comedy that will furnish entertainment for any audience. Here is beauteous Bebe at her best. She's immense. The cast is good and the settings artistic.

Adapted from the story "The Wild, Wild Child" by Steuart M. Emery. Scenario by Tom J. Geraghty. Directed by Edward Sutherland. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Finding her home life too tame, Susan Van Dusen consents to go on a trip to Europe with the Waterburys, but balks when she finds her traveling companion, Eustace, is a weakling. On her way off the boat she bumps into Tod Waterbury. Tod follows her home. He has become a chauffeur to find "local color" for his writings. Susan becomes a detective. Tod arranges to have Susan locate his "chum" Tod Waterbury, he having introduced himself under another name. Of course Susan fails, but gets another chance at some bandits, which turns out to be a hoax, arranged to cure her of adventure. She accepts Tod at last.

Private Affairs

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6132 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE small-town atmosphere and characterizations of this film are its chief stock-in-trade, with the sleepy life of a quiet burg suddenly stirred into temporary animation by the belated delivery of a package of five-year-old letters, found behind the desk of the old postmaster after the latter dies. The effect on the lives of the receivers is the pivot upon which the plot revolves, and the general result entertaining, with comedy and pathos developing in about equal parts.

In one letter a lover asks his girl to come on and wed him, a drunkard learns that he is heir to a fortune, and so on. The chief trouble with a tale of this kind is that it wanders into so many by-paths that it is impossible to concentrate its interest and the spectator gets somewhat bewildered trying to follow the different threads. There isn't any real drama worth speaking of, the comedy bits making the best showing, and as might be expected, vigorous action is altogether absent. The acting saves the feature from being relegated to the list of mediocre attractions, and in this connection it may be noted that Hardee Kirkland's portrayal of the town drunkard stands out in bold relief as the hit of the picture. Arthur Hoyt contributes a clever sketch of a stammering druggist and the support as a whole is adequate.

THEME. Comedy-drama with small-town atmosphere and lives of characters turned topsy-turvy by delivery of bunch of letters lost five years in local post office.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scenes showing effect on different recipients of long-delayed mail, when delivered. Return of Lee Cross, loudly clad, in swell auto to home-town, and disillusion of young married woman to whom he proposed by letter, when she meets him. Renovation of town drunk. Satisfactory climax.

DIRECTION. Considering the scattered nature of his plot material Renaud Hoffman didn't do badly. The pathetic angles are nicely worked in and touches of humor whimsically administered. The continuity wobbles, but that can't be helped under such conditions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Teaser ads, dwelling on probable consequences of letters delivered five years late are in order. You can treat the idea from both comic and serious side. Every name in the cast is known to fans and should be played up. Where a mailing list is available a circular letter of ancient date could be utilized.

DRAWING POWER. Should do fair business in average house, if rightly exploited. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Principal thing in picture's favor is the very human flavor of its characterizations. This factor makes up to a large extent for the shifting of the interest spot-light from one group to another, as the village folks seem refreshingly real and natural.

THE CAST

Agnes Bomar	Gladys Hulette
Fred Henley	Robert Agnew
Amy Lukin	Mildred Harris
Lee Cross	David Butler
Alf Stacy	Arthur Hoyt
Andy Gillespie	Hardee Kirkland
Irma Stacy	Betty Francisco
Sam Hanks	Charles W. Mack
Joe Hines	Charles Sellon
John Maddox	J. Frank Glendon

Author, George Patullo. Directed by Renaud Hoffman. Photographed by Jack Mackenzie.

SYNOPSIS. Five years after the death of the old postmaster of village of Two Forks, a package of letters are found undelivered. Their distribution causes a sensation. The town drunkard, Gillespie, learns that he is heir to a fortune. Amy Lufkin, now wed, gets a proposal from her former sweetheart, Cross Lee, who went to the oilfields; the druggist's wife, Irma Stacy, opens a letter from a former flame to her hubby, while he stares aghast at a missive to Irma from another adorer. Amy, dissatisfied, determines to go to Lee Cross, but he suddenly arrives, overdressed, in an ornate car, and one look at him cures Amy. Lee swaggers to the post office where Agnes Bomar, to whom he used to pay attention, works, but as he becomes obnoxious, Agnes' lover Fred enters and thrashes him. The newly-rich Gillespie makes Fred the superintendent of his factory properties and all ends well.

My Lady's Lips

(B. P. Schulberg Prod.—6609 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS crook melodrama is designed to appeal to audiences with a keenly developed liking for the sensational, and indications are that it will be successful along that line. Incidentally, it lists as propaganda against the third degree method of making criminal suspects confess, as popularly supposed to be practiced by callous police executives in every big American city. Details filmed in this connection are decidedly unpleasant and not convincing.

However far police may go in administering torture, about the last victim in the world they would select would be a well-known reporter, even if he compromised himself by aiding a female crook. True, in this instance the hero gets in bad with his newspaper boss, but there never existed a star reporter so utterly friendless that the cops would dare to man-handle him like a tramp or branded convict. But the confiding public will probably accept it as genuine, so when the unlucky news-chronicler and his feminine associate go to jail, no doubt on-lookers will accord them full measure of sympathy. Early sequences show how the heroine first went wrong, romance begins when she meets the reporter. There are some thrilling moments registered, but one can't help feeling that the hero's unavailing sacrifice for the lady is rather unnecessary and theatrically unreal.

THEME. Crook Melodrama, third degree angle and love affair between reporter and underworld girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Suspense developed in crook den scene where hero is put to severe tests to uncover his identity. Police raid, arrest of thugs, escape of heroine. Her surrender. Third degree incident. Wounding of girl and reconciliation with lover in finale.

DIRECTION. Continuity fair, except for confusion caused by introduction of superfluous characters at start. Suspense registers well in underground den stuff. Makes third degree episode nerve-racking but repulsive.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up starting adventures of hero in underworld joint. Tell your patrons about alleged cruelties of third degree and film's expose of brutal police methods. Stress romantic interest, hero's self-sacrifice. Feature energetic performances of Alyce Mills and William Powell in principal roles Cast excellent, Clara Bow, Frank Keenan, Ford Sterling, John Sainpolis do particularly good work and worth advertising.

DRAWING POWER. It's up to exhibitor's individual judgment. If patrons want highly colored underworld melodrama, this is O. K. Otherwise, third degree scenes, gruesome and apt to shock sensitive persons, may offend, especially in houses catering strictly to select family trade.

SUMMARY. Picture crudely exciting, develops some savagely forcible punches in this respect but wrecks artistic and convincing qualities in order to stress sensational appeal. Footage excessive, should have been kept within six reel limit at most.

THE CAST

Dora Blake	Alyce Mills
Scott Seddon	William Powell
Lola Lombard	Clara Bow
Forbes Lombard	Frank Keenan
Smike	Ford Sterling
Inspector	John Sainpolis
Crook Girl	Gertrude Short
Eddie Gault	Matthew Betz

Author, John Goodrich. Directed by James P. Hogan. Photographed by Allen Siegler.

SYNOPSIS. Discovering that his daughter Lola frequents gambling joint run by Dora Blake and Eddie Gault, newspaper editor Lombard assigns reporter Scott Seddon to round up notorious Blake gang. Scott gains access in guise of exconvict to crooks' underground den, is put to severe tests, but conceals identity until exposed by Dora. Scott's arrangement with police causes raid and arrest of thugs. Having fallen in love with Dora, he shields her, she escapes, but surrenders when Seddon is pinched. Police give both third degree, force confessions of guilt from each. They receive penitentiary sentences. When released, Scott finds Dora operating high-class gambling house. A losing player shoots her in arm, but she and Scott are united.

A Woman's Faith

(Universal-Jewel—6023 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A STORY of the Canadian woods, melodramatic, yet sombre of mood throughout and with a religious background on which is etched the profitable results to be obtained by faith and prayer, seems at first sight pretty tough material for a director to turn into good screen entertainment. Yet exactly that has been done in this case. Sombre undoubtedly the general tone of the film is, also it points a strong moral, but the amazing thing to be noted bobs up in the fact that it holds together nevertheless, and scores hard on the box office target.

Judicious direction is, of course responsible for the all-around excellence of the picture, as well as sincere and virile acting by principals and support. Percy Marmont plays superbly as the chap who turns atheist when a woman turns him down, loses his sight in a scrap with a bully in the wilds of Canada, foregathers with a girl falsely accused of murder, whose prayer at the shrine in the Cathedral of Restoration cures his blindness. Alma Rubens deserves undiluted praise for her delicate, appealing rendition of the part of the girl—Neree Caron, nor should the fine performances of ZaSu Pitts and Cesare Gravina be forgotten. There isn't a dull moment in the entire production, but it is devoutly to be wished that the subtitle-writer hadn't indulged in such unnecessarily lengthy and prosy screeds during the opening reels.

THEME. Melodrama of Canadian backwoods with religious twist and strong emotional sequences.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where hero discovers fiancee is false. His flight to Canadian wilds and fight in which he is blinded. Shots showing pilgrims journeying to shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, with priests bearing host through kneeling penitents. Neree climbing, saying prayer at each step. Return of hero's sight. Final episode, with pair approaching chapel to be wed.

DIRECTION. Has knit situations closely together, kept action moving smoothly and maintained absorbing interest all through film.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The church folks, clergy and women's clubs should prove invaluable factors in helping to exploit this one. There are fans who always fight shy of films in which religion plays a prominent part. For the benefit of these, you should enlarge on the story's romantic interest and melodramatic strength, making it clear that it isn't to be considered mere propaganda. Feature Alma Rubens, Percy Marmont, Jean Hersholt, ZaSu Pitts and Cesare Gravina.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to bring good financial returns in any type of house, excepting in localities where exhibitor knows that religious atmosphere in a feature is banned by his patrons.

SUMMARY. A notable achievement both from directorial and acting standpoints. Subject a difficult one to handle competently, but the warmly sympathetic urge of the picture is beyond dispute.

THE CAST

Neree Caron	Alma Rubens
Donovan Steele	Percy Marmont
Cluny	Jean Hersholt
Blanche	ZaSu Pitts
Francois	Hughie Mark
Odilion Turcott	Cesare Gravina

Adapted from Charles Buddington Kelland's story, "Miracle." Directed by Edward Laemmle. Photographed by John Stumar.

SYNOPSIS. While traveling on a train through Canada, Donovan Steele discovers that his fiancee is false to him. He leaves the train and plunges into the lumber woods, having lost faith in God and mankind. Once, while in town, he meets Leandre Turcot, who recognizes Steele as a man who saved his life and insists that he make his home with him. Steele meets Neree Caron, wanted for murder, but wrongfully accused. One Cluny, a detective, threatens to arrest Neree unless she weds him. Steele defends Neree, wins fight with Cluny but loses his sight. Neree persuades him to accompany her to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. There, her prayers are instrumental in curing Steele's blindness. Neree's uncle confesses guilt of murder of which Neree is accused. Steele marries her.

Fine Clothes

(John M. Stahl Production-First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ONCE again John M. Stahl comes forward with a picture which has all the ear-marks of a ready-made box office success. This one is an adaptation of Franz Molnar's stage play, "Fashions for Men," which, however, has had its plot moved bodily from Austria, the original locale, to London, the producers believing, and perhaps rightly, that the fans preferred such a setting. Molnar deals with life in a satirical way and this story of Peter Hungerford, a London merchant with a big heart, who trusts everybody and consequently is in turn beaten by everyone, until he loses his little store, his wife, his all—but rises above adversity so that in the end he finds happiness once more, is one of his best.

First of all the screen version is notable for the excellence of its characterizations. Percy Marmont gives to the role of Peter, an interpretation that takes rank with the other famous parts this star has given the screen. In the hands of this actor, Peter is made to "live" and we are sure that everyone is going to find cause for praise in this fine character portrait. Then Lewis Stone shares honors with Marmont in the role of the Earl of Denham. Stone is immense, while Alma Rubens really acts as "Paula," and Raymond Griffith supplies a few moments of his inimitable comedy in a minor part. The remainder of the cast is excellent in every way.

THEME. A domestic drama in which a London shopkeeper made bankrupt through his kindness, fights back to success and saves his fair bookkeeper, with a desire for fine clothes, from a wealthy nobleman.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening sequence in which Peter loses his wife, his savings and his little store. The scenes at the earl's estate where the former shopkeeper interrupts many tete-a-tetes. The characterizations contributed by Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont and other members of the cast. The climax in which all wrongs are adjusted.

DIRECTION. John M. Stahl has turned out a very creditable feature possessing close to 100 per cent in entertainment value and has inspired his players to put over some exceptionally fine acting. He has, as usual, given the feature an artistic background.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A tie-up with your local department store on a fall fashion show would be a great selling point. Have models display the new styles on your stage. Interest local literary and dramatic clubs on the first picturization of a Molnar play. Offer prizes for the best looking home-made gowns. Play up the names of the cast.

DRAWING POWER. Should go over in the best houses in the land and, with a little exploitation, do business. Stone and Marmont are prime favorites.

SUMMARY. One of the worthwhile contributions of the silent drama to the new season. An entertaining transplantation of a Molnar play in which superb characterization stands out. Holds the interest all the way, is beautifully mounted and understandingly directed.

THE CAST

Earl of Denham	Lewis Stone
Peter Hungerford	Percy Marmont
Paula	Alma Rubens
Oscar	Raymond Griffith
Adele	Eileen Percy
Philip	William V. Mong
Receiver	John Merkyl

From the stage play, "Fashions for Men," by Franz Molnar.

Scenario by Benjamin Glazer. Directed by John M. Stahl. Photographed by Ernest Palmer.

SYNOPSIS. Peter Hungerford's heart is glad on Xmas eve. He and his wife, Adele, have saved $500. The sum will save him from impending bankruptcy. While giving presents to his employes, Adele confesses she loves Oscar, a clerk and says she has given him the $500. Oscar appears and takes Adele away. Paula, Peter's bookkeeper, seeks aid of the Earl of Denham. Peter gets a job with the earl and Paula, seeing a chance to get fine clothes maneuvers herself into the earl's household. Peter saves Paula from the earl, however, and eventually weds her. He also gets back the store.

Theatre Design, Plans and Specifications

Ways and Means of Construction; Methods of Awarding Contracts

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Engineer

AFTER any given theatre proposition has been studied and analyzed from an investment point of view and a decision has been reached as to its construction, the next thing to be carefully considered is the ways and means of construction. The usual procedure is to engage an architect or engineer to prepare complete plans and specifications from which estimates from general contractors are obtained and the contract awarded to probably the lowest bidder. In analysing this procedure there are several angles to be fully considered, all of which are of considerable importance and two or three are of vital importance.

The first question to be considered is that of deciding in what manner and by whom the preliminary plans are to be drawn. It will usually be found that, in the study from an investment point of view, it has been found necessary to make certain preliminary sketches in connection with the analysis of study and in the determination of the size and capacity of the theatre. These sketches will undoubtedly form the basis of development for the architect or engineer who is engaged to develop the problem from a building point of view. Very frequently it will be found that the preliminary sketches have been under-studied and that in their development a complete change is found to be desirable. This should not be the case. If proper studies are made in the beginning, the sketches will be accurate data for further lines of action and there will be no need for revision. This will also mean that the analysis from the investment point of view is correct and that the statement of investment, based thereon, will show true results. On the other hand, if sketches are hurriedly prepared, inaccurately drawn and the study formed by false premises, the results are likely to be unsatisfactory and misleading.

Necessary to Keep to Original Plans

It, therefore, becomes necessary, to develop the plan along the original lines contemplated by the sketches in order that the final cost may be kept precisely in line with that which was estimated. Herein lies the great weakness, for the usual tendency in the development of the plans is to get away from the original idea and over design the building to such an extent that its final cost materially exceeds the original estimate. To accomplish these results, it becomes necessary to have clearly in mind in the beginning the actual type of construction and the amount of elaboration and decoration which the project will stand. Plans and specifications, of course, will be definite and complete only in so far as those who prepare them have a definite and complete conception of the materials to be used and the amount of money to be spent. It should be kept in mind that the bulk of construction of a theatre lies in the engineering or construction features for the problem of decoration is one that is almost unlimited and has an extremely wide range of variation. In other words, the interior and exterior may be highly ornamented or it may be left entirely plain, depending upon the amount of money that should be spent in this connection on any particular job.

Economy of Construction of Primary Importance

It, therefore, becomes evident that economy in the design of the construction is of primary importance. This feature is frequently lost sight of for the reason that the working drawings are drawn by those inexperienced in the economies of construction, which resolves itself into a problem in engineering economics, and unless the design is approached from this point of view, it is certain to be more expensively designed than need be and the aesthetic considerations are likely to overrun and control the cost of construction. This point cannot be too heavily emphasized and, in order to get the desired results, only persons experienced and trained in this line of work should be commissioned to represent the financial interests; for, after all, the usual theatre is built as an investment or from an investment point of view and should be considered as such throughout the entire operation, including the preparation of plans and specifications.

The usual tendency for the past has been to produce a theatre building which is considered by the general public as being attractive and beautiful. This has very little bearing on the box-office receipts within certain limits. It is, of course, desirable to have a theatre, which is attractive and pleasing to the eye but it need not be too highly ornamental nor expensively decorated. The interior decorations of a theatre is an entirely different problem from that of a home. Theatrical productions in any sense, including the theatre, are undertaken with the idea of creating an appeal to the public largely from a psychological point of view and this point contains one of the secrets of successful theatre production. In other words, the construction of a theatre and the preparation of plans and specifications for such involves a number of elements which are not usually considered in the usual course of procedure. The objective of the engineer or architect who prepares plans and specifications should be to produce for the owner a complete instrument with which he can obtain, with the proper management and the usual course of business, a satisfactory return on his investment.

This brings the subject to the point of consideration of size, type and kind of theatre to build in any given locality. Here again is an opportunity for a wide range of variations and a wise decision can only be made by those who are capable of studying the situation from a local point of view and whose judgment is in keeping with needed results. One of the greatest errors which maintain in this connection is that certain types of owners are inclined to rely on their judgment rather than to take the advice of others who make a specialty of this line of work. There is just as much demand for technical, business and economic advice in theatre construction as there is in legal or other professional lines of work.

Three Usual Methods of Construction Followed

Assuming that the design, plans and specifications have been thoroughly studied from both an aesthetic and economic point of view and have been completed, ready for estimates, three usual methods of construction are used. One is to obtain estimates from four or five selected bidders; the second method is to allow any contractor who may desire to submit a bid; the third is for the architect, engineer or owner to obtain separate bids on the various trades. The first method involves the least trouble on the part of the owner or his agent. The second method is likely to lead to complications, due to the fact that irresponsible contractors are likely to underbid and mislead as to the probable ultimate cost. The third method involves considerably more work on the part of the engineer or architect, but usually is the most economical in the final analysis. The writer has had considerable experience with all three methods of handling construction work and, as a result, for the average job he is strongly of the opinion that the best results can be obtained by the third method, for the reason that the owner or his agent is then in control of the situation and is not subject to the continual bother of extras, which he is sure to be subjected to if the contract is awarded to a general contractor. He not only has this advantage but he is in a position to make any changes at any time without involving any other trade than that directly concerned. In the first method, in the event that it is desirable to make any change, there is always involved the question of an extra and the general contractor is in the position to charge just about as he pleases. There is no means of controlling this situation.

Advisable to Secure Rigid Opening Date

Another disadvantage is that the owner has practically no control over the progress of the work. The general contractor will frequently estimate the time of construction to be less than one-half of what his actual time may be and there is no way of controlling this situation unless there is a penalty or bond clause in his contract. In order to obtain this clause it is usually necessary to place the time of completion at such a length that the contractor is usually on the safe side. On the other hand, if the construction work is handled by the third method, the owner's agent, engineer or architect, who is handling the work, is in a position to deal directly with each trade and each subcontract and it is a well-known fact that small units can be handled to a greater advantage than large units. One man can control a certain number of men and this principle is exemplified particularly in construction work. Consequently, the time of completion is under better control by the third method than by any of the others and the time of completion is usually a very important item, for the reason that each day's delay is actual loss of return on investment.

Source of Finance Influences Construction Methods

Another point which may have some bearing on the method of construction to be used or may even determine it is that of the source of finance. If the owner is not in a position to entirely finance the job, it will usually be found that he will not be able to control it, but, on the other hand, if he is independent financially and is able to furnish the necessary funds as they may be required, he is in a position to dictate and should take advantage of it. The best way to secure this advantage would be to have a competent engineer or architect supervise the construction and handle the sub-contracts direct, in which case the engineer or architect becomes the controlling factor in behalf of the owner and is unbiased in his position, whereas if it is left to the general contractor, who in his position also represents the owner but who is primarily in a biased position due to the fact that he is largely concerned in the profits which he can make from the job and very frequently the amount of extras that he can secure, this advantage will be lost.

One of the determining factors which has a direct bearing on the awarding of the work to a general contractor is that of knowing in advance the cost of the work. This is actually misleading for the reason that the average job is susceptible to so many extras that the final cost is not definitely decided by giving the work out on the lump sum basis. The average owner, however, unfortunately does not realize this phase of the situation and from the mere fact that he gets a lump sum price for the work, he concludes that he is now safe and that he will not be obliged to spend any more than his contract calls for. The contractor's point of view is quite the opposite. He takes the contract on a lump sum basis with the idea that the amount of his contract is only a beginning and he expects and makes every effort to involves as much additional cost by means of extras as it is possible to do. Consequently, the point that the writer wishes to emphasize is that, even though the construction work is awarded on the basis of the general contract, it is by no means a guarantee that this will be the u'timate cost of the work. If the plans and specifications are carefully prepared and the work supervised by competent authority, there should be very little opportunity for extras to develop, but, on the other hand, if the plans and specifications are not thoroughly comprehensive of the work to be done and the supervision is lax, then the owner is largely at the mercy of the contractor, who is in a position to control the situation in any way which might be most satisfactory to him. On the other hand, if the work is handled by the owner's agent, (engineer or architect) and sub-let direct, he is actually more certain of completing the work at the estimated price than otherwise, for the reason that the work by this method is under better control and should be done in less time and at a less cost.

In conclusion the following points may be noted: namely, plans and specifications prepared from both an economical and aesthetic point of view and that method of construction adopted which will permit the owner to get the desired results at a proper cost and within a reasonable length of time. The latter the writer desires to emphasize because of the fact that, from his personal experience, he has found that the average construction job lacks control and the owner is more or less at the mercy of the contractor doing the work.

Small Modern House to Be Erected in Cleveland

Eastman Announces New Pocket Size Motion Picture Camera

HOME movies would seem to have been now brought within complete realization with the announcement just made by the Eastman Kodak Company of their development of a new model Cine-Kodak. Practically pocket size, as simple to load, hold and operate, it is claimed, as an ordinary Kodak this camera is to sell at $70.

The popularity of home movies according to the announcement has been proved and while the more serious worker may still prefer the present electrically driven Cine-Kodak, the new more compact model, will appeal to the world of amateurs at large.

This latest achievement is a thoroughly practical motion picture camera reduced to the same compactness and simplicity of operation that have made the Kodak famous. With its genuine leather covering it has the appearance and is about the size of a 3A Kodak closed.

It takes ordinary Cine-Kodak film (16 mm wide) in 50 or 100 ft. lengths, is daylight loading and spring driven. The film is made reversible, that is, through a special process the negative is reversed to a positive and the film actually exposed is used for projection. This eliminates cost of additional film and printing and is an emphatic economy of operation.

The price of the film it is announced also covers the cost of finishing at any one of the Eastman laboratories. No tripod is necessary.

This new model is held at waist level, the subject found in the view finder and by simply pressing a spring twenty feet of film may be exposed without rewinding. Steady spring tension provides for evenness of exposure.

The lens is an f.6.5 especially designed for this camera. It has a focal length of only 20 mm (less than 1 inch) which gives a broad angle and permits the photographing of large objects at relatively close range. "Close ups" can be made at 4 ft. and distant views can follow with no focusing adjustment.

Further description is contained in the announcement. The weight is given at 5 pounds when loaded, size 8-13/16 inches long by 5-9/16 inches high and 3-1/16 inches wide, and is therefore easily carried. It can be brought into action as quickly as any Kodak and a tripod is not necessary as the illustrations show.

Indicators on the outside of the camera are convenient helps to the operator. An exposure guide on the diaphragm scale shows which of the four stops to use under various conditions. A footage indicator automatically tells how many feet of unexposed film are left in the camera.

The film reels are opposite each other and can easily be loaded in daylight. Threading can be done very quickly. Pull-down claws in the gate automatically adjust themselves to the perforations in the film. The guide bar is at an angle, allowing the film to be wound on the reel without danger of jamming or of loose-winding. Studs in the door prevent closing the camera if the loading of the film has not been correctly done.

The curved gate holds the film accurately in focal plane without danger of abrasion or scratching and also eliminates the necessity of frequently cleaning the gate.

The exposure lever may be locked in operating position so that the operator may place the camera on a firm support and include himself in the action of the picture.

As this new model uses the same film as the original Cine-Kodak no duplication of stock on the dealers' shelves is necessary. It is 16 mm wide, of safety stock, and instead of the usual printing operation, the negative, through a special process, is reversed to a positive so that the identical strip of film that was used for exposure is used for projection as well.

The new Cine-Kodak is held like a Kodak, waist high; the view in the finder, you simply press a button.

The company announces that while it is not in position to fill immediate orders, plans are well under way to begin deliveries toward the end of the present month and to produce in quantities by mid-autumn.

Motion Picture Cameras Gain in Exports

One hundred and twenty-three motion picture cameras were exported from the United States during the month of June in comparison with 59 for June, 1924. This was shown in preliminary Department of Commerce figures, which further gave the value of these as $29,271 as compared with $12,192 last year.

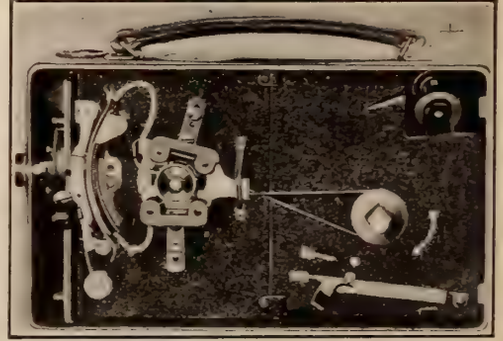
For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, exports of motion picture cameras totalled 1,140 valued at $289,057, while for the fiscal year 1923-24, 1,039 cameras were shipped abroad at a total value of $342,062.

Southern Development Corp. Building House in Atlanta

The Southern Development Corp., is beginning work on the erection of a handsome new suburban theatre in Atlanta to be located in West End, at 201 Lee street. This same company operated the Palace theatre, in Inman Park, of which Alpha Fowler is manager. Upon the completion of the new house, which will be bigger and more elaborately equipped than the Palace, however, Mr. Fowler will transfer his services to the West End house. Announcement as to who will fill Mr. Fowler's place at the Palace will be made at an early date.

The new theatre will occupy a space of 50 by 200 feet and will accommodate one thousand people. The chairs are special air-cushioned upholstered seats. An enormous typhoon ventilating system has been ordered, and everything in the way of the latest and most improved projection equipment is to be installed. The theatre will be one of the finest surburban houses in the south, and exclusive of ground value about $50,000 will be spent in building and equipment. This is only one of a number of theatres planned by the Southern Development corporation and announcements will be made regarding the others at an early date.

Kansas City Explosion Quiz Under Way



A 3-day inquest, in which sixty-seven persons were summoned, was begun in Kansas City this week in connection with the explosion and destruction recently of the Gillis theatre, combination motion picture and burlesque house. Last week a fourth body was found in the ruins, but thus far has not been identified. No cause of the explosion has yet been discovered.

In Atlanta, the Bellwood theatre, 600 Marietta street, recently destroyed by fire, was reopened Monday, June 29th, with new equipment. Roger B. Toy and his associate, Mr. Cauthorn, are very well pleased with the remodeled theater, which will now seat about 500.

$45,000 Fire Destroys Almo, Raleigh, House

The Almo Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., was destroyed by fire on Wednesday, July 15, The loss amounted to about $45,000 and the cause of the fire was unknown.

Easy threading is an impressive feature of the new Cine-Kodak. The take-up reel fits over the shaft shown in the right half of the illustration. The supply roll is placed in similar position beside the motor, beyond the partition.

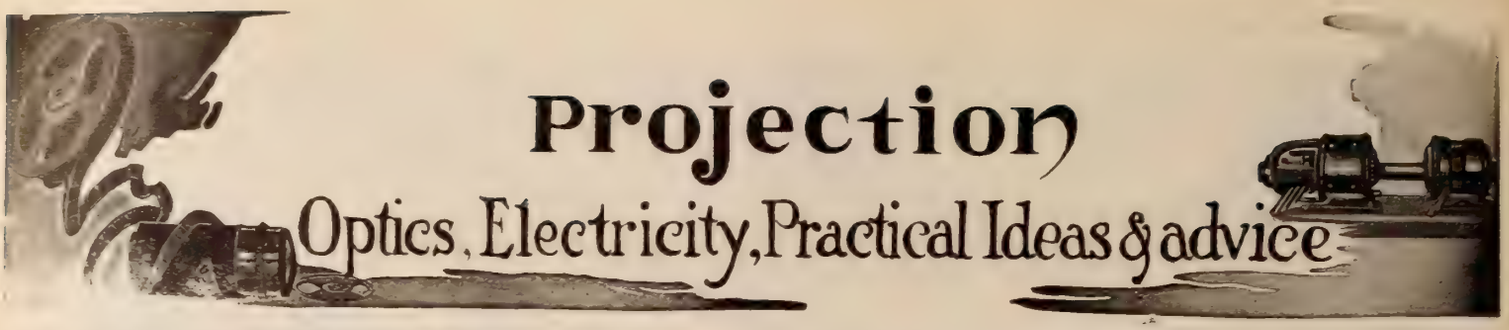
They Tried It— And Came Back for More

Incandescent projection when properly applied, is saving money for motion picture exhibitors all over the country.

G-E Incandescent Lamp Projectors are in use in theatres of various sizes in every state in the Union and in foreign countries.



Theatre owners can obtain advice from any G-E office as to what system of projection is best adapted to their particular theatre. The General Electric Company manufactures both arc and incandescent equipment and has had extensive experience in applying both.

The development of the MAZDA lamp for motion picture projection has not only saved money for exhibitors but has greatly improved working conditions for the projectionist and enabled him to secure better screen results. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat from a MAZDA lamp and operation is simplified, no adjustments being necessary after the machine is started.

Inquiries and Comments

SOME kind correspondent in Atlanta, Ga., recently sent us a couple of photographs of a projection room interior with the comment that the Peerless Reflector Arcs, which are much in evidence in the pictures, represent the one and only installation of the kind in Atlanta.

Other than the photographs which accompanied the sparsely worded description of this neat installation we have but little information concerning the details, probably due to the exuberance of the correspondent who overlooked this unimportant point.

A general view of the projection room is shown in Fig. 1. Even the name of the good-looking chap midway between the projectors is unknown, but from his proprietary attitude and the fact that he is garbed in the accepted costume of a projectionist, white shirt, striped trousers and "hanky" debonairly tucked in hip pocket, we deduce that he must hold the chief executive position with respect to the projectors shown in our photographs (which are not really ours, but merely loaned).

That pensive expression he wears, reminiscent of Conway Tearle, we are unable to account for. We really do not know whether it indicates disgust at the presence of the new reflector arcs or whether he is brooding over the loss of the two relics which they replaced.

As we said before, we have no inkling as to his name, but if, perchance, he should read this and get peeved, we swear that we will retaliate by finding it out and publishing it.

Up-to-Date

However, to get back to business, we ask you to inspect a few of the details shown in this picture which, we believe, help to make a first-class projection room. The vent chamber, for instance, above each projector, which permits of sliding the lamp houses over without the grinding and scraping usually present in the telescoping-stovepipe arrangement sometimes recommended. The sliding gravity door and the metal film cabinet in the left foreground indicate a desire on the part of the management to make conditions as safe as possible. The resistances, one at the base of each projector, appear to be firmly fastened, by means of strap iron, to the safety switch, thus insuring that they will stay put and not be kicked all over the floor of the projection room. Not a bad idea at all. No loose cuspidors, waste paper baskets, newspapers, carbon stub pails, and the arc in evidence, which is one reason for the neat, orderly appearance of the entire room.

Peerless Arc

The Peerless Arc, by the way, which is made and marketed by the McAuley Mfg. Co., has a number of unique features which distinguished it from other arcs of the same type.

In the first place, it follows the first type of reflector arc, designed in Germany, in that it uses a true parabolic reflector with the positive crater placed at the focal point instead of ahead of it as in the case with the other types. When so placed, the light beam is reflected approximately parallel to an 8″ plano-convex lens which intercepts this parallel beam and converges it to a focus at the aperture.

This results in a number of advantages as far as light projection is concerned. First, the placing of the crater at the focal point rather than ahead of it means that it is materially nearer to the reflector, so that from 30 to 40 per cent more light is "picked-up." The use of an 8″ mirror, by far the largest for this kind of work, also insures maximum pick-up of light from the crater.

A parallel light beam between mirror and condenser lens means that less light is lost on the carbons and their holders, since the concentration in the beam at this location is less than with other types. Furthermore, at no place in the system is a true image of the light source formed, since the condenser lens is placed at a distance from the aperture equal to its own focal length. This means maximum screen evenness in addition to focussing directly at the aperture plane where the spot is smallest.

This system was described once before in this department about five or six months ago, at which time the theory of it was explained.

A side view of the Peerless Arc as installed in the Cameo Theatre is shown in Fig. 2. The current capacity of the arc is 25 amperes, at which current it is claimed to be as effective in the way of screen illumination as a 100 ampere ordinary arc.

Flushing, N. Y., to Have Modern Picture Theatre

Plans have been completed for the erection of a motion picture theatre which is to be modernly equipped.

The new theatre will be erected on Flushing Avenue about 100 feet from Broadway and will run through to Hopkins Street. The site upon which the theatre will be built has a 20 foot frontage on Flushing Avenue and is 100 ft. deep and on Hopkins Avenue is 120 ft. wide and 100 ft. deep.

The approximate cost of the new theatre will be $500,000. The architect who has completed the plans is George W. Rappold, consulting architect of Famous Players Corporation. The seating capacity of the theatre will be 2000.

Carolina Theatre Supply Co. Moves to New Offices

The Carolina Theatre Supply Company, of Charlotte, of which J. U. McCormick is manager, will move very shortly into new and improved quarters. The new offices are located in the United Film building, and are more convenient and in a more advantageous position than the present location at 13 South Church street. Mr. McCormick is well known throughout this territory, and is one of the most popular men in the theatre business.

Modern Theatre to be Built in Norristown, Pa.

Norristown, Pa. is to have a new theatre to be erected on a site 40 x 140, which has not yet been selected. The plans for the new house are being drawn by S. W. Marshall, 1524 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, and the estimated cost of the new structure is $100,000. The owner is West End Theatre Co.

Lockport, N. Y. Boasts New $300,000 House Elaborately Appointed

THE city of Lockport, N. Y., may now, after a long wait, boast of one of the finest theatres in the western part of the state, for the Palace theatre, built at a cost of $300,000 and seating 1,800 persons, has just been opened. The house was built by Lock Cities Theatres, Inc., and has been leased for a long period by the Paramount theatre department. Largely to the efforts of Charles E. Dickinson, who promoted the house, and A. Edmund Lee, president of Lock City Theatres, is Lockport indebted for its new theatre de luxe.

One enters the Palace through four double oak and glass doors which lead into a spacious tiled lobby, with panels of leaded glass and blue plush lined attraction frames on each side. At the left is the box office with its elaborately decorated windows in leaded and stained glass. The lobby is lighted by several attractive chandeliers in gold and bronze. From the lobby four more oak and glass doors lead into the auditorium, which is a mass of gold, bronze and old rose. There are 1100 seats on the auditorium floor, which is made of heavy concrete, painted with several coats of paint and covered with heavy Wilton carpets. The seats were installed by the American Seating company.

The ladies' room is beautifully furnished with every convenience and well ventilated. There is a large chaise lounge in it for use in case of sickness. At the right going into the house is the door leading into the basement where there is a large smoking room for the men and where one gains entrance to the novel concrete air duct which leads around the entire house and through which cool air, drawn in by a "Sirocco" blower, is circulated to ducts placed in the floor sides of the auditorium. A man can walk through this concrete tunnel which is 6 feet high and lined with two and one-half-inch thick concrete.

The balcony is reached by two stairways from the rear of the auditorium which ascend to a mezzanine floor, attractively furnished by the Haywood-Wakefield company. Hallways lead from the mezzanine to the balcony which has 500 seats and 125 loges, each row of loges, being separated by brass rails furnished by the Zero Valve and Brass corporation of Buffalo. At the top of the balcony is a fully and modernly equipped projection booth wherein is installed two Simplex machines, Brenkert spotlight, a transverter, stereopticon and rewinding machines. Martin Heiberger is in charge of projection.

At each side of the stage are 14 boxes. The proscenium is 40 ft. by 25 ft. and the entire height of the stage is 65 ft. A beautiful mural painting, done by the Lusk studios of Rochester, surmounts the proscenium. At the top of the ceiling is a beautiful dome inlaid with heavy gold leaf and illuminated by an indirect system with every color of the spectrum. At the top of the boxes at each side is the gold grillwork hiding the pipes of the $25,000 Wurlitzer Hope-Jones organ, the console of which is placed at the left in the orchestra pit and which can be raised to concert position by its platform.

The stage is fully equipped for the presentation of the largest road shows. In the fall, by the way, the house will add Keith vaudeville. There are 42 sets back stage.

There are additional rest rooms for ladies and gentlemen on the mezzanine floor, as well as enclosed phone booths, ice water and other conveniences such as writing desks. A Raven screen is used in a beautiful stage setting.

Leon H. Lempert & Son of Lockport were the architects. John Moon & Co. of Lockport had the general contract.

George T. Cruzen is resident manager of the Palace. Joseph Pomeranz, of Buffalo, is orchestra conductor and Bobby Demming, organist. Prices are 10 to 75 cents.

A large ornamental marquise extends out to the walk over the entrance. Attraction signs are placed at the top of the marquise, at each side, and there is a row of lights around the under sides, shaded by ornamental glass. There are three stores on the ground floor and six offices on the second floor. Manager Cruzen's office opens off the mezzanine.

The Palace is perfection throughout and a theatre that any city should be proud of. It is a credit to its builders and is sure to provide entertainment de luxe for the citizens of the historic and famous Lock City.

New Theatre for Plainfield, New Jersey

Plainfield, N. J. is to have a new motion picture theatre to be erected at 434-438 West Front Street at a cost of $65,000. The owner of the building is The Bera Realty Company. The plans are being drawn.

Remarkable Effects Produced by New Use of Slow Motion Camera

A DISTINCT novelty in news reel subjects is contained in Educational's news reel, Kinograms, No. 5105, in a picture showing slow motion and regular motion on the screen at the same time.

This remarkable effect is shown, it is claimed, for the first time in film history, and was accomplished with the aid of a specially designed camera.

The picture was taken by John J. Blythe, Kinograms cameraman for the southeastern district, and concerns a series of views of cadets from the Citizens' Military Training Camp of Atlanta, Georgia, in cavalry practice at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. Colonel Meyer, of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., in command at the Fort, staged the scenes for Blythe, which consisted of expert riders in daring equine stunts, and a series of hurdle jumps.

Blythe, who has been working on his special camera for some time, took it with him as well as a regulation camera. In the exhibition over the hurdles he first exposed the film on the upper half of the screen showing regular motion. Then he wound back the film and this time exposed the lower half in slow motion, using a special device that allows him to obtain any speed desired.

The effect on the screen is truly startling, it is claimed, and gives more than ever before a real chance for analysis. Here you can see simultaneously a horse jumping naturally and also eight times slower than normal. The picture is easy on the eye and the spectator is given plenty of time to take in the whole effect. Of course the horse in the top half of the picture in regular motion disappears from the screen before the slow motion horse has departed, but in order not to leave a blank space on the top half of the screen the cameraman had other horses follow the first one.

The only manner by which this effect could have been accomplished before the appearance of Blythe's invention would have been by double printing. In this case, however, no trickery or juggling with the film has been done.

The scope of this invention is enormous in providing all kinds of screen entertainment, and Kinograms is planning to produce many surprises along these lines in the near future.

Renovated San Francisco Strand Becomes First-Run House

THE "farthest East," of San Francisco's theatres will be the new St. Francis, as the Strand is to be known henceforth. Being remodeled and redecorated at large expense, it takes its place about August 1st, among the large first-run movie palaces along Market Street, with a capacity exceeding that of the Imperial by more than 500 seats. It is announced by Howard Kingsmore, the manager, that it shou'd find great favor among mothers for it will have a "creche" or day nursery in which the young hopefuls will be amused by a nurse and toys while the parents find more sophisticated entertainment downstairs.

The largest electric sign in town, larger than any on New York's Rialto, will grace the exterior of the St. Francis. A new system of lights will illuminate the mura's and sculptured arches within, for the interior will be done over in the Persian style of architecture and ornament. Three crews of workmen and artists going at the task in three sh'fts, are engaged in changing the exterior and installing the stage and electrical equipment ready for the opening timed in Greater Movie Season Week. The organ, now being set up, is unique in that it has a marimba accompaniment, an echo effect and tubes that will simulate the sound of harps and orchestral strings. The St. Francis will screen feature pictures of importance, and will indeterminate runs. Speculation has arisen concerning the new orchestra leader, but no name has yet been given, though it is believed he will be a well known San Francisco musician.

$75,000 House for Coal Mining Town

A NEW $75,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre and apartment building is to be erected in Lykens, the leading hard coal mining town of Dauphin county, Pa., according to announcement made on July 21 by John Loef, a Lykens confectioner, who heads a group of ten men who are to finance the proposition.

He is about to close an option to purchase from Dr. George W. Myers, for $12,000 a business property on East Main street, which will be razed to make room for the new structure. The site is almost directly opposite that of the new $150,000 Community Hotel that Lykens citizens are building. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,000, and there will be five apartments and ten individual lodging rooms in the three-story brick building that is planned.

Mr. Loef declined to state the names of the men associated with him in the enterprise, but said four of them are Lykens business men and the rest are capitalists of Harrisburg and New York City.

"Eve's Lover"—Warners, Piccadilly, N. Y.

Times: "Add one more to the exhibits which prove that if a photoplay is put on well the audience will be content. 'Eve's Lover' has a cast and a director. Hence a very entertaining, and therefore successful, photoplay. The actors play well into each other's hands and they play well individually."

Morning Telegraph: "It is entertaining. There is something in it to please every taste. Women, especially, will enjoy the fine work of Irene Rich in a sympathetic characterization. She plays Eve as she always plays other roles—sincerely and earnestly. Bert Lytell is a dashing and humorous count."

American: "The picture has been well written and directed. Irene Rich is always lovely. Clara Bow and Willard Louis bring fun to the story."

Daily News: "A charming and wholly delightful tale. If Irene Rich is one of your favorites—and isn't she?—don't miss this one."

Evening Post: "'Eve's Lover' is entertaining. Irene Rich is a good Eve."

Sun: "Miss Rich furthers her reputation as an extremely capable cinema actress. This is quite a feat."

Daily Mirror: "The story is frolicsome and snappy, and adroitly handled by Director Roy Del Ruth."

Evening World: "Irene Rich and Bert Lytell are all that could be expected of them. There are some exciting mob scenes."

"Never The Twain Shall Meet"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Daily News: "An achievement and a downright joy! 'Never the Twain Shall Meet' is an enthralling, beauty-filled drama that will make you go away with that misty-eyed but happy feeling. The real South Seas furnished the background for the greater part of the tale and never have you seen such loveliness."

Telegraph: "By far the best of the many South Sea Island pictures is, 'Never the Twain Shall Meet.' Really entertaining, with deft characterizations, good acting and beautiful settings, it should please any audience equally as it did yesterday's large one."

Mirror: "The story unfolds a gripping, vivid heart drama, with Anita Stewart enacting the emotional role of Tamea, tempestuous princess of a South Sea isle. The supporting cast is unusually strong, including such favorites as Bert Lytell, George Siegmann, Justine Johnstone, Lionel Belmore, Huntly Gordon and William Norris."

Journal: "There's one at the Capitol Theatre this week that you are going to like. It's an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's 'Never the Twain Shall Meet.' There is some splendid acting and worthwhile scenery in the production. Anita Stewart in the feature role acquits herself in her usual capable way."

Evening World: "A South Sea story bearing a wealth of beauty is at the Capitol. In this picture Anita Stewart probably does the most commendable work of her long and varied career. She is the most appealing sprite imaginable as the little queen of her South Sea Island who turns out to be a most outrageous barbarian when transplanted to San Francisco."

Graphic: "Many of the scenes were made on the Island of Moorea, so with these colorful tropical backgrounds the picture can't help but have tremendous appeal. Anita Stewart is unusually charming in the role of the South Sea Island princess. The costume, or lack of it, is very becoming to her slender figure."

American: "There's a thrill in the thought of the South Seas, whose islands seem enchanted by romance. Every one has one time felt their lure. This is the setting that Peter B. Kyne selected for his famous story, 'Never the Twain Shall Meet,' which has now been screened with typical Cosmopolitan lavishness. An unusually fine caste is headed by Anita Stewart, in the most important role of her career."

"Sally of the Sawdust"—United Artists, Roosevelt, Chicago

Daily News: "The new D. W. Griffith picture, 'Sally of the Sawdust,' stands in a class by itself. This 'Sally' picture is good, standing way up among the best of the year. And some will say it is the best Griffith has done since he made 'Broken Blossoms.' If you enjoy that twist of the byway of life where tears and laughter come close to mixing, where pain turns with jokes at itself, and the terms of comedy and tragedy get lost like sunshine and rain during a sunshower, then take a look at Carol Dempster playing Sally, unaccountable merging monkeyshines and majesty."

American: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is a picture of undoubted box-office strength. Griffith brushes in characters, pathos and comedy, particularly the latter, with his usual adroitness and, presto, a photoplay that will give many of his other creations a hard run in the popularity race. The picture has been filmed with such a high grade, splendid development of engaging incident that it reaches a high mark as entertainment."

Post: "Comedy is the keynote of D. W. Griffith's latest offering, 'Sally of the Sawdust,' a story of circus life. The plot is simple and is presented in a straight-forward way. It is good entertainment. The laughter it wins from the audiences proves how well its points 'get across.' After all, there is no analyzing comedy. It makes you laugh or it doesn't. And this picture makes 'em laugh, which is its sole aim."

Herald: "Don't miss 'Sally of the Sawdust' which is a masterpiece. It seems to me that the stage art of an actor never has been so successfully transferred to the screen as D. W. Griffith here renders that of W. C. Fields. I shall not attempt to list all the desirable laughs, rail and sawdust, perhaps the only really laughable bootlegging joke of the year. Don't mis 'Sally of the Sawdust.'"

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Orpheum, Chicago

American: "If 'Drusilla With A Million' does not run away with a goodly number of hearts at the Orpheum Theatre, it will not be because of any half-hearted attempt. That the picture exerts considerable heart appeal was pretty conclusively proved when the spectator at the performance attended by his column applauded at the crucial moment of the courtroom sequence climaxing the picture."

Post: "Mary Carr in excellent role. Mrs. Carr is artist enough not to overdo her role. She is pathetic but not mawkish. The role of 'Drusilla' gives this talented actress one of the best parts she has had since her famous 'Over The Hill' success. It's as much fun as a circus!"

"The Goose Woman"—Universal, Colony, New York

Times: "'The Goose Woman' the present film attraction at the Colony, is an unusually interesting production. In this picture Miss Dresser demonstrates her talent as a screen actress. Her performance is so remarkable that it has been the talk of Hollywood for the last six weeks."

Herald Tribune: "A striking characterization by Louise Dresser and some shrewd direction by Clarence Brown make an arresting photoplay out of Rex Beach's novel 'The Goose Woman.' The picture is essentially Miss Dresser's triumph. She is poignant, sincere and always believable as the old woman."

American: "It takes something more than everyday ability to portray a thoroughly sordid character and make the audience understand Dresser has unexpectedly proved and condone. In doing this, Louise herself an unusually fine actress."

Sun: "One of the most striking character studies that have made their way into the movies in many a day is that donated by Louise Dresser in 'The Goose Woman.'"

"The Half Way Girl"—First National, Strand, New York

American: "'The Half Way Girl' is particularly proud of a sensational climax, where a ship in mid-ocean is blown to atoms. Everybody in the Strand audience yesterday appeared to agree with the producers, for there were gasps of excitement and little murmurs of approval for the splendid photography. Usually when one scene is played up so hard, it means that the rest of the picture might as well be forgotten. But that is not true of 'The Half Way Girl.'"

Telegraph: "'The Half Way Girl' is 100 per cent melodrama. There are some genuinely thrilling scenes of a ship burning and sinking at sea."

Herald Tribune: "'The Half Way Girl' is a good picture. It is a complete success, and for once the producers owe a great deal to their title writer. Miss Kenyon never has been as good in any picture as she is in this one. Director Dillon has made an excellent picture."

Journal: "There is a ship explosion scene in 'The Half Way Girl' that is worth going miles to see. Honest Injun, it's a thriller. Broadway has not seen such an effective bit of screen realism in a long time. Miss Doris Kenyon takes the part of the stranded actress heroine. Probably she never has done a better piece of work in her whole successful career."

Times: "'The Half Way Girl' is very well done. The acting and the directing are such that the whole thing seems reasonable and you follow it willingly with close attention. You would never have thought this kind of a picture was in Doris Kenyon's line, but she does it extremely well."

Evening World: "There is a thrilling shipwreck as a climax to 'The Half Way Girl,' but even without this punch, the feature would have been worth while if only for the work in it of Doris Kenyon. This young lady carries the story along to a convincing and gripping conclusion. It affords an excellent opportunity for the depiction of life in the Straits Settlements, and in this, Director John Francis Dillon has done well. The Shipwreck scene is extremely well done. 'The Half Way Girl' is a feather in the cap of Doris Kenyon."

Telegram: "Some of the adventures make the late 'Perils of Pauline' seem parlor tricks by comparison. Most of the merit of the picture lies in its thrills and sensationalism. Singapore, where most of the action occurs, is vividly, colorfully, well depicted. It carries one away for the nonce, as few films do and more should."

The Sun: "An exciting melodrama. I experienced a legitimate and satisfying thrill when the vessel belched forth smoke and flame and then broke into its component parts. There are some well staged scenes of cabarets and dives in Singapore."

IMPORTANT LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF SIMPLEX SERVICE

What Simplex Service Means

EVERY Simplex Distributor maintains a service organization consisting of a group of experienced men. These men make it their business to assist theatre owners in all matters pertaining to better projection so necessary to the successful operation of any theatre large or small.

The benefit of their experience is available to you without obligation. If your projection is not satisfactory, call in a Simplex Service Man. There is one in your district now.

SERVICE — PLUS — COOPERATION
BUILT THE SIMPLEX REPUTATION

It makes no difference what kind of machine you are using. Simplex Service is broader and goes farther than the selling of projectors. The good will we have won is not based on our products alone. For service plus cooperation built the Simplex Reputation.

TEN COMMANDMENTS IS BREAKING ALL RECORDS AT BOTH DESMOINES THEATRE

DESMOINES AND STRAND THEATRE OMAHA

SEYMOUR ANSLEY.

Well, that's not unexpected.

It does that everywhere!

"The pictures that will be successful in 1925-1926 are those that have ready-made audiences waiting for them."

—Introduction to Paramount announcement book, May 1925

These of the Greater Forty have had their first presentations:

1 NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK
2 THE LUCKY DEVIL
3 THE STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN
4 BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK
5 WILD WILD SUSAN
6 NOT SO LONG AGO
7 WILD HORSE MESA
8 THE TROUBLE WITH WIVES
9 THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

—let's check 'em up:

1 NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK—

A proven draw in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Boston. A clean-up wherever played. And a bigger clean-up assured for the smaller towns.

WHY?

The title, Allan Dwan's direction. Comedy. Ernest Torrence, Rod LaRocque, Dorothy Gish, George Hackathorne. The night clubs. A ready-made-audience picture.

2 THE LUCKY DEVIL——

Admittedly Dix's greatest. Universally praised. From Pittsfield, Mass. to San Antonio acclaimed as a knock-out seat-seller. A word of mouth advertiser.

WHY?

The star. The auto-race scenes. The pleasing story. The fast action. Esther Ralston's beauty. Comedy. A ready-made-audience picture.

3 THE STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN—

Broke all records in complete capacity for a week at McVickers, Chicago. It cleaned up in New York. It'll go big anywhere.

WHY?

It's different. It's got meat and drama in it. Brenon did a masterful job. Percy Marmont excels all previous work. The story was widely read in Liberty. It's a great title. A ready-made-audience picture.

4 BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK—

In Newport, R. I., it did more in 4 days than the gross for any entire week since May. Because it was advertised right. Where the right appeal is made, this high-class show can clean-up.

WHY?

No better picture was ever made. A credit to the movies. Too imaginative for the low-brows, but a clean-up, if played right, for the millions. Comedy. Cruze. Stage hit. Laughs. Imagination. Wealth of exploitation ideas. A ready-made-audience picture.

5 WILD WILD SUSAN ——

Clean-up at Rialto, New York, with no side attractions on program. Audiences love it.

WHY?

It's funny. It's fast. Bebe is magnificent. The titles. La Rocque is great. Sutherland's best picture. Widely read story from Liberty. Day-life of New York scenes. A ready-made-audience picture.

6 NOT SO LONG AGO ——

Fulsome praise from critics. Big business wherever shown. The kind of picture that brings both money and prestige to a theater.

WHY?

Betty Bronson's definite arrival as a Class A star. Olcott's direction. Cortez's finest performance. The title. The little old New York atmosphere. The love story. The comedy. A ready-made-audience picture.

7 WILD HORSE MESA ——

A clean-up in San Francisco pre-release. Loudly praised by critics. Sure fire anywhere.

WHY?

Zane Grey at his best. The stampede of 5000 wild horses. The barbed wire fence fight. Jack Holt. Billie Dove. Noah Beery. Action. Fights. Thrills. Adventure. A ready-made-audience picture.

8 THE TROUBLE WITH WIVES-

Try this on your projector. It speaks for itself. No more pleasant, humor-warming, audience-pleasing comedy was ever devised. Pre-released in New York in Greater Movie Season competition proves its great drawing power.

WHY?

The title. Ford Sterling's comedy. Florence Vidor and Esther Ralston's beauty. Gowns, shoe-store tie-ups. Tom Moore. St. Clair's comedy direction. A ready-made-audience picture.

9 THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—

Everywhere breaking the stupendous records of "The Covered Wagon." Playing to extra time to accommodate the crowds. An admitted knockout everywhere.

WHY?

Best known picture in minds of public today. A ready-made-audience picture. ——

-and that's a REAL beginning of a GREATER MOVIE SEASON!

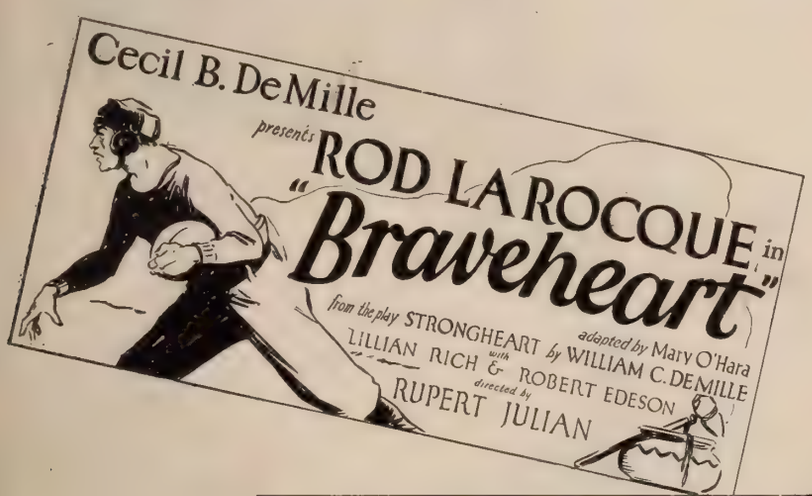
ROCQUE
Star Productions



ENDOWED with every physical attribute that makes for popularity; possessing a magnetism and histrionic talent distinctive and thoroughly schooled under the greatest directors of stage and screen, Rod La Rocque has attained his present high position as the foremost romantic actor of the screen through sheer merit and proved box office drawing power.

"THE COMING OF AMOS," "RED DICE," "BRAVEHEART" and "THE UNTAMED GENTLEMAN" are the titles of the four pictures in which La Rocque will star for Cecil B. DeMille.

The stories around which these productions will be made were selected with a view to giving Mr. La Rocque the greatest opportunity for the exposition of his magnetic personality and the exploitation of that distinctive mimetic talent that has endeared him to the motion picture patrons throughout the world.

SUMMARY—"A real knockout that any house should welcome with open arms."

The reception given by the critics to

"THE TOURIST"

First of six new two-reel

Tuxedo Comedies

featuring

JOHNNY ARTHUR

Directed by WILLIAM GOODRICH, is the sort of reception that is given only with the advent of a great star —a sure-fire money-maker for Showmen

The N. Y. Morning Telegraph says:

Here is the best two-reel comedy that has been turned out this season. It is a charming trifle, and there is every indication that in its star, Johnny Arthur, Educational has a real find. He is a delightful personality—he creates a character rather than merely submitting his person to the thuds of the slapstick. There is very little rough stuff of any kind in "The Tourist," but there is actually human interest—a rare quality in the two-reelers. Arthur plays a worthy tourist who has considerable trouble keeping his ancient flivver intact.

One of the best bits of business ever concocted —one that will set any audience howling—is the scene in which Johnny converts his car into a stove and cooks his breakfast on its various parts. It must be seen to be appreciated.

As if a real star and entertaining tale and excellent direction were not enough, there is added the presence in the cast of the most promising girl we have noticed on the screen in a blue, or even a red moon. She is Helen Foster, and if some enterprising producer doesn't sign her up for life, he will be missing the chance of his own lifetime. She is beautiful, she has poise—she is, in plain language, a wow. She helps to make "The Tourist" a real knockout that any house should welcome with open arms.

And the M. P. News says:

This is the first of the series of Tuxedo comedies starring Johnny Arthur and if it is indicative of what is to follow, the series should be a profitable one for all hands. By way of a change in these short comedies, here is one that tells a real story with some form of continuity and that does not sidetrack itself in interspersing an abundance of good comedy and gags. Both the gags and the comedy work into the story naturally.

William Goodrich has done a splendid job with the directing and the cast does the rest with the good story. Unfortunately there are not enough comedies of this type. There is a touch of melodrama to it, great quantities of comedy and enough suspense to keep the interest at a high pitch.

FOX NEWS FOREIGN SERVICE NOW RECOGNIZED AS LEADING THE WORLD'S NEWS REEL FIELD

Many Camera Expeditions into Every Continent Now Under Way

The entertaining, the beautiful, the unusual. With these three qualities in mind, Fox News cameramen are today penetrating the out-of-the-way places of the world, searching for material that may prove acceptable in Fox News American and foreign editions.

One hundred feet of negative found worthy of inclusion in one issue of the news reel is sufficient incentive to send a daring Fox News representative into the mountain retreat of some Balkan overlord; into the frozen wastes of the Far North; through the jungles of the equator.

Time, expense, comfort are subordinated to the task of getting the new, the interesting and the unusual for presentation to a picture public of approximately fifty million persons.

The following Fox News expeditions are now just completed or are under way:

Russell Muth into the Balkans and seldom visited spots in Scandinavia.

Ben Miggins through Egypt, Turkey and the Near East.

Ferdinand Delgado through the West Indies, Spain and South America.

Charles Lehmann into the interior of Ecuador.

Ferd Fordham to the islands of the Pacific.

Len Roos through Australia and New Zealand.

Patiently, painstakingly and alertly these men are hunting finding pictorial news and features for Fox News in the odd corners of the globe.

Fox News Wins High Praise from Exhibitors

From far and wide throughout the country come expressions of praise from exhibitors who are using Fox News. For instance: "The wide range of subjects is really marvellous"—The Midway, Montreal; "When it comes to new thoughts and originality I must take off my hat to Fox News"—Geo. M. Krupa, Hamilton and Aldine Theatres, Lancaster, Pa.; "A theater without Fox News is like a bank without funds"—Herman A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co.; "There is not a company on the market that has more up-to-date or more exclusive news than Fox News"—John P. Freman, Strand Theater, Malden, Mass.

Every week, more and more exhibitors throughout the country are contracting for Fox News, convinced by the timeliness of its service, the originality of its subjects, its use of color and the excellence of its photography and printing that it is the best on the market.

Thousands of Dollars in Camera Equipment

To keep pace with the rush of world events and to supply the constantly increasing staff of cameramen with the best in mechanical equipment, Fox News has recently spent thousands for the latest type cameras, lenses and mounts. Two Akeley high speed cameras, the last word in photographic equipment, have been acquired for New York office at a cost of $4,000. Three new Bell and Howell cameras also have been added at a cost of $9,000. Extra lenses, up to seventeen inches focal length also have been bought. This in addition to previous equipment valued at over $25,000.

More Staff Men Added to Camera Corps in America

Every Important Center Covered—Great Strides in South and West

"Know where hell is going to break loose next—and have a man there," was the recipe for journalistic supremacy advanced by a famous editor. The editors of Fox News endeavor to go farther. They place their best cameramen at strategic points throughout the United States to get motion pictures of things as soon as they "break loose."

These star staff cameramen are men of proven initiative and imagination. Their territory extends many miles beyond the cities in which they are stationed. When a hot tip comes to their ears—and their ears are attuned for such tips—they rush away to the place where the news is.

Staff Cameraman Roy Anderson of St. Louis, one evening last March, learned that many towns in Southern Illinois were being devastated by a tornado. Anderson had the tip as soon as the newspapers. He grabbed his camera, caught the Red Cross relief train to the scene, worked three days without sleep and got his pictures to Broadway hours in advance of his rivals. All in the day's work for Anderson.

Recently Fox News has greatly augmented its staff in this country, particularly in the South and West. Among new appointees are Tracy Mathewson, the veteran, in Atlanta and the South, and Jack McFarland in Texas and the long stretches along the Rio Grande. There is now no section of the United States that cannot be reached by a Fox News cameraman, in a matter of one or two hours. When "hell breaks loose" a man is there or gets there—fast.

The others were forced down. The Fox News pilot persisted. Near Gary, Indiana, he came down in the night. Battered, he walked to a farm house, hired an automobile and drove into Chicago. At dawn, he delivered the negative to Talley and the cutters. Two hours later, the first prints were on their way by air mail to New York. Other prints went to all parts of the country. Millions saw the Derby on Sunday afternoon, 24 hours after it had been run in Louisville. Competitors did not reach the screen in some cases until two days later.

This is but one example. The international polo matches in London are another. Also the English Derby, the inauguration of President Hindenburg of Germany, the Indianapolis Auto Races, etc., etc., etc.

A box containing a partial list of Fox News scoops appears at the bottom of this page.

Fox News Fashions a Hit with Public

It is computed that women comprise sixty-five per cent of motion picture theater audiences. What does every woman discuss and think about? Fashions! Fox News has presented each season the latest thing in dresses, wraps and sport attire—displayed on living models. As good as a seat in a Fifth Avenue shop. Fox News shows the women what they want to see.

Fox News Acquires its own Airplane to Serve Exhibitors with Pictures of World Events in Fastest Time

MRS. FOX CHRISTENING FOX NEWS PLANE

Powerful Curtiss Oriole is Used Exclusively in News Reel Work

FOX NEWS HANGAR, MINEOLA, ITS BASE

Fox News is the only newsgathering agency in the world that now owns and uses its own airplane, employed exclusively in the work of photographing news events and bringing the negative to the home office.

The plane, a Curtiss Oriole C-6 of 160 horsepower, with a cruising speed of 80 miles an hour, was put into commission July 21 at Curtiss Field, Long Island. It was christened by Mrs. William Fox before a gathering of notables of the motion picture and journalistic worlds.

The plane is subject to call at any hour of day or night winter or summer, to rush motion picture cameramen to the scene of a big news story, to assist in photographing the event and then to speed back to New York with the cameramen and their film. The plane is equipped with a complete array of the latest appliances for every phase of day and night flying and for every emergency. Besides an extra gas tank, which increases the flying radius to 750 miles without a stop, the plane is supplied with the latest style parachutes for all passengers and pilot. The pilot is Lieut. George A. Weis, Jr., a noted aviator.

Although news reels and newspapers have at times rented airplanes for special events, no other news gathering agency has ever owned its own plane, with a staff aviator. Exhibitors and the press have hailed this innovation as a great step forward in journalism.

FOX NEWS DOMINATES BIG THEATRES' COMPOSITE REELS

On Broadway and in other Theatrical Centers of the United States, Exhibitors Select Higher Percentage of Fox Subjects

The judgment of the six Broadway theatres of New York City is a fair standard of excellence. Each week, the managing directors of these six first run houses review all four American news reels and from their offerings select composite reels for presentation.

Selection is entirely on a basis of quality. The judgment of six keen and experienced theatre men comes into play. Fox News competes against three rivals, no favors asked and none given.

Month in and month out, Fox News leads in this competitive showing. Some weeks, Fox News has more subjects on Broadway than all its competitors combined. Other weeks some competitors will press close for leadership. But on an average, taken over the months and years, will show Fox News far ahead of all rivals.

Nor does this take into account that Fox News regularly comprises an average of nine subjects only, while competitors frequently use many more short subjects. On a basis of actual footage used, the showing of Fox News would be even greater than when computation is made by subjects used.

Here is the Broadway record for the last eleven weeks, typical of the showing week in and week out. Fox News, 37.3 per cent; nearest rival, 27.2; next, 26.6; next, 8.7. Four of the six Broadway houses give Fox News preference over all others. One uses nothing but Fox News. The other puts Fox News second.

Surely this showing means that Fox News is truly "mightiest of All."

Editor Appointed in the Chicago Territory

Harry Lawrenson, long associated with Fox News and other motion picture enterprises in this country and Europe, has been appointed editor of the Chicago branch of Fox News. This move is in line with Fox News policy to distribute world events as close to the source as possible. Millions of theater patrons are now served, without delay from Fox News Chicago office.

FOX NEWS ATTAINS IMPOSING RECORD OF SCOOPS ON EVENTS OF WORLD WIDE IMPORTANCE

1925-26 Contracts Are Rolling in for Fox News Service

Business Already Signed Presages the Greatest Year in History

Some of the biggest—and canniest—exhibitors in the country are enthusiastic patrons of Fox News. Among them are Fitzpatrick and McElroy, controlling many theatres in Michigan, the Butterfield Circuit in Michigan; Finkelstein and Ruben, with their chain of theatres in the Twin Cities territory, Comerford Amusement Company of Philadelphia territory; Stanley Company, Atlantic City territory, and Lubliner and Trinz, Chicago territory.

Fox News has enjoyed a rapid and steady growth since its origin, less than six years ago. Entering a field crowded with various news reels it rapidly proved its right to patronage by public and exhibitors.

Today, Fox News holds front rank in many sections of the country and is rapidly reaching a commanding position, not only in the United States but in the thirty odd foreign countries in which it circulates.

Cameramen's College Endorsed by Industry

An innovation in motion picture journalism was the establishment in the early Fall of 1924 of Fox News camera college, for the benefit of editors, cameramen and mechanical experts. The lecturers were men foremost in various lines of the industry and their views were eagerly heard by Fox News employees as conducive to aiding their task of giving the public what it wants.

Among the lecturers were: Carl Akeley, inventor of the camera that bears his name and big game hunter and explorer; W. L. Rothafel, "Roxy," of broadcasting fame and presentation director of the Capitol Theater, New York City; Rowland V Lee, director of such famous successes as "As No Man Has Loved" and "Havoc"; Eric T. Clarke, manager of the Eastman Theatre of Rochester, and Dr Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rialto, Rivoli, and Criterion Theatres, New York City.

Leaders of the industry endorsed Fox News' cameramen's college, prominent among the well-wishers being Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

International Happenings Brought to the Screen First and Exclusively

Fox News has earned a reputation for speed and enterprise in the matter of big news events to the screen FIRST. Not once, but many times, have competitors been beaten hours—even DAYS—in the delivering of pictures of world-important events to exhibitors. It has gotten to be a habit, and theater owners of the nation have come to expect Fox News to be first.

Perhaps the outstanding example of this priority came with the running of the world-famous Kentucky Derby last May. The outstanding sport event of the year, renowned as a thriller made up of every requisite of pictorial value, every news and picture agency in the country laid elaborate plans to cover it. Every resource of human and mechanical sort was liberally employed by all of them but Fox News added the extra measure of foresight that spelled an exclusive.

Derby Day was one of sunshine and sudden showers. When the horses went to the post, the skies were suddenly darkened. Staff cameraman Edmund Reek took a desperate chance—he changed his shutter at the very last moment while the horses were at the barrier. His camera was ready just as they leaped away—but it WAS ready for the changed light conditions and no other motion picture camera was. Reek's negative looked as if it were made on a bright, sunshiny day—the race could be watched far better on the screen than it could at the actual track.

Director in Chief Truman H. Talley and a staff of cutters were waiting in Chicago. Reek and the other Fox News cameramen delivered their film to the pilot of an airplane. Through the gathering storm, he and a dozen others fought their way toward Chicago.

$1,000 in Prizes for Fox News Cameramen

As a reward for exceptionally meritorious work during the year 1924-1925, two prizes of $500 each were given by Fox News to Staff Cameraman Edmund Reek of New York City, and Field Cameraman Charles W Herbert, of Montana.

In addition, gold watches were given to Staff Cameraman Eric Mayell of Seattle, and Field Cameraman Ernest Corts of Pennsylvania. The above were in addition to weekly bonuses paid for outstanding subjects.

Staff Cameramen on Fleet's Pacific Trip

When the combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets of the United States Navy, a magnificent Armada, started on its year's cruise to the islands of the Pacific and to Australia, Cameraman Ferd Fordham of Fox News' New York staff went along.

From Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the Panama Canal, San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco, Hawaii, Samoa and Australia, Fordham sent numerous interesting subjects that earned place in the issues of Fox News.

Fordham was first with pictures of the great naval and land manoeuvers at Oahu, Hawaii.

DAVIS DISTRIBUTING DIVISION, Inc., in accordance with its established policy of a fair and square deal for the Independent Exhibitor and for its Independent Producing Units has, in every case, sought to secure the exchange man in each city with the best reputation for square dealing, fair play and ability to secure bookings.

It has placed much of its product with such men throughout the United States.

Now Davis Distributing Division, Inc., has closed contracts for its output for the next five years with Vital Exchanges, Inc. — composed of a group of men, most of whom, for years members of the sales force of Vitagraph, have bred confidence in their word and earned for themselves reputations as "square dealers."

Thus at one stroke the Independent Exhibitors and the Independent Producers are alike reassured. The former that they will get the best pictures at "live and let live" prices – the latter, that their productions will bring back to them all that they are worth as box office attractions.

Davis Distributing Division, Inc. pledges its word to Exhibitor, Producer and Exchange alike that each unit will receive a square deal. All existing contracts will be faithfully performed.

VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc., enters the sales field of the industry to enable the men who toiled faithfully over a period of years to build for themselves and their former company a reputation for honesty and fair dealing, the opportunity to go into business for themselves.

The " Live and Let Live " principle that has been the guiding star of these men for so many years will be the backbone of Vital Exchanges, Inc. Each branch man will own and operate his own exchange, and thereby profit from the good will he has built up. He in turn will play square with the Independent Exhibitor, and they will both profit accordingly.

In my search for product to be distributed through our twenty-nine branches in the United States and Canada, I found none to equal that offered by Davis Distributing Division, Inc., so we signed a contract to take all of their product for the next five years.

As a further pledge, I personally make these statements for my company:

1st: Vital Exchanges, Inc. will never enter the exhibitors field of owning or operating theatres.

2nd: Vital Exchanges, Inc. will depend solely upon the Independent Theatre Owners for their support, and will never sell out to financial interests allied with producer-theatre owning interests.

Mr. W. E. Matthews,

Portland, Oregon.

Dear Mr. Matthews

I have a very interesting fact before me which I have discovered after carefully checking my records of the business I have done in my theatre here in Caribaldi. I think you would interested in having this fact laid before you.

I have used during the past year, a little service from practically all of the exchanges doing business in the Northwest. I do not believe my community is any different from any other community in the United States, unless it be the fact that my patrons are red blood people who desire the best there is to be had in entertainment values.

Now here is the point. I have paid no more or no less for your service than I have for that coming from any other exchange. And right here I want to say that the pictures supplied me by F.B.O. show me the only real profit of my entire service for the entire year.

Yours very truly,

A. B. Eccles.

ROSE THEATRE
CARIBALDI, OREGON

dgment is the criterion exhibitor success!

ANYBODY can be an exhibitor, but to be a successful exhibitor is entirely another matter!

The successful exhibitor doesn't just buy pictures, put them on his screen and trust to luck that the people will keep coming. He figures out what kind of pictures his people will like, what kind of pictures will help to build his patronage.

He knows that human nature is very much alike—what the average man and woman in one town will like, the average man and woman in another town will like—and he bases his judgment on the business being done with pictures by his brother exhibitors. In this way he gets a line on the producing companies turning out the highest average of box-office pictures.

This is the reason that more successful exhibitors are becoming F. B. O. customers daily. They know that F. B. O. Pictures are box-office pictures—they know that stronger exploitation campaigns are put behind F. B. O. Pictures than any other brand—they know that the service is right and that the prices are right. They know that if they can't make money with F. B. O. Pictures they can't make money with any pictures!

The letter in this ad shows you what one exhibitor thinks about it! There are thousands of others who feel the same way, as the Exhibitors' Reports in the Trade Papers are proving weekly.

F. B. O. is releasing 56 feature pictures in 1925–1926, comprising 44 productions headed by some of the country's most popular stars, and 12 F. B. O. Gold Bonds. The F. B. O. Gold Bonds are: "Drusilla With a Million," "The Keeper of the Bees," "Parisian Nights," "If Marriage Fails," "A Poor Girl's Romance," "The Last Edition," "Happiness," "When His Love Grew Cold," "The Midnight Flyer," "The Futurity Winner," "Flaming Waters" and "The Isle of Retribution."

Get on the F. B. O. band wagon today. We don't care how much money you are making, until you become an F. B. O. exhibitor, you are not making as much money as you are able to!

Why Hundreds of Theatres Changed their Projection

In hundreds of theatres the use of the Incandescent Lamp has cut the cost of projection from 35% to 75%. When you can save hundreds of dollars a year on your current bills, and at the same time improve your projection, is it not a matter of good business to do so?

The following table shows the annual savings that a 900 Watt Edison MAZDA Incandescent Lamp makes over arc lights of various amperages. For instance, if you are operating a 50 amperage arc by rheostat control, ten hours a day, current rate 8c. a k.w. hour, you can save $1280.00 a year by replacing your arc with a 900 Watt Edison MAZDA Incandescent Lamp. If your arc control is by motor generator, compensator, or rectifier, your saving would be $623.00 per year. If you operate five hours a day, your annual saving would be half as much in each case.

Motion Picture News holds this position in the motion picture industry today because it has become an essential part of the business life of its readers and advertisers—a necessity to both exhibitor and distributor.

The building up of this confidence over a long period of years has resulted in a wider circulation and a greater volume of advertising carried than any other journal in this field.

INDIANAPOLIS says IT'S GREAT!

TIMES

"Constance Talmadge is at her VERY BEST in this movie. It is wise cracking fun and she mounts from one ridiculously funny situation to another! We don't have to import our chief players for comedy and farce. Constance Talmadge today stands right at the top in this sort of work. Her vehicle is a gem as she not only impersonates the wild "baby" sister from Paris but the stay-at-home wife. Here is gorgeous fun."

NEWS

"Judging by the audiences that crowded the Circle to the limit of its capacity at the six presentations of this photoplay, the public does not need to be informed concerning the charms of this incomparable comedienne. 'Her Sister from Paris' is sure to be listed among the best productions of the greater movie season — a continuously exciting light comedy drama. If the laughter muscles of your face need exercise see this photoplay."

Did not look for any great knockout on this because Colleen has been hitting too close on one hundred per cent on her recent pictures and the law of averages did not warrant another "Sally." Motion Picture News

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, AUGUST 22, 1925 NO. 8

The Greater Movie

THERE were two highly informative articles in last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS. One, by L. C. Moen, of our staff, reviews the European situation and, among other deductions, points out that Europe wants only our best and not our ordinary product and even may see to it that only product of merit is admitted to her shores. The other article, by Edwin Schallert of the Los Angeles Times, says that Hollywood is tuned up at last to the making of truly "big" pictures.

The two articles dovetail, and to a degree, it seems to me, that casts a pretty clear searchlight on what the future holds in store for this business.

That future, as we see it, as we have always seen it, will depend primarily upon product. Upon Pictures. Their future, their hold upon the amusement business, will be as broad as the broadness of our ability to create them. In other words, it is the producer who will count most heavily in this industry's future.

The talk of the trade today is—theatres. Get the theatres, says the composite voice of the industry, and you've got everything. Theatres make the money. But, anyway, get them at any price and run them at any expense. Theatres are the keys to booking. Theatres control the game.

All of which is generally hysterical and but partly true, and considerably dangerous.

The producer yearns for theatres today as show-windows for his goods. That's his urge —primarily. In other words, they advertise the goods. That is what it simmers down to —generally. All of which is fine. We'd be the last to deprecate advertising—that's judicious and effective. But when you say that advertising is everything you're going too far —by far; you're swinging the horse by the tail. Advertising is predicated upon the goods. It follows good goods. That's its place.

Another thing: running theatres is a business in itself. Aside from that important feature, the receipts rise and fall as the picture is good, bad or indifferent. That's true of any theatre.

About eleven years ago we ran an editorial entitled: "Bigger Pictures, Better Pictures and Longer Runs." It created some attention in those days of programs and daily changes. But it appears that we were premature. Evidently the wish was father to the thought; and we forgot, in our enthusiasm, that the industry was in its swaddling clothes; that it had to emerge by eras of growth into the necessary stature.

As we look back we find that the business went into successive eras of stars, of directors, of stories. Each, at the time, was extolled as all-important. But, of course, it simply meant the gradual development of production ability and organization. And then distribution loomed up as all-important, with its various schemes of getting the goods to market. And now it's theatres or advertising.

But all this time, and as we all know, the picture has been the telling force. And today, as our horizon becomes international in scope, it is the greater movie and the ability to make it that stand out, as they should, as the dominant forces of the industry.

As we read Mr. Schallert's list of outstanding pictures and grow optimistic upon the subject, we are faced also with the fact that the new season promises something: a thousand feature pictures for a world's market that wants considerably less and certainly not so many of the program type.

Which is not a good economic situation. The industry's stomach is wonderfully elastic, but there are going to be a lot of indigestion pains this year; that's certain. The wise man is the maker of the greater movie, the special attraction, the show that is a show and not merely a release.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Jimmie Walker—Friend of the Screen

SENATOR JAMES J. WALKER, known throughout the country as a stalwart friend of the motion picture industry, has been designated for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of New York City. His opponent in the Democratic primaries, which will be held September 15, is the present incumbent, John F. Hylan.

The Senator is the candidate of Manhattan and the Bronx, comprising a plurality of the Democratic voters at the last election, and his candidacy is sponsored by Governor Alfred E. Smith and George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany Hall.

Senator James J. Walker.

The whole amusement world is intensely interested in the fight Jimmie Walker is making for the nomination. Marcus Loew once described him as the most remarkable personality he had ever known. His gift of eloquence, keen wit and searching analysis has often been turned to the aid of the motion picture.

For years the Democratic leader in the State Senate at Albany, Jimmie has been in the forefront of every movement for the liberty of the screen. In 1919, he had charge of the passage of the bill legalizing Sunday opening in the State. He championed the measure and fought relentlessly until it was placed on the statute books.

It was Senator Walker who led the battle against the adoption of censorship in the Empire State. Later, he worked just as earnestly for the repeal of the law. Throughout his legislative career he has stood unflinchingly for the best interests of the screen.

For several years, he was one of the leading spirits in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, became its National Counsel and made speeches all the way across the country in behalf of the exhibitor cause. At many national and state conventions he was the conspicuous figure and won admirers wherever he went by his brilliance and his fighting qualities.

His work as counsel for the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York is also well known. No motion picture event of importance within recent years has been considered complete without the presence of Jimmie Walker.

No man in public life anywhere has demonstrated his friendship for the screen more emphatically than he has. His fight for the Mayoralty of New York is an event of national importance and to the motion picture industry particularly it is a matter of very great interest. A rare and delightful personality and a great friend of this industry is Jimmie Walker.

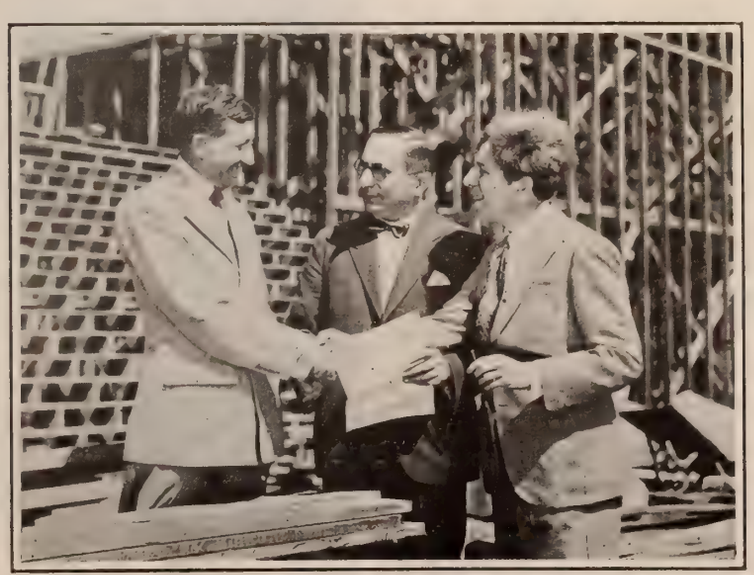
PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Barbara La Mar, after 18 months in the East, arrives once more in California to be co-featured with Lewis Stone in "Spanish Sunlight" (First National).

C. W. Ginger, winner of the First National, Ltd., sales contest in England, who has been given a trip to the home office in New York and return in recognition of this.



Marian Nixon, Universal player, has started the new fad of matching your pet to your fur coat, and carries Georgette on the leash to match her new leopard skin. But suppose the coat was sealskin, Marian?"

STIFF COMPETITION

ONLY two new pictures on Broadway this week, the same being "Wild Horse Mesa", which held forth at the Rialto Theatre; and Universal's "The Homemaker" at The Colony. The others were hold-overs, three of them—mentioned in this column when they made their respective debuts as super-films, the greatest trio seen at once on the street where the white lights shine, within the same period of time. At the Capitol, Metro-Goldwyn's "The Unholy Three," at the Strand, "Sally Of The Sawdust"; at the Piccadilly, "Kiss Me Again." And all three more than fulfilled the hopes of the publicity boosters. Crowded houses all the time, enthusiasm unlimited on the part of the spectators in each case, and great box office results. Which simply goes to prove that the fans know good stuff when they see it. "The play's the thing," was the box office slant voiced by Shakespeare in his day. And the Bard of Avon had his finger on the public pulse. He gave the people what they wanted. In modern times the Shakespeare showmanship angle still holds good. The film with the real punch, be it humorous, sensational, serious, pathetic, sentimental, will always hold an audience.

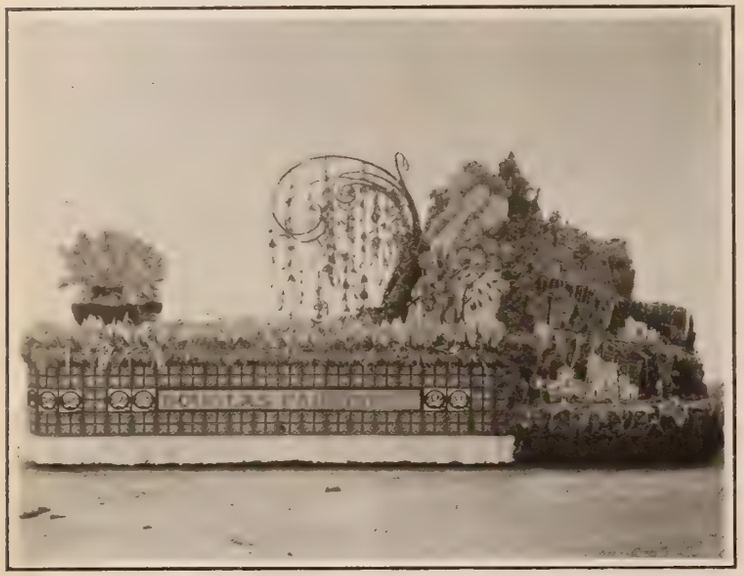
It was putting a pretty severe strain on "Wild Horse Mesa" to place the Paramount offering in competition with such a trio of unique features. Yet, this Westerner held its own, because it struck out along original lines and was altogether different from the "done to death" tales of the open air adventure formula. Here was a new angle! The roundup of steers and cattle stampedes, have been featured again and again, but thousands of wild horses galloping pell-mell to seeming destruction, until headed off by the hero, provide a thrill hitherto unknown on the screen. And the star, Jack Holt, has never appeared to better advantage than he did in this picture.

The "Home Maker," at the Colony, was a pleasing domestic drama, above the average in point of interest, well directed, cleverly acted and a good drawing card.

Will Hays, Louis B. Mayer and Sid Grauman at the signing of the contract for the presentation by Grauman of "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

Ann Pennington, appearing in "The Lucky Horseshoe" (Fox), casts her silver dancing pumps into the canyon and threatens to remain in California, far, far from Broadway.

Lovely Lilyan Tashman has been forging steadily to the front, and now Metropolitan Pictures has signed her to appear in productions for release by Producers Dist. Corp.



Raymond Keane, new Universal "discovery" playing in "The Midnight Sun" poses on two powder kegs to illustrate his conception of the hazards in playing your first big role.

IBANEZ VISITS INGRAM

BLASCO IBANEZ, the celebrated Spanish author, and his bride of a few weeks, visited Rex Ingram's studio near Nice, recently. There is nothing singular about this occurence, for the director and author have been close friends ever since Ingram produced "The Four Horsemen," except that it marks the breaking of Ibanez's stay-at-home policy, he having been living almost in exile at his villa near Mentone, France, ever since his differences with the King of Spain.

Ingram was guest of honor at the Ibanez residence several times since his arrival in France for the purpose of filming "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea), one of the author's best known stories. The studio where this Metro-Goldwyn picture is under way is located on the Riviera, thirty miles from Mentone. Senora Ibanez, granddaughter of Marshal Bulnes, was the widow of a Chillian diplomat, and is noted for her ability as a linguist, speaking English, French, German and Italian fluently. The newly-weds reached the studio in the morning and remained there all day, lunching at the restaurant with Mr. Ingram and the latter's two principals, Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno. The visitors were highly pleased with the completed scenes of the feature, and spent the greater part of their time watching the company at work, afterwards posing for photographs. Supporting Moreno and Miss Terry are a large number of players selected by Ingram from the best of European talent. Willis Goldbeck prepared the continuity.

One of the most elaborately constructed floats in the Los Angeles Movie Season parade was that representing the Douglas Fairbanks studio, with a complete miniature village at one end.

BACK TO HOLLYWOOD

JAMES Cruze has returned to Hollywood from Cheyenne, Wyoming, with several hundred players, after filming locations for "The Pony Express," and is making interiors at the Paramount Studio. The first exteriors were shot on the big set at Sacramento, California, reproducing that city as it was in 1860. Samuel Shortridge, United States Senator from California, was an interested visitor on that occasion, and so much impressed that he asked to have a special print made from the negative. The Senator plans to have a copy of the production filed in the historical department of the Congressional Library in Washington, D. C., first arranging for a special showing before President Coolidge.

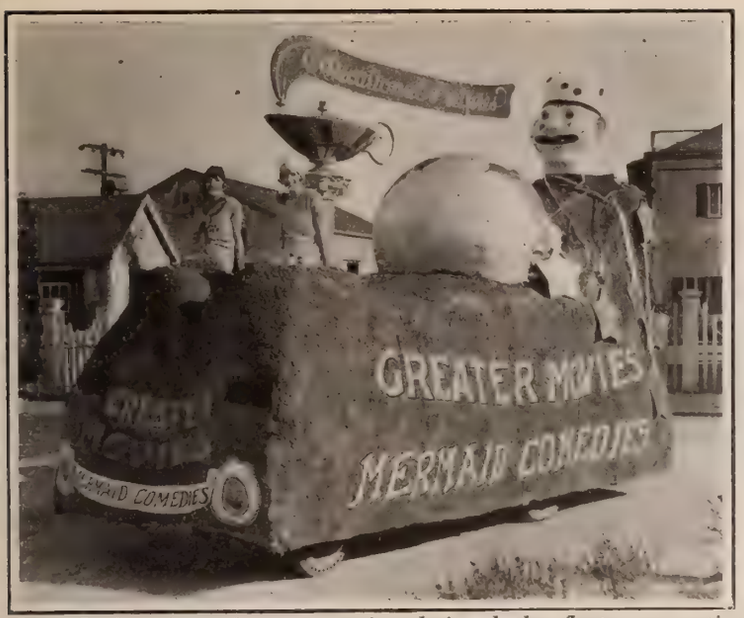
UNDER EAGLE'S WING

AT the Union station in Kansas City the other day, Charlie Chaplin was enthusiastically hailed as a compatriot by many members of a crowd which gathered to welcome the celebrated comedian. Cries of—"I'm English, too, Charlie!", rent the air.

"They mean well, but shoot wide of the target," commented the actor. "If there was a band handy we might have it play "God save the King." But I guess they've mixed me up with the Prince of Wales, for I happen to be a naturalized American citizen!"

Paramount's Flower of the Night" float was one of the beautiful highlights in the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season parade.

STAGE STARS' REUNION



THE beginning of work on the production end of Maurice Campbell's "Wandering Fires," to be distributed by Arrow Pictures Corporation, brought together two famous American players who have made theatrical history, in the persons of Henrietta Crossman and Effie Shannon, at Whitman Bennett's Glendale studio. Back in the old days they were both members of companies organized by Augustin Daly and Charles Frohman, and scored such big hits in "The Charity Ball" and "The Idler," that their manager separated and placed them in productions featuring each individually. Constance Bennett, Wallace MacDonald and George Hackthorne also play important roles in "Wandering Fires."

FUN ON THE SIDE LINES

LIGE CONLEY avers that unconscious humor often breaks even with the efforts of the laugh-creators engaged in screen production. In proof whereof he states that while shooting scenes for an Educational Mermaid comedy two dummies were utilized to double for the actors in a fall from a high building. These dummies, remarkably convincing in appearance, hurtled downward and were lying on the sidewalk where they fell, when an old lady-apparently from the rural districts, rushed forward, brought a small camera to bear on the prostrate figures, snapped one shot and then yelled loudly for someone to fetch an ambulance.

The William Whalen family of Scranton, Pa., winners of the $500 first prize in Pathe's contest to select the Typical American Family, in connection with its serial, "Idaho."

Lige Conley, formerly a cartoonist, designed the float representing Mermaid comedies and allied Educational units in the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season parade. Estelle Bradley and Virginia Vance are the decorative figures at the prow of the strange craft.

WEST LURES ANN

ANN PENNINGTON, dainty ex-dancing star of the Follies, has answered the call of the wild, will forsake the effete East and camp serenely in that section of the U. S. which we believe someone once referred to as the "wide open spaces of the West!" A little grey home, that's the idea, ranch stuff, horses, cattle and no more Broadway, except the exigencies of the picture-making game demand a trip to the White Lights. For Miss Pennington, who recently finished working with Tom Mix in "The Lucky Horseshoe," a Fox production scheduled for the Rialto Theatre, New York, next week, has decided to buy a small stock ranch near San Fornando, California, where she intends to spend most of her time when between pictures.

ERIN GREETS MEIGHAN

ACCORDING to a cablegram received from Ireland, the natives of the green isle are immensely enthusiastic over the arrival in their midst of Tom Meighan, who is there for the purpose of filming the Paramount picture—"An Imperfect Impostor". It is asserted that ten thousand people flocked to see the star on the quay at Dunlacchaire, seven miles from Dublin, and as the party motored to the Irish capital, the inhabitants of the little towns en route turned out in hundreds to get a glimpse of him.

C. A. Montgomery, Ben Wilson and J. Charles Davis, 2d, of the Davis Distributing Division, get a few pointers on the fine art of picture making from some of the members of "Our Gang" at the Hal Roach studios.

At the Hotel Shelbourne, Dublin, representatives of President Cosgrave of the Free State Government were waiting to extend him an official welcome, and Mr. Meighan replied, expressing his gratification at having realized one of his pet ambitions—the making of a picture with genuine Celtic atmosphere. As the weather conditions are favorable, there will be no delay in starting production and work will begin immediately.

B SCHULBERG DISCOVERIES

P. SCHULBERG, producer of Preferred Pictures, is ever on the trail of new talent, and in support of his contention that the studios shouldn't be closed to fresh aspirants, points to the latest additions to his forces. There's Marcel de Sano, who recently finished "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," and was offered a chance to direct after Mr. Schulberg had observed his work as a script and title writer. Also, Lois Hutchinson, now in the scenario department, formerly on the staff of a Seattle newspaper and later script girl with John Stahl on the First National lot. And six new players, Alyce Mills, who has played leads in "Faint Perfume," "My Lady's Lips" and "With This Ring;" Donald Keith, formerly playing little parts under the name of Francis Feeney, starred in "The Boomerang" and "Parisian Love;" Gilbert Roland, slated to appear in "The Plastic Age;" Riza Royce, of the New York stage, making her screen debut in "Lew Tyler's Wives" and two Russian artists from the Moscow Imperial Theatre, Laty Florens and Monna Gann. Florens is not only an actor of international reputation, but has directed for Ufa, and later may handle the megaphone for a series of Preferred Pictures.

Members of "Our Gang," the Hal Roach comedians for Pathe, leaving the Roach studios with their own unique contraption to take part in the Los Angeles Greater Movie Season parade.

TONY MIX INDIGNANT

A RECENT interview with Tony, equine wonder of the Fox Film Corp., and Tom Mix's best pal, which took place at his Hollywood bungalow stall, resulted in a fiery denial by the talented steed of a story recently published to the effect that he was contemplating retirement. Incidentally Tony isn't satisfied with press-agentry in general. He says that on the whole the publicists are a decent lot of chaps, who can't be expected to have horse sense, but do tolerably well from the standpoint of mere humans. But when it comes to this retirement canard, well, if he could get a kick at the fellow who wrote it, there would be a vacancy in the press brigade. His statement follows.

"I've never even thought of retiring, no such thing. I look on myself as having just arrived. And what would Tom do without me? Am I or am I not his real, genuine, reliable support? Supposing I quit, with Tom teetering on the pinnacle of fame, what do you suppose would happen? Think for yourself, it's too horrible for me to put into words. You know what happened when Humpty Dumpty fell, and all the king's horses, I knew a bunch of 'em personally, couldn't put him back on his perch! Figure it out. Is there a hoss outside of your humble servant able to boost Tom as I have done? An understudy! Oh, stop raving, you're too infernally absurd. Listen, fellow—if I ever get ready to give a farewell party, I'll tell the world about it in my own good time, which won't be for many a blue moon yet."

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, hands Lupino Lane, English comedian, a contract for six Lupino Lane comedies, the first of which will be an early release.

We can't give you the names and telephone numbers, unfortunately, but here are six of the dancing girls who will appear in "I'll Tell the World" (Metro-Goldwyn), limbering up for the day's work.

Mary Astor and Ben Lyon, co-featured in "The Pace That Thrills" (First National) trip it merrily o'er the lea, and all that, during an off-screen moment.

HARRY RAPF'S NOVEL PARTY

HARRY RAPF gave a Sunday evening party to celebrate the completion and opening of a miniature theatre, built on the rear of his Los Angeles estate, with about a million dollars worth of screen talent attending, composed of Metro-Goldwyn stars, players, executives and writers. Following supper all the guests participated in a unique film production, showing scenes directed by M-G-M directors, as other directors would stage them, Jack Conway putting forth a scene as Von Sternberg would handle it, and so on. Estelle Clark and Antonio D'Algy played in this film, impersonating different M-G-M stars, and supported by Louis B. Mayer, Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf, Eddie Mannix and other executives. It was a riot of laughter, aided by Joe Farnum's titles, and another original conception, presenting Hobart Henley as an actor ten years ago, scored a themendous hit.

Among those attending were Louis B. Mayer, Irving G. Thalberg, John Gilbert, Eddie Mannix, Mae Murray, Ramon Navarro, Norma Shearer, George K. Arthur, Eleanor Boardman, Mae Busch, Estelle Clark, Lew Cody, Antonio D'Algy, William Haines, Carmel Myers, Conrad Nagel, Aileen Pringle, Monta Bell, Tod Browning, Christy Cabanne, Benjamin Christianson, Jack Conway, Edmund Goulding, Hobart Henley, Robert Z. Leonard, Fred Niblo, Al Raboch, Marshall Neilan, Victor Seastrom, Josef Von Sternberg, King Vidor, Pete Smith.

Harry Langdon continues on his merry way in "Lucky Stars" (he's one himself, by the way), his latest Sennett for Pathe release.

Tow Tyler is the F. B. O. "surprise" Western star of whom much is expected. The first vehicle in which he will be seen is "Let's Go, Gallagher."

Wanda Wiley, Cntury comedy star, pays a visit to Dallas, Texas, and is met by Mr. Smith of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Wanda being a native daughter of the Panhandle state.

Just to prove that authors aren't always the undying enemies of those who scenaries their stories, Nell Martin and Doris Anderson, author and adaptor of "The Adventures of Mazie" (F. B. O.), pose together for the cameraman.

Two "Indians" who appear in "The Vanishing American" (Paramount). The little one is Masja, a Navajo, and the other, though you'd never guess it, is Richard Dix, himself.

Paris, and Reciprocity as the Key to the French Market

No. 4: Production Abroad Seen As Return Move

By L. C. Moen

YOU cannot consider Europe as just "Europe" if you want to understand anything of its merchandising problems in regard to films. It is an easy error to fall into, and a quite natural one, but the first step in arriving at any truth concerning Europe as a market must be to divide it up along the lines of its economic, racial and political boundaries. Then, taking each separately, you can set down certain facts that will be more than the usual half-baked suppositions and hazy generalizations about our foreign film trade.

These sub-divisions might be multiplied almost indefinitely, but for the sake of simplicity Europe may be considered as having three key points, each of which is the centre of a major market. These key points are Paris, Berlin and London, and they will be considered in the order named.

Taking Paris first, then, we find this the key to a market which includes France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Morocco, Algiers, Egypt, and the so-called (or mis-called) "Latin" peoples generally. Neither the richest market in the world, nor the poorest, but one capable of far greater development than it has yet reached. All told, including the 23 Spanish-speaking countries which must be considered in connection with Spain, this market probably embraces more than 10,000 theatres. France is practically the only country in the group which is producing any great number of pictures; therefore, the group is a splendid potential market which might be made to yield much larger revenue than at present. Germany will be a heavy competitor, however, in a considerable portion of this territory — a fact which demands recognition.

France, first of all, is usually taken rather lightly by film exporters, who rate it as a rather small market and one not worthy of great effort or serious consideration. And it is true that the revenue from France has not been as great as elsewhere.

Economic Conditions Vital

The basic factor of economic conditions must, however, be reckoned with. France, since the war, has been marking time. Unsettled conditions at home and on her frontiers have paralyzed many lines of endeavor. The reconstruction of the devastated areas has made taxation almost unbearable. The periodic decline of the franc has made it more and more difficult for her to buy from the outside world.

Shortly, however, unless all signs fail, we will be able to call the turn on French conditions. While I was in Paris, Caillaux presented the first balanced budget since the war—the vital initial step toward settled conditions. From that budget it is only a step to the stabilization of the franc—and it is a safe guess to predict that that stabilization will be at 21 francs to the dollar, or near that figure.

That will mean, at one step, the repudiation of three-fourths of the internal debt, with a corresponding loss to those who have hoarded francs against the day when they would return to five to the dollar, just as happened in Germany with the practical repudiation of the war-time currency. To attempt to return the franc to its original value would place France in the plight now harassing England—but more of that later.

With the problem of the internal debt simplified, the matter of war debts will follow, and steps are practically certain to be taken by the first of the year toward the payment of these. This, in all likelihood, will mean additional import duties in France. The factors which may influence the government in the consideration of a tariff on motion pictures brought into France might be summed up about as follows:

1. The revenue from exporting wines to the United States, which alone would have covered the debt payments, has been wiped out by prohibition.

2. The articles which France manufactures best, such as luxury articles, gloves, perfumes, fine machine parts, and the like, are taxed as much as 75 and 100 per cent. upon their entry into the United States.

Automobile Tariff

3. Through a high protective tariff, France's automobile industry has been made the second largest in the world, far smaller than the American manufacture, of course, but larger than any other country. This is being used as an argument for similar protection for the French film industry.

4. The steel industry of France has been pooled into one selling organization which receives government protection through a high tariff on imports of steel, the revenue from which is applied directly to reduce the price of French steel. This has strengthened the steel industry materially.

5. Germany, through the application of a kontingent system, has kept her film industry alive during a trying period of reconstruction and stabilization.

These points are likely to influence the French government materially in its consideration of films when the new tariff plan is drawn up. If such a tariff were placed on films, or, less likely, a contingent applied, France would occupy much the same position as Italy in regard to the importing of American films.

However, there is another possibility in regard to all this. Moves such as that made by Universal, and announced in the NEWS last week, for the joint production in Paris of "The Man Who Laughs" by Universal and the Societe Generale des Films, are going to have an important bearing on the future government attitude.

It is worthy of note, too, that the Societe Anonyme Francaise des Films Paramount, the French Paramount distributing organization, has taken on for release in France an independent French production, which is being advertised in conjunction with the other Paramount pictures.

Production Promised

During the debate in the Chambre Syndicale, to which I have referred previously, Adolphe Osso, Paramount's French manager, announced that his company intended to produce in France twelve or fourteen pictures on a plan similar to that under which "Madame Sans-Gene" was made. This would mean working in cooperation with a French producer, probably with Paramount stars and an American supervising editor.

It is worth noting, too, that Julian Johnson is abroad for Paramount at the present moment, studying European tastes and tendencies. He was the guest at a luncheon in London, where he was asked to explain such things as the introduction of the American flag into "Peter Pan," (and did), and created an excellent impression generally. From there he went to Paris, and an article in the current Cinematographie Francaise, written by him, explains the difference between French and American producing conditions.

Meanwhile, Metro-Goldwyn has affiliated itself with Gaumont, a producing, distributing and exhibiting concern. Whether this means that Metro-Goldwyn will distribute Gaumont pictures in America, or will produce in conjunction with Gaumont in Paris for both markets, has not been definitely announced. There have been several stories current in France, however, that the latter would be the case, and that the Gaumont studios at Belleville would be renovated and remodeled for joint production by Gaumont and Metro-Goldwyn, with American stars.

All of these things show a growing tendency toward definite reciprocity between the French and American film industries, and certainly this is the most powerful weapon toward keeping the channels of trade free and clear of governmental red tape and burdensome taxation.

Paris, Reciprocity and the French Market

At any rate, there will be more American production in France. That much seems assured. Of that I shall have more to say when I come to a consideration of French production for the home market—a livelier and healthier industry, by the way, than is sometimes supposed here.

Now then, just what is this French market, and what can be expected from it?

In recent years, France has not been one of the best European markets. That much can be set down safely, but it can also be taken as reasonably certain that it is going to be much better, for a number of reasons.

1. As France improves economically, the film industry will automatically be lifted with it, as in any country.

2. The motion picture is slowly winning recognition as an art by the French people—an important factor, with their love of the arts and of things beautiful. In past years, the cinema has held a despised position among the better classes. Theatres in the small towns have been run largely by wine merchants, and the like. In many cases, respectable persons could not afford to be seen entering a cinema. The theatres, too, have not been overly inviting to particular people.

Now, however, a change is slowly coming. Such things as the showing of "The Miracle of the Wolves" at the Opera in Paris, attended by the President of the Republic, and the forthcoming showing of "Salammbo" at the Opera, are bringing the more intelligent French people to a recognition of the importance of the motion picture as an artistic and educational medium.

3. The gradual improvement in production, in America and abroad, is going to help business in France. The French public is the most pitilessly critical of story values in the world. With all the classics available in printed form at a penny or so, the poorest shopgirl knows her Hugo and Balzac better than the average well read person here. Naturally, such a public is hard to please, but highly appreciative of real merit. "A Woman of Paris," for instance, released in France as "L'Opinion Publique," or "Public Opinion," was the outstanding picture of its season.

4. Better theatres are being built in France, not rapidly, but here and there. This will attract more and better patrons, too.

As regards the exhibiting end, conditions are not ideal. Taxes run as high as 40 or 45 per cent of the gross, and the tax collector comes to the box-office every night to collect it. This is largely offset, however, by the higher admission prices in vogue.

Rentals, especially for French productions are high. Some American product has been sold at a much lower figure than should have prevailed, owing to the indiscriminate "dumping" of all classes of product.

Distributing costs in France are low. The short shipping distances, small advertising expenditures, and small number of prints keep the cost down to a low figure, and 25–75 contracts between producer and distributor, with the distributor bearing half the cost of prints and advertising, are not uncommon.

Conditions in Italy are fair, but two concerns hold more or less of a monopoly, which makes matters difficult for the outsider. Duties and taxes are extremely high.

Spain and Portugal are fair. The same is true of Holland. Belgium and Switzerland are somewhat better. The South American market, which we have mentioned in connection with Spain, deserves separate consideration.

There are in France some 3,000 theatres; probably 2,500 in Italy; 2,000 in Spain and Portugal; and a scattering number in the other small countries. The Spanish speaking market, embracing South America and Mexico, is said to include 6,500 theatres.

Schlesinger Sails for Warner Bros.

General Manager of Foreign Department Goes Abroad to Perfect Firm's European Distribution

GUS G. SCHLESINGER, general manager of the Foreign department of Warner Bros., sails on Saturday of this week to join Albert Warner abroad, where he will carry out important developments in connection with the European distribution of Warner poduct.

Schlesinger's departure has been seriously delayed by illness, from which he has but recently recovered.

He expects to remain abroad for a year, carrying out important plans now under consideration for Warner exchanges and probably first run houses in Paris, London and Berlin, if practicable.

His first duty will be to make a complete tour of inspection of the 20 European offices taken over from Vitagraph with the acquisition of that company. Ten of these are located in Great Britain, with the other ten on the Continent. Just how many of these will be continued has not been decided, and will depend upon Schlesinger's findings in connection with them.

Warner Brothers pictures are at present distributed in Great Britain by Gaumont, which concern has already taken the next group of product. Schlesinger will tour all of the Gaumont exchanges to study this distribution at first hand. Just what will be done with the 10 Vitagraph exchanges is problematical. This exchange system has been regarded as one of the best in Great Britain, and has been an important factor in the past.

Gus G. Schlesinger, general manager of the Foreign Department of Warner Bros., who sails for Europe this week.

On the Continent, the selling agent for Warner Brothers has been Jacques Haik, who has disposed of France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Spain, Portugal and Italy. This is expected to be continued.

It is possible, however, that a Warner exchange will be opened in Rome, should that prove desirable.

Barcelona, too, may have a Warner Brothers exchange, following the visit there of Schlesinger.

Swedish distribution has been handled for some time by the Svenska-Filmindustri, which has also taken the product for next year. Germany and central Europe was handled last year by Ufa, but no definite arrangements have been closed as yet for this year.

When European affairs have been arranged satisfactorily, Schlesinger will continue on to Australia, where it is planned to open a branch in Sydney, in co-operation with Australasian.

Reports current this week that Warners had purchased the Petit Casino in Paris were denied by Harry M. Warner. It was admitted, however, that first run houses in Paris, London and Berlin were considered desirable, and that developments in that connection might be expected shortly.

Schlesinger has headed the Foreign department of Warner Brothers since 1922, prior to which he was for six years the sales manager of Inter-Ocean, where he gained a wide experience and varied knowledge of export conditions.

General export conditions are excellent, according to Schlesinger, who sees a bright year ahead. Conditions in the principal countries, with a few exceptions, he sees as exceptionally promising.

Seider and Pettijohn Continue Arbitration Controversy

Statement Issued by Hays Official Brings Reply

IMPORTANT statements bearing on the controversy over Arbitration and the exhibition contract were issued during the past week by Charles C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Film Boards of Trade and the Hays organization; and Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the Arbitration and Contract Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Pettijohn takes the position that while the uniform contract is not a perfect instrument, it can be improved upon as the arbitration work develops. He declares: "The principle of Arbitration cannot be improved upon, but Arbitration procedure can be." He adds: "If Arbitration within the motion picture industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be, in my humble opinion, a pretty fair achievement within a reasonable time."

Mr. Seider's statement is a reply to the statement issued by Mr. Pettijohn. The exhibitor leader arraigns present Arbitration methods and the contract, and takes up the points made by Mr. Pettijohn. Mr. Seider sums up by saying:

"Mr. Pettijohn practically admits our contentions. We have no quarrel with Arbitration. It is with the Film Boards of Trade procedure and this procedure must be made fair to both sides. Mr. Pettijohn at last sees the 'light.' He concedes that the contract in 'his opinion' is not a perfect instrument and it can be improved upon. When does the improving start?"

The Pettijohn statement follows:

"Three years ago there was no Uniform Exhibition contract. Three years ago there were no Arbitration Boards. For a long time prior to three years ago exhibitors generally had been asking all distributors to adopt a contract that would be uniform as to the main and standard clauses. Exhibitors generally had been complaining against the actions of what few Film Boards of Trade were then in existence claiming that they did not have representation at the time decisions were made affecting the exhibitor, his business and his relations, as well as the distributor and his.

Boards Now Functioning

"Arbitration Boards are now passing upon all disputes growing out of the use of the standard exhibition contract. Exhibitors and distributors now have equal representation on these Arbitration Boards. More than 11,000 such disputes were disposed of in 1924.

"The Uniform Exhibition contract is not in my opinion a perfect instrument. It can be improved upon as the arbitration work develops and when the men serving on these Arbitration Boards become more familiar with the work, I believe that it will be possible for almost every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the Arbitration Boards in their respective zones.

"The principle of Arbitration cannot be improved upon — but Arbitration procedure can be. Therefore, the whole situation can be summed up as follows:

"Considerable strides in the right direction have been made generally in the buying and selling of motion picture film. There is still room for improvement. These improvements and betterments can be brought about by sincere and patient conferences of fair minded men who represent something and somebody.

"There is no denying the fact that there has been a gradual improvement going on which is receiving more and more support. All such achievements in the history of human existence have come slowly. There is no such thing as a sudden leap to the perfect state. The mistake many agitators and reformers make is that of attempting to leap to perfection in one jump. There are people in this business who have not the patience or the philosophy to break ground slowly and build surely. Incidentally, this form of attack is usually shy along publicity lines.

"If Arbitration within the motion picture industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be, in my humble opinion, a pretty fair achievement within a reasonable time."

Seider's Statement

Following is the statement issued by Mr. Seider:

"Mr. Courtland Smith for the Hays organization issued a statement to the New York Times that my attack is on the principle of arbitration. Mr. Smith knew when he made this statement that such is not the case. We are FOR arbitration but not the arbitration practiced in the motion picture Industry.

"Now comes Mr. Pettijohn with a statement which is purported to be an answer to our demands for a fair contract and system of arbitration and confidence and square dealing in the buying and selling of pictures.

"It is true that three years ago the majority of theatre owners pleaded for uniform exhibition contract. The contracts now used are not uniform. It is self-evident that we wanted a fair and equitable uniform contract and not the oppressive instrument that we have received. We did not bargain for a contract that would deprive us of the right to trial by jury against our individual wishes. We did not ask for Film Boards of Trade and a Joint Arbitration Board that would deprive us of our property without due process of law; that would force us to sign contracts with clauses to which good business sense advises us to object and which acts as a collection agency for the distributors. We asked for a loaf of bread and received a brick.

"Upon the entry of Mr. Hays into this industry he quickly realized the danger of the continuance of arbitration boards consisting of only distributors and substituted the present system. I will accept Mr. Pettijohn's statement that to date in the year 1925 more than 11,000 disputes were disposed of. How many of these disputes actually were heard? How many were brought by the exchange and how many by the exhibitor? How many were decided in favor of the theatre owner? What were the average amounts involved? In how many cases were there principles involved? Were they not, with the exception of a few, really collection cases?

Not Exhibitor Choice

"There are an equal number of theatre owners and distributors making up the arbitration boards but the exhibitor members are not the choice of the theatre owner litigant and he has not the right to challenge any of the exhibitor members appointed for him.

"Mr. Pettijohn claims that considerable strides have been made in the buying and selling of pictures; that there cannot be a sudden leap into perfection; that improvements can be brought about by sincere and patient conferences of fair minded men who represented something and somebody and that if arbitration within the industry is made perfect or nearly perfect in less than three years, it will be a fair achievement within a reasonable time.

"Considerable strides have been made by the theatre owner. He now represents stability, Education, ability and progress. While he has grown, the opinion of the distributor for the exhibitor has not kept pace. There is need for improvement in the buying and selling of pictures.

"'Sincere and patient conferences.' Daily for over two weeks a group of theatre owners met with Mr. Pettijohn and the other Hays lawyers. There was represented plenty of ability, sincerity and patience. But, we got nowhere. Every once in a while Mr. Hays in person graced us with his presence and gave us a benediction.

A Letter From Joseph M. Seider to William A. Johnston

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, has sent the following letter to William A. Johnston, Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:

"I cannot help but write you my thanks for your editorial in your August 15th issue on our meeting at Detroit. I believe that the way you have handled the entire situation will, with efforts of other worthy trade papers, tend to overcome an erroneous impression as to the real occurrences at the meeting. It will help the exhibitor's cause and from the standpoint of the M. P. T. O. A. the reaction therefrom should be most helpful.

"The future existence of the independent theatre owner appears far from bright. Yet, never before have we had so many able leaders as we have at present. The fact that these leaders are working for a cause is the answer. The predicament the theatre owner finds himself in must and will be alleviated and finally overcome.

"We theatre owners need the help of the industry and particularly that unbiased branch, the trade press, as we never have before. Therefore, your contribution stands out the more and merits our appreciation."

French "U" Film Plans Formed

Laemmle Hopes to Start Production of "Man Who Laughs" Before Returning

AS announced last week in the NEWS, plans are proceeding rapidly abroad for the production in Paris of "The Man Who Laughs" by Universal Pictures corporation and the Societe Generale des Films, a French company, marking a new era in international film production.

Cables this week from Carl Laemmle to the Universal Home Office in New York and to Universal City indicate that immmediate steps are to be taken in preparing for this picture. It is his intention that work shall begin in France, if possible, before he returns to the United States this fall.

The principal new development of the week was the first definite announcement of the personnel for the production, which will be composed of French and American players and technicians.

Svend Gade, it is announced, will direct the picture. The Danish director is felt to be well adapted to this task because of his familiarity with European conditions. He was an art director of some prominence abroad before coming to the United States to direct pictures for Universal.

The leading feminine role, that of Dea, will be taken by Mary Philbin. Word has been sent to production officials on the coast that the current picture, "Stella Maris," is to be speeded up so that she may leave for France at the earliest possible moment.

Meanwhile, it is probable that Svend Gade, together with a corps of lighting experts, cameramen and other technical staff men, will precede her across the Atlantic and make advance preparations for the filming of "The Man Who Laughs."

Under the contract between Universal and the Societe General, Universal is also to supply an American star for the principal male role, that of "The Man Who Laughs," but negotiations for this have not yet been completed. According to Rene Batigne, managing director in New York for the Societe Generale, a leading American star is being negotiated for, and will be shortly announced for this role.

The second male role, that of Ursus, the man with the bear, is thought to be an ideal role for Ernest Torrence, and Universal is taking steps to obtain his services for the production if possible.

British Activity Is Suggested

Government May Be Urged to Take Steps to Entirely Eliminate All Block Bookings

VARIOUS production plans for the advancement of picture product are in contemplation in England. It is even advocated in some quarters that the government take a hand in production activities with the establishment of several studios.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, among other things has suggested to the Board of Trade that the Government inaugurate steps to entirely eliminate the block booking system. Among these lines there are said to be plans afoot to start legislation that would prevent selling pictures until passed by the censor and then trade shown. The majority of American distributors at present are selling in block from six to eight months ahead in England.

There have been numerous proposals for a national studio in London, as well as for the maintenance of a studio or studios by exhibitors. Among the ideas suggested by Isy Graham at a recent meeting of the Sheffield branch of the C. E. A. was that members create the neucleus of a fund by contributing a sum ten times the amount of their annual dues in the C. E. A. He would make this $750,000 the basis of a $5,000,000 war chest.

Sir Sidney Low in the Daily Mail is of the opinion that a dozen or a score of studios will be necessary to turn out sufficient product. He expresses the opinion that one or two British pictures a week should be supplied exhibitors. He also suggests that a $5,000,000 fund be raised by financiers to secure talent and that a chain of theatres be purchased through which to guarantee an outlet.

Seider and Pettijohn Continue Controversy

Mr. Pettijohn gave us Corporation Counsel opinions—that is, after he was through we could take either side and be correct. Mr. Hess continually attempted to laugh us out of every constructive suggestion.

"'Fair minded men who represented something.' What does Mr. Pettijohn mean by this statement? Did not the Hays office select the three theatre owners who officially attended the conferences instead of their being chosen by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America?

"Three years is a long time in the motion picture industry. Were it not for the activities of the M. P. T. O. A., which stands between the individual theatre owner and organized monopoly, we would be out of business within three years.

"'As the arbitration work develops and when the men serving on these arbitration boards become more familiar with the work, I believe that it will be possible for almost every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the arbitration boards in their respective zones.' Thus argues Mr. Pettijohn. If men have not become familiar with arbitration work in the three years gone by, then they never will become familiar. What do you mean, 'then it will be possible for every reasonable dispute to be disposed of by the arbitration boards in the respective zones'? What do you mean by a 'reasonable dispute'? Is not the theatre owner compelled now to submit to the arbitration board in his zone in spite of, as you claim, the men have not as yet 'become familiar with arbitration work.'

"Mr. Pettijohn practically admits our contentions. We have no quarrel with arbitration. It is with the Film Boards of Trade procedure and this procedure must be made fair to both sides. Mr. Pettijohn at last sees the 'light'. He concedes that the contract in 'his opinion' is not a perfect instrument and it can be improved upon. When does the improving start?"

Canada Postal Rules Bar Film From Mails

Motion picture films cannot be sent to Canada by mail, it is announced by the Post Office Department, which is in receipt of advices from the Canadian postal officials that rule have been adopted prohibiting their admission by that means.

Mrs. Sessions Signed by First National

AFTER four years of service as branch and district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, Mrs. Anna H. Sessions resigns from that organization August 15th and will sail September 5th to assume a position in the foreign department with First National. While abroad Mrs. Sessions will divide her time among Berlin, Paris and Vienna.

Mrs. Sessions has had an extensive career in the theatrical and motion picture fields. She started in 1915 as secretary to August Auger, district manager of World Film Company. In 1921 she was offered the management of the Goldwyn exchanges in New Orleans and Atlanta, in which position she remained until her affiliation with Hodkinson, which was shortly reorganized under the name of Producers Distributing Corporation.

Greater Movie Season Starts Auspiciously Over U. S.

Hays Summary Reveals Success of Campaign

WILL H. HAYS has drawn up up a national summary of Greater Movie Season based on reports following the openings of the campaign in many cities of the United States. This summary attests to the splendid success of the event, with the reports from many quarters urging its annual observance as a stimulus to increased box office activity during the heat of the Summer.

Will H. Hayes.

The Hays summary says:

"Since the season opened I have been in Los Angeles, Denver and Chicago, where excellent drives were conducted. With motion picture production centered so largely in Los Angeles and therefore with many players available to inspire popular interest in the celebrations, a successful start here was natural enough. But in Denver and Chicago some thousands of miles removed, with only the exhibitors' initiative to bring the season's message before the public, all factors of distribution and exhibition worked side by side so harmoniously that the public response was equally as huge.

"I am pleased to learn that Atlantic City had one hundred per cent representation in the drive, and the box-office told the result. Atlanta and Dallas exhibitors have telegraphed the hope that Greater Movie Season may be an annual affair. Atlanta reported gains of from ten to forty per cent over the business of the past three months, with the neighborhood and smaller houses showing the biggest increase.

"The movement contemplates especially the service to the small exhibitor working from month to month, who heretofore could only hope that July and August would be no worse than last year. We believed that this was a means to make those dead months better, that the summer depression could be overcome by inducing exhibitors who face the same problem to cooperate. The final analysis probably will show that Atlanta's experience has been repeated in many other cities.

Will It Be Annual

"Will Greater Movie Season be an annual event? Yes, if the exhibitors wish it; and naturally our future plans in this respect depend largely upon their wish. There is apparently a nationwise satisfaction with the results this first demonstration has shown. But we are seeking still fuller information. In almost every instance the chairman or general manager of local activities is the head of a large theatre or circuit, or the principal executive of an exhibitor association. During the next few weeks we will ask their advice and suggestions based on their knowledge gained this month. If the concensus favors another season next year—as I believe it will—our campaign nationally will further embody their ideas. The splendid cooperation of the exhibitors is thoroughly appreciated.

"Apart altogether from the increased business engendered by Greater Movie Season, the film industry has won the active cooperation of every agency that influences public thought. United for this demonstration of its power and purpose to serve, it has earned the commendation and support of the nation's leaders, writers and educators. That support, thus gained, will not be withdrawn as long as every factor in the industry by contributing its utmost to the public good justifies the public confidence that the season has inspired."

While it is yet impossible to supply accurate figures concerning the number of towns embraced in the drive, the total is likely to exceed that contained in previous announcements; for in many centers exhibitors, having realized the advantages of the season, are only now arranging the necessary organization to join in the drive.

Letters and telegrams from important theatre executives throughout the country reveal the extent to which the box-office has gained by Greater Movie Season.

Riesenfeld's Boost

Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres, New York:—"I am pleased to report that the Greater Movie Season has been a stimulant to business at the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres. The ultimate result of the movement will undoubtedly be far-reaching and will encourage added attendance at the theatres for many weeks to come."

Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol, New York:—"You may ask what, if anything, the Greater Movie Season has done for the Capitol Theatre. I can only say that the Capitol has been packed to capacity afternoon and night of every performance, but what is due to Greater Movie Season and what is due to the entertainment provided, I am unable to say. At least the business has been unprecedentedly large, especially for this time of the year."

David Barrist, editor of "The Exhibitor," in reviewing the Philadelphia drive states: "There has been a noticeable improvement in business the current week, which is most certainly due in a large measure to the activities of the campaign. In Atlantic City the business has been nothing short of phenomenal and exhibitors there do not hesitate to credit the Greater Movie Season Campaign for this increase."

Stanley Chambers of the Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas: "Greater Movie Season showed twenty per cent increase over the same period of last year. The campaign is a big success. We certainly want another next year."

Nice Increase Shown

Carl A. Porter, Victory Theatre, Salt Lake City: "All theatres show a nice increase and are well satisfied with the campaign. The public is very much interested in the movement. We want another season next year."

Maurice F. Barr, Saenger Amusement, New Orleans: "While we are unable to ascertain by a definite check of New Orleans exhibitors what Greater Movie Season results have been we believe the effort well worthy of repetition each year. Organizations should be kept intact to systematize details and exploitation and secure still better results."

Lloyd Dearth, Pantages Theatre, Memphis: "Greater Movie Season campaign showed a material increase in all houses and without a doubt will put the month of August through a winner in spite of the fact that we have extreme hot weather here and an uphill pull to get them in during the hot spell. Let's have a season every year."

Ralph Kettering, general manager Chicago campaign: "I believe the theatres will increase better than twenty per cent this week. The campaign is a huge success and exhibitors are happy to make it an annual affair."

Jay Means, vice-president of the M. P. T. O. of Missouri: "Greater Movie Season opened with a big smash in Kansas City. Business good all over city. Many stunts are planned to keep up the publicity. Everybody seems pleased with the campaign and is enthusiastic over future prospects."

Details of many excellent campaigns continue to be reported to the Hays office.

Newark, Atlantic City, Camden, Ocean City, Asbury Park and Paterson key points in New Jersey—all put on pretentious drives. J. E. Firnkoiss, in charge of the Rialto theatre, controlled the Newark campaign which included a contest tie-up with the Newark Star-Eagle, special radio broadcasting and a poster display of seventy-five twenty-four sheet stands. Cooperating with the National Retail Jewelers Publicity Association, Mr. Firnkoiss secured window displays in almost every jewelry store in Newark.

Will Hays led the parade that ushered in Greater Movie Seeason in Los Angeles with full enthusiasm. Los Angeles residents jammed the streets to get glimpse of favorite players. As early as nine o'clock people began to select places and by eleven o'clock there wasn't an open space to be had along the line of parade.

Theatres as well as producing companies joined in efforts making it a success. Floats gorgeous in design and decoration held spectators in wonder. Grauman's Egyptian Theatre float was first in line with a big white structure representing "Gold Rush," now playing his Hollywood theatre.

A bevy of beautiful girls in a Grecian temple was Loew's State Theatre entry. Next came the Metropolitan theatre with costumed usherettes standing beneath a pillared gateway. Criterion's entry, a golden barge filled with costumed girls came next led by riders on white horses. The C. B. De Mille entry, unique and beautiful, was a miniature village extending over hillsides. Christie Comedies division started with a silver float surrounded by a number of Christie's most beautiful girls. A huge clown supporting the world was Educational's entry. A float bearing a revolving globe surrounded by gold stars, each bearing a professional's name, was First National's entry. Paramount's was a huge floral float mounted by a number of studio girls. An enormous golden lion resting on a float followed by a bit of battle front scenery with doughboys in action was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's representation. Universal staged a Wild West show and combination circus, including animals from Universal Zoo. Two bands accompanied Universal's entry. An attractive float with an arch of flowers was Warners', with a large model of their studio and loud speaking radio. Stars from all the studios rode in automobiles.

Here is the way Finkelstein & Ruben, owners of all the important motion picture theatres in the Twin Cities, are handling the Greater Movie Season campaign. For reasons of their own Finkelstein & Ruben found it necessary to star their Greater Movie Season August 15 instead of on the national date.

They put Bob LaPiner in charge of the exploitation—and incidentally it is the first time this organization has ever taken on a man for the exclusive job of handling exploitation for its 65 or 70 houses.

Every department of the F. & R. organization was made a part of the organization for the introduction of the Greater Movie Season.

Trailers were placed in all theatres—65 or more—telling what it was all about and when Greater Movie Season started with F. & R.

On the program circulated in the F. & R. houses, 100,000 in St. Paul and 100,000 in Minneapolis, the back page was given over to an advertisement.

Every newspaper advertisement of every theatre carried mention of "Greater Movie Season."

Announcements have been made from all radio stations in the Twin Cities that it is coming and on the opening day, August 15, the mammoth parade arranged by Mr. LaPiner will start.

Hays Luncheon Guest at Denver

WILL H. HAYS, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, spent Monday, August 3rd in Denver. While there a luncheon was given in his honor by John C. Shaffer, nationally known newspaper owner. All the prominent exhibitors and local film exchange managers were invited.

Hays did not make an address but freely discussed his plans and ideals with those present. He was very enthusiastic over the Greater Movie Season Campaign and hinted that there were plans in progress to make it an annual event.

He also indicated that next year being the 30th anniversary of the motion picture industry, a suitable celebration would be planned to commemorate it. Mr. Hays' family have been spending the summer in Estes Park, Colorado and he left Denver to join them for a few days.

Greater Movie Season was inaugurated in Salt Lake City this week with a whirlwind campaign of publicity. Highly colored and attractive 24 sheets are appearing on the billboards. Sunday newspapers carried full pages of advertisements and writeups, calling the attention of the people to the fact that the eventful season has started.

A facsimile of the letter written by President Coolidge to Will H. Hayes was given prominence in the papers.

Greater Movie Season opened up in Baltimore with everything set for a big week on Monday, August 3. The majority of the playhouses are endeavoring to make it a huge success, but so far as can be learned it does not appear that the public is breaking its neck more than usual to clamber into the seats of the movie houses.

Pennants are waving on the marquees and in the lobbies of the various theatres; trailers are being run with their wordy announcements and interesting scenes from old pictures and any number of 24-sheet stands have been taken and are being used to get the attention of the people.

The season was inaugurated in Philadelphia on August 3rd by a fleet of three airplanes hovering over all sections of the city and releasing 25,000 passes, admitting the finder to any performance during the week except Saturday. All theatres in the vicinity are decorated for the occasion, the season being marked by the release of productions which ordinarily would not reach there until Fall.

The Stanley Company has a large pledge framed and suspended outside of the Stanley Theatre, bearing the signature of every employee and guaranteeing better service to patrons. Great interest is being evidenced in the essay contest conducted by "The Daily News" in which prizes aggregating about $10,000 will be distributed to local movie patrons.

From Ray P. Allison, of the America Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colorado, comes the following report: "Greater Movie Season showed an increase of fifty-six per cent in business here. This is the average of the four participating theatres. Individual percentages of increase are as follows: America Theatre, seventy-five per cent; Rialto, fifty-two per cent; Liberty, fifty per cent; Burns, fifty per cent. This increase over the same period last year is bona-fide proof of the campaign's success."

Jack Retlaw, West Coast Theatres, Inc., Los Angeles, wires: "The campaign so far is a real success. Present reports show a decided business increase, but tabulated details are not yet available. We are preparing for a huge ball which we expect to be a big feature of the drive. We certainly recommend a season next year."

William A. Clark, of Palace Theatre, Cincinnati, sends the following: "On account of weather conditions it is too early to estimate the percentage of increase on Greater Movie Season. We are entirely satisfied with the results, however, and will be willing to go along with another season next year."

Central Pennsylvania is taking very kindly to the "Greater Movie Season" idea and many of the leading theatres are cooperating in a way that indicates there will be a directly favorable reaction on summer box office receipts when accounts are checked up.

In Reading, as in other cities, much newspaper publicity is being given to the campaign and the larger theatres in that city—chiefly units of the Carr & Schad, Inc., and the Wilmer & Vincent chains,—are featuring special programs. In Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Plymouth and other cities in the prosperous hard coal mining belt, special emphasis was placed in the newspaper advertisements on the opening week of the campaign, starting August 3, in which period the theatres there seemed to center their efforts especially. In Plymouth, the management of the Shawnee theatre arranged a "Greater Movie Week" parade, and put on special attractions in the theatre without any advance in prices of admittance.

In Scranton even the vaudeville houses which show pictures and are allied with motion picture theatre chains, gave recognition to movie week both in the advertisements and in putting on extra attractions. For instance the Capitol, in Scranton, a vaudeville house, announced the "strongest bill that has been presented here in many months," in honor of the "Greater Movie Season." The headliner for this theatre was Joseph Howard, at the head of his 1925 edition, in six scenes, of "The Toy Shop."

The Strand, a leading Scranton movie house, featured the opening week of the campaign with the presentation of Coleen Moore's latest First National picture, "The Desert Flower."

The Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls perhaps the largest chain of picture theatres in the populous anthracite regions, announced "Greater Movie Season" would be observed with intensified programs in all its theatres.

Among the prominent local residents chosen to act as judges in the Greater Movie Season essay contest in Michigan are several state film officials, industrialists and merchants. The complete list of judges is as follows:

George W. Trendle, general manager and attorney for the John H. Kunsky theatrical enterprises; H. E. Whalen of the First State Bank of Detroit; George Clark, district manager of the Willys-Overland Motor company; Henderson M. Richey, manager of the Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners; David Palfryman of the Detroit Film Board of Trade; J. Oliver Golden of Monroe and Claude E. Cady of Lansing.

The Michigan contest, which is being conducted by the M. P. T. O. of M., bids fair to be one of the outstanding events of the national season.

New National Distributing Organization Formed

Vital Exchanges Inc , To Function in 28 Key Cities

A NEW exchange system which will give the product of the Davis Distributing Division and its producers, national distribution through United States and Canada is announced this week by J. Charles Davis, president of the company.

The new concern has been formed under the title of Vital Exchanges, Inc., with home offices in New York City, branch offices in 25 key cities of the United States and four exchanges. in Canada.

Vital Exchanges, Inc., will be under the leadership of David R. Hochreich, who has long been identified in the motion picture industry and for several years has been connected with the Vitagraph Company of America in the sales department.

The personnel of the Vital Exchange, Inc., under Mr. Hochreich will also include a considerable number of former Vitagraph sales representatives.

Mr. Hochreich points out in an interview given the trade press that the men associated with him in the new enterprise have long desired an opportunity of going into business for themselves and that the recent sale of Vitagraph gives them this opportunity.

According to Mr. Hochreich, the great problem confronting these men was the securing of the right kind and the necessary volume of product. In the pictures, which the Davis Distributing Division is sponsoring this year, Mr. Hochreich and his associates believe they have secured productions that will meet every requirement for success.

A contract recently signed between the Davis Distributing Division and Vital Exchanges, Inc., gives the latter organization, a five year franchise for the entire output of the Davis Division product and includes sales rights to all the pictures now being released by this concern during 1925 and 1926 as well as those to be produced for the next four years.

A difficulty to the consummation of this arrangement, that of prior sales of current and coming pictures to independent exchanges, was overcome by an arrangement whereby Vital Exchanges, Inc., is to obtain additional product in territories where this year's product is not available. Vital Exchanges is assured sufficient product until the existing contracts for Davis pictures have expired.

The territories in which product has already been sold are New York, New England, Northern Illinois, Indiana, California, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Mr. Hochreich, in commenting on this deal stated that he felt that in entering the exchange end of the business as the President of Vital Exchanges, he was bringing to the exhibitors of America an opportunity to deal with a real independent organization. He pointed out that under his plan every Exchange Manager was not an employee, but the owner of his own business with his own capital invested and in his own field where he has for so many years built up a tremendous following and reputation for honesty and fair dealing among the exhibitors.

He pointed out that these exchange men, while owning and managing their own business, nevertheless wou'd be working in the closest cooperation with the Vital Exchanges Home Office. For example, much booking in many parts of the country is done in New York, necessitating periodical trips from distant points upon the part of exchange men. This, as pointed out, could all be handled by the Home Office of Vital Exchanges, and many other advantages would accrue under this arrangement, one of the greatest being the national release of a picture on a given date in the independent field—something it has heretofore been impossible to accomplish due to the fact that seldom, if ever, under the old plan of State Rights Release is a picture sold to the various exchanges throughout the country so that it can be released simultaneously. In the past each independent exchange has been permitted, and in fact been forced, to release its product at different times according to contract with the distributing organization, many of them who were late thus losing the value of the trade paper advertising that has been done.

Davis, in commenting on this contract, said: "We are very proud and happy over the closing of the contract between Vital Exchanges, Inc., and our company, for we feel that it is a great forward step in the independent field of the Motion Picture business. Here for the first time is virtually a national distributing organization so far as physical release is concerned, but which is heart and soul 100% independent, with every exchange owned and managed by a man whose qualifications are proven, and whose record is beyond reproach.

"'Dave' Hochreich, as his friend—and they are legion—call him, is the one man ideally suited to head this organization, and to him must go the credit for its formation. To my knowledge he has toiled unceasingly to form this company, and he has formed it and built it so solidly that we are glad to express our faith in it by selling them a five year franchise for all of our product, with of course the exception of the pictures already sold in some of the territories. We have arranged to supply these territories with sufficient product to meet their requirements.

"While this gives us national distribution, we want to point out that it does not take us out of the independent field, for this, we believe, is really the only true independent national releasing organization as each Manager in Vital Exchanges owns his own territory, has invested his own money and is not controlled by any money power or by any national distributing organization, and his product will be 100% independent—produced by independent producers of established reputation and released by ourselves, whose independence has never been questioned.

"We believe that we have been paid a very high compliment by this organization in selecting us as their producing medium, as we consider it a tribute not only to our company and its ability to deliver the goods, but to our producers and the quality of product which they have so consistently turned out for us.

Buckley Shows Summer Run Possible

Fairbanks Representative Demonstrates That Hot Weather is No Barrier to Properly Exploited Showing

WITH the closing on Broadway of "Don Q" at the Globe theatre last Sunday night, came the end of an interesting experiment which upsets many traditions regarding premiere showings and hot weather business, and which may materially alter future plans for Broadway runs.

It has been axiomatic in the past that the New York public would not go into a legitimate theatre in the summer to see a motion picture. During the hot weather, with large numbers of persons out of the city, at the beaches, and so on, it has been taken for granted that conditions were hopeless for a premiere, with the result that pictures completed in the spring have been held for fall showing.

It remained for Harry D. Buckley, personal business representative for Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, to upset this time-worn contention.

When "Don Q" was finished, the star almost immediately began work on another picture to be ready by the first of the year. That meant that the current picture could not be held up for a late fall premiere, but must be gotten into general circulation.

Harry D. Buckley, eastern business representative of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, who handled the unusual summer run of "Don Q" described here.

So Buckley put the proposition up to Fairbanks, whose answer was conclusive.

"Why not?" he said. "People certainly need fun and relaxation more in summer than in cool weather. Let's get a cool, comfortable theatre and go ahead."

So Buckley arranged for the Globe theatre for eight weeks. An orchestra was engaged, a colorful prologue arranged, and the opening set for June 15th.

The advance campaign was started about the middle of May along conservative lines. A half-showing of billboards, moderate newspapers space, a street ballyhoo, the distribution of heralds at the beaches,—these comprised virtually the entire campaign employed.

The important thing, as Buckley indicates, is that a precedent has now been established for summer premieres, which will mean making pictures available to exhibitors generally at earlier dates.

Buckley has been in the theatrical business most of his life. At 21 he was a legitimate theatre manager in St. Louis. After the war, he became United Artists exchange manager at Kansas City, later being sent to the coast. During the illness of Fairbanks' brother, he was temporary general manager, which led to his handling of the Broadway premieres of "Robin Hood" and "The Thief of Bagdad."

Theatre Expansion Move Continues

Saxe, Stanley and Strand Companies Acquire Additional Houses; Many Large Theatre Buildings Are Planned

THE expansion program which has marked the operations of many of the big organizations in the theatre field during recent months continues as indicated by reports from various parts of the country of new acquisitions of theatre properties and extensive building projects.

In Chicago Ascher Bros. have under construction four large houses with four more planned for building in the near future. Those now being built are the Terminal, a 3,000 seat house scheduled to open in November; the Sheridan, 3,000 seats at Sheridan Road and Irving Park Boulevard; the Colony, 2,000 seats, at Kedzie and 59th Sts., and the Drake, 2,000 seats at Montrose and Drake Aves. The second large theatre announced since the Balaban & Katz-Lubliner & Trinz combination of a few weeks ago is to be erected in the Jefferson Park district. It will be a 3,000 seat house located at Lawrence and Lipps Aves. Work is to start soon under the supervision of Fridstein & Co., the architects.

Omaha is to have many new theatres. Plans are being drawn up for two motion picture theatres to cost a million dollars a piece in the downtown section, and a $75,000 house is being erected in the suburbs. Incidentally, officials of the Orpheum circuit are looking for a site for a new $1,000,000 Orpheum house there.

The two big theatres will be erected by the World Realty Company and the Blank syndicate. The World company at the present time own the World, Sun, Muse, Moon and Empress motion picture or vaudeville houses. The A. H. Blank company owns the Rialto and Strand in Omaha, and houses in Des Moines and Sioux City.

While definite plans have not adopted for either house, tentative plans call for a seating capacity of 3,000 for each.

The site for the new World company house is on "theatre row," at the corner of Douglas and Sixteenth streets, believed to be the busiest corner in the city. The new Blank theatre will be further "uptown," as it will be on the corner of Twentieth and Farnam streets, further out than any of the present theatres.

A brand new rumor going the rounds in Kansas City has it that Marcus Loew, as well as Metro-Goldwyn, is connected with the new $3,000,000 theatre and office building project, which is being promoted on the site of Linwood boulevard and Troost avenue, Kansas City.

The Saenger Amusement Co., will build a $750,000 theatre in Mobile, Ala., according to a recent report. The house will seat 2,700 and is to be located in the square bounded by Joachim, Cont and Jackson Sts.

The Saxe Amusement Enterprise of Milwaukee continued its expansion program by acquiring the Apollo, Janesville. The Apollo gives the Saxe interests two theatres in Janesville. At Fon du Lac, Wis., Saxe Enterprises have acquired a 15 year lease on the Retlaw, which the Schroeder interests of Milwaukee are building. This will bring Saxe and the Fischer-Paramount circuit into competition there, for the Fischer house now building in Fon du Lac is scheduled to open in the fall at about the same time as the Retlaw.

A report from New Britain, Conn., states that negotiations are under way for purchase of the Masonic Temple property as a site for a $700,000 picture theatre. It was rumored that Famous is behind the project, this however was denied by an official of that company.

Four leading motion picture theatres of Wilmington, Del. have been acquired by the Stanley Company of America, and beginning Monday, August 17th, will be under the direction of that organization. Jules E. Mastbaum, President of the Stanley Company, who sailed several weeks ago for Europe, began preliminary negotiations with James N. Ginns and H. Topkis, just before leaving Philadelphia and it was necessary then only to complete the plans.

The four theatres are the Queen, the Arcadia, the Majestic and the Garrick. The deal represents several million dollars.

The Queen Theatre, at Fifth and Market Streets, has a seating capacity of 1,750.

The Arcadia Theatre at 510 Market Street, is a completely new building of steel and concrete, modern in every detail and of generally handsome appearance. The house was opened in March 1921. There are 1,450 seats.

The Majestic,, at 703 and 705 Market Street opened in 1911. It is an up-to-date house in every particular with a stage and with a seating capacity of 1,000, of which 550 is in the orchestra.

The Garrick Theatre, at 830 Market Street, has a seating capacity of 1200.

In strengthing its position in Albany, N. Y., the Strand interests have just acquired the Albany and Regent theatres, which have been operated by Walter and

Lesser to Direct Warner Promotion

Experienced Commercial Agency Head to Handle Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation; Bonded Ads First Move

MYER LESSER, for sixteen years the head of the Blaine-Thompson Advertising agency of Cincinnati, and a well known national advertising figure, has taken full charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Warner Brothers.

This is believed to mark an important new development in the motion picture industry's "coming of age," since it brings with it the introduction of tested commercial advertising methods applied to pictures.

The step is not a sudden one, but has been formulating for some three years. As the head of the Blaine-Thompson agency, in which position he continues, Lesser has for three years been associated with Warner Brothers and studying film conditions.

The first result of the new step is the national campaign of "bonded" newspaper advertising in support of the forthcoming Warner releases. This calls for full-page space in 100 leading daily newspapers in 43 cities, and smaller space in 1,000 other daily papers.

This advertising will be written, not by motion picture advertising men but by men from the Blaine-Thompson agency who are experienced in the writing of national advertising on all types of commodities.

It is believed that in this way the advertising will be written not from the standpoint of what is interesting within the industry, but from the angle of actual public interest.

Myer Lesser, prominent advertising man who becomes director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Warner Bros.

At the same time, the past work of the advertising and publicity department will in no way be disturbed. Trade advertising and accessories will be handled as before.

"I fully recognize," says Lesser, "that motion pictures are essential 'show business' and that you cannot advertise in the same way you would advertise filing cabinets or automobiles. At the same time, speaking nationally, I believe the time has come when you can advertise motion pictures more nearly along the lines of sound, commercial practice. You cannot eliminate adjectives, but you can keep the superlatives within bounds.

"Although you are advertising a different commodity, you are still advertising to human beins who are swayed by certain appeals. The purpose of advertising is to create a desire for your commodity, and it does not alter the case materially if you are advertising motion pictures instead of soap.

"At the same time, I have made sure before applying any idea that it fitted the motion picture industry. To that end, I have made several trips to the Coast to see production at first hand, I have visited all of the Warner Brothers exchanges, and I have talked with great numbers of exhibitors about their advertising problems. Now, in the bonded advertising, tying up directly with releases when they are shown, I believe Warner Brothers campaign will be of real service."

Theatre School To Open August 17

Paramount Training Course for Theatre Managers Begins With Class of Forty-Five Students

WITH a class of forty-five students, selected from five hundred applicants for registration, the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, Inc., will open Monday morning, August 17th, on the fifth floor of the New York Theatre Building, 1520 Broadway, New York city. Harold B. Franklin, head of Paramount's theatre division, who conceived the idea of this school, announces that no ceremonies will mark the opening of the classes, the purposes of which he states will be along strictly practical lines and which are to be started in a thoroughly practical manner.

Students at the school will be given a six months' course in all phases of theatre management and operation, the curriculum of the institution embracing the following subjects:

History of the Motion Picture; The History of Paramount; The Development of the Motion Picture; The Interrelation of Production, Distribution and Exhibition; The Theatre Site; Types of Theatres; Theatre Insurance; The Theatre and the Community; Public Speaking; House Service; Music; Projection and Lighting; Presentations and Prologues; Exploitation; Advertising; Publicity; Goodwill Building, Children's Matinees, Holidays; Program Building; Theatre Accounting; Theatre Equipment.

The school is equipped with a miniature theatre with stage, complete lighting equipment and projection booth. Adjoining this miniature theatre is a reception room, library and offices.

Students will report in New York on August 14 in order to complete the details of registration and preparations for commencing their studies at the school. Each will pay a tuition fee of $300 for the course of six months. After they have made advances in the subjects at the school the students will be assigned to different department heads at local theatres where they will assist in the work of preparing ads, management of the house, directing the house staff, planning and executing exploitation tie-ups, and cueing and timing productions with the musical director.

The students registered in the first class come from all over the country. The forty-five selected from about five hundred applicants were admitted after examination of their qualifications by the school authorities.

The successful applicants realized that they were expected to pay a tuition fee of Three Hundred ($300) Dollars for the six months course and that during the six months training, they would receive no remuneration and would be expected to pay their own living expenses while residing in New York. Moreover because the course requires intensive training it was explained that students must give their whole time to the school and that any outside employment during attendance at the school would not be permitted. In view of these exacting conditions and the very strict requisites for admission, it is evident that an exceptional grade of student has been lined up for the opening session.

The average age for the applicant selected for the first session is twenty-seven. Among these accepted students are represented two West Point graduates, twelve theatre managers, four hotel managers, one lawyer, one civil engineer, one mining engineer, two newspaper editors, two sales managers, two projectionists, two statisticians one member of the consular service and graduates from universities with varying periods of business experience. Besides the men who have had previous experience in theatre management, most of the accepted applicants have had experience in affiliated work such as advertising, publicity, decorating and salesmanship.

Experts have been selected to train the students in each particular subject. Repeated insistence will be placed on the fact that the purpose of the school is practical and that consequently the theory of theatre management will be subordinated to actual training and practice in those methods which the future managers will apply.

MAJOR EDWARD BOWES ON RADIO

Directs And Announces Capitol Concerts

SINCE assuming the duties of Managing Director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, Major Edward Bowes has established himself as one of the leading radio impresarios. Major Bowes has taken full charge of the arrangement and announcing of the Sunday night air concerts broadcast from the Capitol through station WEAF, and within a short time has gained a wide popular following as a radio personality.

Though Major Bowes in association with Messmore Kendall and others built the Capitol in 1918 and since that time has taken an active part in guilding its policy, it was only recently that he assumed the actual direction of the stage production, supervising all the details of picture presentation, stage number and orchestral features, as well as the regular Sunday evening radio concerts. In addition to his work as managing director of his theatre, Major Bowes serves as a vice-president and a member of the executive committee of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Labor Troubles are Growing

Kansas City Musicians Refuse Co-Operation With Greater Movie Season

LABOR troubles continue to grow apace in different parts of the United States with Atlanta banning orchestras from all theatres, Kansas City musicians refusing to cooperate in the Greater Movie Season celebration and Baltimore houses granting wage increases, but decreasing the size of orchestras.

Great strife threatens the industry in Kansas City. The musicians union refused to allow musicians to ride on a banner bedecked truck, which was to have toured the down-town districts in the interest of Greater Movie Season.

The musicians were from the Pantages theatre. Just prior to the starting of the truck the musicians were notified they would be fined $100 each if they made the trip, due to the fact that their contract with the Pantages theatre prohibited such engagements. Union officials were appealed to by exhibitors and exchange men alike, as it was too late to alter plans, but the union officials were firm and the tour was abandoned. The musicians union, at a meeting of its board of directors, also refused to donate the services of a few musicians as a means of co-operating with the Greater Movie Season committees, according to a formal announcement made by A. C. Miller, treasurer of the union, to C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

"Such a narrow and radical attitude is intolerable," said Mr. Cook. "Following expressions on all sides of me by scores of theatre owners, there is every probability that this action will lead ultimately to nothing more or less than a majority of the theatres replacing their orchestras with non-union men."

Downtown and suburban houses of Kansas City are divided in the controversy between exhibitors and the operators, who seek an increase of approximately 10 per cent in the wage scale. Downtown first run exhibitors last week signed a contract calling for 7½ per cent increase to the operators, but the suburban houses are "standing pat," refusing an increase grant.

Contracts with the musicians beginning August 1 and giving them an increase over their old wage scale of 20 per cent, have been signed by managers of the moving picture theatres in Baltimore.

Several of the playhouses will decrease the size of their orchestras, it is understood, but the Century will increase the size to 35 men in September, it is reported.

The two vaudeville houses open now, the Garden and Keiths Hippodrome, which give five acts of family vaudeville with a program of pictures, have also given the musicians the increase but managers of the legitimate theatres including the Palace, Maryland, Ford's, Auditorium and Academy have not signed up at the present time because they are not open, it is said.

Atlanta theatres are reported without orchestras. This fact results from demands on the part of representatives of the Federation of Musicians for an increase for all musicians. The demand was brought by representatives of the Federation of musicians without the usual preliminary discussion with the managers of Atlanta theatres and was characterized by that body as unreasonable. The increase was set for September 1, and the demand for same made following a period of depression in the picture show business which has been the worst it has known in five years.

Rangval Oleson, president of the Omaha Musicians' Association, announced after a heated session of the musicians that the motion to increase the wage scale had passed a second reading and that a flat rate of $60 a week would go into effect when contracts were renewed with theatres on August 31. The musicians have been receiving $45 a week for three months during the summer and $50 during the remaining nine months.

Theatre Expansion Goes On Throughout Country

Noma Suckno, since the death of their father, Samuel Suckno, about a year ago. The transfer will take place on August 31. The policy of the two houses will remain unchanged, the Albany continuing as a first-run theatre, while the Regent will be given over to second-runs. Both houses are located in the downtown section, the Albany theatre being but a block from the Mark Strand. The price paid for the two houses was not announced.

Leasing of the new $100,000 Connell Theatre in Aberdeen, Wash., by L. K. Brin, formerly the Warner Brothers franchise holder in this territory, was announced in this city last week. R. E. Connell, the owner of the house, is expected to continue as resident manager. Mr. Brin's acquisition of this theatre was the second in two weeks, as he acquired the Ellensberg Theatre in Ellensberg the latter part of July. Reports circulated on Film Row indicated that negotiations were also pending for the leasing of the Mack Theatre in Port Angeles and the Grand in Bellingham.

Joseph Stern's Theatrical Enterprises of Newark, N. J., announce the purchase of land for the building of a motion picture theatre in Cranford, N. J. The capacity will be 1500 and the estimated cost of building is $250,000. Plans are being drawn by William E. Lehman of Newark.

New Distribution Concern is Organized Here

"We pledge ourselves to the exhibitors in supplying Vital Exchanges, Inc., with the highest possible quality of productions, as we have in the past, and we will do all that is in our power to merit the confidence which the many messages that have come into this office show exists in Vital Exchanges and ourselves."

Mr. Hochreich and his General Assistant, Milton Kempner, have taken temporary offices with the Davis Distributing Division until their new quarters are ready, and it is said that a full announcement with complete details of their plan will be given to the trade within the next week.

Lasky Elected President of M. P. Relief Fund

Jesse L. Lasky of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been elected president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund of America, succeeding Joseph M. Schenck, first president of the organization, which was formed a year ago to give assistance to needy members of the picture industry. Mr. Schenck becomes first vice-president.

Other officers chosen at the recent election are Mary Pickford, second vice-president; William S. Hart, third vice-president; Harold Lloyd, fourth vice-president; Victor H. Clarke, treasurer; and Rev. Neal Dodd, secretary. Elected to the executive committee are Frank E. Woods, Fred W. Beetson, Donald Crisp, Joseph De Grasse, Mitchell Lewis, E. D. Moore, Arthur P. Stafter and William P. Wyatt.

Perrin Resigns as Manager of Leland, Albany

Oscar Perrin, one of the best known and most successful managers of motion picture theatres in Albany and vicinity, resigned suddenly last Tuesday as the result of reported differences with C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany, as well as the Empire in Glens Falls.

Announcement that Perrin was no longer connected with the Buckley houses, came as a decided surprise to Film Row and was the chief topic of conversation among the exchanges as well as among the exhibitors. Before going with the Leland, Perrin was for eighteen years manager of the Empire in Albany. When it was decided to raze this theatre to make way for a business block, Perrin became associated with the Leland and under his able management the theatre became what is said to be the best paying house in Albany. Charging a 25 cent admission, first run pictures were presented in a way that attracted capacity audiences month aftermonth, regardless of weather conditions.

From now on, Buckley, who is a real estate dealer, will do the buying for the three theatres. Alex Sayles, a former newspaper man who has been managing the Clinton Square theatre for some time past, has been promoted to the management of the Leland theatre and will be succeeded in the Clinton Square theatre by someone yet to be named. John Garry, a relative of Buckley, will continue as manager of the Empire in Glens Falls. It is said that Perrin plans to associate himself with some concern in New York city.

Roberts Resigns Post With Berinstein

George Roberts and his son, Ormond have resigned their executive posts with the Berinstein interests, which include theatres in Albany, Troy, Schenectady and Elmira. The elder Roberts has been associated with the Berinsteins for the past eight or nine years. For a time he was the partner of the late William Berinstein at the Hudson Theatre in Albany, and eventually became the managing-director of the chain.

Ormond Roberts has been handling the Hudson in Albany for several years past. Julius Berinstein, who has been managing the Palace in Troy will now handle the two houses in Albany, as well as the Troy theatre, while his two brothers will look after the Elmira houses.

Schencks Will Build New Amusement Parks

Joseph M. Schenck and his brother, Nicholas M. Schenck, are at the head of a new Corporation composed largely of New Yorkers who have pledged $4,000,000 for the building in Los Angeles and San Francisco of amusement parks modeled after Palisades Park, the popular New York and New Jersey resort.

These will be the first of a chain of parks the corporation will control. Complete details of the project will not be announced until after the close in September of Palisades Park, which is controlled by the Schencks. According to present plans the California parks are to be ready for operation next Summer.

National Press Club Plans Big Theatre for Lease to Famous Players

A 3500-seat motion picture theater, to be the largest house in Washington, D. C., and to be leased to Famous Players-Lasky for a period of 25 years, is to be part of the $9,000,000 eleven-story buliding which is under consideration by the National Press Club as its permanent home.

The theater building would be erected on the site of the Ebbitt Hotel, Fourteenth and F streets recently closed, and the adjoining buildings. In addition to the theater and the club rooms, which would occupy the top floors, there would be several hundred offices and a number of stores.

The proposed theater, in addition to being the largest in Washington, would be second to none in appearance and equipment, it being anticipated that $300,000 would be expended in its decoration alone. It would be the "furthest west" of all the downtown houses, Loew having been the first to move any distance from the "movie center" at Ninth street when he built his house at Thirteenth and F. Last year Brylawski's Earle Theater was erected at Thirteenth and E streets.

For several years the National Press Club has felt the need of larger and permanent quarters, the present quarters in the Albee Building being under lease. The first actual step in this direction was taken some months ago, when "Roxy" and his Capitol Theater "gang" came to Washington for two days under the auspices of the Club. Their performances were sufficiently profitable to enable the Club to liquidate its long-outstanding debt.

The club has a running option on the properties under consideration.

Warners Buy Piccadilly, N. Y.

Take Over House From Lee Ochs and Associates for Broadway Show Window

WARNER BROS. announced the purchase this week of the Piccadilly Theatre at Broadway and 52nd street, New York City, from the Piccadilly Playhouse Inc., of which Lee Ochs is president and managing director. Warner Bros. took possession of the house officially last Tuesday and would not make public the consideration involved in the deal.

George H. Dumond, head of the Warner theatre department will be the new managing director, succeeding Mr. Ochs, who will retire, it is understood, to accept an executive position with Warner Bros.

Mr. Dumond stated that the name of the house will hereafter be Warner Bros. Piccadilly Theatre, and there would be a number of changes made in the appearance of the interior.

It is planned to revamp the stage and orchestra pit, and an effort will be made to rearrange the seating arrangements.

A 28 piece orchestra will be installed, just double the size of the present musical force, and the theatre will feature an eight unit program where it has only been running five and six units.

C. R. Marteneau, the present house manager, will be retained and Mr. Dumond said he was negotiating for one of the biggest musical directors in the country to take charge of the enlarged orchestra.

It will be a presentation house, the show window of Warner Bros. on Broadway.

BLACKTON A WARNER PRODUCER
Will Make Four For Coming Year

J. STUART BLACKTON, pioneer of the film industry is to produce four pictures for Warner Brothers distribution this year. The first of these productions will be "The Gilded Highway," adapted by Marian Constance from W. B. Maxwell's story, "A Little More."

The cast so far selected includes: Macklyn Arbuckle, John Harron, Dorothy Devore, Andre Tourneur, Myrna Loy, Gardner James, Florence Turner, Tom Mills, Mathilda Comont and Sheldon Lewis.

Particular significance attaches to the appearance of Florence Turner in a Blackton production, for it was under Blackton's direction that Miss Turner developed into a long popular star in the early days of Vitagraph.

Blackton, a real pioneer of pictures remained as vice-president of Vitagraph until the purchase of that company by Warners a few months ago, and throughout the intervening years he has continued to direct some of the most notable of picture successes. Among his more recent productions which met with success are "The Clean Heart" and "The Happy Warrior," both adaptations of novels by A. S. M. Hutchinson.

Submit Postal Service Brief

Woodhull Urges Special Attention of Congress Committee to Film Shipments

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has submitted a brief to Hon. George H. Moses, Chairman of the special joint subcommittee of Congress on postal rates, urging the consideration of that committee for expeditious and careful handling of film shipments and consignments by parcel post without the payment of any special service charge by exhibitors.

The brief in part reads:

"It might be of interest to note that the sales policy of the motion picture business is unique in business enterprise, in that the picture or commodity is not sold but rented; and through this system of operation, a picture is continually being transported, recovering the same territories repeatedly, and being what might be termed in a continual state of transportation. This naturally proves a continual revenue to the postal or express service through which the 'picture' is transported.

"We feel sure that if prompt and careful handling is given to parcel post shipments of film and accessory as aforementioned without the payment by the theatre owner of any special service charge, that the same will result in many more theatre owners using the service than do at this time, because if the service equals, or excels the 'express' service, with the lower cost to the theatre owner, it is but natural that he will use the cheaper medium and thus add revenue to the Post Office Department.

"May we again ask you to consider the above recommendation in behalf of the smaller theatre owner who comprises about 90 per cent of our Industry and who are particularly interested in the matter."

Jesse L. Goldburg, president Independent Pictures Corp.

Ben Davis Resigns From the Schine Company

Ben Davis, comptroller and one of the organizers of the Schine Theatrical Co., Inc., operating a large string of theatres in New York State, has resigned from that company. Davis' retirement from the organization, which grew from a single theatre to a chain of sixty houses during his tenure of office, took effect August 8th.

Previous to his connection with the Schine company Davis was associated with the home office of Realart as an advertising and exploitation expert and later with the New York First National Exchange in charge of advertising, exploitation and theatre efficiency. Davis has announced that he will remain in the theatre business in New York.

Two Lichtman Suits Are Dismissed

Two suits filed some time ago in the St. Louis Circuit Court by Al Lichtman of New York to collect commissions growing out of services alleged to have been given to Harry Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation, owner of the new St. Louis Theatre, now nearing completion at Grand boulevard and Morgan street, St. Louis, have been dismissed by counsel for Lichtman.

Although the suits were dismissed at Lichtman's cost his attorneys have stated that a substantial cash settlement had been made with him. They contended, however, that they were not privileged to divulge the exact amount paid to Lichtman or other details of the alleged settlement.

One of Lichtman's suits was against Harry Koplar for $25,000 while the other was an amended petition and asked for $49,000 from Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation. His original suit against Koplar and the theatres company asked $50,000.

55 Montreal Theatres Pay City Tax of $45,492

The annual report of the city treasurer of Montreal gives interesting statistics regarding the theatres of Montreal, Canada's largest city, for the fiscal year ending last April.

The financial statement mentions that the local theatres are one of the most profitable departments of the civic license revenue, the total tax derived for the past year being $45,492. This is collected in the form of a seat tax at an annual rate of 85 cents per seat. The total seating capacity of the city's theatres is given as 53,521. The number of theatres officially listed under the tax is 55, of which the largest is the St. Dennis Theatre.

Famous Has Declared Regular Quarterly Dividend

At a meeting held this week the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock, payable October 1st, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business on September 15th, 1925. The books will not close.

Equity Appreciates the Service Bureau

FRANK GILLMORE, executive secretary of the Actors' Equity Association has written Will Hays a letter of appreciation for the establishment by his association of a service bureau for the employment of extras on the coast.

The communication reads as follows:

"Permit me to congratulate you and the members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers on your splendid decision to institute a service bureau for extras and do away with all forms of commission.

"This genuine effort of yours to remedy the abuses which have in the past borne so heavily on the extras is greatly appreciated by the Actors' Equity Association."

Warners Hold Ad Conventions

District Meetings Discuss Big Publicity Plans—Publishers Attend Conferences

A SERIES of district sales conventions have been called by Warner Bros. officials to realize the maximum value to the exhibitor from the "Bonded Advertising" campaign which that company has launched in connection with the productions to be offered next season. The meetings are being conducted in sales districts by Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution, and Myer Lesser, directing the advertising and publicity campaign.

The first convention was held in Boston last Saturday. It was attended by all the Warner salesmen in the New England territory. Last Monday a similar conference was held in Buffalo. At both meetings several newspaper publishers attended the gathering as voluntary members of the general get-together for the purpose of supporting the advertising campaign with the greatest energy.

Both Mr. Morris and Mr. Lesser left Friday for Mississippi where the convention of the southern division will be held at Biloxi. Herbert Elder, manager of the Southern Division, will join the New York executives at Biloxi.

With the first full page ad in the New York Times on August 3, the national advertising campaign got under way this month. The first ad was followed by full page copy on John Barrymore in 100 other Production on the picture, which is to be made in California, will be started soon. big city newspapers throughout the country. Each week a similar full page ad will appear in one paper in each of the larger cities.

At the same time from the Blaine-Thompson Co. in Cincinnati, copy and contracts were sent out to 1,000 newspapers in smaller cities. These ads, twenty-six in number, are from fourteen inches to column length and will be released in the 1,000 towns and cities.

"Bitter Apples" Purchased by Warners

"Bitter Apples," Harold MacGrath's latest novel has been purchased by Warner Brothers for production on the 1926-27 program. McGrath is the author of "The Man on the Box," just finished by Syd Chaplin as his first Warner Brothers picture.

"Lightnin'" Tops New Fox List

Tom Mix in "The Lucky Horseshoe" is Second Feature on August Program

WITH "Lightnin'," screen version of the famous Frank Bacon play, at the head of a list of seven offerings for August, Fox Film Corporation inaugurates this month the new schedule of productions for the 1925-26 season. "The Lucky Horseshoe," a Tom Mix starring vehicle, is the other feature production on the program for the current month, which also provides a "Van Bibber" two-reel comedy, "West Wind," a Fox Varieties reel, "A Business Engagement," one of the Married Life series based on the "Helen and Warren" stories, and the semi-weekly releases of Fox News.

The John Golden success, filmed with Jay Hunt in the title role of "Lightnin'" Bill Jones, had a pre-release showing at the Strand, New York, during the week of July 28th. The picture attracted widespread attention in the city where Frank Bacon played the role during a record run. Players who appear in the chief supporting roles are Madge Bellamy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Clayton, Otis Harlan and Edythe Chapman. John Ford directed the production.

In "The Lucky Horseshoe," Tom Mix is supported by Ann Pennington, Billie Dove, J. Farrell MacDonald, Malcolm Waite and "Tony," the star's celebrated horse. The picture, which is Mix's first since his return from Europe will be released on August 30th.

Supplementing these features are several short productions, among them "The Big Game Hunter," a new "Van Bibber" story adapted from the works by Richard Harding Davis. Earl Foxe is the leading player in this two-reel comedy, in which he is supported by Florence Gilbert.

The typhoon, cyclone, hurricane and gentle breezes are the subject of "West Wind," the Fox Varieties reel. It will be released on August 23. "A Business Engagement" is another of the Helen and Warren stories. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley have the leading roles in the production, which is to be released August 30th.

Sering D. Wilson Acquires Norman Dawn Production

"Typhoon Love," a feature filmed in the South Seas by Norman Dawn, has been acquired for distribution by Sering D. Wilson & Co., Inc. The picture will be offered for state rights in all territories except those in which the Wilson organization operates its own distribution offices. One of the features of the Dawn production is an actual scene of a typhoon, said to be the first captured by the motion picture camera. Among those who appear in the feature are Ruth Clifford, T. Roy Barnes, George Fisher and Mitchell Lewis.

Newmeyer Joins MacLean's Production Unit

Paramount has added Joseph Dowling to the cast of "Lord Jim," which Victor Fleming is producing with Percy Marmont, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton and Madeline Hurlock in the other leading roles.

Scenes from "Kiss Me Again," an Ernst Lubitsch production for Warner Bros.

Sills to Be Starred in "The Unguarded Hour"

First National announces that Milton Sills will be starred in "The Unguarded Hour," which has been started in production in the east with Doris Kenyon in the featured feminine role. The company is now making exteriors at the Benedict estate at Greenwich, Conn. In the supporting cast are Claude King, Jed Prouty, Cornelius Keefe, Lorna Duveen, Dolores Cassinelli, Charles Beyer, and J. Moy Bennett. Lambert Hillyer is directing.

Frankie Darro is Signed by Stromberg for Another Role

Hunt Stromberg has signed Frankie Darro, boy actor who won distinction in that producer's "Roaring Rails," for an important part in "The People vs. Nancy Preston," to be made with an all-star cast for Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Clarion Has Announced Cast With Leo Maloney

Leo Maloney is making good progress on "Win, Lose or Draw," the first of a new series of eight westerns he is making for release through Clarion Photoplays, according to announcement by Louis Weiss. Featured in the cast with Maloney are his dog, Bullets, and his horse, Senator. In the supporting cast are Roy Watson, Whitehorse, Josephine Hill, Leonard Clapham and Bud Osborne.

Warners Sign Ben Turpin for "Hogan's Alley"

Ben Turpin has been signed by Warner Brothers for an important role in "Hogan's Alley," one of the Warner Forty to be released in 1925–26. Monte Blue is the central figure in the story, while Patsy Ruth Miller, Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis are cast in important roles. Roy Del Ruth is directing the picture.

Banks to Make Two More for Associated

Monty Banks has completed "Keep Smiling," second of his full length feature comedies for Associated Exhibitors and has signed a new contract to make two more pictures for the same company. The first of these is "Play Safe," which goes into production immediately.

"Ben Hur" Coast Premiere at Grauman Theatre

CONTRACTS for the premiere presentation of "Ben Hur" on the coast have been signed by Sid Grauman, who will show the film for one or more years at one theatre according to the agreement, and Louis B. Mayer, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, producers of the screen version of the famous stage spectacle. The engagement will begin in the fall, it is understood.

While no particular theatre is named in the contract it is probable that "Ben Hur" will go into Grauman's Egyptian in Hollywood.

Marcel De Sano Signed by Schulberg

MARCEL DE SANO has signed a long term contract with B. P. Schulberg to direct exclusively for the Schulberg organization. It is said the contract was the result of De Sano's success with his initial picture, "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work."

The next Preferred picture to be assigned to the new director will be the film version of the Bronson Howard Civil War play, "Shenandoah," filming on which is scheduled to start late in August. Meantime De Sano is supervising work on the script.

Cast Completed for "The Gold Hunters"

Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., producing "The Gold Hunters," an adaptation of the James Oliver Curwood story for Davis Distributing Division release, has completed the cast which will be presented in the work. Those who will appear in prominent roles are David Butler, Hedda Nova, Mary Carr, Bull Montana, Noble Johnson, Al Hallett, Frank Illiott, Jimmy Aubrey, John T. Prince, Wm. Humphrey, and Kathryn McGuire. Paul Hurst is directing the film under the supervision of Ben Wilson.

"Flower of Night" Cast is Completed

Paul Bern has completed the cast for "Flower of Night," Pola Negri's latest starring vehicle for Paramount. Warner Oland was the last of the supporting players signed. Youcca Troubetzkoy, of Russian royalty is Miss Negri's leading man, while others in the cast are Helen Lee Worthing, Joseph Dowling, Edwin J. Brady, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Eulalie Jensen and Caesar Gravina.

Denison Clift Added to De Mille Staff

The latest addition to the Cecil B. De Mille staff is Denison Clift, successful motion picture writer and director. As his first assignment under his new contract he will prepare a story idea which will not go into production for eight months or more, as it will require considerable research.

Tyler Will Start First for F. B. O.

Tom Tyler, new F. B. O. star will start work within the next few days on the first of a series of eight Western pictures. The initial story, "Let's Go Gallagher," is by Percy Heath and James Gruen and will be co-directed by Robert De Lacy and James Gruen, both new directors.

Bennett Gets Rights to a Kaufman Novel

Whitman Bennett has secured screen rights to Reginald Wright Kaufman's latest novel, "Share and Share Alike" and it will be picturized in the near future at Bennett's Glendale Studio. The picture will be released on the Arrow Pictures Corporation's schedule for the season of 1925-26.

Conselman to Write Titles for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

William Conselman, former assistant to Pete Smith, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio publicity, has been promoted to the editorial department of that studio. Conselman, a former Los Angeles newspaper man, will write titles for feature pictures, his first assignment being the titling of "Time, the Comedian," Robert Z. Leonard's production. Jack Neville, formerly publicity director of First National will succeed Conselman as assistant publicity director.

Two More First National Features Completed

First National's eastern producing organization last week completed two more features for the 1925-26 schedule. These were "The Knockout," which is to be Milton Sills' second starring vehicle for the company, and "The Pace that Thrills," a Byron Morgan automobile romance with Ben Lyon and Mary Astor co-featured.

Percy Heath Joins F. B. O. Scenario Staff

Percy Heath has been added to the scenario staff of Film Booking Offices and will assist scenario editor Fred Myton in the preparation of scripts for a number of pictures to be made during the coming season. He will work on many of the scripts for Evelyn Brent, Lefty Flynn and Tom Tyler.

Barbara Bedford Leading Lady for Bill Hart

The William S. Hart organization has cast Barbara Bedford as leading woman for "Tumbleweeds," Hart's first picture for United Artists, which is now in production and will be released in the Fall. King Baggot is directing the picture and is being assisted by Justin H. McCloskey.

Webb to Direct Another Barthelmess Vehicle

Kenneth Webb has been engaged to direct Richard Barthelmess in "Just Suppose," the star's vehicle to follow "The Beautiful City," which is now being produced for First National release under Webb's direction.

Kerry Injured, Gibson Takes His Role

NORMAN KERRY was injured in the mountains near Pendleton, Oregon, last week while playing the starring role in a big Universal Western production, and his place in the picture has been taken by Hoot Gibson. Kerry was hurt when his horse fell and rolled on him. He is being taken to a hospital at Universal City.

Gibson has just returned to Universal City from Calgary, Canada, where, under the direction of Herbert Blache he filmed exteriors for two westerns, "The Calgary Stampede" and "Chip of the Flying U."

The picture in which Gibson succeeds Kerry is an adaptation from the novel written by Edward Sedgwick, the director, and soon to be published by Grosset and Dunlap. The supporting cast includes Kathleen Key, Dustin Farnum, Anne Cornwall, George Fawcett and Ward Crane.

Raquel Meller, Continental stage favorite, in scenes "The Promised Land," her own production filmed in Paris on an elaborate scale. She will be seen on the New York stage this winter.

Independents Report Sales

Several Important Domestic and Foreign Territories Closed Under New Contracts

INDEPENDENT Distributors report many important contracts covering feature and short product in the domestic and foreign territories. Several of the contracts were for the entire product of certain distributors, whose programs for the coming season are already assured of a wide circulation both here and abroad.

A. C. Snyder, General Manager of Dependable Pictures Corp., of Boston, announced this week that he had acquired the franchise of New England for all of the Astor Distributing Corporation product. This includes eight Bernarr Macfadden True Story productions; the Madeline Brandeis production, "The Shining Adventure," starring Percy Marmont; "The Business of Love," a Jess Robbins production; and the Astor Aristocrat production, "Child Wives," which will be a special picture to be released in the Fall.

E. J. Drucker, manager of the DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, announces that he has completed arrangements with Mr. Rollo representing the B. P. Shulberg Productions for the distribution of Preferred Pictures in the Denver and Salt Lake territories. Mr. Rollo spent several days with Mr. Drucker working out the details, and both of them are very enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season.

J. S. Grauman, president of the Celebrated Players, Inc., of Milwaukee announces that in addition to having the franchise for the Tiffany Big Twelve and the Six Truart Blue Ribbon features, he has contracted with Truart Film Corporation for their series of Four Novelty Productions featuring Rex and Black Beauty, and the series of Four Cinemelodramas and the Special Truart feature "Romance Road" featuring Raymond McKee. This deal was consummated by John N. Weber, representing the Truart Film Corporation.

On his trip to the Middle West, Mr. Weber also sold the franchise for the St. Louis territory which embraces Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri for the Tiffany Big Twelve, the Four Novelty Productions and the Four Truart Cinemelodramas to the Columbia Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Weber also closed the deal for the Four Truart Novelty productions for the Minneapolis territory which embraces Minnesota and North and South Dakota, to L. H. (Micky) Coen, general manager of the Screen Classics Corporation.

Louis Weiss, of Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures, announces the sale of the entire Artclass program of twenty-four pictures to Progress Pictures, Inc., of St. Louis for the Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri territories. Artclass has also sold the Buddy Roosevelt series eight features to Rafael G. Marti for the Porto Rico, Haiti and San Domingo territory.

To Seventh Avenue Film Company, London, England, "Down Upon the Swanee River," and "Trails of Destiny."

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Pictures Corporation, announces the sale of the entire Arrow program for '925-26 to Ajusco Pictures Company of Mexico City for Mexico. The contract was concluded between Dr. Shallenberger and Charles N. Jawitz and Si Braunstein of New York, representing General Norberto C. Olvers of the Ajusco Company.

L. W. Kastner, president of Inter Ocean Film Company, closed two important distribution contracts for Latin America on the twelve Gotham productions. The Gotham pictures were purchased for Argentine and Chile by the Sociedad General Cinematografica, and for Mexico by Screen Art Sales Company.

Fay Tincher Returns to "U" for "Gumps" Series

Fay Tincher has returned to Universal City to resume her role of "Min" in the series of Andy Gump comedies which Samuel Van Ronkel is producing for Universal release. During Miss Tincher's absence from the studio to fill a vaudeville engagement the role of "Min" was played by Ivy Livingston. Joe Murphy as "Andy" and Jackie Morgan as "Chester" will appear with Miss Tincher in the remainder of the series.

Wm. McNutt to Write for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

William Slavens McNutt, newspaperman and fiction writer whose works have been published in leading magazines, has signed with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a scenarist. McNutt is now engaged in making an adaptation for which he will later write the continuity.

Weiss Brothers to Open Boston Exchange

WEISS BROTHERS Artclass Pictures will shortly open their own exchange in Boston to handle their product in the New England territory. It will be operated in the name of Artclass Pictures and will distribute a program of forty-eight pictures.

The list of releases will be made up of ten five reel westerns featuring Buddy Roosevelt, sixteen featuring Buffalo Bill, Jr., eight featuring Wally Wales, eight five reel westerns featuring Leo Maloney and six one reelers.

Prints and a full line of accessories will be in Boston within a week. An office will also be opened in New Haven shortly to facilitate prompt deliveries.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Orange and Black Front is Built for "Chickie"

"Chickie" received a most effective theatre front display when it was shown at the Strand theatre in Seattle. The front was done in orange and black. The banner above the entrance doors contained a special painted portrait of Dorothy Mackaill and John Bowers, flanked on the left with "'Chickie,' the story of the Seattle Girl," with the names of the members of the cast on the right hand side.

Cut-outs made of the one and three-sheet posters were set in as door panels while the title "Chickie," was displayed both in and over the marquee in illuminated letters.

The tying up of "Chickie" as the story of the Seattle girl added to its attractiveness as an offering in that town.

Costume Carnival Exploits "Great Circus Mystery"

The schools were holding costume carnivals in Los Angeles when Joe Rubenstein had the last chapter of "The Great Circus Mystery" and the first episode of "The Fighting Ranger" booked into the Riviera theatre. That gave Joe an idea—and the idea turned into a great piece of exploitation which won him a prize in Laemmle's serial exploitation contest.

He invited the children of the neighborhood on which he draws to participate in a "gigantic" parade which would celebrate the closing chapters of "The Great Circus Mystery." Those who came in costumes would be admitted free to the matinee show and if their costumes represented a Universal picture they would be eligible for a contest in which six cash prizes and two trips to Universal were the awards.

Long before 11 o'clock, the hour set for the parade, the lobby and the sidewalk in front of the Riviera were jammed with eager youngsters. Two hundred of them were in costume. The procession started off with a poster automobile in the lead and motorcycle police making generous use of their sirens following. Next came the bicycle section of 50 decorated bikes and behind them banner carriers and the 500 or more children who joined the procession.

When the parade returned to the theatre the doors were thrown open and the children in costume marched across the stage. The judges — representatives from the Universal exchanges in Los Angeles — picked eight winners. The audience by its applause designated who should receive the first, second, third, etc., prizes. After ten minutes intermission, the show was started.

Motion pictures taken of the parade were shown the following week and brought everyone and his cousin back again.

Novel revolving dice on display in the lobby of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, when Manager Guy O. Kenimer showed "Seven Chances" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Police Showing Advertises "Making of O'Malley"

Much valuable newspaper space on "The Making of O'Malley" was contained in the newspapers of Boston through a special showing of that film to Commissioner of Police Herbert A. Wilson, Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley with 34 captains of the Boston police department, shortly in advance of the showing of that picture at Gordon's Olympia Theatre, Boston.

Manager Frank Hookalo of the Olympia arranged with First National's Boston branch manager, Thomas Spry, for a private showing of that police picture at the company's Boston branch.

Police officers were keenly interested in the picture, Commissioner, Superintendent and Captains commented upon the presentation of a policeman's activities and duties.

The Boston papers printed the commendation of the Commissioner and the Superintendent, while a number of them used three and four column cuts of the group of police officials watching the picture being screened.

English Exhibitor Builds Strong "Oh, Doctor" Ad

Through the cooperation of manufacturers of patent medicine, packaged drugs, and other drug store staples, E. W. Bassil, manager of the Cinema House, Sheffield, England transformed his lobby into a first class imitation of a chemist's shop when he played "Oh, Doctor!"

To carry out the medical idea, Mr. Bassil supplied his usherettes with pill-box hats and his cafe waitresses with aprons on which "Oh, Doctor!" had been painted. The commissionaires, page-boys, and attendants had the name of the picture on the back of their white aprons.

In addition to this there was an extensive outdoor campaign.

Artistic and summary lobby effect created for "Are Parents People?" (Paramount) by Manager J. B. Carroll at the Strand theatre, Tampa, Fla., during the recent showing.

Pearls Shown in Window as "White Monkey" Tie-Up

"The White Monkey," received heavy billing and excellent window display for this showing at the Fifth Avenue theatre, Nashville, Tenn.

In addition to the regular billboard locations, three and six-sheets were used in the Arcade through which several thousand persons pass daily.

A window tie-up was arranged with the Cain-Sloan Dry Goods Company by W. R. Arnold exploiter. Two large portraits of Miss La Marr were used in a window displaying Richelieu pearls. A large card called attention to the showing.

Free Manicures Advertise "The Manicure Girl"

In the lobby of the Colonial theatre, Portsmouth, two days before and on opening day of "The Manicure Girl," Manager J. M. Edgar Hart, in cooperation with local beauty parlors, had manicure tables with dainty pink shaded lamps and an expert girl at each. Here the ladies of Portsmouth were treated to a free manicure from 4 to 6 p. m. A neat card on an easel near box-office announced Free Manicure from Four to Six Friday, Saturday and on the first day of the showing of the picture—Monday. The stunt caused a lot of talk, with favorable comment from all.

A telegram from Bebe Daniels commenting on the splendid cooperation of Portsmouth beauty parlors was reproduced and posted in the lobby of the theatre where it created a world of local interest. A huge cutout of Bebe Daniels was also used over theatre entrance.

Valuable publicity was gained through the cooperation of a local agent for French face powder, who furnished 3,000 samples of face powder done up in neat packages printed with "Compliments of Bebe Daniels" in "The Manicure Girl," starting Monday at the Colonial theatre, etc." This firm in addition to defraying the expense of printing, provided a young lady, who handed out the samples to the patrons two days in advance of showing at the theatre. Some were given to men with a small card signed with initials of theatre manager, reading: "Gentlemen may use this after shaving—warranted Soft and Smooth."

In addition to the above, the standard exploitation methods were employed, with an attractive window display in the leading drug store of manicure and toilet articles with a special card announcing the attraction at the Colonial.

The force of boys which covered St. Louis in remarkably thorough fashion with heralds for the engagement of "The Fool" (Fox) at the Kings theatre.

Clever Co-Operative Page on "I'll Show You Town"

Ann McCurdy, the Universal exploiteeress in Milwaukee worked out a co-operative half page in the Journal which brought much publicity to the Merrill when "I'll Show You the Town" was holding forth there.

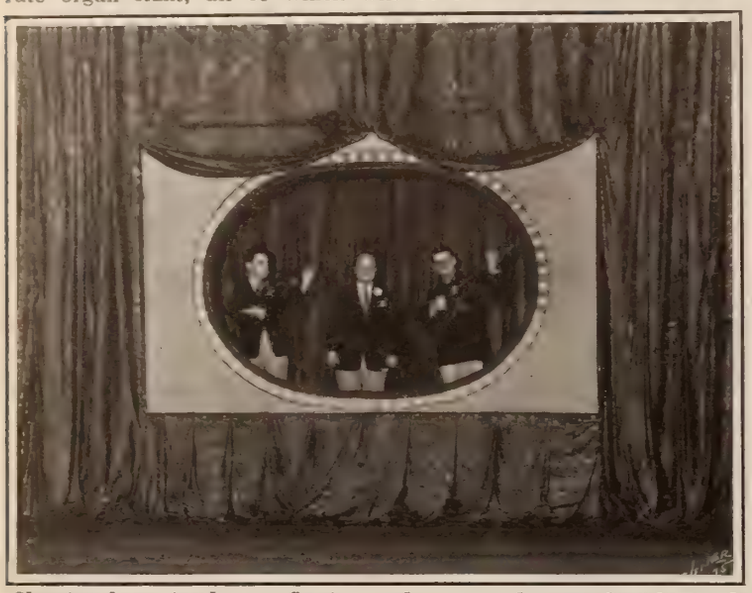
At the top of the page, Mrs. McCurdy announced that there was a contest being run in connection with the ads below. You were to count the number of times the five words of the picture's title were used and if you were correct you received a pass for the show. You were advised, however, that "I will" would not do for "I'll" nor "your" and "you're" for "you".

Mrs. McCurdy's ads, such as: "You have not seen the town until you have visited the "Marigold Gardens" or "While You're Seein' the Town, don't fail to visit 'Milwaukee's land of perfect joy,' State Fair Amusement Park," etc., tied up well with the picture.

Saenger's Trianon theatre in New Orleans was effectively decorated for the showing of "As Man Desires," with sand placed on the floor and cut-outs set in to advantage.

"Heart of a Siren" Given Showmanlike Front

In addition to his usual screen, newspaper and heavy billboarding campaign for "The Heart of a Siren", Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre, Laredo, Texas devised an attractive theatre front.



On the morning of the opening, this front was put in place. It consisted of a large red heart which occupied the central double door entrance to the theatre. Reaching from the heart to the sides of the door were four arms, each arm bearing one of the words "Conniving", "Intrigue", "Vanity," and "Deceit." From the two upper arms was suspended smaller red hearts. Above the heart was a poster cut-out and flanking it on either side were framed stills.

A large heart and a smaller heart were hung under each end of the marquee.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

LOUIS C. SHIMON, assistant manager of the Milwaukee theatre, Milwaukee, sends us some excellent program copy and a first rate organ stunt, all of which will be reproduced elsewhere in this department at the first opportunity. As Shimon remarks, good program copy is not so easy to write or obtain, and is well worth passing on to others when written, since it may save the other fellow that much work.

Showing how simply an effective prologue can be staged with simple means; this picture frame effect was used by Manager Guy O. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, in his presentation of "Paths to Paradise" (Paramount).

JOHN M. LYTLE, manager of the Palace theatre at Dixon, Calif., sent in some material a while back showing that all the live wires aren't in the big cities by a long ways. He received the official blessing of the Community Council for a Go-to-Movies week, and put it over in big style.

The McLaren Amusement Co., Inc., at Jackson, Mich., operating the Capitol theatre, of which W. S. McLAREN is managing director, sends two recent issues of its highly creditable Capitol Theatre Weekly. This is an eight-page weekly program for which good support has been built up among local firms in an advertising way. Interesting film news and the programs for the week make up the editorial content.

JOHN B. BIGGIO of Biggio's Grand theatre, Steubenville, Ohio, sends an excellent photo of his lobby display for "Paths to Paradise," which we shall try to reproduce at the first opportunity.

C. D. MacGREGOR, the projectionist-exploiteer of the Princess theatre, Chatham, Ontario, of which J. A. STEWART, is manager, sends a photo of a corking display on "Gold Heels" made very inexpensively, and promises to send others from time to time. We'll be glad to get them, MacGregor, if they're on a par with this one.

SMALLEY'S SIDNEY THEATRE, Sidney, N. Y., forwards another batch of its excellent throwaways and heralds, some of which will be described elsewhere first chance we get.

John E. Callahan of the Paramount exchange in New Haven sends us a description of a great contest stunt worked by MANAGER JAMES F. POWERS of the Bijou theatre in that city on "Night Life of New York," which will be described here shortly.

E. S. HOLLAND, the advertising man of the Bijou theatre, Abingdon, Ill., of which CHARLES M. DAHLER is manager, writes us enclosing several splendid pieces of exploitation material. He also describes a Western week put over there which we'll pass on to other managers in this department.

ECONOMICAL PROLOGUE

THE illustration here of the prologue on "The Lady," in two scenes, an excellent example of a striking prologue at small expense, was used by the new McDonald theatre in Eugene, Ore., recently. It was devised and executed by Donald McDonald and Russell F. Brown, the latter being the publicity director for the Greater Eugene Amusement company. The first part of the prologue was a night street scene in London with the figures and background being half concealed by fog.

Plush parts on London street, amber street lamp and one or two distant windows showing thru greenish fog. Figures moving in shadows. Policeman saunters in from left, whistling short strain over and over again, swinging club carelessly. Cop discovers man in high hat, with cane, draped around lamp post. Cop disengages man from post, and straightening up reeling unsteadily off at left.

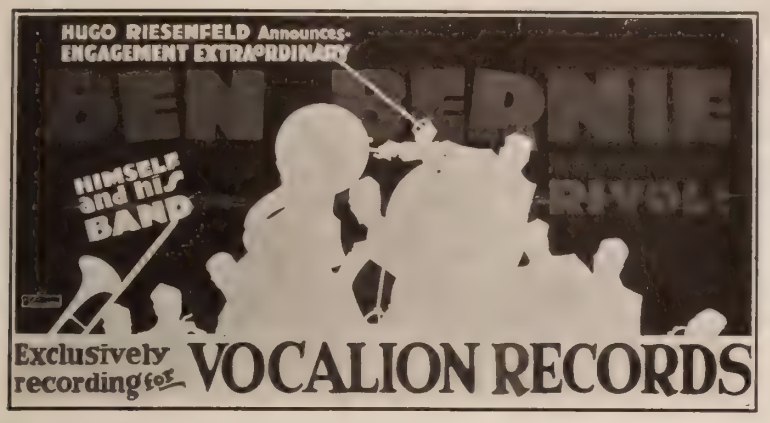
As Lady nears left, man, with cap, slinks from behind building, sneaks up behind Lady. Lady turns, screams. Man grabs at Lady's handbag. Police whistle heard off right. Cop runs in from right. Cop grabs man who has just started to run. Cop drags man back to Lady.



Cop: "What's the charge ma'am?"

Lady: "It's all right, officer, he didn't take anything."

Two scenes from the beautifully staged prologue to "The Lady" (First National) at the McDonald theatre, Eugene, Ore. None of the props involved were at all elaborate and the cost was moderate.

AND OURS

Color poster displayed in some 5,000 phonograph dealers windows as the result of a tie-up on the Ben Bernie engagement at the Rivoli theatre, New York City, made by Ed. Olmstead, publicity director, with the Vocalion company.

Cop: "You want to let 'im go, ma'am?"
Lady: "Please do—(to crook) and you'll try to straighten up, won't you?" (Crook hangs head, doesn't answer).
Cop: "Yea! They always do!" (Lady turns to leave.)
Cop: "I'll see you thru the district, ma'am?" (Lady exits, left.)
Cop: "Come on, lucky chap, out of sight before my mind changes on me!"
Crook: "Thanks,—and who's the lady?"
Cop: "You said it! She's THE Lady!"
Cop strolls off back stage. Crook walks front left as background dims off and crook sings "Beautiful Lady" in amber spot from loft. Lamp left on.

End solo, lamp and spot dim off. Blue foots and borders come up on black scrim, then down as black lights come up and scrim parts revealing large frame painting of lady hanging against grey drape wall. When lighted from in front, painting is that of "Mother" by Whistler. As lights dim off in front and come up behind painting, girl comes to life in place of painted mother and sings. Reversing lights fades off girl and brings back the painting. Off stage, tenor sings "Wonderful Mother" entering, left, at start of chorus, walking towards and singing to picture. Solo ends with tenor kneeling in front of and looking up at painting.

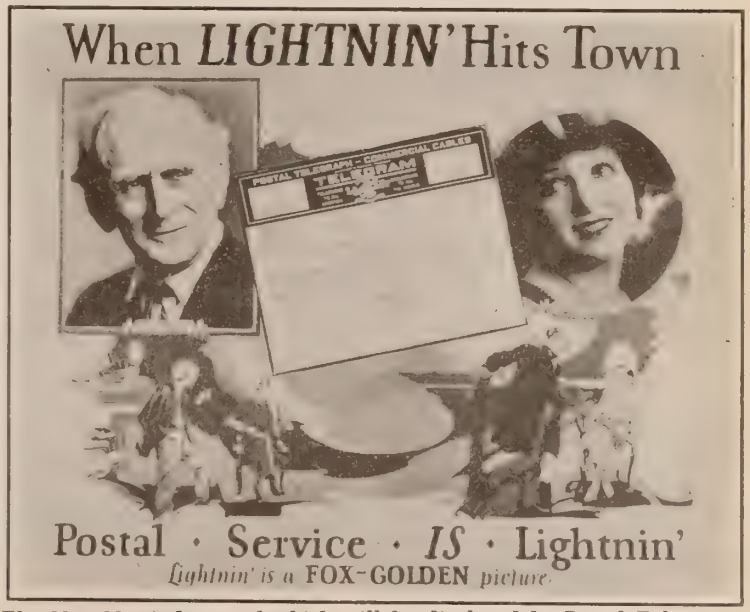
Lights come up behind scrim painting, revealing soprano seated in picture pose and turning and looking down at boy as lights come up. Soprano sings "Boy of Mine" while boy remains in same position. End solo, lights fade off behind and come up in front of painting. Boy arises, looking at painting, organ seguing into "Wonderful Mother" as plush closes and parts on title of picture.

COURTESY AND CLEANLINESS

THE Personal Talks by Harold B. Franklin appearing each week in The Close-Up, Paramount's publication for its own theatre employees, are always sane and informative. They are really little talks on theatre management, and as such should be of interest, it seems to us, to other theatre managers as well. At any rate, here is one of the recent talks, bearing on courtesy and cleanliness of house employees:

Until a comparatively short time ago it was the policy of some exhibitors to give the doorman complete charge of engaging ushers, cleaners, etc. It is possible that this state of affairs still exists in certain parts of the country, but it is an undeniable fact that it is no longer a practice in any really successful theatre. Managers who know have come to realize that too much of the success of the theatre depends on the kind of staff they employ, that they personally select each person and make sure that they are qualified by experience, appearance and adaptability for each particular post. Once accepted as employees, they are fitted into that part of the theatre in which they can be of the most service not only to the theatre, but to themselves as well.

Experience has taught managers that inefficient or "fresh" employees are likely to mean the loss of thousands of dollars each year and the incalculable loss of good will, and such an item ultimately means the difference between success and failure.



One of the most interesting things about present-day personnel work is the real effort that is made by the best type of manager to help the new employee do the best work that he or she may be fitted for. There is a realization that the improperly placed employee becomes a drag—such a person has a detrimental effect on the morale of the whole organization. Breaking in new employees is an expensive proposition, and therefore it behooves each manager to be careful in the selection of each person employed. A manager's ability to surround himself with an efficient, courteous staff is in a measure indicative of his skill. Here is where true management shows itself.

There are many factors that contribute to the acceptability of a prospective employee of a theatre. Realizing that in coming in direct contact with the patron the employee is in effect the theatre's personal representative, the aim should be to try and get as high a type as possible.

Next to honesty, cleanliness is placed among the cardinal virtues. Improperly cared for hands, neglected neck, unshaven faces, collars not exactly white, uncared for shoes and clothing all have a detrimental effect. Anti-Volstead breaths are absolutely barred. Too much facial adornment of rouge and lipstick and the chewing gum habit are taboo. Managers who will bear these facts in mind will find themselves surrounded by a personnel that will pay rich rewards.

Without courtesy there can be no success in a theatre. The operation of a theatre is a business in which uniform courtesy is essential—service is part of the theater's stock in trade. An usher can seat a patron in such a way as to affront him and the usher's manner may be merely the result of hurry. Therefore, a theatre's staff, from the cashier right to the manager, should ever be on the lookout to please patrons by word and deed. We must not forget that institutional courtesy starts at the top. The bigger the job, the greater the need for unfailing courtesy. No executive can inspire a courteous staff if he himself is cross or inconsiderate. Therefore, it is most important to have a splendid relationship exist between executives and employees.

The usher of today is the manager of tomorrow, and successful managers will encourage suggestions from ushers and others. In the final analysis, the usher, the cashier and the doorman, who are in constant touch with patrons, are able to make the most valuable suggestions.

"Manicure Girl" Revue is Staged by Harrison

Manager J. P. Harrison in his exploitation of "The Manicure Girl" at the Hippodrome, Waco, used an idea broadcast from the F. P.-L. Advertising Department which resulted in a wealth of publicity for the attraction.

A Beauty Parlor Revue was staged with the cooperation of four local beauty shops, the latter supplying all the paraphernalia necessary. A black face comedian, dressed as a porter, opened the show with a humorous monologue, after which the curtains were taken up revealing a modern beauty parlor with four booths. Each parlor had three representatives, two customers and one operator, all very pretty and attractive girls, each of whom did a specialty dance or song number with colored porter telling jokes between solos.

The revue was put on at minimum cost to the theatre, a local florist, plumber and barber supply shop setting the stage gratis. The only expense incurred being that attached to the hiring of the black face comedian. The result was a distinctly novel and professional presentation which won many compliments for the management.

Six excellent window displays were secured with local drug stores on Glazo, and through the courtesy of the Goldstein Migel Company, several thousand samples of toilet articles were given out during the picture's run.

The usual newspaper advertising and bill posting was employed, with 5,000 special heralds featuring the Waco Beauty Parlor Revue in conjunction with the showing of "The Manicure Girl."

All Over 50 Admitted Free to "Old Home Week"

With the showing of "Old Home Week" at the Sterling theatre, Greeley, N. C., Manager C. T. Perrin held a special matinee the first day of the pictures, admitting free every resident of Greeley who told the doorman that he or she was over fifty years of age.

"Quo Vadis" Given Strong Campaign at Liberty

"Quo Vadis" was shown recently by the Saenger Amusement company at its Liberty theatre, New Orleans, La. A comprehensive campaign, planned by Maurice Barr and Elmore Ryan, brought into play, newspapers, billboards, Italian societies, radio, book clubs, libraries and every conceivable medium of audience appeal.

It was given a "road-show" presentation —but at popular prices. It was the sole attraction of the program—weeklies, comedies, novelties, being eliminated for this particular week. The result was that audience attention was concentrated throughout the two hour period required to project it.

Several thousand sheets of lithographs were used in the billboard campaign. Special hand-drawn ads, and First National's pressbook aids carried the newspaper message.

Bathing Beauty Ballyhoos "I'll Show You Town"

Ray Averill, who manages the Olympic in Buffalo, N. Y., worked a good stunt in connection with "I'll Show You the Town." Fortunately for Ray, Crystal Beach was running a beauty contest, as has become a habit with beaches in the summer. And so Ray entered his own beauty, called her Miss Olympic and had her do other things than parade before the judges.

He borrowed a nice shiny roadster from the Davis agency for her and put an "I'll Show You the Town" banner on the back and spare tire. To add class to his equippage, Ray hired a negro, dressed him like an "Arabian Nights" slave and sent him along with Miss Olympic, as her official escort. To say that Miss Olympic in her diving costume, the bedecked slave, and the gorgeous roadster caught the town's attention is putting it mildly.

Wherever Miss Olympic went she handed out cards with her picture and "I'll Show you the Town" copy on them, and small heralds printed in red and black.

Dye Tie-Up Provides Free "Quo Vadis" Heralds

H. C. Farley manager of the empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., got out a special, attractive herald on the showing of "Quo Vadis" without expense to himself. This was done through a tie-up with Motes and Son with an ad for Chango, a new and scientific dye for cleaning rugs on the floor.

On the front of the four page folder was the following: "Two new and immensely interesting accomplishments!" The second page was devoted to a brief description of "Quo Vadis" and its showing at the Empire. The third page, equally brief, called attention to Chango. The back page was blank. The circular was distributed at the theatre and mailed out by the management and also by Motes and Son.

Saenger's Liberty theatre, New Orleans, was responsible for this simple ple but highly effective front, erected for the showing of "Quo Vadis" (First National), recently.

Short Subjects and Serials

Sennett Directors Busy With Productions

Directors Harry Edwards, Alfred Goulding, Del Lord, Lloyd Bacon and Eddie Cline are busy making Mack Sennett Comedies for Pathe release. Goulding is directing Alice Day in a department store comedy with Danny O'Shea, Eugenia Gilbert and Barney Hellum in the cast.

Harry Edwards is finishing a crook story with Harry Langdon. Peggy Montgomery and Vernon Dent are in supporting roles. Del Lord is using fifty-seven lions in his current thrill comedy with Billy Bevan and Madeline Hurlock in the leading roles.

Lloyd Bacon is in the midst of a Ralph Graves comedy, with Thelma Parr, Vernon Dent and Irving Bacon in important parts.

Two Join Staff of the Bray Productions

Frank Leonard, cartoonist and gag man, and Ernest Corts, photographer, were added to the production staff of Bray Studios last week. Leonard will assist Walter Lantz with the production of a new Dinky Doodle series and the Unnatural History series, and Corts will assist with the Unnatural History cartoon series. The pictures are being produced for F. B. O. release.

"All Aboard," New Urner Story, is Completed

"All Aboard" is the title of the latest "Helen and Warren" two-reel production to be completed at the Fox studios. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley, the players of the title roles, are supported by Diana Miller, William Davidson, Ducille Ward and Pat Harmon. Albert Ray directed the story.

Reports Record Matinee on Program of Shorts

ALL short subjects programs have come into prominence in the Cleveland territory, Manager Burton of the Lincoln in Cleveland reporting highly satisfactory results with such a bill last week and Neil Schwarm, manager of the Grant at Massillon playing a "two-reel comedy festival" on August 13th.

At the Lincoln Mr. Burton played a short program for three days and reported that business on Thursday, the opening date, was fair with a noticeable increase Friday, and states that his Saturday matinee was the biggest in the history of the house. He announces that the program will be repeated as a regular monthly attraction at the Lincoln.

Schwarm used Carnival One sheets to advertise his "Comedy Festival" in Massillon. His program was made up of "The Mysterious Mystery," "Just a Good Guy" and "The Handsome Cabman."

Pathe Releases For August 23

"Our Gang" and Ralph Graves Supply Comedies Selected for Varied Schedule

RALPH GRAVES and the "Our Gang" troupers are the stars of the two-reel comedies which Pathe has chosen for the list of releases to be released the week of August 23. The program, announced this week, also includes the sixth episode of "Play Ball," the current serial based on a story by John J. McGraw, a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" reel, Pathe Review No. 34, one of the "Aesop's Film Fables," Topics of the Day, and the usual issues of Pathe News.

The "Our Gang" players are to appear in a Hal Roach production titled "Mary, Queen of Tots," a comedy with a phantastical sequence produced by Bob McGowan. It tells the story of a poor little rich girl who finds amusement in playing with dolls representing members of the "Gang" and which come to life in a pleasant dream which stirs the fancy of the little girl.

Ralph Graves is the star of "Don't Tell Dad," a Mack Sennett production. Graves is seen as the much-bossed son of a wealthy man, who orders the boy to do this and that, always successfully until he tries to select a wife for him. At this the youth rebels. However, he tries so hard to get out of such a match that he ends up by falling in love with the girl and all comes out quite happily for the whole family. Marvin Lobach, who has been prominent in most of the comedies which Graves has made for Sennett, again appears with the star. The role of leading lady is played by Natalie Kingston.

"Play Ball," the Patheserial written by John J. McGraw and adapted by Frank Leon Smith, reaches chapter six, entitled "The Show Down." Allene Ray, in her role of Doris Sutton, is decoyed to a riverside hut by agents of the villain. Walter Miller appears as leading man and others in the cast are J. Barney Sherry, Mary Milnor, Wally Oettel and Franklyn Hanna. Spencer Bennet directed this Patheserial.

"Seven Ages of Sport," the new Grantland Rice "Sportlight," reveals that today the world is a sporting stage from the cradle to the grave and that there is always some form of play which appeals to the millions in all periods of life. J. L. Hawkinson produced this subject.

Pathe Review No. 34 presents three subjects: "Some Moroccan Matters," incidents in the life of a race of conquerors; "The Waters of Niort," Pathecolor views of the canal town of Southwest France; and "From the Inside Out," a fish-eye view of what goes on under water.

Completing the Pathe schedule of August 23rd are "Over the Plate," one of the "Aesop's Film Fables;" "Topics of the Day;" the reel of wit and humor, and two issues of Pathe News.

Sees Renewed Interest in Short Films

Fred Quimby Finds Exhibitors Willing to Exploit Good Short Subjects on Tour of Fox Exchange Centres

THAT exhibitors are aware of the box office value of good short subjects and that progressive showmen all over the country are willing and ready to co-operate in the proper exploitation of short feature attractions are among the conclusions arrived at by Fred C. Quimby's short subject sales manager of the Fox organizations, following a thorough investigation of existing conditions as revealed to him during a tour of the exchange centers of his company. Mr. Quimby is well acquainted with the short subject field, in which he has had a wide experience, and his observation.

Mr. Quimby has just returned to New York from a tour of the principal cities of the United States where he had heart-to-heart talks with any number of exhibitors, large and small. During the course of his trip he visited every Fox exchange inaugurating a new short subject sales policy.

Because of his reputation as a short subject expert, the findings of Mr. Quimby, although mostly about his own company's activities, are printed herewith, because they reflect the trend of things concerning all short subject producers, distributors and exhibitors.

Among the more important observations made by Mr. Quimby are:

That exhibitors are more than willing to cooperate with producers in the proper exploitation of the short films.

Highlights from "Sweet Marie," a Fox Imperial Comedy in two reels.

Fred C. Quimby, Fox Short Subject Manager.

That a number of exhibitors have been ahead of the producers in appreciating the box-office value of the one and two-reelers and have been giving them a just amount of attention in all advertising and publicity, and, when their importance and popularity merited it, subordinating the feature to play up the short subject.

That exhibitors generally have grown as discriminating about their short subject bookings as they are about their features and insist on full information regarding them before signing contracts.

That the big exhibitors who have been passing up comedies for other presentations are realizing this is not in accord with their audiences wishes and are cutting down on prologues and other attractions to make room for one and two reel comedies.

That all the exhibitors talked with promise to be more than fair and equitable to their short subject bookings in advertising and other publicity.

And that the box-office results where short subjects were properly exploited were most gratifying and attested better than any words could the importance of the little features and the high regard in which they are held by the public.

Summing up, Mr. Quimby says the campaign inaugurated at the meetings of the short subject producers and distributors to convince the exhibitors of the value of properly exploiting short subjects is bringing the most satisfactory results. Exhibitors everywhere, he says, are waking up to the value of their one and two-reel attractions and many who never thought of advertising them before are doing so now with the ones who are increasing the space formerly alloted.

Mr. Quimby was more than pleased with the outlook for the Fox company's short subject product. He said that the Fox short subject sales to date are 200 per cent better than last season.

The plans of the Fox company to aid the exhibitors properly to exploit their short subject attractions, as explained by Mr. Quimby, are comprehensive.

In the first place complete press books will be issued with each two reel series. These books will be exactly alike, except in the number of pages, the books now issued with the starring features and supreme attractions produced by the company. For lobbies and outdoor advertising the Fox company will get up one sheets which will be the work of a recognized specialist. In addition to this there will be an ample supply of stills for newspapers and lobbies. In fact all accessories but the larger sized lithographs may be had by exhibitors booking the Fox two-reelers. For Fox News and Varieties attractive stock and current issue one sheets and slides will be available.

First Century Comedy Due This Month

"After a Reputation," a two-reeler starring Edna Marian will be the first release through Universal of the 1925-26 product of Century Film Corporation. It will be the first of a series of twelve Edna Marian comedies for the season and will be released in August. William Watson directed, while the principal supporting roles are in the hands of Matty Roubert and Rinto Colveg.

"Three Wise Goofs" Goes Into Production

"Three Wise Goofs," has been placed in production by Joe Rock of Standard Comedies who is producing the series for F.B.O. release. The picture stars "Tiny" Alexander, "Fatty" Kerr and "Kewpie" Ross. It will be released in October.

"Be Careful"
(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS comedy featuring Jimmie Adams boasts nothing if not action. There is nothing they have forgotten to put into it, including more than the usual quota of laughs. There is some good knockabout comedy of the usual order when a pair of elopers is chased by an irate father and the local "constable." But there is also some other hokum a little aside from the usual order, combined with a fair story and some good situations.

Jimmie Adams is supported by a good cast which includes Molly Malone as leading lady, William Irving, Lincoln Plumer and Eddie Baker. All add considerable to the general merriment.

Adams is a traveling salesman who lends his assistance to the eloping pair and thereby gets himself into unlimited difficulties. He conceals them in a bungalow and stands off the pursuing pair, only to learn that the would-be husband is an escaping thief. The pair proceed to the office of the Justice of the Peace, where Jimmy does everything possible to halt the ceremony and finally succeeds by calling out the fire department, made up largely of Justice of the Peace and the witnesses to the wedding.

Her Sweetie.....William Irving
Mary's Father.....Lincoln Plumer
The Sheriff.....Eddie Baker

Story by Sig Hersig; directed by Harold Beaudine; photography by William Wheeler, Fred Jacquemin; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod; produced by Christie.

The Story—Jimmie Adams, a traveling salesman befriends a pair of elopers escaping from an irate father and the town sheriff. He secrets them in a bungalow and aids them in escaping to the Justice of the Peace, only to learn the intended bridegroom is a thief making his escape. Jimmie then interrupts the wedding by calling out the local fire department, all of which are in attendance at the ceremony.

Classification—A fast moving comedy with an abundance of lively situations.

Summary—This is a comedy fairly bulging with humorous situations and some good slapstick and hokum. It is well acted by a competent cast and should go exceptionally well in the neighborhood houses.

"Pleasure Bound"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is an exceptionally good comedy with amusing situations galore and one that should register well almost anywhere. It features Lige Conley who is given a vehicle which allows him to surpass anything he has done heretofore. Flivvers, motorboats and a fishing excursion make up the comedy elements. These combined with more than the usual thread of a story make up two reels of real mirth and action.

A little slow in getting under way the picture picks up speed as it progresses until it is a veritable whirlwind of motor boats and lively comedy as it reaches its climax. While Lige Conley is the center of most of these situations and acquits himself most creditably, he is ably assisted by a cast made up of Stanley Blystone, Jack Lloyd, Estelle Bradley, Eva Thatcher and Phil Dunham.

When the fishing party arrives at its destination the picture takes on a whirl that provides an abundance of laughs. Different members of the party take turns at falling off the wharf, with some amusing rescues being effected. The whole thing winds up in some hilarious situations in which speedy motor boats play a prominent part.

The Cast

Stanley Strong.....Lige Conley
Myron.....Stanley Blystone
Daisy De Peyster.....Estelle Bradley
Mr. De Peyster.....Jack Lloyd
Mrs. De Peyster.....Eva Thatcher
The Rival.....Phil Dunham

A Mermaid Comedy, a Jack White production; written and directed by Norman Taurog; Photographed by Barney McGill and Len Smith.

The Story—The De Peysters start on a fishing party with a pair of gallant suitors offering their flivvers as a means of conveyance. Eventually they arrive at their destination where Lige's rival attempts to run off with Daisy in a fast motor boat. He is pursued by Lige and the girl's parents and manages to effect a rescue after much discomfort to himself and other members of the party.

Classification—An action comedy of romance, thrills and laughter.

Summary—This is a real comedy that will get laughs from any type of audience. It has some exceptionally humorous situations of the kind that make for spontaneous laughs without forcing them. It is well directed and well acted with a story above the average.

"Mary, Queen of Tots"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

AN ALTOGETHER delightful phantasy is offered in this "Our Gang" comedy produced by Hal Roach under the direction of Bob MacGowan, who has gone off the beaten path of juvenile comedy to make a two-reeler of decided novelty and appeal. The play introduces a dream sequence in which dolls fashioned to the likeness of members of the "Gang" come to life. Some remarkably amusing and attractive scenes have been achieved with the use of huge backgrounds and properties, with the result that the youngsters appear as tiny dolls in life-size surroundings. Great originality is not claimed for the use of this device here, but the effect is rather fresh in comedy and is handled with considerable skill.

The story is about a poor little rich girl whose loneliness is somewhat relieved when the kindly gardener buys her some dolls. Among these Mickey, Joe Cobb, Jackie Condon and Farina, of "Our Gang" fame are represented. The little girl has a dream which is visualized and permits the gang to perform to the best of advantage in a room large enough to permit Farina to walk under the bed without nodding his head and also allows Micky and Joe to climb in and out of the bureau drawers. Farina is also given an opportunity to do a bit of "solo pantomime" in which the comic possibilities of a folding opera hat are exploited. This dusky infant-star covers himself with glory, furnishing a performance that a Harry Langdon might be proud of.

Generally considered "Mary, Queen of Tots" is one of the most interesting of the "Our Gang" series and seems to merit special attention as a box office attraction. It is a comedy of high class and should be featured as something out of the ordinary by the theatre man who plays it, and no theatre man need fear to offer the film regardless of how big or little his house may be.

The Cast

Mary Kornman, Mickey Daniels, Farina, Joe Cobb, Jackie Condon.

The Story.—A neglected little rich girl is befriended by the kindly gardener who spends his hard-earned money for some dolls for the child's amusement. The dolls are made from living models and when the very live models themselves appear near the scene, the stern nurse believes herself insane and calls a policeman to witness the weird sight, an event which results in a happier situation for the little girl.

Summary.—A delightful comedy with a very amusing and interesting phantasy in which a group of dolls "come to life." It should make a great general appeal for the subject has been treated with exceptional skill by the director and the popular "gang" actors.

"Speak Easy"
(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY is the featured comedian in this one-reeler with Mildred June as his leading lady and Billy Engle as the rival. Puffy buys forty cents worth of birthday gifts for the girl, but is knocked down by a flivver and the gifts picked up by the rival are presented to the girl. Included among them are a ten cent diamond ring, which is discovered as bunk by the girl's father. He offers the girl's hand to the one who can first show him a thousand dollars.

Rival steals the safe from police department headquarters and agrees to split the swag with Puffy if he will do the driving. The flivver, out of control runs directly into police headquarters where the rival is captured and Puffy given the thousand dollars reward which goes with the thief's capture.

Puffy then becomes a nervous wreck fearing the escape from jail of his rival, who has threatened to escape and "get" him. He does make his escape, and in disguise as a doctor recommends a sanitarium to Puffy. With a bomb concealed in the back of the car the rival threatens the demolition of Puffy, but inadvertently drops a lighted cigar on it and is blown over the prison wall and into the chain gang, while Puffy and the girl escape uninjured. There is some fair comedy in this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Over the Plate"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE all-animal ball game is the "plot" of this Aesop's Film Fables cartoon produced by Paul Terry. The action is concerned mostly with the ingenious methods of "crashing the gate" employed by the mice and cats, elephants and ostriche. It is a fairly amusing reel, supplied with a quantity of incident and introducing several clever gags, the majority of which, however, have been used in the same connection in a previous cartoon in this series.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Seven Ages of Sport"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE sporting instinct which expresses itself in various forms from infancy to old age is the subject of this Grantland Rice "Sportlight" reel. It should make an appeal to all ages of film fans, for the games which all ages play are shown in a series of views taken in the great out-of-doors, an additional attraction for the program during these Summer months.—T. C. KENNEDY.

The Fearless Lover

(Perfection Pictures-Commonwealth—4656 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WITH a fighting cop for hero, pretty telephone girl for heroine and a bunch of tough gangsters making trouble for both, this melodrama of metropolitan activities in the crook strata, swinging along at a clipping gait, is just the sort of thing warranted to provide an hour of satisfactory entertainment for the average fan. Patrick Michael Casey, whose moniker enables one to make a close guess at his racial descent, is a new recruit. His dad was a sergeant who scored up a great record on the force in past years, and Pat starts off with stern determination to live up to the old man's reputation.

According to regulation movie schedule, he is planted in one of the city's hard-boiled sections and told to make good. And he does! Right at the start of his assignment we see him clutch Mr. Dugan, the notorious thug-leader by the shoulder, shake him up and tell that gent what he may expect if he doesn't behave while patrolman Casey is around. And when Casey begins cleaning-up, he goes about it in whirlwind fashion, makes a one-man raid on an evil resort, hunts Dugan to the house-top, dodges bullets, and when Dugan's gun is empty, disdains to use his gun, gives him a mauling and carries him off to the lockup. As a side issue, there's a romance with telephone girl Enid Sexton, played by Eva Novak, a strike in the exchange and death of a little chap who is hit by an auto and expires, through lack of medical aid, because the wires are out of order and they can't get a doctor, this last scene injecting a touching bit of pathos into the story. William Fairbanks and Eva Novak are excellent in their respective roles and well supported.

THEME. Metropolitan melodrama, with policeman hero, telephone girl heroine, and underworld atmosphere.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The numerous gang fights. Hero's final combat with leader. Phone girls' strike. Death of boy killed by auto. The love interest.

DIRECTION. Has piled up sensational episodes in rapid succession, handled romantic angle well, preserved continuity and brought out rattling climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the big punch scene where Casey stacks up alone against the gang and hunts leader Dugan to the roof, finally subduing him with his fists. The strike of the phone operators is also worth advertising.

DRAWING POWER. This isn't up to the mark for big theatre audiences, but looks like a sure money-getter so far as neighborhood and smaller houses are concerned.

SUMMARY. A lively melo with policeman and phone girl as hero and heroine. Packed with thrills, sentiment and romance. Offers realistic metropolitan atmosphere. No padding, plenty of action.

THE CAST

Patrick Michael Casey	William Fairbanks
Mrs. Casey	Ruby LaFayette
Tom Dugan	Tom Kennedy
Mrs. James Sexton	Lydia Knott
Enid Sexton	Eva Novak
Frankie	Frankie Darrow
Ted Sexton	Arthur Rankin

Author, Scott Dunlap. Directed by Henry McRae.

SYNOPSIS. Patrick Casey, new police recruit, is assigned to a tough section of the city, with instructions to manhandle all the crooks. Dugan, leader of a gang, is stopped by Casey from annoying phone operator Enid Sexton, with whom the cop falls in love. The telephone exchange girls strike. While the wires are idle a little boy struck by an auto, dies, because it is impossible to get a doctor quickly by phone. Enid's young brother, Ted, gets mixed up with Dugan's crowd, who plan a silk robbery. Casey uses his influence with his sergeant to let Ted go, if he succeeds in rounding up Dugan's gang. He goes into their headquarters alone, tackles them with club and gun and hunts Dugan to the roof. There the gangster fires at him, but misses. When Dugan's gun is empty Casev goes at him with his fists, beats him up and hauls him to the station. Enid and Casey arrange for early wedding.

That Man Jack

(F. B. O.—5032 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD program attraction of the straight Western brand, this film, besides offering the usual quota of battling and riding stunts, stresses the sentimental angle rather more than is customary with open air adventure tales. In other respects the plot is neither better nor worse than the average and spurts merrily along familiar paths. As a starring vehicle for Bob Custer it fulfills its purpose and will probably be well received by the numerous fans who prefer this type of picture to those equipped with literary material demanding analysis and concentration of thought.

The feature jumps into strenuous action right away, with Custer saving the girl in a runaway accident, old stuff, but remarkably well done in this instance, and giving the villain a dressing-down in a fight that is viciously realistic. Sentiment creeps into the story when the hero does the self-sacrifice act upon finding out that his pal loves the same girl he is fascinated by. The murder of his chum, Custer's arrest on suspicion, his escape and attempts to trace the real criminal are smoothly woven events, with circumstantial evidence damning Bob and the murderer's identity cleverly concealed until near the end. The star's work is uniformly good and some of his horsemanship feats look like real riding miracles, as for instance when he is chased by the sheriff, wounded, slides over on one side of his saddle until he nearly touches the ground, regaining his former position with the steed galloping at full speed.

THEME. Western melodrama, with sentimental urge more in evidence than usual.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine scenic shots, The numerous fights, chases and Custer's startling exhibition of riding prowess. The romantic trend and happy climax.

DIRECTION. Adequate. Has got all possible values out of familiar plot, creating considerable suspense, variety of thrills and making love interest prominent.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a speedy Western in which Custer distinguishes himself by his extraordinary riding feats and fighting ability.

DRAWING POWER. This film should make good wherever Westerns are popular. It is a suitable attraction for the average house, is O. K. for the family circle and the juveniles will certainly appreciate Custer's riding stunts and all-around display of athletic energy.

SUMMARY. A Western alive with strenuous action, with hero Bob Custer doing a number of novel and breath-taking stunts in the riding line. Is well photographed and directed, will satisfy the average fan and make an especial appeal to the boys, on account of Custer's wild horsemanship.

THE CAST

Jack	Bob Custer
Anita Leland	Mary Beth Milford
Joe Leland	Monte Collins
Sammy Sills	Hayford Hobbs
Bill Stearns	Buck Moulton

Author, George P. Bauer. Scenario by Adele Buffington. Directed by William J. Craft. Photographed by Art Reeves.

SYNOPSIS. When Anita Leland's team runs away from her a muscular stranger intervenes, stops the horses and assists her to dismount. He gives his name as Jack, and when Sammy Sills proposes that he should become his partner in working a mine, he consents, as the proposition enables him to be near the girl. Jack engages in a fight with Bill Stearns, a husky loafer, and thrashes him soundly. It transpires that his partner Sammy is also in love with Anita, having known her since childhood, and is engaged to her. Jack makes up his mind to leave and rides away. Sammy is attacked by the Stearns gang and slain. Suspicion falls upon Jack, which is strengthened when his share of the gold is found on him. He escapes and meanwhile Anita goes to Sammy's deserted cabin, finds a note written by the dying man naming Stearns as his assailant. Stearns appears and tries to seize the evidence, but Jack arrives and saves her. Stearns confesses and Jack is fully cleared. Falling heir to the rich mining claim he is in a position to wed Anita and she admits her love for him.

Lady Robinhood

(F. B. O.—5580 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THANKS to its Spanish backgrounds, this melodrama goes over the top with ease, presenting a feminine imitator of Robin Hood in the person of an impetuous and delightful young senorita who roams regardless through a fair countryside bearing the alias of La Ortega, supposed bandit, beloved by the poor peasantry, whom she succors, and heartily cursed by the plutocrats, whom she makes matters highly unpleasant for. The story, at its best, is improbable, but nevertheless entertaining. It would be an impossible yarn if framed in an American or a British setting, but in this fictitious province of old Spain where the action takes place, the spectators feel that most anything of an extraordinary nature might occur, and accept it gracefully as it runs.

Evelyn Brent is the heroine, a gallant and daring damsel who rides like an avenging Fury, climbs and leaps with the skill of a "big time" acrobat, and is physically attractive to such a degree that it's no wonder Robert Ellis, in the guise of an American mine-owner who comes to view his properties, yields to her fascinations when they first meet. However, as she is planning a revolution, although in reality niece of the oppressing Governor, and known in better circles as Senorita Catalina, that initial encounter results in the lady making Robert a prisoner, for all these capitalists look like a bad crew in her eyes. Of course, he escapes, they meet again under different circumstances and in the finale she rides with her men and saves him, just as he is backed against a dobe wall awaiting the signal for execution by rifle fire. Miss Brent scores splendidly in her double role, Robert Ellis gives a fair performance and the support is adequate.

THEME. Melodrama. Spanish atmosphere. Depicts adventures of senorita who poses as bandit, encourages revolution and marries American.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive scenery and foreign atmosphere. Decisive thrills, quick action and romantic interest.

DIRECTION. Satisfactory. Shows considerable ingenuity in making situations interlock smoothly, keeps continuity straight and action buzzing rapidly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title needs a little explanation. Might refer back to the real Robin Hood, English outlaw of olden times, who helped the poor and robbed the rich. Feature Evelyn Brent big. She is fast becoming a great fan favorite and you can boost this as one of her best melodramatic roles up-to-date. Play up her riding feats and scene in which she rescues hero from firing squad.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for average house, suitable for family trade.

SUMMARY. A gingery, fast melodrama, with Spanish atmosphere, presenting Evelyn Brent in unique role of senorita disguised as bandit, who aids the poor, promotes a revolution, rides, fights and vamps with equal spirit, and winds up by saving her American lover from being shot as a rebel. Interest never flags.

THE CAST

La Ortega / Senorita Catalina	Evelyn Brent
Hugh Winthrop	Robert Ellis
Cabraza	Boris Karloff
Governor	William Humphrey
Padre	Darcy Corrigan
Raimundo	Robert Cauterio

Authors, Burke Jenkins and Clifford Howard. Scenario by Fred Myton. Directed by Ralph Inch.

SYNOPSIS. Disguised as a masked bandit and known as La Ortega, the senorita, Catalina, ward of the governor of a Spanish province who oppresses the peasantry, roams the countryside, aiding the poor, avenging injustices perpetrated by the rich and secretly planning a revolution. Hugh Winthrop, a young American, owns mines in the province and comes to inspect them. Looking upon him as an enemy to the people La Ortega makes him a prisoner. Hugh escapes, but not before he falls in love with his fair captor. They meet again at the governor's palace. La Ortega steals important documents. She and Hugh are suspected and arrested. Hugh is sentenced to be shot. La Ortega manages to escape and dashes off to summons her followers. Just as Hugh faces the rifles of the firing squad, La Ortega and her men ride in and save him. The governor and his aids are convicted and the lovers united.

Wild Horse Mesa

(Paramount—7164 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

DUE to its spectacular appeal and melodramatic strength, combined with skilled direction and good acting by the entire cast, this latest screen adaptation of a Zane Grey story registers as excellent entertainment, superior in every way to the regulation Westerner. The title is a trifle misleading, as at first sight it suggests a plot built around an equine star, whereas the "Mesa" is a tract of table-land in Utah, where wild horses abound. True, one particular steed is singled out for special attention, but he is merely on the side lines, so to speak, and hasn't much to do with the plot development.

The yarn pivots on the idea of rounding-up the wild herd and selling its members to commission men, the means employed being a barbed wire corral trap. The hero objects to this as brutal, because he knows at least half the horses will be killed in the stampere. He wins his point, but several horse thieves appear who are not so tender-hearted, and the big punch comes when the drive starts and Jack Holt heads off the animals' mad rush at the risk of his life. Holt's romance with Sue Melberne provides the sentimental seasoning; there are a number of lively fights, including the revenge of an Indian chief, who kills off the horse-thieving trio and saves the heroine. Jack Holt, as the hero, with Noah Beery playing one of his effective ruffian roles and Billie Dove, as heroine, carry off the dramatic honors.

THEME. Western melodrama, with herd of wild horses prominently featured, love interest and numerous thrills.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Artistic photography, scenic beauty of exteriors. Jack Holt's clever horsemanship, the rapid action, Indian chief's revenge on men who ruined his daughter, the fighting thrills, Holt's mad dash before stampeding horses to turn them aside from trap.

DIRECTION. Has packed the picture with suspense and exciting moments developed its romantic side dexterously and wound up with spectacular, smashing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A Western ballyhoo, with men dressed as Indians and cowboys, and horse wearing blanket sign adorned by film's title, might be utilized in street parade. Lobby display should carry out story's atmosphere. Feature Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove.

DRAWING POWER. The production's general excellence guarantees it as an attraction worthy of the first-run houses, and its melodramatic sweep and spectacular scenes will surely please the masses, so the smaller theatres should also find it a good box office asset.

SUMMARY. This film lists several degrees above the usual kind of Westerner, as it is uncommonly well produced and photographed, rich in spectacular thrills, has strong romantic appeal and original plot. Also, cast includes several players whose names mean something at the box office.

THE CAST

Chane Weymer	Jack Holt
Bud McPherson	Noah Beery
Sue Melberne	Billie Dove
Chess Weymer	Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.
Bent Manerube	George Magrill
Lige Melberne	George Irving
Toddy Nokin	Bernard Seigle
Sosie	Margaret Morris

Author, Zane Grey. Scenario by Lucien Hibbard. Directed by George B. Seitz.

SYNOPSIS. Lige Melberne and Bent Manerube, accompanied by the former's daughter, Sue, go to Utah to catch and sell a herd of wild horses. They meet Chane Weymer, who wants to capture Penguitch, the stallion leader of the herd, and his Indian friends. McPherson, Slack and Horn, three horse-thieves, ambush Chane and the Indians. All escape, except Sosie, Chief Nokin's daughter, who dies afterward as a result of the mistreatment she sustains. Chane reaches the Melberne camp and falls in love with Sue. He shows her father that the barb wire trap into which he proposes to drive the herd would kill half the horses and Melberne gives up the plan. But Manerube joins the McPherson gang and they proceed with the scheme. Crane and Melburne are captured by the outlaws. McPherson shoots Manerube. Chief Nokin kills the three plotters. Chane rides before the stampeding herd and turns them at the risk of his life. He captures the stallion, but turns him loose on Sue's appeal. Sue and Chane wed.

The Demon Rider

(Davis Distributing Div.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN ordinary Westerner which will pass as a program attraction in localities where patrons want action in generous quantity and are not disposed to criticise plot values severely. The story travels along a familiar trail, with a ranch-foreman hero in pursuit of outlaws who have robbed a bank, rounding up the gang, securing the loot, losing it, getting under suspicion himself of being the arch-thief, but finally winning exoneration, applause and a pretty girl into the bargain. Nowadays few Westerners are considered complete if a horse of extraordinary intelligence isn't in evidence, and "The Demon Rider" comes up to expectations in this respect by registering Tarzan, a snow-white steed, as a sort of co-star with Ken Maynard.

Tarzan is a handsome animal, extremely well trained, not a bit camera-shy, and performs various stunts pleasingly, with due sense of the importance of his role in the general scheme of things. His master rides and fights in style befitting the picture's title and is a rather engaging type of lover, with Alma Rayford as an attractive heroine. The members of a Hollywood Beauty Sextet appear temporarily as camping girls, who have nothing to do with the yarn, except to serve as an eye-filler and provide an auto which is stolen by the bandits, and later hurtles over a cliff, eliminating the occupants, the leader alone escaping when Maynard ropes him adroitly and turns him over to the sheriff.

THEME. Western melodrama, hero chasing and subduing bandits, romance and sunshine finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive photography. Feats of white horse Tarzan. Riding and fighting thrills. Hollywood Beauty Sextet. Scene where auto carries outlaws to death over precipice. Jim Lowe's blackface comedy.

DIRECTION. Adequate. Action rapid. Bits of humor contributed by negro cook neatly interpolated. Melodramatic sequences well staged.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Ken Maynard and his sagacious white horse, Tarzan. Mention the Hollywood beauties. Boost as a Westerner full of action and pleasing romance. Stress the big thrill where auto driven by bandits goes over edge of cliff. Lobby displays with stills and exhibitions of cowboy regalia are also in order.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the neighborhood and smaller houses, in former case program should be strengthened by snappy short subjects, or picture would do very well as half of double feature bill. Should please juveniles particularly on account of Tarzan's exploits and prove acceptable for family trade.

SUMMARY. Just an average Westerner but moves crisply, mingles good melodramatic thrills with comedy relief, shows hero pursuing and capturing bandits who have robbed bank, being suspected of complicity with outlaws, but clearing himself satisfactorily and winning girl he loves.

THE CAST

Billy Dennis.....Ken Maynard
Mary Bushman.....Alma Rayford
Jim Lane.....Fred Burns
Black Hawk.....Tom London
The Cook.....James Lowe
Tarzan.....Himself

Author, J. Inman Kane. Directed by Paul Hurst. Photographed by Frank Cotner.

SYNOPSIS. Billy Dennis, B-Star ranch foreman, trails the Black Hawk gang of bandits after they have robbed a bank, surprises and ropes the entire outfit, recovers loot, a sack full of greenbacks. After Billy leaves, the sheriff and his men find caged outlaws, who tell him Billy is Black Hawk. Billy is pursued, loses sack, which is found by negro ranch cook. Billy trails finder of money, meets his girl, Alma, at the ranch, who believes him guilty but sticks to him. Cornered by sheriff, Billy escapes on his horse, Tarzan. Meanwhile the prisoners make a getaway. A party of camping girls arrive in an auto. While they are bathing in a mountain stream, the outlaws steal their machine. Billy follows, the auto plunges over a cliff, but he ropes their leader, Black Hawk, pulls him up and hands him over to the sheriff. Latter still suspects Billy, but negro turns up with money and clears him. Members of posse scatter back along negro's trail, finding bills which the darkey lost during headlong flight in terror, having overheard Billy tell Alma he intended to kill the chap who took away the sack. After a strenuous search they recover all the loot and Billy wins Alma.

Parisian Love

(B. P. Schulberg—6324 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

GETTING off to a good start, this picture flops sadly after the first reel, the story from then on meandering about aimlessly and not arriving anywhere in particular. It is an Apache melodrama with good local color and impressive settings, offering some capital views of the resorts where the Parisian equivelants of our East Side gangsters are wont to congregate, but the narrative fails signally to live up to its excellent backgrounds. It looks as though the director began work in a spirit of fine enthusiasm, suddenly realized that he was up against a cold, unfeeling prospect in the line of material, and thereupon went ahead despondently, to do the best he could under a heavy handicap.

Marie and Armand, the Apache lovers, played by Clara Bow and Donald Keith, are interesting only at the commencement of things, when mixing with their own kind in the underworld where they belong. Once transplanted to a higher grade of society they become merely absurd. Armand, patronized by the wealthy old scientist whom they tried to rob, and Marie, suddenly transformed into a model of etiquette, fascinating Monsieur Pierre Marcel, the aforesaid scientist, are about as unreal and artificial creations as could well be imagined. Even making due allowance for melodramatic license, this film is too forced and unconvincing to register as even tolerable entertainment. Its cast includes several prominent players, each an artist of merit, and they do as well as could be expected with sheerly impossible roles, but the net result is, of course, disappointing. The plot is so trivial that it could easily have been confined to five reels, instead of stretching over six and being heavily padded with needless detail.

THEME. Apache melodrama, with Parisian underworld atmosphere and triangle love affair.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Realistic settings and backgrounds. Opening scenes, showing phoney fight put on by Apaches for benefit of American visitors, as well as a genuine scrap. Attempted robbery of scientist's apartments, killing of the Knifer and wounding of hero.

DIRECTION. Weak and wandering. Thrill stuff poorly executed, action draggy, footage wasted.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title has a suggestive sound and will probably attract fans. But it won't do to promise much as regards story, unless you want to risk disappointing your patrons. Play up the Parisian underworld atmosphere. Mention Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Lillian Leighton, James Russell, Hazel Keener, Lou Tellegen.

DRAWING POWER. May suit houses where program undergoes frequent change or be utilized as half of double feature bill.

SUMMARY. A crude production, Apache melo which begins promisingly, but falls down after first reel. Has good atmosphere and attractive list of players, but story fails at any time to strike sympathetic chords, or deliver decisive punch. Doesn't develop interest and is heavily padded.

THE CAST

Marie.....Clara Bow
Armand.....Donald Keith
Frouchard.....Lillian Leighton
D'Avril.....James Russell
Margot.....Hazel Keener
Knifer.....Jean deBriac
Apache Chief.....Otto Marieson

Author, F. O. Crawford. Scenario by Lois Hutchinson. Directed by Gasnier.

SYNOPSIS. Marie and Armand, Apache lovers, with a pal called the Knifer, go to rob the home of Pierre Marcel, wealthy scientist. Marcel is there and Armand prevents the bloodthirsty Knifer from killing him. Police arrive, the Knifer is shot and slain, Armand wounded, but Marcel protects latter from the authorities, has him nursed to convalescence and gives him new start in life. Armand goes to London on business. Marie procures funds from her Apache associates, poses as a convent-bred girl and wins Marcel's love. On the night of her wedding to him, she suddenly throws aside the mask and reveals her true identity, at the same time telling Marcel that her whole course has been actuated by revengeful desire and that she does not love him. At this juncture Armand returns. Maire embraces him passionately. Apaches watching through the window believe that she has tricked them and a bullet hits her. She regains her health, Marcel disappears, leaving a note which states that he is obtaining a divorce, leaving her free to marry Armand.

The Circus Cyclone

(Universal—4397 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ENOUGH melodramatic, sentimental and comedy incidents have been crowded into this film to make it a fairly satisfactory program attraction. The plot is a sketchy affair, obvious in its drift, and the spectators' attention is held more by the circus atmosphere and galloping action, than the actual story motif. Life under the "big top" always had a certain fascination for the movie public and many a picture of otherwise ordinary calibre has managed to scrape through and register as amusing entertainment by virtue of backgrounds showing the sawdust circle and folk who make a living therein. This is a case in point, for lacking the tinsel and glare of the circus stuff, the feature would fall as dead as the proverbial doornail.

However, director Alfred Rogell saw to it that clown, equestrienne and ringmaster, as well as other performers of the tent tribe, kept well to the fore and that there would be no complaint from patrons on the score of tardy action. Art Accord, as the hero, has a busy time, whipping the ex-pugilist and present owner of the show in a three round glove contest and thus avenging his opponent's insults to the fair rider, heroine and her father, the clown, as well as ill-treatment of a horse beloved of the lady. The villain robs a bank and casts suspicion on the clown, but Accord runs down the thieves and everything is lovely.

THEME. Melodrama, with circus and small Western town atmosphere, interpolated prize fight and happy ending.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The doings in the circus ring, good atmosphere and speedy action. The knockout which terminates glove contest. The ballyhoo episode. Pathos developed in clown characterization by Pepe's helplessness under villain's treatment. The love interest. Star's performance.

DIRECTION. Has maintained swift action throughout, but jumbled continuity in switching too hastily from one situation to another. Small town and circus atmosphere well developed and grouping neatly handled. Concentrates mostly on physical thrills, but fails to register much suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell your patrons that this film gives them an inside view of circus life, with a rattling prize fight thrown in for good measure. Play it up as exciting melo, with romantic interest, and feature Art Accord.

DRAWING POWER. This cannot be classed as a high-grade production and wont pass muster with critical audiences. But where bill is changed frequently, or in small houses, whose clients aren't too particular about how a plot is worked out it should serve tolerably well.

SUMMARY. A melodrama with attractive circus backgrounds, action taking place in small Western town. Not much to the story, but film moves fast and provides plenty of physical thrills, some good comedy relief, pathos and love interest. On the whole, an average box office attraction.

THE CAST

Jack Manning	Art Accord
Doraldina	Nancy Deaver
Steve Brant	Albert J. Smith
Pepe	Cesare Gravina
Cecasy	Jim Corey
Fatty	Hilliard Karr
Ecezema Jackson	Moe McCrea
Mrs. Jackson	Gertrude Howard
Referee	Ben Corbett
Joe Dokes	George F. Austin

Author and Director, Alfred Rogell. Photographed by Pliny Horne.

SYNOPSIS. Steve Brant, ex-pugilist and circus owner, ill-treats horse beloved by equestrienne Doraldina, Jack Manning intervenes and whips Brant in prizefight. Brant, repulsed by Doraldina, makes life miserable for her father, the clown Pepe, robs a bank and throws suspicion on clown as criminal. Latter is nearly lynched by townspeople. Jack and Doraldina fall in love. Ecezema Jackson, a diminutive negro lad, furnishes Jack with evidence proving that Brant and his gang committed the robbery. The thieves make a quick getaway with their plunder. Jack pursues them, overtakes the fugitives in a wild chase over the Western plains and a desperate battle follows in a careening auto. Jack recovers the loot, Pepe is fully cleared and Jack wins the daughter.

Warrior Gap

(Davis Distributing Div.—4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REDSKINS versus white men, scalping knives and rifles, hairbreadth escapes from death, U. S. cavalry dashing furiously to the rescue of women in peril, a young officer falsely accused of cowardice by a hardened villain of polished exterior—such are the basic plot factors in this adaptation of a story by the late General Charles King, U. S. A. whose narratives usually run along similar lines. Yet, both in fiction and on the screen, these stories never fail to thrill, we know that many such events really occurred in that past era, before the taming of the West was accomplished, and accordingly accept them as sufficiently convincing, even though the melodramatic coloring be laid on thickly.

When the hero, Captain Deane, on being released from arrest on a charge of disobeying orders, hikes swiftly to the quarters of Major Burleigh, the cause of his troubles, and pummels him profusely, one gets the impression that the captain must want to go back to solitary confinement, or else, that discipline among the U. S. forces at that period must have been at a pretty low ebb. Assaulting a superior officer is a mighty serious offence, according to military ethics. But the Major's wounded honor and battered body are healed with financial balm administered by the father of the girl Deane loves, and the Captain's slugging fest is passed over unnoticed by the higher authorities. Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, as hero and heroine, fill their roles adequately and are well supported.

THEME. Melodrama of U. S. military life at lonely post in West, during days when Indian attacks were common, with romantic flavoring.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Colorful atmosphere, fights with Indians, rescue of besieged women by cavalry, love interest, smart action.

DIRECTION. Puts over big punch scenes with vigor, but discreetly, without straining the "heroics." Speeds up film to fast, even gait, keeps continuity straight.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost this as an exciting melo, dealing with pioneer times in the West, U. S. troops against hostile Indians, romantic trend, happy ending. Feature Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. If you label this a Westerner be sure to explain that it isn't the familiar cowboy stuff, but deals with an earlier date, when our regulars had their hands full keeping down and controlling hostile Indians.

DRAWING POWER. Looks like a very good card for the neighborhood and smaller houses, clean wholesome and suited to family trade.

SUMMARY. Straight melodrama with appealing romantic angle. Gets a lot of thrills across in satisfactory style, is staged in colorful period, when Indians were continually on war-path; if your patrons want unlimited excitement this will surely please them.

THE CAST

Captain Deane	Ben Wilson
Elinor Folsom	Neva Gerber
Major Burleigh	Robert Walker
Colonel Stevens	Jim Welch

Chief Red Cloud	Len Haynes
Soldier Courier	William Patten

Author, General Charles King, U. S. A. Scenario by George M. Pyper. Directed by Alvin J. Nietz. Photographed by Alfred Gosden.

SYNOPSIS. Acting under authority from higher command Captain Deane refuses to attack Indians when ordered by Major Burleigh. Redskins attack ranch where Elinor Folsom, the girl Deane loves, is staying. Deane comes to the rescue with his troop. Later he is arrested on charges of insubordination filed by Burleigh. He is released on strength of testimony given by Elinor and her father, an army scout. Deane goes to Burleigh's quarters and thrashes him. Folsom witnesses the assault and prevents Burleigh from reporting it by helping him in a financial transaction. Deane goes on a journey with Government funds. Burleigh stirs up Indians to intercept him. Elinor learns of the plot and rides to warn him. The man and girl are obliged to fight for their lives, but troops rescue them. Burleigh is shot. Before dying he confesses that he has the money Deane was supposed to carry. Elinor and the Captain are wed.

The Goose Woman

(Universal-Jewel—7500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN entertaining murder mystery drama in which the mother love theme is developed with unusual force and sympathetic appeal. Louise Dresser plays the leading role, that of a grand opera star who loses her voice when she gives birth to a son, whom she blames and hates as the cause of her misfortune, slides down hill socially, becoming a gin-crazed slattern. Many of Miss Dresser's admirers will be disposed to pronounce this performance the best of her screen career, and with good reason. She is particularly effective in the scenes showing the erstwhile stage celebrity living in a ricketty, filth-encrusted cottage, raising geese and drinking like the proverbial fish; and the episode where she is asked to identify her boy as the murderer.

This is realism carried to the utmost degree, ugly enough in all conscience, but it's genuine art, for all that, human nature at its worst, yet making a tremendous impression on the spectators. Certainly too much praise cannot be accorded both star and director for the able manner in which they have brought out the salient points of the story, nor should the excellent work of Jack Pickford, as the son, Constance Bennett's charming portrayal of the latter's sweetheart and the pleasing support, be forgotten. Timely comedy relief balances the picture's serious trend nicely.

THEME. Murder mystery drama, mother's unnatural dislike of only son turning to anxious love, when he is accused of crime.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Uniformly good direction. The singularly effective acting of Louise Dresser. Clever fashion in which details leading up to and culminating in murder is worked out.

DIRECTION. Has maintained perfect continuity and smoothly-running action, created and preserved suspense skilfully, scored heavily in building up dramatic values and attained fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up in the first place from the mother-love angle, affection suddenly displacing hate, dwell on the melodramatic strength of story, stress the scene in which mother is called upon to identify son as murderer, the comedy relief, feature the fine work of Louise Dresser in the lead, Jack Pickford's performance as the son, and mention the names of Constance Bennett, James Q. Barrows, George Cooper, Gustave Von Seyffertitz, George Nichols.

DRAWING POWER. This picture looks like a safe bet for all classes of theatres. It has mass appeal by virtue of its suspense and dramatic force, as well as the lure of the mother-love idea, which seldom fails to impress. Also, the critical element will respond favorably to the exceedingly fine characterizations.

SUMMARY. Good entertainment in every sense of the phrase. There's the sentimental side, the melodramatic interest evolved by the murder mystery, the contrast achieved by the unexpected transformation of the mother's dislike of her boy into unrestrained love, a three-ply thread plot woven into a compact, swiftly moving picture.

THE CAST

Mary Holmes.....Louise Dresser
Gerald Holmes.....Jack Pickford
Hazel Woods.....Constance Bennett
Jacob Riggs.....James Q. Barrows
Reporter.....George Cooper
Mr. Vogel.....Gustave Von Seyffertitz
Detective Lopez.....George Nichols
Amos Etheridge.....MacDermott

Author, Rex Beach. Scenario by Melville Brown. Directed by Clarence Brown. Photographed by Milton Moore.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Holmes, opera singer, loses her voice as a result of giving birth to a boy, and develops intense dislike of her offspring. She becomes a victim of drink, lives alone in a shabby cottage and raises geese. Her son wins the love of Hazel Woods, a young actress, who repulsed the vicious advances of a millionaire theatre-owner. The latter is murdered. To gain publicity Mary invents a wild story about having witnessed the murder. The district attorney furnishes her with fine clothes, reveals her identity as a former stage star and she is the sensation of the day. But the details she concocts cause her son's arrest. Confronted with him, she experiences a sudden awakening of mother-love and confesses that her story is false. It transpires that the theatre doorman is the guilty person. The son is cleared and faces a happy future with his reformed parent and Hazel.

The Woman Hater

(Warner Brothers—6591 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S general audience appeal in this picture, even if the plot is of somewhat light texture and a trifle artificial. It moves briskly, presents one of those triangle love affairs seasoned with sensational incident, which pleases the average fan because of its romantic lure, strengthened in this case by uniformly good acting and skillful direction. Helene Chadwick is the actress heroine, who, having parted from her first lover through misunderstanding, envelopes a young chap in a net of fascination, and has a trying time of it when number one turns up, determined to save the youngster from what he considers the wiles of an unworthy coquette.

Miss Chadwick handles the role with a keen appreciation of its dramatic values, looks enticing enough to excuse both the elder and the younger male for losing their mental balance where she is concerned, and is especially alluring in the scene where she utilizes crafty strategy to prevent looming tragedy, when the youth finds her in the arms of his hated rival and covers them both with a gun. Clive Brook and John Harron are the opposing suitors and give commendable performances. A snappy climax is led up to by a series of uncommonly clever trick photography shots, showing Helene speeding her car through a maze of New York traffic to catch Clive Brook before he makes an ocean-liner getaway.

THEME. Romance, with dramatic sequences, involving the entanglements of actress with former lover and impetuous youth who wants to marry her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The attractive atmosphere. Theatrical settings. Star's adequate performance. The fast action. Scene where youth threatens to kill rival and woman he is infatuated with. Heroine's wild auto trip through crowded streets and interesting finale.

DIRECTION. Has achieved good results with rather scanty plot material, introducing a number of original twists and keeping characters well in restraint during emotional crises.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title offers likely foundation to build on, as it is pretty certain to arouse curiosity. Make a strong play for the feminine trade, as the story is of a type favored by the women folks. Stress the emotional conflicts which arise as a result of the heroine again meeting the lover who discarded her years before. Tell them how she matched her wits against a threat of death at the point of a gun, and won.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for both big first-run and smaller houses. Is particularly satisfactory entertainment for hot weather season, as the picture trips along at a lively pace and amuses, without making any undue strain on the thinking faculties.

SUMMARY. Picture is entertaining, hasn't any dull moments, quite exciting at times, offers unceasing love interest, thrills and plenty of suspense. Is well directed and acted, the star giving a sincere and appealing performance, with excellent support provided by other members of company.

THE CAST

Marie Lamont.....Helene Chadwick
Miles.....Clive Brook
Secretary.....Dale Fuller
Mrs. Tranter.....Helen Dunbar
Philip Tranter.....John Harron

Author, Dorothy Day. Scenario by Louis Lighton and Hope Loring. Directed by James Flood. Photographed by John Mescall.

SYNOPSIS. Marie Lamont and her lover, Miles, part because he believes her to have been untrue to him. Years later she attains fame on the stage and young Philip Tranter becomes infatuated with her. The lad's mother implores Miles to interfere. Although time has not changed his opinion of Marie her old lover still retains his affection for her and she reciprocates. Yet neither acknowledges the fact. In order to prove to Philip that Marie is not to be trusted, Miles induces her to call off several engagements with the boy. Miles appears publicly escorting Marie. With his jealously fully aroused, Philip enters Marie's apartments, finds Miles enbracing her and pulls a gun. To save Miles, the actress pretends that she was merely playing with him and he leaves. Tranter is convinced that she does not care for him. Marie pursues Miles in her auto, stops him from boarding a liner, explains everything and all ends well.

New York and New Jersey

ON the 23d of August, Director I. M. Hirshblond and Sydney Samuelson, Chairman of the Board of the M. P. T. O. of N. J., accompanied by Ray Swain of the New Jersey Terminal Supervision, will leave for a four day fishing trip along the Jersey coast, possibly stopping over at Atlantic City. We've been hearing some great fish stories of late and now it looks as though there might be some more.

It looked like brisk trading around the exchanges on Tuesday of this week. Cy Fabian was seen here and there, also Leon Rosenblatt, Sam Perry and Bill Brandt. A. Tannhauser who operates the Strand at Jersey City also appeared on the scene with a beautiful new striped silk shirt that was very much admired by a corps of film salesmen.

E. C. Bullwinkle, of the First National sales staff has recently returned from a combination business and pleasure trip spent at St. Johns, N. F. In connection with this trip there is a brief and interesting story. It seems that some time ago the theatre at St. Johns, N. F. was in the habit of having its film shipped from St. Johns, New Brunswick. On account of the traffic delay in mid-winter, due to the heavy snows and ice, vaults were constructed in the theatre so as to hold enough film to secure entertainment during the long winter. Of recent years, A. M. Weinberger of the New York First National Exchange, made a special trip to St. Johns and worked out a plan whereby all shipments are now made direct from New York City. There is no more delay in film shipments to St. Johns and the vaults are empty of film. Here is evidence of the long arm of service stretching out for several hundred miles.

George Dillon, New York exchange manager for Producers Distributing Corp., is spending week ends with his family at Bradley Beach, N. J.

Reports have it that Bill Raynor, manager of the Pathe branch, has greatly improved his game of golf, while Al Sautelle has reduced his score to 130 for 18 holes. Al is certainly coming along in fine shape.

They are still going and coming at the Pathe offices. John Dacy, assistant manager to Bill Raynor has gone away for a three weeks' rest with his family at Fire Island. Frank Lovejoy has returned from his motor tour thru Canada and Floyd Vogt has also finished his vacation.

There are at least three theatre openings scheduled for the early part of August. Somer's new Gold theatre, a strictly modern 600 seat house recently completed over in Brooklyn, opened its doors last Saturday. William Appel who was formerly manager of Somer's Highway will be in charge. It is reported that Somer's Highway closed on August the ninth, however, whether the closing was a definite or temporary one, could not be learned up to the present time.

The Livonia theatre, Livonia Ave., Brooklyn, will open this Friday ad the Select at Williamsburg Road, Westchester will also have its opening this week. The latter is managed by M. Spilwauk whose brother operates the Crescent and Majestic at Chrome and Carteret, N. J.

Springer and Wolf's Trio Amusement Co. will close their Adelphi theatre for two weeks to make alterations.

On last Saturday night another local theatre was added to the rapidly growing list of those that have been burglarized. The Hollywood theatre, located at 78th St. and New Utrecht Ave., Brooklyn, was broken into between eleven-thirty P. M., and 6 A. M. The yeggs blew open the safe and made their get-away with $850.00. The robbery was not discovered until the following morning when the porter made his appearance.

When the Poli theatres in Wilkes-Barre and Scranton are reopened in the fall, they will be under the general supervision of Fred Hermann, manager of the Capitol, in Wilkes-Barre, who will continue also in charge of the latter house. John G. Galvin, for a number of years house manager of the Poli, in Wilkes-Barre, will be transferred to manage the Poli in Scranton, and Carl Hermann will be manager of the Wilkes-Barre house. Both Mr. Galvin and Carl Hermann will report to Fred Hermann. The two Poli houses are controlled by the Union Theatre Company, which is affiliated with the Comerford and Poli interests. The Capitol, Wilkes-Barre, is controlled by the Comerford chain.

The Fall season of vaudeville and motion pictures will be resumed at the Majestic, Harrisburg, on August 24.

A new plan of control for the Colonial theatre, a Lancaster picture and vaudeville house, will become effective on May 1, 1926, when the lease held by the men now in possession of the property will expire. The theatre is managed by Charles M. Howell, who, with G. W. Lehmaster and Charles F. Widmyer, are planning to obtain a charter for the Howell Theatre Corporation which is to take over management of the house when it reverts to the owners of the plot on which it stands, C. F. Widmyer, and the J. W. Kinard and Frank B. Trout estates. There will be no change in the policy of the house.

The Nathan Appell Amusement Enterprises, of York, which control six theatres in that city and one in Lancaster and one in York, have appointed Phil Levy to be auditor for the eight houses. He has been engaged in the management of theatres in Reading and Allentown for a number of years.

Heroic efforts of Irwin Turner, 29, a motion picture machine operator, in helping to extinguish the flames when a film caught fire in the Schenley theatre, Pittsburgh, on August 4, resulted in his being seriously burned on the face, arms and body. Prompt action of Turner and other theatre employees prevented the spread of the fire. Turner who was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital, is expected to recover.

W. E. Truog, Universal district manager, must be a mighty popular man, according to Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, as a tribute period in his honor has greatly increased business.

At Baxter Springs, Kansas, a panic was averted in the Elite Theatre, when an Enterprise reel caught fire and burned, and a small boy shouted "Fire," by the thoughtful manager H. B. Garber, going to the front of the theatre and announcing that the show would continue in five minutes and for the patrons to keep their seats. This gave the operator time to change to another reel and continue the show. The orchestra continued playing during the intermission. The operator's hands were blistered.

The Orpheum Theatre, at Joplin, Mo. has been redecorated in the interior, and the owners have installed a reproducing organ.

The Hippodrome Theatre, at Joplin, Mo. according to the report of Ben Levy, theatre manager, will be closed until the middle of August, for improvements. The entire interior of the playhouse will be redecorated. The front lobby also will be gone over by decorators.

In addition new carpets will be laid in the aisles and foyer. The cost of the improvements will approximate $5,000, Levy said. The theatre will be reopened on Sunday, August 16th.

George A. Nardelli signed as a member of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stock company.

At the "Round-Up" which was held at Miami, Okla., day and night shows were shown at the theatres to accommodate the crowds which were in the town. The doors of the theatres were opened for the accommodation of the afternoon crowds at 1 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 o'clock. The "Round-Up" was held at the Fair grounds.

Denver

Earle Foxe, who will be seen in coming Fox Film Corp. productions.

Irving Ehrensoft, widely known and popular salesman both in the Denver and Los Angeles territories, is rapidly recovering from his recent breakdown. He is recuperating at the Jewish Relief Society Sanatorium near Denver and his many friends will be glad to hear of his improvement.

Jacob Eppler, who for several years past has been the manager and a stockholder in the Ogden Theatre, Denver's largest suburban house, has retired from the theatre business and will leave shortly for his old home in San Francisco, driving a new sedan which he has just purchased. Mr. Eppler was a member of the Denver Joint Board of Arbitration and very active in the M. P. T. O. of Colorado. He was very popular with both exhibitors and exchangemen and made a wonderful success of the Ogden Theatre. He will be succeeded as manager by Harvey A. Goodridge.

H. E. Huffman, President of M. P. T. O. of Colorado, has just installed a new ventilating system in his Bluebird theatre on East Colfax Avenue in Denver. Mr. Huffman announces that this system will keep the building at all times plentifully supplied with fresh air and with an entire absence of draft.

M. S. Wilson, manager of the Denver branch of Fox Film Corporation, and Charles R. Gilmour, manager of the local Warner Brothers Exchange, have left on sales trips this week. Both of them announced that they were headed for the Black Hills district in South Dakota, and we would not be surprised if they brought back some fish.

S. D. Weisbaum, manager of Film Booking Offices, has also left for a sales trip through Western Colorado. Sid took his car and if he goes by any trout streams, we wouldn't be surprised if he had something under the back seat with which to tempt the trout.

The Palace Theatre at Trinidad, Colorado, which for many years was owned and operated by L. L. Stonebraker, has changed hands, the new owner being W. H. Reno of that city.

W. T. Sterling, who for many years owned the Crystal Theatre at Carrizozo, New Mexico, announces that he has sold it to George Dowdle, owner of the Alemento Theatre, Alamorgordo, New Mexico.

Fred Muller, owner of the Montenair Theatre at Taos, New Mexico, has closed it for repairs and remodeling. He will reopen about September 1st.

The Movie Hall at Mack, Colorado, has also been closed for remodeling and repairs, and F. A. Kennedy, the manager, states that it will reopen about September 1st with entire new equipment.

J. A. Mitchell, for many years salesman for Universal and later part owner of the Seeman-Mitchell Supply Company in Denver, has reentered the film business by accepting a position as salesman for Pathe. He has been assigned to the Colorado territory.

C. M. Van Horn, local manager of Pathe, announces the appointment of Ben Fish as the Denver territory special representative on exploitation. Mr. Fish was formerly the manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation in Denver and is very well known in this territory.

Atlanta

JAMES JACKSON, manager of the Tudor theatre, returned last week from Greensboro, N. C., where he was called by the sudden death of his mother, Mrs. Lucy F. Jackson. Mrs. Jackson was with her daughter, Mrs. T. K. Payne, at the time of her death. She is survived by Mrs. Payne, Mrs. John Boone, another daughter also of Greensboro, and James Jackson, of Atlanta. She was seventy-one years of age at the time of her death.

Ernest Morrison, formerly manager of the Bijou theatre, which position he held for a number of years, has been transferred to Asheville, N. C., to take over the position of city manager for Famous Players-Lasky corporation. Mr. Morrison is well known in this territory, and has had wide experience in the film game. His assumption of the duties of city manager is of interest to his exhibitor friends throughout the South.

W. L. Parker, advertising manager of Warner Bros., is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. U. McCormick this week, in Charlotte, N. C. Mr. McCormick, well known to exhibitors and distributors throughout this territory, is manager of the Carolina Theatre Supply company.

Chas. E. Kessnich, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, has returned from a six weeks trip over his territory. Included in the larger cities visited were Dallas, Oklahoma City, and New Orleans.

Ralph de Bruler, who is with Famous in the Florida office, came in town Friday a week ago to spend a few days.

Marty Semon, manager of the Forsyth Theatre in Atlanta, and one of the best known theatrical men in the south, is seriously ill in Richmond, Va. Mr. Semon's family is with him.

R. M. Savini, of Savini Films, Inc., has returned from a recent trip to New York.

E. A. Schiller, personal representative of Marcus Loew, who is in Germany at the present time, sent greetings recently to the local fraternity on a card to Willard C. Patterson mailed in Berlin.

William Oldknow, who just returned to Atlanta a few days ago from Florida, has gone back to Florida again, and is in Tampa at present, where he will remain on business for some time.

Charles Murdock, cashier for Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, has returned from Florida, where he has been spending his two weeks' vacation, with a nice coat of tan and a fund of experiences to relate.

Baltimore

THE Sunset Theatre, 1110 South Charles St., Baltimore, Md., has been sold by Mary Wasolowski, to the Provident Savings Bank for a reported price of $25,000. This theatre has a seating capacity of 400 and was built in 1913. It was operated under a lease by the Associated Theatres Company, J. Louis Rome, general manager. The company sold the lease back to the owner and the Provident Savings Bank will move its branch out of Pacy's Garden Theatre Building, near it, and use the Sunset building for a branch, after it is remodeled. It will be taken over about September 1.

Harrison Ford who recently signed a long-term contract with Paramount to play leading roles.

Arthur B. Price, manager of the Aurora Theatre, and John Volz, manager of the Apollo Theatre were away on vacations during the week beginning August 3. On that day Samuel Back, manager of the Rialto Theatre came back from a vacation in Maine.

Leonard B. McLaughlin, manager of the Auditorium, is now vacationing in Atlantic City and J. Lawrence Schanberger, manager of the Maryland, is away at the present time.

A slight fire in the Main Street Theatre, Clear Spring, Md., caused patrons to leave the playhouse hurriedly on Wednesday night, July 29. A short circuit caused the blaze. Very little damage resulted, many returned and the show was continued.

There has been an interchange of orchestras, with the exception of the cornet players, between the New and Parkway Theatres, Baltimore, Md.

V. Nessul and his aggregation of musicians formerly at the Parkway are now rendering selections for the pictures and overtures at the New Theatre, while Hendrik Essers, with his musicians, formerly at the New are now at the Parkway where they are holding forth.

The change was effected by Howard S. Jefferson, musical director for the combined Whitehurst Interests, controlling these playhouses.

Quick and efficient work on the part of the operator and assistant manager of the Cluster Theatre, 303 South Broadway, Baltimore, Md., kept the audience from becoming panicy and little damage being done by a fire in the projection room of that playhouse on Wednesday night, August 5. Conrad Backer, the operator, kept the machine running the comedy going when a film caught fire but closed all the other portholes. Loran C. Watts, assistant manager, asked the 500 or more patrons to leave by the back entrance. The blaze was soon extinguished. The house is owned by Benjamin Cluster.

Frank Price, Jr., assistant manager of the Rivoli Theatre, has been bitten by the golf bug and plays during his leisure on a practice course near his home.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., has gone to Atlantic City for a week to enjoy a rest from his strenuous activities managing the affairs of the Metropolitan Theatre.

John Golder, who has represented the First National Pictures, Inc., for the past three years in Baltimore, has gone to Florida to enter the real estate business.

Billy Busch, affable and efficient representative for Vitagraph in the Baltimore territory, has succeeded John Golder as Baltimore representative for First National Pictures, Inc.

W. B. Zollner, who has been with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has now become associated with Warner Brothers, Inc., and will handle the Baltimore territory.

Henry Victor, English actor, signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Albany

POP LINTON, of Utica, who is as busy as the proverbial bee these days on a new theatre for Utica, was in New York city during the past week. So was Walter Suckno, of the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany. Mr. Suckno went down for a day, but remained a week. Tony Veiller, manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy, was also in New York, and returned with many new ideas picked up along Broadway. During the last few days Mr. Veiller has had some low intensity arc lamps installed in the projection machine with considerable improvement to the projection at the theatre.

Forgetting all about the fact that trains operate an hour later than daylight saving time, H. C. Bissell, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, ran all the way to the station the other day, carrying a heavy bag, only to find that he was an hour too soon. Mr. Bissell made his way back to his office, again plunging into work, and remaining so long that when he went to the station the second time, he was too late to catch the train.

There has been considerable trouble with the power supplied to theatres in Troy, owing to electrical storms to the north of the city, where the power is generated and brought over transmission lines. On four occasions in one day, the power was off for short intervals, plunging the theatres into darkness.

Accompanied by William Rafferty, of Syracuse, former part owner of the Strand theatre in Schenectady, and later connected with the Farash Theatres, Inc., of that city, William Shirley, of Schenectady, passed through New York last week on his way to investigate the real estate situation in Florida. Owing to the fact that both men are well heeled these days, through having recently disposed of their interests in Schenectady, to W. W. Farley, it is thought likely that before they return they will be numbered among the investors.

R. J. Meigs, of New York city, who represented Pathe in Albany last winter, and then went to Philadelphia, is once more back in the Capital City, to extoll the virtues of Pathe's two-reel comedies to the exhibitors.

Instead of opening in the evening, the American theatre in Troy, is scheduled to reopen on Saturday afternoon, August 15, at 2 o'clock. The house has been closed for many months. There will be no particular observance in connection with its reopening, although there is a pleasant surprise for the theatre-going public in the improvements and changes that have been made by the present owners.

Jack Campbell, assistant manager of the Griswold, in Troy, is away on his vacation with the result that Jake Golden is putting in something like sixteen hours a day in handling the house.

For the time being Al Bothner has a new job, although still connected with the Smalley chain. Instead of running up home talent for the evenings that were devoted to this sort of entertainment along with the pictures, and which has been abandoned during the summer, Mr. Bothner is now looking after affairs at the three dance halls which Mr. Smalley also runs.

Mrs. A. Sequin, who has the Liberty in Rouses Point, is a pretty busy individual, for in addition to the theatre, the Sequins have a farm. Mrs. Sequin does the booking for the house and helps out generally in both places.

William Smalley was in town the other day on his return from Connecticut, where he had spent several days with his mother.

Jack Matthews, of Plattsburg, one of the best known exhibitors in the north country, and a firm advocate of yeast cake as a cure-all, took a couple of film men on a fishing trip a few days ago but unfortunately the river was high at the time, and of fish there was none. Mr. Matthews was all togged up in a lumberjack coat for the occasion, and was much chagrined when his guest failed to land any of the pike he has so often bragged about.

Charles Marshall, who runs the Bridge theatre in Ausable Forks, has a rather peculiar house in that it contains a stage that is at least 50 feet deep and on which basket ball games and dances are held. Mr. Marshall is running his house nightly and to good crowds. Just at the present time Ausable Forks looks like a western boom town with the many houses and blocks that are in course of erection. The place was almost destroyed by fire several weeks ago.

Art Goldsmith and George Golding, both well known salesmen along Film Row, each appeared with a brand new automobile last Monday, and were heard to declare that they intend to bring in ten times the amount of business as in the past.

Now that Bob Yates, of Lake George, can run his new Buick sedan, a bit faster than before the first 500 miles had been clipped off, he is as happy as can be. Mr. Yates is spending the summer at the well known resort, but will return to big time vaudeville this fall, as one of the team of Church and Yates. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Carpenter, owns the Arcade theatre in Lake George.

It didn't take Harold Filkins long to get back on the road after he was once released from an Albany hospital, where he had been operated on for appendicitis. Mr. Filkins, who handles the F. B. O. product, left the hospital on Wednesday and was back on the job on the following Monday.

Jack Levy, new sales manager for Commonwealth Pictures.

Tobin and Quinlan run the Ideal theatre in Chateaugay, Mr. Quinlan doing the booking. Drop in on him at almost any time and the chances are that you will find him as happy as a lark, his feet perched on the desk, and if you are a stranger to the region, he will not forget to suggest that the finest scenery in the whole Adirondack region is around Chateaugay lake.

Matters are progressing in a satisfactory way in the arrangements being made for the annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade at Saratoga Lake, on Monday, September 14. It has been decided to hold a dance during the evening and this, together with the baseball game, swimming races and other forms of entertainment will complete a full day.

Good news comes from Saratoga Springs these days in that William Benton's son is on the road to recovery and will soon be running around with his playmates.

When A. T. Mallory, owner of the Star in Corinth, had a couple of friends from along Film Row as his guests the other day, he inquired if they would enjoy a glass of champagne. Naturally, the reply was in the affirmative. They were somewhat surprised when Mr. Mallory offered them a glass of water, saying that coming from the hills of that section it was the equal of the best champagne in the world. Mrs. Mallory made up for the disappointment, however, by passing around some of the most delicious pumpkin pie that the film men declared they had ever eaten. Mrs. Mallory helps out her husband at the theatre and is generally found in the booth.

The Empire in Glens Falls, announced last week that a policy of four changes in program to the week would become immediately effective. John Garry, manager of the house, is back on the job following an operation for appendicitis.

When Oscar Perrin, of Albany, walks through town carrying his hat and wiping his brow, it's a safe bet that it's hot. So figure out for yourself what effect the hot weather had on theatre business in Albany and vicinity for a portion of last week. Incidentally, Mr. Perrin took a day off and according to his own statement, saw the worst baseball game that was ever played in Albany.

Shapiro and Son, of New York city, has just been awarded the contract for the construction of the $500,000 motion picture theatre that is to be built in Albany at once by the Strand interests. This same company is well known in this section, having built the Troy theatre, as well as the State in Schenectady, and remodeled the Capitol in Albany from an old church.

Sam Moross, secretary of the T. O. C. C. of New York city, and Charles Goetz, of Dependable Pictures, were in town for a short time during the week, and then journeyed on to Saratoga where they saw the ponies run.

The benefit given by Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, at the Majestic theatre a few nights ago for the fire sufferers of that city, netted a matter of $275. Mr. Buettner will not take any vacation this year as he has moved into his new house and says that each day makes him feel as though he was already on a vacation.

J. A. Fitzgerald, of Hudson Falls, is back from a vacation spent along the coast of Maine. Dayton LaPoint, of the Fischer circuit will take a vacation in September. And speaking of Lew Fischer, he set up the ice creams for all the girls in the Pathe office the other day. Just by way of introduction, Mr. Fischer, entering the office, invited the girls out, and much to his surprise, everyone jumped up. Mr. Fischer announces that the Bradley theatre of Fort Edward, on which he is spending about $8,000 in improvements, will be in shape to reopen about September 1.

Several of the exhibitors in this section are spending their off hours at their summer camps. Al Barton, of the Playhouse in Ticonderoga, has a cozy place on Lake George, while Harry Hellman's camp at Crooked Lake, is one of the finest.

Simon Feld, of the First National exchange, after spending two weeks' vacation in Atlantic City and New England, and looking as brown as a berry, is once more on the job and traveling over northern New York.

Sam Gargano of the Golden Gate Theatre in Oakland is visiting in Portland and will return soon.

When H. G. Rosebaum, Myke Lewis and Jimmie Clark made their official visit to the San Francisco Exchange, a number of individuals who have been connected with the Exchange for a number of years were reminded of those days past when these three gentlemen were connected with the local Exchange. Myke Lewis was previously the local branch manager and was succeeded by H. G. Rosebaum, and Jimmie Clark was at one time the ad sales manager.

Theo Hahn Jr., general musical director, Libson Theatres, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Edward Frier has become associated with the Hall Film Exchange as booker. "Eddie" was booker with the local Universal Exchange some time ago, when he transferred to the Portland branch and with F. B. O. for a short time when he took his present position. His wife, Mrs. Emma Frier, was associated with the P. C. I. E. in the advertising department before they left for the north.

One of the most welcome visitors from other shores to come to San Francisco is Mr. A. Wylie Mather, manager at Honolulu, who is associated with Mr. R. L. Greenfield.

Russel Hendrickson, who served for several years with the Jacobs circuit in New Jersey and who very recently came to California accompanied by his wife, with the idea of locating permanently, has been engaged by Beach & Krahn as assistant to Mr. Beach in the Chimes Theatre, Oakland.

W. I. Heineman comes from Seattle to join the San Francisco Universal Sales Department. Heineman has had lots of experience and that coupled with his genial disposition will soon win for him genuine confidence and hearty friendship.

Jerry Safron, Philadelphia branch manager for F.B.O., recently treated himself to a new Packard limousine.

A large delegation of Philadelphians attended the Carr & Schad outing at Keller's Park, Reading, on August 2nd and report having spent a most enjoyable day.

Seattle

FLOYD E. WESP, house manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre for the last several seasons, last week announced his resignation with that organization. Mr. Wesp's position has been taken by James Marion, who has been associated with Mr. Hamrick for the last number of months as auditor of the Blue Mouse circuit of houses in this city, Tacoma and Portland. Mr. Wesp has announced no definite plans for the future, other than that he will remain in this city for the coming few weeks at least.

After operating on a straight ten cent admission policy every day for more than two years, the Winter Garden Theatre last week raised its general admission prices to fifteen cents. During the past seasons this house has been the center of attraction among exhibitors and film men, having run strictly first run pictures with a complete program of short subjects and musical features at the ten-cent charge. No public announcement of the raise was made, nor was any definite reason given by Manager Frank Edwards, other than increasing cost of operation.

T. Riley, traveling auditor of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchanges, arrived in this city last week from the New York headquarters, and has been spending a number of days with Manager Seth D. Perkins here. After completing his work in this territory, Mr. Riley will move on down the Coast to the California offices, and from there back East via the Southern states.

In conjunction with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum Theatre has just finished conducting a contest in Seattle among local musicians to find the best unpublished musical work by a local writer. As a climax to the contest, the winning selection was featured last week by Sam K. Wineland and the Coliseum Concert Orchestra at their regular Sunday Noon Program, the entire program being made up of songs and music that was submitted in the contest.

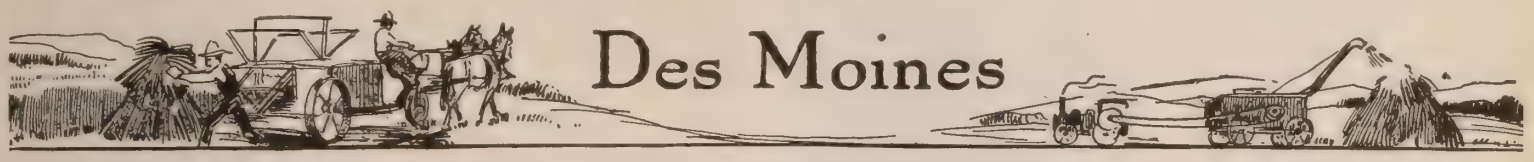
Manager C. W. Koerner of First National's Portland organ branch moved his office from 401 Davis street to 441 Glisan Street on August 1st and reports his force happy in their new and roomier quarters. The office has been supplied with new poster racks, adding to the convenience of the office.

Maine

HARRY W. ASHER of Boston, President of the American Feature Film Company, was at the Portland branch office on Friday for business matters.



Lillian Carlsworth has taken over the lease on the Capitol Theater at Old Orchard, Maine. E. J. Bolen was the former leasee.

An announcement sent out by Warner Brothers includes a notice that they are to open an Exchange in Portland. Inquiry as to when and where has brought no confirmation of the announcement.

Rumor also has it that the Film Booking Offices are to open an exchange here in the Fall.

Abraham Goodside owner of the Strand, Empire and Elm motion picture theatres and the Jefferson, legitimate theatre, in Portland is backing the new Strand Restaurant here. It is located two doors above the Strand Theatre.

James H. Curran, manager of the Portland branch of the American Feature Film Company reports business as picking up down through the state. The summer season here has been rainier than usual which has helped the theatre business.

Des Moines

C. A. PRATT, salesman for Associated First National, has been granted a sixty day leave of absence and leaves Monday, Aug. 3 for Florida, where he will engage in the real estate business.

John Waller of the Lyric theatre at Osceola visited the First National office last week.

Des Moines film exchange employes will gather for a joint picnic on Aug. 15, this being the first affair of its kind here. Fred Young and Frank Crawford, head the committee to select the park, arrange for the dance and choose the orchestra.

Miss Mary Benjamin, secretary at the Des Moines Film Board of Trade has returned from her vacation in Chicago. She was the guest while there of Mr. and Mrs. J. Abrams. Mr. Abrams is district manager of the Renown Picture corporation of Chicago.

Miss Esther Burnham, cashier at the Educational Film exchange surprised her friends by getting married on her vacation. The date was July 25, the groom W. J. Davidson of Iowa City, and the place, Des Moines. Mr. Davidson is employed in the insurance department at the state house. Exchange employes presented the couple with an electric table stove. Mrs. Davidson will continue her work with Educational.

Nate Chapman of Iowa City, manager of the Englert and Garden theatres was a visitor in Des Moines the past week.

O. H. Garland, Educational salesman, was confined to his home two days the past week with the flu.

Marian Ackerson, contract clerk with the Goldwyn corporation, is vacationing in Wisconsin and Minnesota and before returning will visit Atlantic City.

F. S. Schwarz, manager of Premier and A. W. Kahn, manager of Educational, have returned from Arnold's Park. They report the fish not biting while they were there.

Fred Young, manager of the Film Booking Office, was called to Minneapolis on a business trip.

Miss Grace Gannon, cashier of F.B.O. is leaving Aug. 3 for a vacation visit in Kansas City. Miss Jeannette Conklin is taking her place.

The Rialto at Sioux City opened its doors under new management August 1 when Harry Wilkinson took charge of the theatre for the A. H. Blank Enterprises of Des Moines. The theatre has been redecorated and additions in equipment made at considerable expense. Mr. Wilkinson comes from Marshallton where he was managing another of the Blank string of houses, the Strand. This change of managers brought about another transfer, that of Harry Ward, manager of the Rialto at Clinton, to the Marshallton house. The Rialto at Clinton will be managed by Mr. Alleman who is the resident owner and manager of the theatre.

Sympathy is extended from the members of the motion picture trade to R. C. Hoadley, manager of the Opera House at Garden Grove. Mr. Hoadley buried his wife this week. She had been ill for some time.

A change of ownership has been made at Seymour, Iowa. C. R. Coons sold his house there to Peter Madison. The Strand at Chariton, Iowa is now being operated by Harry Dawson, owner of the Lincoln Theatre there. The house was bought from Mr. Ed Smith. Mr. Edminster will take the management of the Strand Theatre for Mr. Dawson.

Ernest Michaels of the Strand Theatre at Leon has sold his house there to his brother, G. M. Michaels, who has heretofore sought wealth from tilling the soil. Mr. Ernest Michaels has bought the Idle Hour Theatre at Tama, and also the Mills Theatre. The new Mills Theatre at Tama was sold to John Waller of Osceola. Mr. Clyde Jarnagin who previously owned these theatres is now looking about for a new location.

Alexander Frank, who is adding weekly to his string of theatres, has opened up offices at his headquarters at Waterloo. He recently became owner of the Grand Theatre at Oelwein, of the Orpheum at Chariton and the Isis Theatre in Cedar Rapids. He is owner of the Plaza at Waterloo.

E. P. Smith of Chariton has bought the Newtonia at Newton. This money-making theatre was previously owned by Joe Ireland. Mr. Smith sold his house at Chariton to business men of Hawarden.

Eddie Lipson, previously in charge of the interests of Associated Exhibitors in Des Moines territory, withdrew from the exchange staffs when he was put in charge of the office of Producers Distributing on its recent establishment in Des Moines. R. A. Wagle, formerly with Universal and F. B. O., was enlisted for the cashier's post. Mr. Chapman, formerly with First National and Famous Players, is the booker. Mr. Johnson who was with F. B. O. takes Chapman's place with First National and Leo Weidertz, who was with First National is now the cashier for Universal. The interests of Associated Exhibitors are in the hands of Mr. Earl Meyers who knows Iowa territory well from his experience as salesman for Pathe.

Elsworth Hull, formerly assistant cashier for Universal, has been promoted to cashier of the F. B. O. exchange.

The film exchanges of Des Moines will hold a joint picnic on August 15. There will be dancing and races and a baseball game. Maybe the team representing film exchanges outside the Film Exchange Building will have a chance to come back after their defeat by the combined forces of the exchanges in the Film Exchange. Managers of the exchanges are acting as the committeemen for the arrangements for the picnic. Manager Frank Crawford has selected the place, Sycamore Grove, and its up to each exchange to provide the eats and drinks for their bunch. It looks as though it will be a good time had by all.

Grace Gannon, stenographer for F. B. O. has been away on her vacation after having taken over the cashier's duties for a while after Mr. Johnson accepted the offer to go to the First National office. During Miss Gannon's absence, Miss Jeanette Conkling has been doing her work. Miss Conkling and her folks are going to Florida very soon. And if they like it they may stay. So Miss Jeanette is not for long in Des Moines' midst.

A. G. Stolte, manager of the Capitol Theatre of Des Moines, left for Chicago to attend the convention of the Midwest Exhibitors Association. He was accompanied by jovial Harry Watts of Omaha.

E. J. Rahf, special Lloyd feature representative, is in Des Moines in the interest of exploitation. He journeyed here from Minneapolis.

Park Agnew, Booker for Metro-Goldwyn, has been out of town for a few days. He was called to Cedar Rapids to attend the funeral services for his aunt.

H. C. Jarnigan sold the Idle Hour Theatre at Tama to John Waller who is owner of theatres at Osceola and Leon. Mr. Jarnigan is now looking for some location near Clinton where his wife's people are located.

"Sunshine" Hughes is being very much missed around the Universal office. She is away on her vacation. St. Paul was her destination when she set forth.

L. V. Clement, booker for Famous Players, is moving from the West Side to the East Side and is doing a lot of fixing up about the place—trellises, lawn-mowing, etc.

Al Yarowsky, poster clerk and salesman for Universal, is taking an unusual but ambitious vacation. He is spending the time in covering the territory with different members of the sales staff.

Milwaukee

UNIVERSAL officially took over its latest acquisition, the Alhambra Theatre at Milwaukee on Saturday, Aug. 1, with Howard Waugh, formerly manager of Paramount houses at Memphis, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., as resident manager. The house will be operated for the next two weeks, closing Aug. 16 for two weeks of extensive remodelling. Dan Lederman, representing the real estate and construction forces of Universal, has been in the city for the past six weeks working on plans for making the house one of the most beautiful in the state. A new canopy, new electric signs, new lobby decorations, additional seats, generally refurnishing, and a $50,000 organ are included in the program to be executed in the two weeks the house will be dark. Manager Waugh has created a fine impression among local exhibitors in the short time he has been here, and great things are expected of him.

Ed J. Weisfeldt, production manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre and creator of the excellent attractions that have made for the phenomenal success of Milwaukee's largest and most beautiful picture house, has left for a two weeks' business trip to New York City. Upon his return he will settle down to working out even greater plans for the second winter season of the $2,000,000 theatre, with which he has been affiliated since its opening fifteen months ago.

Frank Zambreno, president of Progress Pictures, Inc., Chicago, paid a visit to the Milwaukee branch last week. J. G. Frackman, branch manager, drove his chief back to the Windy City in his motor, and after arriving at their destination had an expensive travelling bag stolen from the tonneau of his sedan, while parked on Wabash Avenue. The latter circumstance in no way added to the enjoyment of the otherwise pleasant trip.

J. S. Grauman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Wisconsin, and J. H. Silliman, head of the Silliman chain of neighborhood picture houses, accompanied by their families, are spending a three weeks' vacation at Eagle River, Wis.

Sam Abrams, manager of th Milwaukee office of the F. B. O. joined his salesman, Dick Scheinbaum, in a trip through the Upper Michigan territory regularly covered by the latter, during the past week. The pair called on exhibitors in the larger cities of the peninsula.

Definite arrangements are said to have been made for the erection of a new 1,200 seat picture house in Shorewood, fashionable Gold Coast suburb of Milwaukee. However, the identity of the promoters has not been divulged as yet.

Saxe's Princess Theatre on Third Street, Milwaukee is to be formally re-opened Aug. 8, after extensive remodelling during the past few weeks. The entire house, which is in the heart of the popular price theatre district has been rebuilt. An attractive new front from foundation to roof, has been constructed, while the interior has been entirely rebuilt and refurnished. New seats, new operating room equipment and an expensive new pipe organ are features in the remodelling. Since the closing of the Rialto, to make room for a big drug store and real estate project, the Princess is the only downtown Saxe house not showing first run pictures exclusively. However, in its new appointments it compares with the best downtown houses.

John De Lorenzo, formerly affiliated with Celebrated Players, has joined the sales staff of the Milwaukee branch of Progress Pictures, and will travel the Wisconsin territory.

R. V. Nolan, new branch manager of the Pathe Exchange at Milwaukee, has been welcomed into the Wisconsin film fraternity. Mr. Nolan replaces Oscar Kuchner, who has not as yet definitely decided whether he will remain with Pathe or assume new duties elsewhere. Mr. Nolan has been with the Pathe organization for the past six years, coming to Milwaukee last week from Chicago, where he has been circuit salesman.

Ann McMurdy, widely known in film circles hereabouts as a publicity directress of exceptional ability, has assumed new duties as press representative for the Alhambra Theatre. For the past several months she has been affiliated with the Saxe interests, representing the Strand and Merrill theatres. Prior to that she was local publicity manager for the Orpheum Circuit.

Frank Koch, erstwhile manager of the Garden Theatre, has resigned his position and will spend several weeks vacationing, before affiliating elsewhere, Mr. Kochs' health has for some time required his taking a rest and the shift last week when O. J. Wooden left the Alhambra Theatre, formerly operated in conjunction with the Garden, and personally assumed charge of the latter house, gave Mr. Koch a chance to leave his post. No successor has been appointed as yet, though Mr. Wooden has indicated that a house manager will be employed.

Universal's "Seeing America" Bus arrived in Milwaukee Wednesday with its crew of six under the direction of "Doc" Holah. Two reels of Milwaukee will be "shot" and are to be shown at the formal opening of the Alhambra Theatre as a Universal house, August 29. A print of the subject will be presented to the city of Milwaukee.

Stanley Brown, manager of the Strand theater, has returned to Milwaukee after a lively two weeks vacation spent largely in the Northland. While motoring out to Grand Forks, N. D., with Mrs. Brown and their young son, Stan stopped off to visit friends among the exhibitors along the way, including Pete Roemer at Rhinelander, Billy Mick of the Sherman theater, St. Cloud, Minn., Mike Cooper and Benny Berger at Grand Forks, and the Finkelstein & Ruben gang at Minneapolis.

Elmer Lund, a newcomer in the film business but nevertheless an advertising man of considerable repute, has been placed in charge of the advertising department of the Milwaukee branch of the Fox Film Corporation. He succeeds Kenneth Coone, who has not as yet announced his plans for the future.

A temporary picture policy has been inaugurated at the Garrick Theater, on Second Street just off Grand Avenue. It is expected, however, that legitimate attractions of some kind, probably dramatic stock, will be booked into the playhouse in another month. Nevertheless, F. C. Gross, owner of the house, has signified his willingness to sell or lease the theater to any responsible exhibitor. Pictures have frequently been shown at the Garrick during lapses between legitimate shows. It is an 1,100 seat house.

The Gayety Theater, which has been showing pictures at 10 cents during the past summer months, will reopen its burlesque season, Aug. 15, according to managers Fox & Krause.

Starting Saturday the Merrill theater will change its admission from 25 to 50 cents, and inaugurate a higher quality program policy. Better film numbers will be presented together with elaborate stage presentations, excellent orchestra music and other features usual to first class houses. This announcement definitely settles the fate of the house, which has been the subject of considerable discussion since it was purchased from Ascher Bros. by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, operators of nine Milwaukee picture houses.

Earl Knoblauch, formerly of the Strand theater staff, has been named assistant manager of the Garden theater, according to announcement by O. J. Wooden, manager. Knoblauch succeeds Frank Koch, resigned.

Joe Hickey, formerly of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, now covers the southern Wisconsin territory for the newly established branch office of the Fox Film Corporation. He replaces Lee Anger, who left Fox after the establishement of the local headquarters as a full fledged branch, and is now traveling for F. B. O. in the same territory.

St. Louis

LOEW'S State, St. Louis, is planning a big birthday party for the week of August 22 and has invited all St. Louis to attend. The big down-town first run palace was opened on August 21, 1924, and has been a consistent winner from the outset. The bill arranged for birthday week will be among the strongest ever presented at the theatre.

R. C. Williams of St. Francisville, Ill., has leased the Lyric Theatre at Flat Rock, Ill.

E. G. Musser took charge of the Lyric Theatre, West Terre Haute, Ill., on Wednesday, August 12.

O. H. Giese of Edwardsville, Ill., will reopen his houses this week.

Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill., is back from his vacation trip to Florida.

Frank Hocking has taken over Dr. Pitney's house at Flora, Ill.

Ferris Brothers are again operating the Photo Play at Lovington, Ill.

George Smith of the Phenix Theatre, Lawrenceville, Ill., has gone to Minnesota for his vacation.

Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Ill., plans to return to his former home at Bradford, Pa., for the big home coming and re-union to be held there.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., and Poplar Bluff, Mo., have returned from a motor trip through the national parks and other interesting points in the West.

J. C. Schmidt of Breese, Ill., is touring Yellowstone Park.

Mollie Inger, assistant booker for F.B.O. has gone into the Ozarks for her vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Collins are receiving congratulations over the arrival of an 8-pound boy at their home the past week. Collins is in the shipping department of the local Universal office. His wife for several years worked in the local F.B.O. office.

J. R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox spent Friday, August 7, in St. Louis en route to Los Angeles. W. Bachmeyer, district manager for Fox was another visitor of the week.

E. Horsefield of the Liberty Theatre, Union, Mo., was seen along Picture Row.

Arthur LaPlant, manager for the local Producers Distributing Corporation office spent several days calling on the exhibitors of close in towns of Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation swung around his territory during the week. He visited Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines. He is very well acquainted with conditions in the St. Louis territory and plans to spend considerable time in studying the exhibition problems of the theatres served by the other exchanges in his district.

Minnesota

JACK HELLMAN, exploiteer for Famous Players out of Minneapolis, has been out on a tour of the entire Northwest.

The sales force of Paramount in Minneapolis as well as the same office in Sioux Falls, S. D., is now motorized.

Ben Friedman, with his exchange in Minneapolis and a string of theatres in Minnesota and the Dakotas, has been boosting Greater Movie Season in the towns where he has theatres to such an extent that it has been the talk of many film salesmen who cover the territory. He has plastered the towns with plenty of paper, using billboards, smaller signs, cards and trailers.

Bennie Berger, operating the Metropolitan and Strand theatres in Grand Forks, N. D., has disbanded his orchestra at the Metropolitan and installed a new fifteen thousand dollar organ.

Oscar Johnson has remodeled the Hess thearte at Yorktown, S. D., and will reopen about the 15th of August.

Ted Mendenhall, manager of the Paramount branch at Sioux Falls, S. D., can be seen back on the job—himself, once more. Ted was recently confined in a hospital for an appendicitis operation.

The second run policy formerly applied to the Astor theatre will be transferred to the New Grand theatre in Minneapolis.

In connection with changes noted above, the Finkelstein & Ruben organization announces that its long run features will all be handled at the Strand theatre in Minneapolis and the Garrick theatre in St. Paul.

To the publicity staff of the F. & R. organization in Minneapolis has been added Ray Peterson, a University of Minnesota graduate, making it possible to move Al Allard up into the place made vacant by the transfer of Eddie Gallinagh to the Minneapolis Garrick. Mr. Allard has been two years with F. & R. as assistant to Mr. Gallinagh in charge of Minneapolis publicity. Ben Ferriss is still in charge of the St. Paul publicity of this organization.

Turn about is fair play. Billy Mick, who was formerly manager of the St. Paul Tower theatre has been taken on by Finkelstein & Ruben as special representative to handle new and troublesome theatres. He is now running the new St. Cloud house. His was the place taken by Hugh Andress, the F. & R. man who goes to the independent Friedman house, the Tower.

Sam Warner, vice president of Warner Brothers, was in Minneapolis most of last week visiting his old friend, M. L. Finkelstein of F. & R. at his Lake Minnetonka home. Every now and then he dropped into the Vitagraph and Warner Brothers office here where Tom Burke, manager, is taking charge of the new releases. Burke, by the way, is starting on his 12th year with Warner Brothers pictures without a vacation. What is the use of a vaction, he says, unless you would rather do something else than your work?

A. B. Leak of the Famous Players office, is doing his managing from the road just now, having made a little trip to Duluth and the northern part of the state to look things over.

L. L. Devereux has sold the Blackstone theatre of New Rockford, N. D., to McCarthy Theatre Enterprises, Fargo. It is one of the finest theatres in the Northwest outside the Twin Cities.

Cecil E. Mayberry, division manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, was found paying a short visit last week in the Minneapolis office after a swing through Wisconsin and preparing to leave for a whirl through North and South Dakota before returning to Chicago.

Oscar Troyer of the Rialto theatre at Dickinson, N. D., paid a visit to the Famous Players offices in Minneapolis the other day and reported a great deal of cheerfulness in North Dakota over the return of prosperity particularly to the picture theatres.

Hugh Andress, for 10 years with the Finkelstein & Ruben organization in the Twin Cities has severed that connection and is now manager of the Tower theatre in St. Paul, the only St. Paul first run theatre that is independent of F. & R.

Al Steffes, directing head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and A. A. Kaplan, one of the board of directors, have returned from the convention of that organization at Detroit, Mich. reporting satisfaction with the outcome of the session.

Joe Friedman is equipping a high class ball room to be operated in conjunction with his Tower theatre, St. Paul. It will operate on a plan similar to that of the Lyceum in Minneapolis.

O. H. Steindorf of the Gem theatre at Amery, Wis., was paying a visit at the F.B.O. headquarters last week. He likes the look of the situation where he comes from, he said.

E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution for First National, got in a brief chat with Les Davis, new Minneapolis manager, on his flying trip to Seattle and Portland from New York the other day. Davis saw him at the train long enough to shake hands and receive a few words of instructions.

A. K. Pay and son, Milton Pay, were in to pay their respects to the First National staff the other day. They report that business is looking up in their section of North Dakota.

The Fox opening at the Aster August 22 is the first entry of Fox films into a Minneapolis first run exclusive picture house for some years. Hitherto for some time they have been used by Pantages to follow an ambitious vaudeville program.

Dick Baasen of the Arcade theatre, Minot, N. D., confirmed in the Fox office lately the general good reports coming from his section.

John Bowers, signed for a featured role in "The People Vs Nancy Preston" a Producers Dist. Corp. release.

W. B. Crosby of the Broadway and Rivoli theatres in Albert Lea was in Minneapolis Wednesday on business with the home office of the Albert Lea Amusement company.

Guy Crandall of the Northern Film Exchange is taking a little rest before the strenuous part of his season commences. He is visiting his old home in Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and putting in his time picking cherries.

Colvin Brown, new vice president of Film Booking Offices and general manager of the district, stopped off in Minneapolis for a few days last week.

Dave Chatkin, Educational's sales director, paid a visit to the company's offices here the other day.

Harvey Day, Kinograms sales manager, looked over the Minneapolis field last week with an optimistic eye.

The story prevails here that Universal has abandoned its announced plan to build a large theater in Minneapolis. Phil Dunas, Minneapolis manager, is silent on the subject and expected announcements have not been made, but it is still insisted in some quarters that a first-run arrangement has been made with Finkelstein & Ruben which obviates any necessity for a new theater.

Picture men have long contended that Minneapolis is over-theatered and this is given as corroborative evidence that there will be no new theaters here soon. The former Auditorium in which the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra makes regular appearances in the orchestra season is still closed and no announcement has yet been made concerning a probable reopening It is held to be far more likely that the Clinton & Meyers Enterprises would be approached by Universal for the use of this theater, now called the "Lyceum" than that a new theater would be built.

J. E. O'Toole, manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, is back in town after a tour of the territory on which he accompanied Cecil Mayberry, district chief.

Sam L. Warner, vice president of Warner Brothers, is off for the Pacific Coast studios after a visit in Minneapolis.

Looks like Fred Cubberly of the Finklestein & Ruben string of theaters was out buying another or whipping the ones he has bought into shape. He hasn't been seen around F. & R. for a week.

Ralph Branton of Educational Films has his hands full now that Cubberly is giving his principal attention to the theater chain. The sales manager has been out of town for a week or more looking things over. Cubberly is still in charge of the Educational office, however.

E. T. Gomersall has returned from the Chicago conference of Fox Film men.

Winona papers announce with a great deal of black type that Beyerstedt Brothers have announced plans to build a $100,000 theater there with 1,500 seats. The brothers are orchestra men, having been members of Beyerstedt's orchestra.

J. L. Johnston of the publicity department of Frank Lloyd productions and a former Minneapolis man stopped off here on the way back to the coast after a trip to New York. He visited his former associates in the publicity department of Finkelstein & Ruben.

Jack Segal of the Universal offices in Minneapolis has leased the Marine theater at Marine-on-the-St. Croix, Minn., signing his name Segal Amusement Company.

Bill Mick, recently made special theater manager for Finkelstein & Ruben who has been shaping things up at the Sherman theater, St. Cloud, has moved on to the Lyric at Duluth.

Phil Dunas, Universal manager in Minneapolis, is off for Chicago again on a business trip. It is his second outing of a business nature in three weeks.

Mark Rose of the Universal sales department is scouring Northern Minnesota.

Jack Hellman, exploitation man for Famous Players-Lasky in the Minnesota and northwestern district, returned from Fargo Saturday. Mr. Hellman is brother of Sam Hellman, Saturday Evening Post writer, who is now doing a series of stories for F. B. O. distribution.

Canada

THE most important Canadian personal news of the week is the announcement of the appointment of Pete Egan of Calgary, Alberta, as manager of the big Capitol Theatre at Winnipeg, Manitoba, by H. M. Thomas of Winnipeg, Western supervisor of theatres for Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto. Mr. Egan will have direct charge of the Western key theatre of the Famous Players chain. Until a few days ago he was manager of the Strand Theatre at Calgary but he is well-known in Winnipeg where he had been manager of the Lyceum and College Theatres during the previous five years. He made his theatrical start as accountant for the Lyceum Theatre in Winnipeg under Oral D. Cloakey when the latter was the manager of that house.

This makes the second important appointment to Winnipeg theatres within recent weeks, H. M. Thomas having selected Harold Bishop, formerly assistant manager of the Winnipeg Capitol, to be the manager of the Metropolitan Theatre at Winnipeg, in succession to W. F. Davis who was promoted to the Toronto head office of Famous Players to supervise the scrip book plan for 57 theatres of the Canadian circuit.

The exchange managers and exhibitors of Calgary gathered to offer fond farewell to Pete Egan before he made his departure for Winnipeg. The theatre men presented him with a club bag and the exchange officials gave him a handsome traveling case.

The new Weston Theatre, which is to be the real show place of the town of Weston, Ontario, will be ready for occupancy about September 1, according to an announcement by President J. A. Morrison. The equipment of the Weston Theatre is being installed by H. J. Coleman of the Coleman Electric Company, 21 Dundas Street East, Toronto, and it includes two Motiograph DeLuxe projectors.

Archie Murray, formerly assistant manager of the Winnipeg Theatre, Winnipeg, has deserted the theatre business for newspaperdom, having been appointed sporting editor of the Post at Regina, Sask. Mr. Murray was a newspaperman in Winnipeg some years ago.

John Hazza of Calgary, Alberta, manager of the Capitol Theatre there, has adopted a unique plan of policy for that cinema, affording considerable variety. According to the new policy, two shows only, matinee and evening performances, are being presented three days of the week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and all seats are reserved for the evening performance on these days only. The shows on these days are started at 2.15 and 8.15 P. M. For the remainder of the week, Monday, Tuesday and Saturday, the performances are held continuously from noon until 11 P. M. and seats are not reserved. The Calgary Capitol offers a combination of photoplays, short film subjects and vaudeville. Incidentally, there has been a re-arrangement of the price scale whereby the admission to the lower floor for evening shows has been slightly lowered.

The Regent Theatre, Toronto, the exclusive big-time moving picture hall of the Ontario Capital, re-opened August 15th.

Eight hundred children of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools of Montreal, Quebec, were guests of Manager Howard Conover of the Imperial Theatre Friday afternoon, August 7, this being the annual theatre treat for the scholars of this religious institution.

For years the York Theatre, Yongs and Bloor Streets, Toronto, was unique in that it carried out a definite policy of changing programmes every day in the week, an entirely new group of pictures being shown every week day. This was when the house was owned by the late Harry Brouse of Ottawa who died one year ago. This custom has been discontinued by Manager Clarence Tremblay, however, with the result that the usual plan now is to have three programme changes weekly, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

John T. Fiddes, proprietor of the Playhouse Theatre of Winnipeg, has hit upon an interesting side attraction to boost interest in the house. He has arranged a "Made in Winnipeg" exhibition which is to cover a period of 30 days, the various exhibits being changed at intervals. This exhibition is presented in the spacious lobby of the theatre.

D. Leach has bought the Empress Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, and is managing the house himself. The Empress is one of the brightest of local neighborhood cinemas.

Leonard Bishop, manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, a Famous Players house, has been appointed manager of the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, which the corporation interests recently acquired for special presentations. Mr. Bishop, who returned recently from a lengthy visit in California, will have charge of both the Regent and the Russell in Ottawa.

When a great many of the regular patrons of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, went to Burlington Beach, the nearby summer resort, for the hot weather, Manager H. E. Wilton of the Strand decided to keep into personal touch with his holidaying customers with a series of weekly letters which were sent by mail to their summer homes. These letters tell of current features and coming attractions, while interesting news is also included. Many have told him of the receipt of these letters.

Irving Sourkes, Canadian Eastern Manager for United Artists Corp. for the last five years, covering Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, has resigned to take charge of the Auditorium Theatre, Quebec City, the largest theatre in Eastern Canada outside of Montreal.

Mr. Sourkes is very well known in Canada having been with Fox Film Co. from the time they opened their offices in Canada for two years, then operating two theatres for himself until 1920 when he connected with United Artists, where he has been ever since.

Cleveland

J. J. Harwood has installed a new $20,000 Wurlitzer organ in the Lexington theatre, Cleveland. The organ was dedicated last Sunday with a special program with Walter F. Trimmer at the console.

Carl H. Weeks, of Worthington, near Columbus, has been promoted from sales representative to manager of the Columbus exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which distributes Paramount pictures. He succeeds E. H. Brauer, who becomes manager of the Cleveland Paramount office. In his new position, Weeks will supervise the sale of exhibition rights and the distribution of Paramount pictures to more than 500 theatres in Ohio and northern West Virginia.

Robert J. McLean, of Washington C. H., Ohio, has secured the control and direct management of the Belle opera house in Hillsboro, Ohio, a house with a seating capacity of approximately 900. Mr. McLean states that under the new control, many of the larger motion picture shows will be given together with some of the smaller ones and some vaudeville. Norman McLean, son of R. J. McLean, will assume active management of the Bell theatre in Hillsboro and will also handle the business of the Palace theatre in Hillsboro, with a seating capacity of about 250.

R. J. McLean will remain in Washington C. H., to personally manage the Palace theatre in that city. The Bell house at Hillsboro is the third motion picture house to come under the mangement of Mr. McLean.

Newspaper Opinions

"Under the Rouge" — Associated Exhibitors, Colony, New York

Herald-Tribune: "'Under the Rouge' is one of the best crook pictures we ever saw and we were quite carried away from the dull realities of life, where everybody is honest and prosaic, as we watched the troubles and joys of Kitty, a crook who was however a good girl; Whitey, another crook, thoroughly noble and big, and Skeeter, his pal, a war hero who tried the crooked path just once to help the mother and kid sister. Conventional characters all, and yet there was nothing melodramatic about them. They talked and acted like real human beings when they weren't breaking banks or picking somebody's pockets, and there was a totally unexpected twist at the end which is sure to be a big surprise to every one."

Mirror: "'Under the Rouge,' with Tom Moore and Eileen Percy enacting featured roles, tops a crackerjack bill at the Colony this week. This is a fast moving, melodramatic and romantic entertainment, directed by Lewis H. Moomaw, with amusing twists and a good climax. Tom Moore does the best work he has donated to the silent drama in many a day as Whitey."

American: "'Under the Rouge,' at the Colony, is one of the better plays of the underworld. Tom Moore, as Whitey, is a most likeable thug. The picture has a good cast."

World: "The new crook melodrama at the Colony offers thrills along the customary crook lines, and is as satisfactory a Tom Moore performance as I ever saw. It is presumed the typical crook movie is a first-rate form of entertainment. The Colony was well filled, and as I say, the interest appeared to be intense."

Telegram: "'Under the Rouge' is a pretty good crook movie."

Post: "After all there's that something about the underworld. It's amply attested by 'Under the Rouge,' presented this week by the Associated Exhibitors at Mr. Moss' Colony."

Telegraph: "The best of the recent flood of crook melodramas. An unusual story with tremendous human appeal, an excellent cast and one big thrill scene makes it capital entertainment."

Daily News: "'Under the Rouge' is a clever, straightforward picture that knows when to draw a sharp line at oozy sentimentality. Eileen Percy gives a true performance as Kitty. And Tom Moore is just grand as Whitey. Carmelita Geraghty puts a lot of life into Evelyn, the beauty of the town. You must see this one."

Journal: "Here is a crook picture and one of the best, in which Eileen Percy portrays a crook, who at the same time is 'a good girl.' Tom Moore is the star, and he is mighty good in the role of Whitey. If you like crook stories you'll certainly like 'Under the Rouge'."

How to Secure Effective Theatre Lighting

Use of Illumination in Early Days; Recommendations for Modern Houses*

*By G. G. Thompson

THE attraction of light is inherent in the nature of nearly all living things. The butterfly dances in the sunlight; the moth is attracted to the glow of the evening lamp; fish are lured to the surface by the flare of the night fisherman's torch.

This attraction, since time immemorial, has been capitalized by the showmen of all ages from the savage Congo witch doctor to the theatrical producers of Broadway.

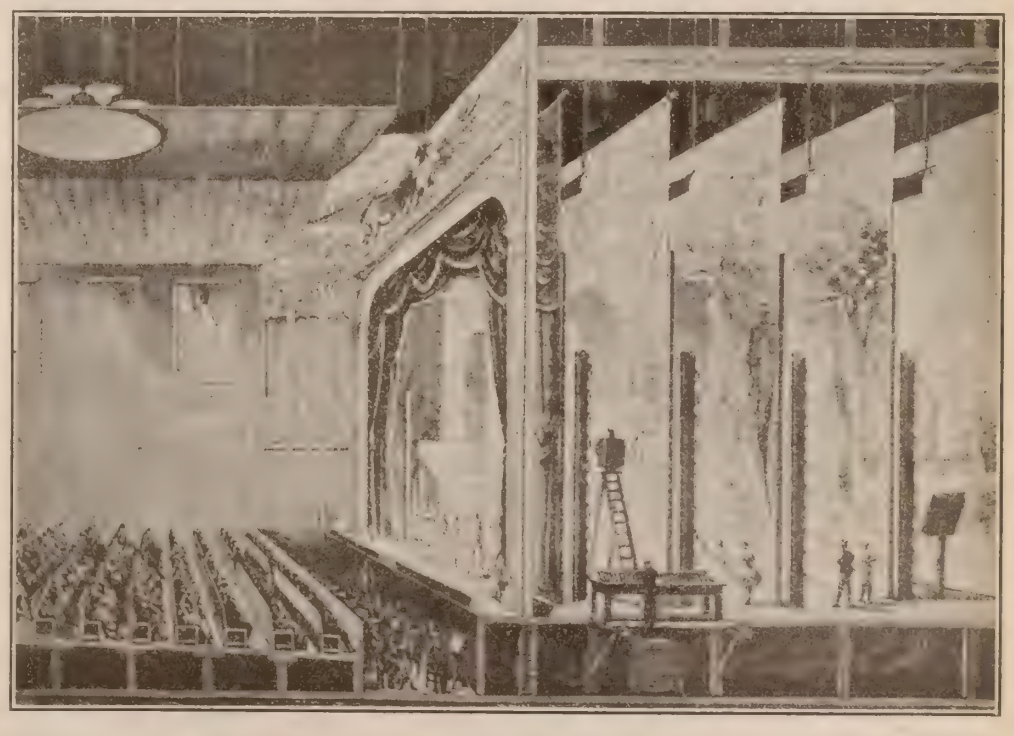
The ancient priests of the sunworshipers built their temples so that the flashing beam of the rising sun, piercing through an opening in the temple wall, fell upon the altar and illumined the priest in his sacrificial rites. Savage dances are not practiced in the daytime, but around the flickering flame of fires, that the weird contortions of the dancers, enhanced by the shifting light and shadow of smoke and flame, may produce a stronger effect in arousing the frenzy of the tribe.

The old architects of churches knew the value of lighting and designed their sacred structures to create a sombre atmosphere befitting religious devotion. And even in the cathedrals of today, the flame of fire and candle is not only a symbol but an instrument by which emotion of the congregation is heightened.

The merchants of our present age well know the value of lighting in dramatizing their offerings. Show cases and store interiors are illuminated not only to draw attention, but to render more attractive the goods displayed.

In a thousand ways the theatrical value of lighting has been utilized to promote the purpose of the showman, whether he be savage or civilized, priest, merchant or theatrical producers.

The earliest use of stage lighting we have been able to discover was in connection with the so-called Miracle plays introduced in the twelfth century in Europe. These plays were presented on rude platforms erected within churches and later in public squares or open fields. Actually, it was not until about 1400 that lighting itself came into vogue and it then consisted merely of sconces or candles burned before a shrine in connection with the performance. As these plays were scriptural in character, devils played a prominent part in the cast and their entrance was sometimes signalized by the burning of red fire to give local color to the scene.



About the beginning of the seventeenth century, plays began to be produced in buildings especially constructed for their presentation. Performances being given in the evening, it became necessary to provide artificial illumination of the stage and interior. For this purpose, cressets, lanterns and candles were employed, the cressets being receptacles of iron or other metal fastened to the wall and used to hold torches.

The use of footlights had been thought of half a century before this period but were not extensively used until about 1750 when David Garrick placed a row of candles below and in front of the stage of his Garrick Theatre, masking the candles from the view of the audience by metal screens. Garrick also used the side lights, now spoken of as borders.

The purpose of stage lighting in Garrick's time was merely to provide illumination of the players. Its value as a factor in the production of stage illusions had not then been thought of.

With the development of gas lighting, the possibilities of effective stage lighting began to be better appreciated, not only because the gas flame proved to be far steadier and more dependable than that of candles and lamps but because gas lighting could be so much more readily regulated. By means of gas lighting a row of lights could be simultaneously turned down or extinguished from the wings of the back stage, whereas before gas was used it had been necessary for an attendant to separately turn down or blow out each lamp or candle. As may be imagined these proceedings interfered considerably with the illusion of the play.

With this larger command of lighting control, improvement in the utilization of light and shadow in stage productions rapidly evolved. In 1860 the calcium light came into general use for stage illumination, this light being produced by heating a block of lime to incandescence in an oxy-hydrogen flame. The use of a movable reflector in connection with calcium light constituted the first spot light by means of which the hero was given due prominence or stage effects produced—as light shining through a window, moonlight, sunrise, etc. The invention of mantle burners was soon followed by their use in footlights, proscenium lights, border lights and buch lights.

About this time color lighting began to appear, its manipulation being provided for by a device for simultaneously drawing colored silk in front of, or away from the lights.

The suffocating odors arising from the use of gas, the disturbing appearance of a rubber tube trailing from a stage moon, and numerous disasters by fire originating with open gas flames, and the oppressive effect of heat arising from the stage lighting, constituted serious drawbacks to the theatrical use of gas for illumination.

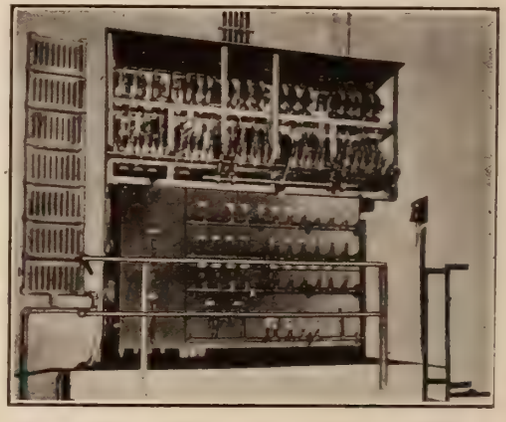
Accordingly, therefore, the introduction of the electric light inaugurated an era of unprecedented progress in the art of theatre lighting. In 1882 tremendous interest among theatrical producers was aroused by the exhibition of a small theatre completely lighted by electricity at the electro-technical exposition at Munich. Diffused light seems to have been first used for theatre purposes at this theatre. This light was emitted from arc lamps, the diffusion being effected by passing it through ceiling panels of ground glass. The walls of the theatre were illuminated with incandescent lamps. The stage was lighted entirely with incandescent electric lamps and screens could be mechanically operated to change the color of the light from plain to red or blue. At this period much interest was created by a production of Faust in which a clever arrangement of electric circuits caused the clashing blades of Faust and Valentine to emit dazzling sparks of fire, tremendously increasing the excitement of the duel.

As was the case with gas lighting, the principal advantages of the use of electricity off the stage was the greater facility afforded for the control of lighting effects. This control is made possible by the ease with which, through the employment of proper apparatus, the flow of electric energy may itself be regulated. This regulation is accomplished by the use of equipment embodying means for introducing a greater or lesser tmount of resistance or reactance into a circuit, accordingly as the lights supplied by those circuits are required to be illumined to full brilliancy or softened down to any desired point.

In large theatres, including some of the very large motion picture houses of the greater cities, as well as the theatre exhibiting burlesque, musical comedy, variety, vaudeville, or the drama, are very extensive installations of such apparatus.

To understand correctly the proper application of theatre auditorium and stage lighting to the respective needs of theatres featuring each of these types of entertainment, the requirements of each case must be separately considered.

The musical comedy, the variety show and the burlesque performance are all alike in principle so far as lighting is concerned. Lighting is used to heighten the effect of magnificence or of burlesque according to whether the effect of each given act depends upon sheer beauty or intentional absurdity. On the other hand, the whole aim of the lighting program in the production of a drama is to strengthen the illusion of the play. Realism is the constant effort of the producer. The lighting is made secondary to the actor instead of the players being merely a part of the scene in which the lighting is of equal or greater value, as is the case with a spectacular type of show. The vaudeville theatre must be equipped to meet in a measure the needs of all of the foregoing types of performance in as much as the character of the different acts may range from tabloid musical comedies to one-act dramas with all sorts of miscellaneous acts in between, and a feature movie as a wind-up.



A theatre which is suitable for dramatic productions is not generally suitable for a moving picture house on a competitive basis. This is particularly true of the lighting and control equipment needed for these different types of theatres. For efficient production of the drama a theatre should not seat over 1,500 people and the auditorium lighting may be of the simplest type. For this type of theatre a combination of indirect and crystal fixtures are entirely adequate and the theatre can be illuminated with this type of fixture at a much lower cost than with the cove and totally indirect system of lighting. For the stage the lighting system should be adequate to reproduce average interior lighting conditions and also colors and lighting to imitate natural conditions. This does not require the high intensity of illumination which should be provided for a musical review or vaudeville equipment where it is quite necessary to produce by means of lighting very beautiful and fantastic color settings. Adequate lighting should be provided for the dramatic equipment to produce general illumination in the modified colors and also to produce localized lighting which will be required in many different scenes.

For musical reviews and burlesque a higher degree of illumination on the stage should be provided and if practical more attention should be given to the decorative features provided by the lighting of the house.

In the early days of the moving pictures exhibitors paid little attenion to the lighting of the theatre and very little if any illumination was provided. During the picture the lights were entirely eliminated and in many of the smaller theatres there was not sufficient light for reading during the intermission. Under present competitive conditions in the moving picture field, this condition has entirely changed. People expect to find the moving picture theatre as beautiful as any other theatre and some of them are more beautiful than the usual dramatic theatre. It has also been found that it is possible to provide a comparatively high degree of illumination during the projection of the picture without impairing its clearness but to do this is necessary to have a properly designed lighting system. The essential feature is that the source of this illumination shall not be brighter than the light portions of the screen during the picture. This necessitates a totally indirect system of illumination for which the cove system is preferable.

It is also advisable to use color illumination as it is possible to provide a little more colored light than white light. Moreover, the use of colored illumination adds greatly to the beauty of the interior decorations if these colors are properly controlled. I am thoroughly convinced that there is a sound psychological basis for the success of the moving picture theatre which is beautifully decorated and equipped with a good lighting system affording colored illumination. While the lighting of the moving picture theatre should not distract the patrons' attention from the picture by violent and radical changes in color, the illumination can greatly beautify the interior decoration. This illumination should be very gradually changed, always maintaining a harmonious color scheme, so that patrons seldom see the house in the same light.

A great deal of interest and some controversy attaches to this question of special lighting effects as a psychological aid to the motion picture theatre. We are all agreed that the brilliant illumination of the electric sign on the outside of the theatre is an important factor in drawing the attention of the passing crowd to the performance within. There can be no question regarding the money-making psychology of electric light in that connection. But when it comes to the utilization of striking lighting effects within the theatre, that is another problem.

H. MacNary Again Enters Motion Picture Field

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we welcome the return of H. MacNary to the industry, after an absence of more than two years, in his new connection with the well known electrical contracting engineers, Fischbach and Moore, Inc., of New York City.

Mr. MacNary, it will be remembered, was with the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company in charge of studio and theatre equipment. During his stay with the Westinghouse Company he developed and contributed many new ideas which are now considered as standard practice in theatres.

It was at Mr. MacNary's recommendation that the pushbutton remote control method of operation was installed at the Cosmopolitan Studios, New York City, and since introduced in practically every studio.

The industry is also indebted to Mr. MacNary for many projection room layouts.

As a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Mr. MacNary contributed papers on theatre and studio lighting as well as projection room equipment.

His new position in charge of the theatrical division for Fischbach and Moore, Inc., Electrical Contracting Engineers, will allow him to render a broader service to his many friends and clients in the industry.

Palace, Lockport, Opens to Record Crowds

The beautiful new Palace theatre, erected in Lockport, N. Y., by Lock City Theatres, Inc., and leased by Paramount's theatre department, was recently opened to the public when two overflow audiences witnessed the splendid program premiere. Following an introductory talk by Manager George T. Cruzen, Congressman S. Wallace Dempsey spoke, complimenting those responsible for the new house. Charles E. Dickinson of Lockport, who promoted the project also talked briefly, as did A. Edmund Lee, president of Lock City Theatres.

Joseph Pomeranz of Buffalo is conductor of the Palace orchestra of eight pieces. C. Austin Taylor is stage manager, Martin Heiberger, chief projectionist; Harold Le Valley, floor superintendent and Corey Rohde is in charge of the poster department. Prices range from 35 to 75 cents and in the fall, Manager Cruzen announces the Keith vaudeville will be added to the picture program. Mr. Cruzen has been associated with the Hostetter Amusement company in Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska and for the past two years has been on the West Coast serving in various capacities at the studios. Fred W. Greene, Jr., district manager for New York state for Paramount's theatre department was in Lockport for a week in advance of the opening assisting in preparations for the premiere.

Inquiries and Comments

Screen Deterioration

THE following was received from J. R. Osborne, who is connected with the Genesee Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., capacity not stated, operating the New Family and Grand theatres in Batavia, N. Y.

"Dear Sir:

"We have a mirror screen in one of our theatres and there are two or three places where the frosting is off the glass. Can you advise us what we can do to eliminate these dark spots?"

"Frosting?"

A mirror screen with a "frosted" surface is news to us. We were under the impression that the old Mirroroid Screens had either a sand-blasted or an etched surface. Either of these is permanent and cannot suffer deterioration, such as peeling, mentioned in Mr. Osborne's letter.

The sandblasting process, as the name implies, consists of "roughing" the surface of the glass by means of a stream of finely divided sand particles driven by air under high pressure. This method is generally employed for relatively small surfaces since it is difficult to "rough" a large surface evenly with the methods ordinarily employed.

The Acid Process consists of coating or washing the glass with a very thin paste which contains hydrofluoric acid as the corroding agent. This can be easily applied to large surfaces without danger of unevenly etching them. This process imparts a "satin finish" to the surface which gives a higher degree of diffusion to the reflected light than the sandblast process. Both of these roughened surfaces, however, are permanent and cannot be removed.

Superficial "Frosting"

It is possible to imitate the acid process to a certain extent by applying a solution, having paraffin as a base, to the glass surface. This surface frosting however, is by no means permanent since it can easily be scraped or rubbed off and will, under a sufficiently high temperature, become soft.

This solution is frequently used in theatres to obtain "homemade frosted" incandescent lamps and the heat of the lamps will not cause it to soften.

These represent the three principal methods, in fact the only ones, which are used to secure frosted surfaces on glass. Therefore, Friend Osborne, if your screen has had the frosting removed in a number of places, a superficial coating must have been used.

It is possible, however, to apparently remove the frosted effect of a sandblasted, or etched surface, by applying oil to it. This destroys the effect of the frosting, temporarily and it is possible that you may have some oil or grease on the screen. If this is so, first wash it with gasoline and then with soap and water after which rinse the spots with clear water. If, on the other hand a superficial wax frosting has been used on the screen and this has come off in spots, apparently the only thing to do is to secure some similar frosting solution from your supply dealer, or any large electrical supply house and "touch up" the spots so affected.

The Mirroid Screen, by the way, is no longer made as the company originally making them went out of business several years ago.

It is also possible, in fact very likely, that the silvering on the rear of the screen has deteriorated. The remedy for this is, obviously, resilvering. In a pinch, however, aluminum paint, or gilt, will remove to a certain extent these dark areas.

Reflector Arc Manufacturers

A prospective reflector arc customer has written us requesting a list of reflector arcs now on the market and the names of those who make thm.

To the best of our knowledge there are at present five such arcs on the market and two more either in course of construction or awaiting commercial development.

The entire list is as follows:

Trade Name.	Manufacturer
Peerless Arc	J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co., 552 West Adams St., Chicago, Ill.
Power's Reflector Arc	Nicholas Power Co., 90 Gold St., New York City.
American Reflector Arc.	American Reflector Arc Corp., 24 Milk St., Boston, Mass.
Preddy Reflector Arc.	Walter G. Preddy, 187 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco, Calif.
Morelite Intensifier	Morelite Intensifier Corp., (Howell's Cine Equip. Co.,) 49th St. & 7th Ave., New York City.
Helios Reflector Arc.	Warren Mfg. Co., 265 Canal St., New York City.
Reflex Reflector Arc.	Reflex Engineering Co., Wright St., Newark, N. J.

The last named two arcs have not, as yet, been placed on the market, but will very shortly be ready for sale.

All of these arcs come equipped with automatic arc feeding mechanisms and stereopticon attachments. The stereopticon attachment takes on a variety of forms in the various arcs ranging from the use of a separate lamp house containing a 1,000 watt 110 volt, incandescent stereopticon lamp adjacent to the arc lamp house through to a 45° angle mirror combination or shunting the arc beam to one side of the projector and thence through the stero lens. This element of stereopticon projection at first proved very troublesome to the reflector arc makers but appears now to have been satisfactorily over come.

With the exception of the Reflex Arc, Bausch & Lomb mirrors are used exclusively. The Reflex outfit goes to Germany for its mirrors.

With the exception of the Peerless Arc the French adaptation of using horizontal carbons without condenser lens is used. The Peerless arc, while modeled after the original German arc, differs in that it uses horizontal carbons instead of the right-angled set generally employed in Germany and England.

One of the principal sources of trouble in the early arcs was finding an efficient method for reducing from 110 volts to the approximate voltage of the arc. It was commonly the practice, then, to use straight resistances for securing this reduction in voltage but motor-generator sets have been developed since then which satisfactorily meet the low current requirements of this form of projection device.

The success which has already attended the marketing of these reflector arcs, due to their inherent greater efficiency and simplicity makes it very evident that the old type of arc is doomed to early extinction.

Europe's Greatest Movie House Puts Boilers on Roof

Radical improvements in heating and ventilating design have been effected in the recent construction of the famous Capitol Theatre of London, generally regarded as the most luxurious and perfectly equipped motion picture house in Europe.

The entire system, which is fired by city gas, is put into operation simply by turning on and lighting the gas in the tubular gas boiler, and starting the pumps and fans. The engineer requires no additional man to assist him to run the plant, as the gas boiler needs no further attention once it is lighted, and involves no stoking.

By using gas, the theatre has also aided the "brighter London" movement to eliminate the smoke nuisance.

Another interesting feature of the system is the fact that the gas boilers are placed on the roof where they are entirely out of the way. Instead of using the basement and part of the first floor for the housing heavy boilers, these valuable portions of the building are used for other and more remunerative purposes. The gas, of course, requires no mechanical device except piping, to deliver it to the top of the building.

Psychology and Practicability of Theatre Ticket Booths

By William F. Libman, Pres., Libman-Spanjer Corp.

HOW many times has this question been asked, "What is the most important unit in the motion picture theatre?" Immediately the machine man answers, "The projector," the curtain man is quite sure that its the screen, while the seating man believes that its the comfortable chairs and so it goes.

In the writer's opinion, one of the most important things in the operation of today's theatre is the box office or ticket booth. As has been pointed out in previous articles, the theatre front is the magnet which draws the prospect's attention to the theatre, but its the ticket booth which actually says "hello" to him.

The ticket booth is really the first human touch which the theatre extends to the patron. It is here that the psychology of movement through the animated line of ticket buyers and the sight of the ticket seller makes itself felt, and this contact and psychology you may be sure is a most important one and cannot be underestimated.

No matter who the patron is, it is necessary for him or her to first approach and and do business with the ticket seller at the ticket booth. The next human contact is with the ticket taker, then the usher, and finally the projectionist or operator through the medium of the screen. Any one of these human agencies can either help or discourage patronage as the most successful show man knows.

What do you suppose is the very first thing that a most successful circuit does immediately upon acquiring a new theatre? Has it to do with seats or screen or machine? No sir, not on your life. Its the ticket booth that receives the first official attention.

If the ticket booth happens to be located in the back part of the lobby, it is moved out to the front as close to the building or sidwalk line as it can go, or if its already in the front of the lobby but off to one side it is moved to the centre of the lobby. In most cases of theatre acquisition a new ticket booth is erected altogether, as a means not only of attraction but as a most definite medium of impressing the patronage that a new management prevails. A change in the lobby particularly in the box office location is the most striking change that can be impressed upon the patron.

And why does the position of the ticket booth receive this flattering attention at the hands of the big circuit managers? It is only that the successful showman of today realizes the psychological value of the box office location, which brings us back to the perpetual "bally ho" spoken of in our first article.

If one should doubt that box office location means much in theatre prosperity, let him but take a look at the ticket booth locations of the most successful and most recently constructed theatres. Take Broadway for example. Try and find a ticket booth in any theatre on this famous thoroughfare that is not in the centre of the lobby and as close to the sidewalk as the builders can place it.

All of which means that the wise manager doesn't wait for his patron to walk through the lobby before paying the admission fee, but reaches out onto the sidewalk for the patron through the medium of the attractive box office.

Loew's New York Theatre is a striking example as to what lengths the successful showman will go in order to have the box office where it belongs. In this case the construction of the theatre front itself long defied all efforts to place the ticket booth on the sidewalk line, but it was finally accomplished and today the ticket sellers at this theatre, could, if they wanted, reach out and practically tap the passer by on Broadway right on the shoulder.

So much for the box office location. Now for construction. The building or constructing of a modern and attractive ticket booth calls for the inclusion of numerous elements each of them individually important. Aside from its artistic value in the lobby, the ticket booth must be highly practical as well. No matter how ornamental it may be on the outside, we know that it is the repository of the theatre cash while ticket selling is in process, and therefor it must be safe and secure. The cash drawers must be properly built and located. These are little requirements of which the average cabinet maker knows nothing.

The ticket selling machine is also located in the ticket booth and proper provisions for its uninterrupted operation must be made. In this case the close co-operation of the booth manufacturer with the ticket vending machine builder is an advantage that does not prevail where the local mechanics build the ticket booth.

The ticket booth must be properly ventilated, lighted, and constructed. Marble work, electricity, painting, carpentry, and glazing all enter into its make up, and surely here is one place where the recognized builder's services are needed to insure the delivery of a satisfactory finished product.

Architects and exhibitors who in the past thought it cheaper and more expeditious to have the local electrician, mason, cabinet maker and painter contribute his efforts in the construction of the ticket booth, now realize that it only seemed cheaper when each of these artisans submitted his bid for his particular part of the work. When the total was counted it invariably ran higher than the figures quoted by the professional builder of ticket booths and the results of combining each craftsman's efforts were invariably not to be compared with completed work delivered by the expert builder and designer of booths.

As we all know, the questions of durability and appearance play their part in the life of the ticket booth. Inclement weather shows its effect on the wrong woodwork and finish. Real marble resists weather and wears much longer and with better appearance than does its imitator called "scagliola." The tinkling of the coins against the surface of this substitute soon wears a shabby spot in the most prominent part of the theatre. And chipped masonry, peeling paint, or gaping seams in carpentry have no place in the front of the theatre where the patron gets his first impression.

"Sally of Sawdust" — United Artists, Strand, New York

Times: "Judging by the mirth and tears it elicited from an audience that packed the Strand to overflowing, 'Sally of the Sawdust' will reap a harvest of gold. It is quite obvious that Mr. Griffith intended this picture to be a commercial success and with that end in view he aimed the shafts of his love story at the hearts of flappers and youths, balancing his adolescent appeal with the inclusion of clever comedy. In 'Sally of the Sawdust' Mr. Griffith only nods to art, but he, bows low to the box-office."

Herald-Tribune: "D. W. Griffith offers a box-office picture in 'Sally of the Sawdust' which probably will make more money than any picture on Broadway this week. There is no denying the entertainment values of the photoplay."

World: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is among the finest of all motion pictures yet made, and I am not so sure but that it is the screen's classic in mature character delineation. It has as lovely a story as the films have told, acted superbly, drawn in figures of living, breathing human beings, and all so exquisitely moulded as to form a moving and still a joyous drama of persons and circumstances. I throw the new marked-down straw sailor up in the air and offer a toast, in a nice way, to David Wark Griffith, the artist."

American: "The Griffith genius for playing on the emotions flares forth in 'Sally of the Sawdust,' giving us a picture that is Chaplinesque in its comedy perfection. Combined with this excellent comedy tempo there is drama that is Griffith at his best. A large audience at the Strand burst into spontaneous applause, and I found myself joining the large majority and approving Mr. Griffith's picture as I find it possible to approve few screen dramas."

Daily News: "There's a glorious experience waiting for you at the Strand. Something new in movies. A braze movie that can shake you into laughter with horseplay or make you taut with emotion. A regular rogue of a movie. D. W. Griffith may have made better movies than 'Sally of the Sawdust' but I doubt it. At least this one will be the most universally-liked."

Telegraph: "D. W. Griffith is a juggler—a juggler of laughter and tears. He tosses a tear away only to clutch at a laugh and he never makes a slip. But Mr. Griffith is more. He is a great director, and for proof of this let me refer you to 'Sally of the Sawdust.' It is a delightful business to be able to record that the audience at the Strand almost 'stopped the show' several times with their applause at the antics of Carol Dempster and W. C. Fields. The picture is full of touches such as Mr. Griffith knows only too well how to make. You'll love 'Sally of the Sawdust,' and if you don't there's something the matter with you."

Telegram: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is so excellent a film, thanks to the combination of D. W. Griffith and W. C. Fields, that a poor movie fan who sees inferior pictures weeks upon weeks will be pardoned if he enjoys the luxury of shouting his head off in praise."

Post: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is a good picture and it is an interesting picture as well. Sally and her 'Pop are the picture, and they are quite enough. Carol Dempster is Sally to the Life, by which we mean she is one of the finest screen actresses of today. W. C. Fields is likewise Professor McGargle to the life—with a number of Fieldisms thrown in fo. the multitude. Mr. Griffith never forgets the multitudes. He permits Mr. Fields to indulge in a number of old burlesque tricks which bring down the house. As a matter of fact, all is as it should be in this picture. It is bound to be popular."

Evening World: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is the most compellingly realistic thing which David Wark Griffith has ever done—and in the mind of this reviewer this means anything which anybody in motion picture production has ever done. He makes a living, breathing character out of the old circus faker who, despite his ornery ways, takes tender care of the little waif who was thrown upon his hands by the death of her parents. He is 'Pop' and she is 'Sally' and between the two of them thousands who packed the Strand were swayed at will between mirth and poignancy."

Journal: "We stood in line to see D. W. Griffith's 'Sally of the Sawdust,' and we shrieked over W. C. Fields who walks away with the best comedy performance of the year. The picture is splendid entertainment."

"The Unholy Three," — M-G-M, Capitol, N. Y.

Times: "Not often does one see such a powerful photo-drama as 'The Unholy Three.' It is a stirring story stocked with original twists and situations, a picture that teems with surprises and one in which the suspense is kept as taut as the string of a bow."

American: "I can heartily approve of the choice of the Capitol Theatre in booking such satisfactory entertainment as 'The Unholy Three' to celebrate Greater Movie Week,"

Mirror: "This is the masterpiece of crook dramas. It is superbly directed, superbly acted and superbly picturized. It's one picture in a million, greater in our opinion than that wonderful picture, 'The Miracle Man.'"

Telegraph: "Is a better picture than 'The Miracle Man' and should achieve the same wide popularity as George Loane Tucker's masterpiece. 'The Unholy Three' will interest everyone. It should be a great money maker."

The Evening Post: "Splendid entertainment that is not lacking in thrills. The plot is unique and the acting far above the average. Anybody who has been longing for something new in crook pictures should try this one."

Evening World: "In it Chaney puts over another of his compelling characterizations. His work is convincing and realistic."

"Sally of Sawdust" — United Artists, Roosevelt, Chicago

Daily News: "This 'Sally' picture is good, standing way up among the best of the year. And some will say it is the best Griffith has done since he made 'Broken Blossoms.' If you enjoy that twist of the byway of life where tears and laughter come close to mixing, where pain turns with jokes at itself, and the terms of comedy and tragedy get lost like sunshine and rain during a sunshower, then take a look at Carol Dempster playing Sally, unaccountable merging monkeyshines and majesty. W. C. Fields as Prof. Eustace McGargle, spieler, faker and three-card man, also is a new development. We recommend 'Sally of the Sawdust' as entertainment, a blend of misery and monkeyshines and majesty."

American: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is a picture of undoubted box-office strength. Griffith brushes in characters, pathos and comedy, particularly the latter, with his usual adroitness and, presto, a photoplay that will give many of his other creations a hard run in the popularity race. The picture has been filmed with such a high grade, splendid development of engaging incident that it reaches a high mark as entertainment."

Post: "Comedy is the keynote of D. W. Griffith's latest offering, 'Sally of the Sawdust,' a story of circus life. The plot is simple and is presented in a straight-forward way. It is good entertainment. The laughter it wins from the audiences proves how well its points 'get across.'

MILLIONAIRE BROWNING
"Cinderella" story

recently heavily featured in the newspapers is a planted exploitation and publicity stunt effected in connection with the coming Paramount picture—

"A KISS FOR CINDERELLA"

Paramount here wishes to vehemently deny any such ridiculous charge

"A Kiss for Cinderella" is being made by Herbert Brenon from James M. Barrie's world famous play with script adapted by Willis Goldbeck in consultation with Sir James M. Barrie himself.

The picture will feature the star of "PETER PAN"

BETTY BRONSON

supported by TOM MOORE and will be a super de luxe presentation of one of the most charming modern romances in literature.

The Showman Who Exploits His Short Subjects to Make ADDED PROFIT From Them Always Gets the Finest Backing on Educational

Short subjects have had a great deal of stimulus this summer. The coming season should show how much they can mean. With the exhibitor. Who uses them as they should be used.
DANNY in Film Daily.

YOU are using Short Subjects as they should be used only when you are using them to build up Better Programs—and exploiting them to make Added Profit.

Fortunately for all concerned, more exhibitors are recognizing this than ever before—more Showmen are exploiting their one and two-reel pictures and making added dollars out of them than at any other time since the long feature came into vogue.

To all you Showmen who are having a part in the stimulus that is being given to Short Subjects, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., renews its pledge of cooperation with you—that its obligation to you only begins, and does not end, when you book Educational Pictures.

Educational Pictures are nationally advertised to your patrons—consistent advertising in The Saturday Evening Post increases their pulling power at your box-office.

A full line of accessories is available to help you advertise Educational Pictures—posters, lobby display cards, photographs, slides. Trailers on star comedies and specials can be had through the National Screen Service.

A press sheet on each two-reel comedy and each special contains information about the picture, newspaper stories and reviews, practical exploitation suggestions, one-column, two-column and three-column "ad" layouts and star and scene cuts. Mats for advertising and publicity cuts are FREE.

Educational backs up every Showman who backs up his Short Subjects. Your Educational Exchange will give you the fullest cooperation.

"THE TOURIST"

TUXEDO COMEDY

With JOHNNY ARTHUR

Here is the best two-reel comedy that has been turned out this season. It is a charming trifle, and there is every indication that in its star, Johnny Arthur, Educational has a real find. He is a delightful personality . . .

One of the best bits of business ever concocted—one that will set any audience howling—is the scene in which Johnny converts his car into a stove and cooks his breakfast on its various parts. It must be seen to be appreciated.

As if a real star and entertaining tale and excellent direction were not enough, there is added the presence in the cast of the most promising girl we have noticed on the screen in a blue, or even a red moon. She is Helen Foster . . . . She is beautiful, she has poise—she is, in plain language, a wow. She helps to make "The Tourist" a real knockout that any house should welcome with open arms.—N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH.

This is the first of the series of Tuxedo comedies starring Johnny Arthur and if it is indicative of what is to follow, the series should be a profitable one for all hands . . .

William Goodrich has done a splendid job with the directing and the cast does the rest with the good story. . . . There is a touch of melodrama to it, great quantities of comedy and enough suspense to keep the interest at a high pitch.—M. P. NEWS.

"PLEASURE BOUND"

MERMAID COMEDY

With LIGE CONLEY

A ROARING COMEDY

This Mermaid comes through big on waves of laughter. It is one of the cleverest and funniest ever produced in this series. . . . the subtitles are as funny as the gags—which is a novelty in itself. At the fishing pier, the laughs come so fast you can't count them. Probably the funniest fishing scene ever filmed. . . . A scream—all the way.—FILM DAILY.

Here is an exceptionally good comedy with amusing situations galore. . . . a real comedy that will get laughs from any type of audience. . .—M. P. NEWS.

A corking good comedy. . . . Lige Conley is featured and does a splendid piece of work. Clever tricks with the automobiles and in the fishing sequences prove to be hilarious. . . . This picture strikes a funny gait from the start and is maintained all the way. Book this one by all means.—EX. TRADE REVIEW.

Here is a real laugh-getter. Dealing with the misadventures of a family who set out on a fishing trip in a Ford, it is full of hilarious, highly original "gags."

—N.Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH.

JIMMIE ADAMS

in "BE CAREFUL"

This is a comedy fairly bulging with humorous situations and some good slapstick and hokum. It is well acted by a competent cast and should go exceptionally well in the neighborhood houses.—M. P. NEWS.

This a lively-moving number that has a good quota of laughs scattered all the way through.—FILM DAILY.

says

"'THE GIRL WHO WOULDN'T WORK' is one of the most enjoyable and interesting photoplays I have witnessed in many days. It is a highly commendable contribution to the intelligent and sophisticated films of the year. Marked by an originality of technique and treatment, the play moves along smoothly and naturally, completely at variance with the well established formulas. It has a striking dramatic climax almost without parallel in the history of photoplays. Lionel Barrymore's portrayal of the rounder is one of the most amusing and compelling characterizations of the season. Nothing like it has ever been on the silver-sheet before.

"This is the first directorial effort of Marcel De Sano. The screen has a welcome addition to its school of megaphone wielders and one who is going to make a name for himself in the flicker world."

Colonial Theatre
B. N. BARNETT, Manager

Grandview, Washington July 25,1925.

Arctic Nu-Air Cooling & Ventilating Co.
808 State Lake Building,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

Your Type "A" machine arrived by express morning of July 18th. We installed it and had it in operation about forty minutes after our first show in the evening started.

I was skeptical of the machine, the things you had written me it would do and I was absolutely sure it would not cool the theatre because it was filled with hot, perspiring people.

When the machine started I was as agreeably surprised as anyone in the house. Oceans of cool, fresh air came wafting in. I really think there were few there that really saw the last part of the show for they came to the box office and wanted to know what had happened, they could hear no noise, no draft to know that air was being forced into the room and when they learned the air was being changed every minute, they were more interested in the machine than they were in the picture.

I am running a full page ad this week, but I feel it is money wasted for they beat me to it by word of mouth and every one knew we had a cool theatre before the paper was published.

My only regret now is that I should not have been skeptical, believed what you wrote me and installed the machine six weeks ago when our hot weather started. I am sure the increased patronage would have gone a long way toward paying for the machine ere this. Yes, I have one more regret. That is, I spent seventy-five dollars three weeks ago putting a ceiling and roof ventilator in and now it is useless.

Oh yes - I am going to heat them better this winter with this machine and save money doing it. Did you know that fresh air is ten times easier to heat than dead air and with a good circulation there will be no cold corners, etc.

I will simply turn on the blower before I start my furnace, fill the room with good fresh air which will easily heat, then cut the speed of blower down and close the intake. This will distribute the heat evenly throughout the house. I figure I have an all year round machine and a money maker and saver.

You may use this letter as you wish; if you care to use it, I wish you would use it mostly on the "Doubting Thomasses" for their own good for I was one myself and it cost me money.

Very truly yours,
B. N. Barnett

RICHARD BARTHELMESS
in "Shore Leave"

Dick, as a member of the Navy, has as engrossing a character as he had as a West Pointer in "Classmates." It is another of those roles that the public loves to see him portray. This adaptation of Hugh Osborne's play, as produced by David Belasco, is a John S. Robertson Production. Josephine Lovett wrote the scenario. Presented by Inspiration Pictures, Inc. Dorothy Mackaill in leading feminine role.

"WHAT FOOLS MEN"
with Lewis Stone

A wonderful picture. It was taken from the gripping novel by Henry Kitchell Webster, "Joseph Greer and His Daughter." It tells of a middle-aged man of violent emotions and primitive likes and dislikes, and his daughter, whose make-up is similar to her father's. A most intense society drama. In the cast are Shirley Mason, David Torrence and Barbara Bedford. Editorial direction June Mathis. . Directed by George Archainbaud. Continuity by Eve Unsell.

It was directed by Al Santell and has Jack Mulhall and Charles Murray in the supporting cast. Editorial direction by June Mathis. Presented by Corinne Griffith Productions, Inc. Tells of the desire and search for wealth and fine things by the daughter of poor parents, only to find happiness in the life that has always surrounded her.

"THE DARK ANGEL"
with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky

This George Fitzmaurice Production, presented by Samuel Goldwyn, tells of a great love and a great sacrifice. It was taken from the play by H. B. Trevelyan, with the scenario by Frances Marion. It is a story that will have universal appeal, and in the hands of Mr. Fitzmaurice, and its leading roles in the hands of two such artists as mentioned above, it is sure to be a great box-office success.

Motion Picture News

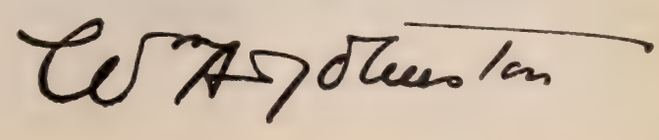
VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, AUGUST 29, 1925 NO. 9

The Independent

WITH respect to the cause of the Independent producer, distributor and exhibitor, we wish that more arguments of an economic nature might prevail. There could well be less of sentimental appeal—and the rest.

We agree thoroughly with Nathan Burkan that the independent business man—the man who is pulling his oar alone, outside of chains, mergers and organized power in general—should be given fair sailing. That is the spirit of America, the basis of our anti-trust laws. This man should not be hampered or destroyed by unfair trade combinations and practices; and it is pretty certain that the law and public opinion won't permit him to be. Big business needs restraint, there's no doubt about that. It is human to aspire, and sometimes thoughtlessly so.

But—and a big one—you can go just so far in the business world with the rule of fair play. Going beyond that you cease to be fair. If a man forges ahead you cannot fairly pull him back. You cannot, as an exhibitor well expressed it, "take the industry away from the industrious."



The law of fair play is a man-made law—right and wonderful in its proper application. But business is business, and has its own laws. Business is governed by exact economic laws. They are utterly inviolable laws, however you may feel about their operation. They control business just as completely as physical laws control machinery. A machine doesn't run by sentiment. No more does an industry. And when you try to tamper with the unchangeable laws of economics and physics you invite rack and ruin every time.

Business is a plain matter of supply and demand. And the ruling factors are—quality, price, advertising. All the sentiment in the world will never make a dent in the steady grind of these regulators of the commerce of the world. How do we buy our cigars, clothes, household supplies? Just exactly as people buy theatre tickets, and as the exhibitor rents pictures, and as the distributor makes producer contracts, and as the producer buys picture values—by quality, price, advertising.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is opposed to monopoly in this business, because we believe it is bad in itself and bad for the box-office. We favor the independent producer because we believe the supply of pictures will be best if they come from many sources and not from too few. We do not believe in producer-owned theatres, either for the producer's sake or for the theatre's sake. We believe in well-run theatres. If chain ownership makes better theatres, then chains will and should prevail. But chains will go just as far as they are well run and no further; and certainly there's a place in the sun today, and it is being proved right along, for any independent dealer or exhibitor in competition with chain stores and theatres.

What, in our humble opinion, the independent producer and distributor need today and all they need is a straight out-and-out business campaign to the exhibitor—first to acquaint him beyond question with the aggregate strength of this entire supply of pictures and, secondly, to deal with him in open competition on the triple bases of quality-price-advertising.

It's the one and only way—the business way. Exhibitors are emotional at conventions. Naturally. They go for a good time. But business is another matter—a business matter. Naturally. The exhibitor is forced to buy the goods he wants, at a price, and with service—forced by competition in his own field. Why try to reach him in any other way?

The British Situation

ELSEWHERE in this issue we print a comprehensive article on the British situation written by a member of our staff. It is the fifth of a notable series on the whole European outlook. What he has to say may well be read carefully, for his information was gained first-hand and his viewpoint is unbiased.

This latest article is particularly timely, since it sketches the background for the present upheaval in Britain, and deals with the recommendations of the Federation of British Industries on ways and means to salvage the collapsed producing industry over there.

These suggestions, curiously enough, do not fall into a uniform plan, but are really several plans which will have to be reconciled in detail if results are to follow. One of them proposes a contingent—a soft word meaning a limited ban on pictures from other countries.

There are other recommendations no less revolutionary. All of them, no less than the whole situation itself, are vitally important to the American trade. When one remembers the overwhelming popularity of American pictures brought about the film convulsion in Britain, the point is plain.

The British trade papers may well be taken as reflecting the progressive British viewpoint. Without exception, these journals, while advocating determined efforts to revive production, keep their feet on the ground and talk sense. For instance, The Bioscope on the subject of a subsidized National Film Studio:

"The question is much deeper than the 'one-idea' National Studio. Production is a question of men, brains, money, salesmanship, and imitation. The word imitation is plain English—emulation could have been used, but it is imitation which is to save British Film Production.

"British pictures—the words used together should be separated. What is wanted is pictures—good pictures—made in Britain, and to get them this country has to start in where our competitors are to-day. When America found that Germany was years ahead of her in lighting, what happened? America hired German experts. The same applied to producers of every nationality, German, Swedish, French, British, and it also applied to artistes, Russian, Germans, Poles, British, no matter what their nationality. America recognised they must have the best. American pictures are not American in any other sense than that they are made with American money.

"With a sufficiency of money, invested by British exhibitors, and Britons who have a desire to see British ideals on the screens of the world, aided by a subsidy from the British Government as a guarantee that the country is solidly behind the project, there is nothing to prevent the trade mark 'Made in Britain' from being an open sesame to every market for pictures as well as other manufactures.

"But we would be false to our principles and the principles of the industry were we to abstain from pointing out the futility of merely providing a National Studio. The question is much deeper than that—and we look to the subject of British production being discussed on the broader basis we have indicated, for only on those lines we are convinced will success in British production ever be attained."

The Paramount School

SESSIONS of the Paramount Theatre Managers' School have begun, marking a development of real importance in the growth of the industry. It is the first specific recognition of the fact that exhibition is a profession—deservedly so, and may become in its technique at least something of an exact science.

Of course the personality and ability of the manager are the first essentials. But that is true in any line of business. Given these, there is much that can be learned and later put into practice in a successful business way.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Joseph Plunkett, Charles Spencer Chaplin and Moe Mark, snapped at the opening of "The Gold Rush" (United Artists) at the Mark Strand theatre, New York.

CHARLIE'S ANTICS

LAST Saturday night at 12 p. m. saw the New York premiere of "The Gold Rush" at the Mark Strand theatre, and Moe Mark, Joe Plunkett and Fred Hamlin had their hands more than full trying to accommodate the crowd that stormed the doors and nearly wrecked the front of the theatre. Charlie was there in person, as well as a brilliant coterie of other stars, and as usual the crowd jammed in front of the theatre while the stars slipped in through the stage entrance around on 47th street.

We're not going to list the stars who were on hand, just to be different, but if you'll take the names from Who's Who in the Eastern Film World you'll just about have it.

Charlie made a brief speech from the stage at the close of the picture, after which the notables foregathered backstage in the ballet rehearsal room, where he held an informal reception. The reception given "The Gold Rush" was such as to gladden his heart and he was in high spirits.

Our reviewer has already appraised—and praised—the merits of the picture, but there are several things in addition that deserve to be said about the picture. It so happens, however, that they have already been said interestingly by Harry Carr in his page in the roto section of the Los Angeles Sunday Times, and we can do nothing better than to quote at length from his comment. He is describing a conversation between Chaplin and Herbert Howe, the film writer, and says:

"I remember that they fell to a discussion of Charlie's picture, 'The Gold Rush.' I don't happen to recall the part that Mr. Howe liked best: but I remember what Chaplin considers the best thing in the picture.

"This is the place where the girl in the music hall—disillusioned—and disgusted with life—sighs to find a real man.

"Charlie thinks she is looking at him and romance floods his soul—only to discover that she is looking over his head. The hope—and chagrin—that came into his face. . . . Of that bit Charlie is modestly proud.

A. A. Schmidt, whose promotion to the post of West Coast representative of F. B. O. was recently announced, and who will act as contact man between East and West.

What is claimed to be her most remarkable performance is given by Gloria Swanson in "The Coast of Folly" (Paramount). Here are three phases of this unusual characterization, as "Pollyanna," as the daughter and as the mother.

Harold Lloyd as a beardless youth in "The Freshman" (Pathe) tries a little hair tonic to hasten the day of his first real shave. He'll be sorry!

Thomas Meighan, on his way to Ireland to film "The Imperfect Impostor" (Paramount), visits Paramount House in London en route.

Just a "regular kid" is Junior Coghlan, the newest member of the Cecil B. De Mille stock company, now appearing in "The Road to Yesterday" (Producers Dist. Corp.).

"Some one asked Chaplin which of all his comedies he considers the best.

He picked an old one—'Easy Street.'

"Asked which he considered the best single scene he had ever acted, he seemed uneasy and dodged the answer. He vouchsafed, however, that it was probably one of the scenes of 'The Kid.'

"Before Charlie came in, Mr. Howe and I had been discussing with groans and agony the low condition of the movies—some of the gosh-awful pictures being shown.

"And so we asked Charlie what was the matter with the movies.

"He said that nothing much was really the matter; only that the present mildewed conditon of some of the plays was due to the fact that all the situations in the world have been done a million times, and we are seeing the same thing over and over again.

"The obvious outlet for screen plays, he thinks, is in character studies—in narrative stories like his own 'Gold Rush,' where one interesting character is followed through a series of adventures.

"Some one commented on the fact that no new actors of real genius seem to have sprouted in recent years.

"Chaplin said he thought this was because the newer actors are too prone to imitate other actors.

" 'One of these days,' he said, 'a new screen genius will burst out in some utterly unexpected quarter, and I don't know who or where he will be; but I predict he will be a roughneck—utterly unconscious of the meaning of art.'"

THE WORLD'S SCREEN

HUNT STROMBERG paused between breaths in his preparations for filming "The Last Frontier" the other day long enough to make some pertinent observations on the effect of constant movie attendance upon the American public. It is his idea that the seeing of many pictures is turning us into a nation of actors and actresses, through the reaction to screen drama. He says:

"Film fans are unconsciously developing unusually histrionic ability through constant attendance of motion pictures.

"It is the silent drama's medium of expression that has brought this about. When we witness a photoplay we actually become a part of the picture's cast. We help enact every role that is visualized for us on the screen. For it is visualization only that the screen presents. We have not the added assistance of the voice that the stage affords us.

"In attending a stage play we have only to sit back and let the players enact their roles. They interpret the various characters for us completely. We do nothing but sit and listen.

"But in attending a screen drama we go through an entirely different procedure. The players visualize the characters for us, but instead of their voices speaking the lines of these characters, we are forced to place our own mental intonations, our own emphasis on these lines as they are flashed before us on printed subtitles.

"This constant dramatization of sub-titles is developing screen and audiences histrionically to a truly amazing degree."

NAT TAKES PEN IN HAND

FROM the Cobbossee Colony at Monmouth, Maine, comes a vigorous epistle from Nat G. Rothstein, the F. B. O. publicity and ad chief, now vacationing in the wilds. Nat's letters are as full of punch as his ads, and we quote a few of the high spots:

"For once in my life I've had suf-fish-shent fishing. Doggone it! You've got to stand behind a tree to bait your hook up in this neck o' the woods. This afternoon I took Mrs. Rothstein out with me at 4:30 p. m. With the aid of my little Johnson kicker we made for a cove four miles down the lake that I discovered and in which I staked out a deep hole off a ledge. With frogs I started casting and on the first cast picked up a four pound pickerel that gave me a whale of a battle.

"I spent two days with the F. B. O. gang at Nathan Gordon's camp on Cape Cod; where we had a down East' clam bake that was a knockout. Film business is exactly 28,567 miles from my mind just now. Oh, by the way, I shot an 84 at Pine Brook Valley Country club at Boston a week ago."

Thus proving that you may be able to forget the film business on your vacation, but you can't leave your golf game behind.

The publicity men seldom get their picture in the paper except when they change jobs or die—so just for a change, here is the up-and-coming United Artists gang, including publicity and exploitation men for Chaplin, Pickford, Fairbanks and United Artists: Curtis Melnitz, Harry Brand, Charles E. Moyer, dir. of pub. and adv., Mark Larkin, Snowdon Summers; (front row) Nathan S. Dyches, Arthur Zellner and Edward Manson.

Comedy making is strenuous business, decided Billy Dooley, new Christie star, after filming these street scenes for his first comedy for Educational release under the direction of William Watson.

FATTED CALF—A LA SYRIA

IN the absence of the Prodigal Son, the scribes of the trade, fan and daily press were entertained at a Feast of the Fatted Calf last Saturday evening by Famous Players, by way of gently calling attention to the fact that "The Wanderer" was to open on Wednesday of this week at the Criterion. The Feast was held at 15 Rector street, which, if you know your Bagdad-on-the-Subway, is the home of a Syrian restaurant where food is cooked and served just as it was in the days of the original Wandering Boy.

Covers were laid for some three score members of the typewriter fraternity. Since the Syrian alphabet is altogther foreign to our L. C. Smith keyboard, we cannot quote from the menu, but the majority of the dishes were apparently something or another boiled in oil and stuffed with rice. It was all very delightful as a novelty, but if it was a fair sample of the rich food the Prodigal Son had on his return, we're willing to wager that he had a polite tummyache after the feast was over.

OPENING THE DOORS

ENGRAVED invitations of the week include those of the Balaban & Katz Uptown theatre in Chicago and Nathan Appell's New Strand theatre, York, Pa. The former opened last Monday night and the York house will receive its premiere on Thursday the 27th.

ACTING WITH HIS BOOTS ON

THE only pair of genuine "trouper boots" in existence is claimed by Dan Mason, who is wearing them in "Thunder Mountain"—and has worn them for more than twenty years on stage and screen.

He bought them for "It Happened in Nordland," in which Alec Francis was the juvenile. The old boots are pretty well weather beaten and battle scarred now, but every now and then he brings them out for "just one more picture." To paraphrase Grant's famous remark about one of his generals and the barrel of whisky, "If we thought that kind of boots would make just as good actors of some of the others, we'd send them a pair."

Frances Marsh, the sister of Mae Marsh, made her film debut as script clerk on "The Pace That Thrills" (First National). She is here seen with Director Webster Campbell.

TWENTY YEARS LATER

CECIL B. DE MILLE waited twenty years for the opportunity to produce "The Road to Yesterday," his first personally directed picture under his new alliance. That was disclosed this week in an interview in which he said:

"Just twenty years ago when the first rays of success were reflected upon my efforts in the theatrical field, and I became associated with Jesse Lasky, 'The Road to Yesterday' was presented by the Shuberts at the old Herald Square theatre in New York City where it remained for an extended engagement; and then on tour, played continuously for five years.

"I attended the performance the opening night and was so impressed with the play that I determined to secure it, if possible, at a later date and produce it on my own account. In fact I was so confident of its entertainment value that I confided to Mr. Lasky a plan to secure it at once, if by any chance it failed at the Herald Square theatre, and start it immediately on tour.

"But my private opinion was shared by the New York public and the newspaper critics who heaped laudatory praise on the piece and it scored such a big hit that the rights to produce it became prohibitive in price. Then it became involved in litigation that held it in legal bonds until now, twenty years later, I have been enabled, at last, to secure it for production on the screen."

POLA'S MOTHER ARRIVES

AN emotional exhibition minus director, lights and camera was given by Pola Negri on Tuesday afternoon when the Southern Pacific train steamed into Los Angeles bearing her mother, Mme. Eleanora Chalupez, newly arrived form Poland on her first visit to the United States.

Work was halted abruptly on "Flower of Night" as train time drew near, and Pola was as excited as a child. As soon as her mother arrived, she bundled her into the car and took her to see the beautiful Negri home at Beverly Hills.

AS CINDERELLA SAW IT

THE film editors were invited to the Famous Players-Lasky Long Island studio this week on the occasion of the shooting of ballroom scenes for "A Kiss for Cinderella," the Christmas picture now being filmed.

This ballroom set is perhaps the most remarkable ever built at the Eastern studio and is a distinct achievement in fantasy and beauty. It represents the throne room as Cinderella imagines it, based on her own starved existence. The thrones are enormous, jewel-studded rocking chairs, with straps for royalty to hang onto when they stand up. An immense stove and gas meter, also studded with gems, are at the opposite side of the room. The courtiers enter in the heighth of luxury—with sacks of candy and eating bananas. Court beauties, clowns, Italians with trained monkeys, coster boys, and such characters complete the ensemble. Everything is done in terms of the imagination of a waif.

Tall columns line both sides of the set, literally as far as the eye can see. It fills the entire upper stage of the studio, which is quite some space. This advance glimpse promises well for the Christmas release.

ASTERISKS FOR THE SHORTS

THREE of the coveted asterisks were awarded this week by the National Board of Review, all to short subjects. The films to be so honored were "Barrier Busters," Cuckoo Love" and Pathe Review No. 35.

Will Government Subsidy Help British Film Production?

No. 5: F.B.I. Submits Plans for Strengthening Industry

By L. C. Moen

ANNOUNCEMENT of the awaited memorandum of the Federation of British Industries in regard to the revitalizing of production in Great Britain, received here this week, makes it advisable to give immediate consideration to that situation, deferring my description of German conditions until a later article.

There is nothing startling or unexpected in the proposals made, but it is the only authoritative statement extant and as such provides an opportune moment for consideration of the British dilemma.

The memorandum is not so much a concrete plan as a summary of the varied methods which might be employed to stimulate British production. Outstanding proposals are:

1. A duty on the exhibition of non-British films, the revenue to be used in subsidising British production.

2. The formation of an Imperial Film Corporation to assist producers who meet a certain standard, acting in the capacity of a finance corporation.

3. Erection and equipment of a National Studio, to lower the overhead and increase the facilities of British producers.

4. A quota or contingent system requiring the exhibitor, by law, to show one British film in eight the first year, and three in eight during the three years following.

The F. B. I. makes no choice among them. It would seem to be implied that some combination of the four is considered advisable; that is, a tax on the showing of foreign films, a finance corporation to administer this revenue to the benefit of British producers, a National Studio for them to work in, and enforced showing of the resultant films.

Before proceeding further with any discussion of this memorandum, it is necessary to consider certain basic factors in England's situation to understand why her film production has declined, or more important, why the British government is so deeply concerned with the situation of British production in her own studios.

Industrial Nation

To begin with, England is both an industrial and a colonial nation. With some 45,000,000 souls crammed into a space about the size of one of our states, she cannot possibly be self-maintaining.

For four or five decades prior to the World War Britain was becoming more and more a nation of factories—the workshop of the world. Germany was pushing close behind, to be sure, but England held her supremacy in most lines.

With every increase in industrial activity came lessening of agriculture and live-stock raising. England was becoming a nation of factory workers.

As such, she needed her colonies to furnish her with food and raw materials, and outside markets for manufactured goods, both in the colonies and in foreign nations generally.

With the coming of the war, all of this was swept away overnight. The full manpower of England was taken from export manufacture to fighting and the making of supplies for the fighters. Even the imports of raw materials from the colonies and dominions were hampered by submarine warfare.

Then came the peace, bringing with it conditions disastrous to Britain. Germany, spurred on by reparations payments, reached new high levels of manufacturing efficiency. German coal delivered to France under the treaty took away the market for just that much British coal.

The pound sterling was stabilized and brought back to its normal level, at a terrific price in financial stress. Her enormous government debt automatically grew larger as she raised the value of the pound. To keep up her credit, payment on war debts was begun, though it could be ill afforded. Business credits were paralyzed seriously. All in all, the stabilization of currency at a high level, however beneficial in the long run, was done at grave cost to British industry and finances.

Labor troubles have been bitter and severe. Demand for high wages in shipbuilding have raised costs to a point where even British firms are awarding contracts to German builders.

Export Trade Slack

Britain's supremacy in the export field has passed to Germany and America, and unsettled conditions have made it impossible for her to regain it. As a result, millions who once earned their living from doing the manufacturing of the world, are at the point of starvation.

To make matters worse, apparently, a paternalistic form of unemployment insurance was inaugurated—the "dole"—a matter, I believe, of some 15 shillings a week paid to workers out of employment by the government. If I may believe the many expressions of opinion which I heard in England, a great number of those workmen are none too anxious to resume, so long as they receive a dole on which they can struggle along.

And 1,250,000 persons are receiving this dole; It is estimated that, with their families, some five millions of persons are being supported by it. However valuable this system may have been at the outset, it is an unfortunate phase of the present situation.

Lloyd George has estimated that the population of the British Isles would have to be reduced by 15,000,000 persons to enable the remaining number to be self-supporting, as matters stand.

To add to the problems of the government, affairs in the colonies and dominions, vital to the Empire, have been none too smooth. Asia is in a state of seething discontent, and the nations with colonial possessions there have their hands more than full.

Government Interest

There are, then, two obvious reasons which explain the deep interest of the interest of the British government in the encouragement of domestic film production, entirely aside from the lesser object of providing employment for actors and other studio workers—and neither of these reasons is in any way concerned with the showing of British pictures within the boundaries of the British Isles.

1. The Government wants British films shown throughout the world to advertise British goods and aid in restoring her export trade.

2. The Government needs the screen badly as a medium of propaganda for the Empire in her colonies, as an antidote for the racial and religious problems causing disaffection today.

Perhaps neither of these reasons will ever appear on the surface of the discussions, but the pressure which they may exert on the government is evident. The latent danger is the possibility of government action which, in the long run, might harm the British film industry itself, disregarding the loss of American film revenue from that country.

It may be assumed as a starting point, then, that the British government desires to encourage film production in order to afford a supply of British pictures for showing throughout the world—through making it profitable for the producer to make pictures in England. The British market, in other words, is to support the making of pictures to carry the message of British manufacturers and Empire ideals to the far corners of the earth—just as American films are now doing for the United States, as regards the export phase of the matter.

Granting that all of this is quite justifiable, from the government point of view, it would be extremely unfortunate if, in aiding the Empire, the British exhibitor were to be seriously crippled. There is more than a possibility of this, and it is strongly to be hoped that nothing is done without fully consulting with the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

Exhibitors Heavily Taxed

The British exhibitor is already a heavily taxed individual who pays rather large film rentals—and any further addition to that burden, it would seem, must carry considerable compensation if it is to be justified.

There is every indication that exhibitors will be consulted with in every step, but that does not remove the possibility of some untimely move. Paternalism and government subsidy are valuable in their place, but they are "dynamite"—and on more than one occasion have exploded prematurely with general havoc all around.

Returning now to the four leading points in the memorandum we have:

1. A duty on the exhibition of non-British films, the revenue to be used in subsidising British production.

This, obviously, will be paid by the exhibitor and indirectly by the public. It is doubtful if admission prices would stand a material increase, so it is reasonable to assume that the exhibitor showing American films, for instance, would be reaching his own pocket and furnishing money for the production of British pictures.

There are two references to such a duty in the memorandum, slightly different in their wording. The first reads: "A substantial duty per foot on foreign films exhibited—to be levied on the exhibitor and balanced by an equivalent refund of entertainment tax on respect of British films exhibited by him." The second is: "The imposition of a small license duty on exhibitors for showing foreign films in their programs."

Assisted Market

The object of the first is to force a market for British films through making others more costly, and that of the second is to provide capital for British production.

But since this interlocks in a measure with the other proposals, let us consider them a moment before summing up the matter.

2. The formation of an Imperial Film Corporation to assist producers who meet a certain standard, acting in the capacity of a finance corporation.

There can be little argument on this point. If a subsidy of any sort is to be applied, there must be a suitable organization to administer it wisely.

3. Erection and equipment of a National Studio, to lower the overhead and increase the facilities of British producers.

Studios facilities are needed badly in England, if production is to thrive, but elaborate studio facilities do not insure successful production. Far from it.

4. A quota or contingent system requiring the exhibitor, by law, to show one British film in eight the first year, and three in eight during the three years following.

And right here we may sum up the contingency upon which rests the whole effect of the plans on the British exhibitor. If the British films which he is thus required to show can be made equal in drawing power and entertainment value to American or other foreign pictures, well and good. He will simply have paid a little extra for the sake of keeping British production alive, which he is probably entirely willing to do.

It must be remembered that to the British exhibitor the fear of being swallowed up by American film interests is as real as to the independent exhibitor in America. Many British exhibitors feel, I believe, that they must encourage British production to keep alive a competitor to the American companies, lest the latter ultimately swallow them up, theatres and all.

In the other words, the British exhibitor wants to keep British production alive for the same precise reason that the Milwaukee convention proposed the Play-date Bureau to encourage independent American production. And no doubt the stories carried back from that convention by the British delegates have strengthened that conviction.

Must Meet Standard

Returning to the point in hand, however, if this subsidised British production does not come up to present standards, and does not gain an outside market, the British exhibitor will pay high rentals for less profitable productions, owing to the smaller number of theatres in the British market.

This demands a separate article, however, in which we shall consider what might be done through voluntary action at far less hazard all around, as well as the factors which might determine the success or failure of the proposed production.

British Booking Company Formed in Toronto

TRANS-CANADA Bookings, Limited, is the name of the new organization at Toronto, Ontario, in which N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, and of subsidiary companies, has become identified for the purpose of booking British productions for Canada. Lawrence Solman, manager of the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, is to be the president of the new Trans-Canada Bookings and Charles Rolley of Montreal is to take up residence in Toronto for the purpose of directing the activities of the new syndicate which supersedes the old Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, which collapsed several years ago after getting big plans under way. The new Company has no connection with the old beyond the fact that some desirable arrangements have been assumed by the new organization.

A definite schedule of bookings is being drawn up, including one-week runs in Toronto and Montreal; three-day bookings in Ottawa, Hamilton and London, and so on down the list.

N. L. Nathanson has further broadened out also to the extent that he is interested in the project to bring "The Miracle" to Toronto this fall for a special engagement, the Toronto guarantee being $250,000, it is said. Others active in the venture are John Arthur, general director of the Hippodrome and Regent Theatre, Toronto, Lawrence Solman, Col. A. E. Gooderham and others of Toronto.

Many N. Y. Corporations Given Charters

Companies incorporating and entering the motion picture business in New York state during the past week included the following, the names of the directors and the amount of capitalization, where specified, also being given: Yonkers Operating Company, with David Blum, I. N. Greenfield, Beatrice Selenke, New York city; Jack White Comedy Corporation, $100,000, I. M. Michelman, E. T. Gibe, E. Kraychie, New York city; Edmund Enterprises, Inc., $50,000, Ed Rosenbaum, Jr., Jos. P. Bickerton, Jr.; S. D. Stutsen, New York city; Schaffner & Sweet, Inc., with I. C. Weisman, Edward C. Raftery, Mae M. Lipp, New York city; Vital Exchanges, Inc., $100,000, D. R. Hochreich, J. C. Davis, 2nd; J. K. Adams, New York city; Coyle-Payne Manufacturing Corporation, A. F. von Bermuth, Whitestone, L. I.; O. A. Stumpe, Carl Newton, New York city; Number Five Corporation, $10,000, Philip Goodman, A. V. 25 Companies Producing in Argentina

There are twenty-five film producers in Buenos Aires engaged in making current events films and photoplays, according to Trade Commissioner George S. Brady, Buenos Aires, Argentina. The current events films are composed mostly of happenings of local interest only. Twenty plays of fair local importance were filmed in Buenos Aires during 1924. These were produced by 14 different companies, according to the report, which states that very little money is actually expended in production of the plays, artists often receiving no pay until the play is being exhibited and bringing a return.

Refuses to Ban Films From Public Vehicles in D. C.

Motion picture films can be carried on street cars and busses in the District of Columbia without danger to the public, under the present regulations requiring their transportation in metal cases, according to Fire Chief Watson, by whose advice the Commissioners of the District have refused to issue the order sought by the local film board of trade, banning their transportation in public vehicles.

The board of trade's suggestion was based on the explosion some time ago of films carried on a Boston street car, but the fire chief pointed out that the films involved in that accident were not in a metal case, as required by the District law.

Greater Movie Season Booms Receipts and Prestige

Newspaper Comment Favorable To Industry

WHILE reports of the sustained success of Greater Movie Season drives, now in full swing throughout the country, continue to materialize from all quarters, supporters and sponsors of the movement take occasion to point out the benefits deriving to the entire industry from the movement. Excerpts from editorials published by newspapers in cities and small towns are quoted to support the claim that Greater Movie Season is proving an important factor in the creation of more good will and increasing the prestige of the industry as well as bringing direct profits at the box offices of the theatres.

The movement has been widely exploited in the photoplay pages and news columns of newspapers over the country, but even greater importance is attached to the editorials which have been written and published about the industry since the inauguration of the campaign. Editors everywhere have given generous space to opinions tracing the advances that have been made in production and presentation of pictures. The editorial expressions have been so favorable as to bring lasting benefits to the industry as a whole. The attacks of some of the screen's most persistent critics have been answered in many of the editorials written in connection with Greater Movie Season.

Quotations from editorials published by some of the country's leading newspapers follow:

"The moving picture industry is a great and important factor in Atlanta's business life," said the Atlanta Georgian. "It is deserving of every consideration of a legitimate sort at the hands of our people. We bespeak for the moving picture theatres the cordial cooperation and patronage of the citizenship of this community."

"The better picture campaign emphasizes the screen's ceaseless reaching for new standards of excellence," according to the Indianapolis News. "The invitation of the public to share in the thought and inspiration of the anniversary celebration provides an opportunity for all patrons of the pictures to have a part in the development of the new art."

An editorial in the Hearst papers, after describing the screen as another and advanced part of the world's machinery for spreading news and information, declared that "it should be as free of stupid censorship or any censorship, apart from punishment when crime is committed, as is the press under the Constitutional guarantee of freedom."

Many editors contrasted today and yesterday in emphasising the important part the motion picture holds in everyday life. Thus the New Orleans states:

"If the Fathers of the Country could come back to life for a little while, nothing would amaze them more than the film and the marvelous development of the moving picture industry. All over the country Greater Movie Season is being celebrated, and those who are celebrating constitute a very large proportion of the hundred and odd millions who live under the shelter of the American flag. The industry had its birth here. It is proper that Americans should make it the occasion of a celebration."

"The motion picture has developed so gradually along the paths of artistic and dramatic merit that most people fail to realize the greatness of its betterment," stated the San Francisco Examiner. "If we were again to see the average film of a half dozen years ago, the story of improvement would be very evident. The upshot of Greater Movie Season will be a greater public realization of the really remarkable excellence which film standards, little by little, have attained."

A similar thought is expressed by the Portland Oregonian. "Those who have scoffed at the efforts of producers, who have carried the banner of some of the censorship agitators without knowing the real facts, will go from the theatres with a new idea of the place of motion picture entertainment in the realm of recreation."

The Denver Post: "In thinking of the spirit of Greater Movie Season, compare the shows of yesterday with the shows of today. Compare everything in connection with the theatre. The movie theatre today is surely a palace. One relaxes in comfortable seats to witness the perfected entertainment on the screen. Courteous treatment and the refined surroundings of the modern theatre make motion pictures a pleasure to be desired by all classes and every member of the family."

Duty to Public

"As certainly as those at the head of this industry owe it to the people to keep up the standards and fit into the true education as well as entertainment of the people," the Los Angeles Express remarked, "just that certain is it that on the public rests the corresponding responsibility of dealing fairly with the industry and showing appreciation for actual service rendered. Only through appreciation expressed does the producer get a dependable estimate of the public demand."

The New York Sun stressed the film as a means by which even the smallest towns are enabled to enjoy exactly the same entertainment that had pleased the metropolis, while the New York Graphic declared that great as is the present popularity of films, Greater Movie Season would certainly enhance the interest of the public in them.

The Boston Post: "No one who looks upon the 'silver screen' with any degree of care can or wants to deny that enormous improvement in the quality of the product, both artistically and morally, has come within the past few years."

The San Francisco Bulletin, ridiculing those who believe that pictures are still only in their infancy, pointed out that just as the art of printing fostered literary genius, so the art of movies will undoubtedly foster genius in pictorial expression.

In commenting upon the pictures showing in Cincinnati during August, the Times-Star of that city remarked, "Whether or not the producers and directors know that these efforts were to be used in the Greater Movie Season campaign, it is apparent that these pictures reflect a conscientious endeavor to provide a high clean standard of screen entertainment."

Baltimore business is approximately 10% better as a result of Greater Movie Season, according to Mr. Louis Schlichter, controlling the Edmonson and Bridge Theatres in that city, and general manager of the local campaign. Baltimore wants the season again next year, he added in a communication to Mr. Hays.

Robert Bender of the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, telegraphed that exhibitors there were well satisfied. The increase over the average business was considered good and the campaign was in every respect a success. While he has not yet taken a vote of exhibitors on next year's campaign, Mr. Bender believes that they will be favorable to another unified drive.

Herman Wobber, San Francisco: "Greater Movie Season was inaugurated here with publicity parades and every other legitimate and dignified effort to attract attention. The theatres are showing the results of the campaign through increased attendance."

Stars Register a Hit

Hollywood's cinema stars came, saw and conquered San Francisco August 8th in a colorful pageant on Market Street that ushered in Greater Movie Season for this city. The pageant was led by a mounted police detail headed by Chief Daniel J. O'Brien, Edward Baroon, Gen. Chairman and Nat Holt his assistant. Movie fans crowded the line of march to get glimpses of their favorite stars as they passed in the parade. The procession became a screen popularity contest with the spectators by their applause casting votes for their idols. Floats of the various film companies added a note of color to the procession. Bathing girls defying the cool breees of a foggy morning brought shivers to the spectators. As the parade neared the Civic Center it passed the reviewing stand from which Acting Mayor J. Emmett Hayden and other city officials witnessed the procession.

All traffic was suspended on Market street as the pageant wound its way between crowds of people and under the special decorations the city strung on the street for Movie Week. In the afternoon the visiting stars took part in the Movie Season parade in Oakland. Jack Partington was chairman of the San Francisco parade and outdoor activities. Baron Holt and Partington were praised by all for the way things turned out.

If the interest of the general public of Kansas City in Greater Movie Season can be gauged in accordance with the number of essays received by the Greater Movie Season editor of the Kansas City Star during the first two weeks of the contest, then there is a whale of concern about the screen in Kansas City.

All Houses Decorated

Down town and suburban houses are now decorated in observance of Greater Movie Season, while windows of department stores and other concerns have fallen in line. The committee of exhibitors and exchange officials in charge continues to spend money freely in newspaper and other forms of advertising. In selecting the essay judges, the committee saw to it that virtually every civic and industrial body was represented. The judges are:

W. M. Symon, manager of the convention bureau, Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Eleanor Walton, chairman of the Better Film Committee, Women's City Club; Mrs. E. M. Metcalf, chairman, Motion Picture Committee, Parent-Teacher Association; Katherine S. Prosser, motion picture editor of the Kansas City Star; C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

After several weeks of preparation, Seattle's recent Greater Movie Season parade was almost a total wreck at the last minute as a result of differences between the Musicians Union and the parade authorities. Quick action and a sense of humor saved the day, however, and the parade covered the greater downtown district, as scheduled—minus the fifty-piece band that was to provide the inspirational music for the marchers.

When the parade was first scheduled early in July, arrangements were made with a local band to furnish the music. The day of the parade, August 7, when the column was ready to move off, members of the band discovered floats in the parade entered by John Danz, proprietor of several non-union picture houses. The band hurriedly delivered an ultimatum that either they would march, or the Danz floats would remain—but not both. A consultation among theatre and exchange men resulted in the decision that the Danz floats would remain—so the band was disbanded.

Central Penn. Appreciative

Directly behind Mayor Edwin J. Brown, who headed the parade, there appeared a casket, bedecked with signs reading, "This is the Band—the Musicians' Union has the key." The rest of the parade followed, minus the stirring airs that usually accompany such a demonstration.

Central Pennsylvania motion picture exhibitors are learning to appreciate—to an even greater extent than at first—the advantages of Greater Movie Season as the period advances. While some theatres in that territory emphasized the campaign at its very start by locally observing a single week as Greater Movie Season, others have saved their exploitation thunder for later on in the season when the public has learned to understand better just what the movement means. One of the most conspicuous evidences that the public, outside of the trade, is coming to recognize the value of the campaign, is the fact that Mayor George A. Hoverter, of Harrisburg, on August 12, issued a formal proclamation urging citizens and industrial bodies in Harrisburg to cooperate in the national screen celebration. The mayor's proclamation follows:

"To impress the importance and possibilities of motion pictures and to signalize the immense advances that the picture art has made, a national celebration to inaugurate the Great Movie Season is being held this month throughout the United States.

"It is desired to enlist the people of Harrisburg in this movement, which has the support of a great many civic, industrial and social betterment organizations. Because of the prominent place motion pictures hold in the public regard, their qualities of entertainment and their educational influence, I hereby urge the citizens and commercial bodies of Harrisburg to participate in Greater Movie Season that screen art may continue to advance to our personal happiness and industrial good.

"George A. Hoverter, Mayor."

Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, is one of those that joined vigorously in the Greater Movie Season after the campaign had been two weeks old. Starting August 17, Manager Sydney J. Gates, of this theatre, began exploiting the possibilities of the campaign in a most spectacular fashion. During the week starting on that date he provided each patron entering the theatre with a small musical instrument known as a kazoo. He specially urged the audience at all performances in the ensuing week to play on their kazoos whenever Director

Elmer B. Carpenter, of the Loew's Regent orchestra, struck up popular airs, including current jazz favorites. The theatre seats about 1,700 and the audience fell for the stunt with great enthusiasm. The entire audience at each performance was thus transformed into a jazz concert which made the theatre walls echo with the wierdest sorts of noises.

This theatre put on an especially attractive bill for the week. The feature for the first three days was "The White Desert," produced by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, while the last half of the week was featured by the Paramount picture, "Paths to Paradise." Another much advertised feature for the first three days of the week was a revival of the thirty-years-old film taken in the Edison Laboratories in 1925, "The Great Train Robbery," which was presented to illustrate the advance that the film art has taken since its first introduction. An added feature for the last half of the week was "Play Ball," written by John McGraw, and showing some of the New York Giant stars in action on the baseball diamond.

All the advertisements printed by the Capitol Theatre, Lebanon, in the newspapers of that city, contain during the Greater Movie Season, a picture of a revolving globe containing the inscription, "Greater Movie Season." This is a theatre of the Carr & Schad, Inc. chain which operates a dozen picture houses in Reading and Lebanon, and the same historical device is being used in the advertisements of some of the company's other theatres.

The advertisements of most of the first-run theatres in important Central Pennsylvania cities continue to make conspicuous reference daily to the Greater Movie Season.

Theatre Chains Continue Expansion

North American Theatre Corp. Moves Into Denver and Iowa; Finkelstein & Rubin Buy Eight Houses

THE expansion movement of theatre circuits throughout the country continues at a rapid and unabated pace. The past week reports many additions to theatre chains to give further impetus to the activity.

The North American Theatre Corporation makes its first appearance in the Denver territory by the purchase of the Strand Theatre from the Melton Theatres, Inc. The Strand is probably the best located of the first-run houses in that city. Simultaneously the hand of the M. P. Capital Corp. of which the North American Company is a subsidiary is seen in the activities of the Frank Amusement Co., of Waterloo, Ia., which is out after ten theatres in that state. Frank R. Wilson president of the M. P. Capital is vice-president of the Iowa theatre unit which has just been re-capitalized at $250,000 with $200,000 of its stock subscribed. Theatres already purchased by the company include the Plaza and Rialto, Waterloo; Isis, Cedar Rapids; Orpheum, Clinton; and Grand, Oelwein. Options are held on several other theatrical properties which do not expire until Oct. 15.

In Minneapolis, the opinion prevails that completion of this program will make the Frank circuit the state's second largest, the A. H. Blank chain, which is affiliated with Balaban & Katz, ranking first. Interests identified with the M. P. Capital Corp. are financing many of the units releasing through Producers Dist. Corp. The company is also ready to finance theatre operations throughout the country. It may be that the Frank move is the first definite step in this direction.

In Minneapolis Finkelstein and Ruben announce the purchase of half interest in the Rochester Amusement Company, Rochester; Owatonna Amusement Company, Owatonna; and the Colonial Amusement Company in Winona, Minn. This gives F. & R. fifty per cent interest in the eight following theatres: At Rochester, Lawler, Metropolitan and Empress; at Owatonna, Metropolitan and Garden; at Winona, Colonial, Opera House and West End, Matthew Chrystmos has four new projects under way in Winchester Country, N. H., to augment his chain of five in Yonkers and three in Jersey.

One theatre in Westchester, a second in Bronxville and a third in Yonkers are building while a deal is under way for a second site in Yonkers upon which a 2,500 seat house will be erected. At present Chrystmos's Yonkers holdings are the Broadway, Orpheum, Model, Riverdale and American. In West New York, he operates the Rivoli, Rialto and Wilson.

Walter Reade, in association with Pat Casey have ground 100 x 150 on the corner of Monmount and Broad Streets, Red Bank, N. J., and will commence work immediately to erect a modern $500,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre. Thomas W. Lamb, the builder of the Capitol Theatre and other theatres in New York City will be the architect. Work will commence immediately and will be completed in six months. The seating capacity is to be 2,100, and it is Mr. Reade's intention to install a modern cooling system in the theatre.

W. S. Butterfield, president of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise company, has consummated a deal with D. R. and C. B. Wilson, prominent Pontiac industrialists, whereby he will erect a new theatre in Pontiac at a cost to be in the neighborhood of $250,000. This house will be situated directly across the street from the Oakland theatre, which was recently purchased by Butterfield. Ground will be broken for the new theatre this week. It will seat thirteen hundred persons.

Butterfield also has announced plans for his new Capitol theatre in Bay City which will cost $350,000. Its seating capacity will be 1,660.

Denies Report of Roxy Theatre for Berlin

S. L. Rothafel last week stated there was no truth in the rumor that he would build a theatre in Berlin, Germany, for the Ufa Enterprises. Mr. Rothafel's statement, issued upon his return to New York from Chicago last Saturday, follows.

"There is absolutely no truth in this rumor. All of my energies and activities will be concentrated in the building of the new Roxy Theatre on 50th Street and 7th Avenue, New York, to be followed by the construction of a circuit of Roxy houses in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn. These houses will be built by the Roxy Theatres Corporation, the factors of which are Arthur H. Sawyer, Herbert Lubin, William E. Atkinson and myself. We have no intention of erecting Roxy Theatres in other places outside of New York at the present moment."

Will Aid Local Movie Season Campaign

IT is not too late for exhibitors to join Greater Movie Season. Several cities will not begin their drives before September, and many centers hitherto unorganized are only just now preparing to hold the celebration.

Although the national movement requires no further impetus, the Hays office will maintain an organization to serve individual localities where the celebration is planned for later in the year.

Press-books, publicity material and full campaign data with be made available at any time, upon application to Jerome Beatty, Director Greater Movie Season, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., 469 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Several Changes Ordered in Batavia Picture Houses

Numerous changes have been ordered in the construction, arrangement and equipment of every theatre in Batavia, N. Y., following a recent visit to the city by a state building inspector. About 30 changes have been ordered in the new Lafayette and Family theatres and these will all be made. Additional fire extinguishers and fire exit signs must be provided in both houses. In the Lafayette, a change to be made in the stage ventilation is the largest item. All loose aisle chairs must be removed from both theatres. Two rows of seats in the rear of the balcony of the Family are to be removed so that their exit space will legally correspond with the balcony capacity.

The changes ordered in these houses and in the Grand theatre comprise numerous minor details and will in no way drastically affect the construction of the buildings.

Plans Being Completed for New Brooklyn House

Plans are being completed by M. Hirsch for a new $35,000 one story brick motion picture theatre to be erected at Washington Street, on a site 75 x 100. The owner of the new Theatre is the Malfein Construction Company.

A. A. Schmidt Promoted; Is West Coast Representative of F. B. O.

A. A. SCHMIDT, F. B. O. West Coast Division manager for past three years, has been promoted to the position of West Coast Representative of the company. Mr. Schmidt will act as contract man between the production department at the studio and the executive offices in New York in addition to his duties with relation to distribution and sales.

Schmidt is one of the pioneers of the picture industry. He started his career in the film business fifteen years ago, when he organized the Victor Film Service of Buffalo, N. Y. Later he became Division Manager for Universal, a position he held for several years. He left Universal three years ago to become West Coast Division Manager for F. B. O.

Disputes Over Wage Demands

Musicians' Strike Threatens Denver; Cleveland and Baltimore Operators Firm for Increase

LABOR difficulties arising from demands by operators and musicians are approaching the critical stages in Denver, where theatre musicians are demanding increased wages, and in Cleveland and Baltimore, where exhibitor organizations are conferring with Union representatives over the higher rates demanded by operators.

From all present indications, there will be a strike of union musicians in Denver about September 1st. The theatre managers' association composed of the managers of all leading amusement houses of Denver and the musicians' union are at present very far from reaching an agreement concerning the terms and provisions of a new contract to replace the present contract which expires August 31st. The musicians union has asked that several important changes be made in the old contract among which is a working schedule of six days a week instead of the present seven day schedule and a 30 per cent increase in wages. The theatre managers' association refused to accept any changes in the old contract and insist upon a complete renewal of the present agreement without any alteration whatsoever. Up to this time negotiations have failed to bring the parties any nearer together, and it is reported that complete arrangements have been made by all theatres for providing music in case of a strike is called by the musicians union.

An increase in the wages of moving picture operators of between $2 and $5, according to a statement given out at the headquarters of Baltimore Local 181, has been asked to become effective when the new contracts are signed from September 1.

This demand for a wage increase and for better working conditions was taken up at a meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., at the Hotel Emerson on Thursday, August 13, for consideration.

The exhibitors have requested the union to send representatives to meet them and discuss the demand, according to G. Kingston Howard, president of the Baltimore Local 181. Mr. Howard took this up with the Union at its meeting Monday, Aug. 17.

"We know the operators in Baltimore are not receiving the same remuneration and that they are not working under the same conditions as are the operators in other cities, particularly Washington and Philadelphia," said Mr Howard.

The Cleveland Moving Pictures operators have presented to the exhibitors of Cleveland their new wage scale effective September first. The scale asks for a material increase in all classes of houses. In addition, the scale offered by the operators divides local picture houses into three classes. The scale is as follows:

Class A—Theatres running evenings and one matinee per week and seating less than 500 and charging less than 25c net admission, four hours maximum constituting a performance, shall pay the sum of $57.92 per week. Extra matinees pro rata and extra supper hour $2.00. The old scale for this type house was $50.37.

Class B—Theatres running evenings and one matinee per week and charging 25c or more, or seating 500 and less than 800, four hours maximum constituting a performance, shall pay the sum of $63.76 per week. Extra matinees pro rata and supper hour $2.00. The old scale for this type house was $56.00.

Class C—Theatres running evenings and one matinee per week, seating 800, four hours maximum constituting a performance shall pay the sum of $66.00 a week. Extra matinees pro rata and extra supper hour $2.00. (Formerly this type house was classed the same as Class B and the rate was $56.00, as in Class B.)

Warners to Open Laboratory in Flatbush

Warners will open the former Vitagraph film laboratory in Flatbush, New York, where prints to supply the eastern exchanges will be made. No productions will be made at the Flatbush plant, all forty of the coming season's Warner output being scheduled for production on the coast. The company operates a laboratory in Hollywood also.

Miss Rene Changes Name From Inez to Joan

Joan Rene and not Inez Rene will play the leading feminine role in the Fox screen version of Joseph Conrad's "Nostromo." It is the same Miss Rene originally cast for the role, but the lady thinks there is more euphony in Joan Rene than Inez Rene, wherefore she is now Joan.

Fred Newmeyer to Direct Gotham Feature Comedy

Fred Newmeyer, comedy director well known for his work with Harold Lloyd, has been signed by Sam Sax of Gotham Productions to direct the filming of "MacFadden's Row of Flats," which is to be produced as a feature comedy by Gotham.

Newmeyer will probably start the new production immediately after he has completed his present picture, "Going Up," in which Douglas McLean will star for Paramount.

Hart Starts Production of "Tumbleweeds"

William S. Hart has started camera work on "Tumbleweeds," his first release for United Artists. The work is being directed by King Baggot with Barbara Bedford, Lucien Littlefield, J. Gordon Russell, Richard H. Neill, Jack Murphy, Lillian Leighton, Gertrude Claire and Capt. T. E. Duncan in principal roles.

"Tumbleweeds" is an adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan from the novel by Hal G. Evarts.

Bebe Daniels to Play Lead in Wm. De Mille Feature

Bebe Daniels will play the name role in "Polly of the Ballet," which Paramount announces will be William de Mille's most pretentious 1925 production for that company. Work on the feature, for which preliminary plans have been in progress for some time, will start when Miss Daniels completes her work in "Martinique," which William K. Howard is directing, and Mr. de Mille finishes his current production, "New Brooms."

Mildred Davis to Play Lead in Paramount Production

Mildred Davis, who in private life is Mrs. Harold Lloyd, will return to the screen under the Paramount banner, it was announced this week. Miss Davis' first work after three years' absence from the studios, will be as the feminine lead in "Spoils of War," an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's story to be directed by Victor Fleming.

Paramount Week Begins September 6

OFFICIALS of Famous Players estimate that from 7,000 to 8,000 theatres in approximately 2,000 cities in the United States will participate in the celebration of 8th Annual Paramount Week, which will begin Sunday, September 6. The event will be advertised in 3,500 newspapers and the key-note of the advertising will be "Continuing Greater Movie Season."

The campaign will be vigorous and extensive, according to the announcements. In addition to the newspaper advertising which Paramount will place directly, exploitation representatives will work in cities and towns to line-up single and double page co-operative ads, and the Ad-Sales department of the company has issued to exchanges a complete line of free items, such as banners, one sheets, slides, etc., for the use of theatres.

Court Holds Connecticut Film Tax Law is Valid

Injunction Denied; Industry Will Appeal

THE Connecticut tax law imposing a tax of $10 per reel and providing for censorship of films by the State Tax Commission was held to be constitutional and petitions for an injunction against the enforcement of the law were denied in the decision filed in New Haven last Monday by the Special Federal Court which heard the case on July 10th.

The decision holds that the law is a police regulation and that it is not a burden, nor is it directly or substantially a restraint on interstate commerce such as is conducted by the complainants. The action for an injunction against the enforcement of the law was brought by Fox Film Corporation of New York and the American Feature Film Company, Inc., of Boston. The case was argued by George W. Wickersham, of New York, as general counsel representing the Hays organization.

An appeal from the decision will be taken to the United States Supreme Court. The papers to perfect the appeal are now in preparation, according to a statement issued by G. H. Hess, General Attorney for the Hays organization. Announcement that the industry would appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court was made by Benedict M. Holden, of Hartford, counsel for the complainants and the industry in the State, immediately after he received wordof the court's decision.

In cases involving the constitutionality of a state statute, the United States Judiciary Code provides that an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States, without intermediate appeal to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. As the Code also provides that such cases are entitled to preference it is probable that the appeal will be heard by the Supreme Court at its October term.

It is understood that the industry's fight against the law may be continued in the Connecticut Courts as well. Such action if taken will be based on the points that no appeal or redress is provided for in the censorship clauses of the law; and that the law approaches a confiscatory action since its censorship clauses permit of a revocation of license without a hearing. The appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States will be based on the complaint that the Connecticut law interferes with interstate commerce and that the tax is confiscatory because in many cases it will total more than the article taxed.

It is reported that a certain member of the exchange group in Connecticut may submit to arrest in order to bring a test case based on the arguments against the ownership phases of the statute.

That the fifteen exchanges operating in New Haven may be removed to Port Chester, N. Y., has been reported as another possibility in the event that the law is upheld in these actions. Eleven of the fifteen exchanges are members of the Film Board.

In the action before the Special Federal Court the State was represented by Arthur L. Shipment, of Hartford, as special counsel, instead of the Attorney General. The court consisted of Federal Judge Henry Wade Thacher. While the action was against William H. Blodgett, the State Tax Commissioner, who has the authority of special commissioner for the purpose of collecting the tax on films and of censorship, the State was the respondent.

The action was taken to the Special Federal Court without any intervening court action. As the question of constitutionality of the law was the claim issue the special court functioned as a constitutional court.

The law became effective July 1st, but the taxing of films was not to be made until July 8th. Pending action by the court no taxes were collected, though all exhibitors in the state were notified to keep records of the pictures shown after July 8th, in order that the tax might be made if the law was held valid by the court.

The law imposes a tax of $10 for one thousand feet of film, and fifty cents for each hundred feet over that amount on all films brought into the state, excepting news reels and films of educational or scientific value and those which are to be exhibited for the promotion of educational, charitable, religious or patriotic purposes.

It is estimated that the state will receive a revenue of nearly $100,000 on prints which are now in the vaults of the New Haven exchanges. There are eleven exchanges operated by national distributors there and four by state right concerns.

John L. Splain of New Haven, a veteran theatrical man, has been appointed to administer the law.

Fannie Hurst Wins Liberty Prize

Famous Players-Lasky Award Noted Short-Story Writer $50,000 for Scenario

FANNIE HURST, the well known short story writer, has been awarded the $50,000 prize offered by Famous Players-Lasky for the best original scenario in the Liberty Magazine contest, it was announced this week. The title of the picture is "The Moving Finger," and it will be directed by James Cruze.

Before the story is placed in production, however, it will first run serially in Liberty, thus affording the exhibitor the publicity that such publication entails.

From Los Angeles Miss Hurst expressed her enthusiasm for the possibilities of the picture in a telegram to Jesse Lasky. She said:

"Everything progressing splendidly in preparation of story for the screen. Feel deeply grateful to you for care you have taken in seeing to it that my story will reach screen exactly as I conceived it and wrote it for Liberty. Mr. Cruze, Mr. Woods and myself enthusiastic over possibilities which story presents daily as we work it out for screen requirements."

In the Liberty contest, the greatest of its kind ever held, Miss Hurst's entry triumphed over almost 100,000 other manuscripts and plot synopses which were sent to Liberty from every quarter of the globe. John N. Wheeler, executive editor of Liberty, Mr. Lasky and Rex Beach, the novelist, were the judges who selected Miss Hurst's story from among the vast array of submitted material, Mr. Beach having been chosen by the other two judges.

Miss Hurst's entry consisted of a synopsis of a plot. For the synopsis she received the first half of the $50,000 prize. The judges then commissioned her as an author of national reputation to write her plot synopsis in finished serial form. The remaining $25,000 will be paid her upon the serial's completion and the production of the scenario for film purposes.

Liberty's announcement continues: "The story gives every promise of being the greatest Miss Hurst has ever produced, surpassing even 'Humoresque,' which has been counted the most popular of her work. Like 'Humoresque' it will be distinguished by the broad human sympathy which characterizes all of Miss Hurst's writing, but it also will be replete with vivid charm and intense suspense."

MARSHALL NEILAN SIGNS
To Make Four Productions for P. D. C.

MARSHALL NEILAN has signed a new contract with John C. Flinn, of Producers Distributing Corporation, under the terms of which he will make four productions instead of two, as stipuluated in the first contract, for release by that company. The new contract was signed this week in Los Angeles.

Neilan's first P. D. C. picture is yet to be determined though he has several stories in his possession. These include "Ladies of Leisure," "The Unwelcome Guest," "Ups and Downs," "The House with a Bad Name," by Perley Poore Sheehan, "Faith," by Olga Shell, Adela Rogers St. John's "The Consuming Fires," and "The Man With a Shady Past" by Arthur Somers Roche. Many of these stories have been published either in magazine or book form.

Plan National Truck Delivery

Manufacturer Offers Hays Proposal Transportation of Films by Auto

ONE of the nation's most important automobile manufacturers has approached the Hays organization with a detailed proposal for the establishment of truck delivery systems throughout the country.

The Hays office is in favor of the promotion of such a project because it would not only offer exhibitors greater economy but would also give prints a far greater measure of protection than is now experienced.

The proposition would cover complete protection against fire, theft and weather and the trucks used would be standardized throughout the entire chain of lines. The plans calls for the establishments of unit stations in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia at once and a gradual extension to the north, west and south.

The extent of the system however will depend—should it be adopted—totally on the reaction of the exhibitor. It is felt that the service will benefit showmen in those sections where railway sources are not as satisfactory as might be.

Norman Kerry Injured; Hoot Gibson Fills Gap

HOOT GIBSON has been called upon to jump into the cast of the Universal special western production, being filmed near Pendleton, Ore., to fill the vacancy left by Norman Kerry who was injured when thrown from his horse several days ago.

Gibson recently returned from Calgary, Canada, where under the direction of Herbert Blache he completed two pictures, and will immediately begin work on the re-taking of several scenes in the Edward Sedgwick film, which is said to be the most spectacular western ever attempted by Universal.

Some specially dangerous riding shots were being taken up in the mountains, about thirty miles from Pendleton, when the accident to Kerry occurred. Not only was Kerry injured, but the horse crashed into Sedgwick, who was badly bruised as a result. Kerry had to be transported to Pendleton by pack-mule.

"Hell's Highroad" to Open on Broadway at Colony

"Hell's Highroad," the first production from the Cecil B. De Mille studio to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation, will have its Broadway premiere at the B. S. Moss Colony on Sunday, August 23rd.

The feature was directed by Rupert Julian under De Mille's supervision and is the first starring vehicle for Leatrice Joy. The story is by Ernest Pascal and is unusual by virtue of the fact that in the strict definitions of the terms it has no hero, heroine or villain. Miss Joy is supported by Julia Faye, Edmund Bruns, and Robert Edeson.

Pass Exams for New York State Review Board

All told, 43 persons passed the recent civil service examination in Albany, for appointment as reviewers on the New York State Motion Picture Commission. The eligible list is headed by Mrs. Catherin Siegrist, of Buffalo. About 40 persons failed to pass. These included John J. Walker, one time manager of the Barcli theatre in Schenectady. The position pays $1,800 a year and expenses in New York city, and $1,600 a year and expenses upstate.

De Lorenzo Elected Head of Omaha Film Board

The Omaha Film Board of Trade held its annual election of officers recently. F. M. De Lorenzo was elected president, F. W. Gebhart, vice-president, Mayer Monsky, second vice-president, Sherman Fitch, sergeant-at-arms. The Film Board has been functioning in Omaha for the past three years.

Gotham Announces Cast for "The Shadow on the Wall"

The cast which will appear in "The Shadow on the Wall," a Gotham Production now in work on the west coast, has been announced by Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of the Gotham product. Those who have been engaged for the feature are Eileen Percy, who has the leading feminine role, Creighton Hale, Wm. V. Mong, Dale Fuller, Jack Curtis, Hardee Kirkland and Willis Marks.

The picture will be an adaptation by Elsie Werner from the novel "The Picture on the Wall," written by J. Breckenridge Ellis. Reeves Eason is directing the work.

Affiliated With Artclass in New England Exchange

George M. A. Fecke and the Motion Pictures Corporation of Boston, are affiliated with Weis Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation in the exchange recently opened in the New England territory by the latter organization. A separate sales force under Fecke's direction will handle only the Artclass product. The salesmen will work out of the Motion Pictures Corporation's offices, which will handle the physical distribution of the Artclass product.

Carre and Koenig Added to Warners Production Staff

Ben Carre, art director, and William Koenig, until recently general production manager at Universal City, have been added to the Warner Bros. production staff. Carre is credited with the art direction of several prominent photoplays. He began his career with Maurice Tourneur and was recently in Italy with Rex Ingram on the production of "Mare Nostrum." Koenig is a former Minneapolis exhibitor who entered production work with Universal about three years ago.

Frank Lloyd Casting for "The Splendid Road"

Frank Lloyd has started casting "The Splendid Road," an adaptation by J. G. Hawks from Vingie E. Roe's novel which he will produce for First National release.

Anna Q. Nilsson was Mr. Lloyd's first selection. She will play the leading feminine role opposite Robert Frazer who will appear as Dan Clehollis. Pauline Garon, Gladys Brockwell, Edward Earle, Russell Simpson, Roy Laidlaw and Edwards Davis are among the other players who have been signed for the picture.

Ralph Lewis Injured While Acting Before Camera

Ralph Lewis, featured in Emery Johnson's "The Last Edition," which F. B. O. will distribute, suffered painful injuries to his hands while acting scenes for the picture in the pressroom of the San Francisco Chronicle last week. Though his hands were lacerated by the grinding machine Mr. Lewis pluckily finished his scene, one of the dramatic climaxes of the story.

Seider To Draft Contract For Vital

Responds to Request of New Exchange Company to Draw Sales Agreement Acceptable to Exhibitors

VITAL EXCHANGES, INC., newly formed national distributing organization, this week announced that the uniform contract will not be employed by that company, in its dealings with exhibitors. In place of the uniform contract Vital will use an agreement which is to be drafted by Joseph Seider, president of the New Jersey M. P. T. O. and chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee of the National organization.

Mr. Seider has notified David R. Hochreich, head of Vital Exchanges, that he would acceed to the latter's request and submit within a short time the draft of a contract that will be "short, clear and ample." The contract will propose a system of "arbitration with a view of eliminating the present collection agency that deprives the theatre owner of his property rights," Mr. Seider declared in his letter.

Mr. Hochreich said that as outlined to him the contract will be printed on one side of the sheet, will have no fine type clauses or jokers and that the main points covered will be the name of the picture, the play d ate and the price and arbitration clause. "This latter clause," he said "Will have nothing to do with the Arbitration Boards now in existence but will cover the appointment of one man by each side and if these two cannot agree, a third man will be appointed by these two and both parties will be governed absolutely by the ruling of this committee."

Contract Conference to Be Held August 24th

AUGUST 24th has been set as the date for the conference on the new equitable contract and arbitration system by Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Oscar Neufeld, chairman of a similar committee of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America.

The committee of the M. P. T. O. A., appointed at the recent Detroit meeting of the organization's directors, consists of Joseph M. Seider, chairman; Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh, R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kas.; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; President R. F. Woodhull, of the M. P. T. O. A., is an ex-officio member.

The conferees will meet next Monday at 1 p. m., in the offices of the M. P. T. O. A., and the chairmen are optimistic of an early agreement.

In his letter asking Mr. Seider to draft a contract for the Vital company, Mr. Hochreich said in part:

"I believe, with you, that fairness in the motion picture industry must begin with the buying and selling of pictures. The exchange-exhibitor contract must express, therefore, absolute fairness to both parties, and I feel that this is exactly what you have in mind, and it is also what my associates, J. Charles Davis 2nd and J. K. Adams, and I have in mind for our Vital contract with the exhibitor.

"I realize that a contract is the written evidence of the meeting of the minds of both parties at the time it is made, and we propose to meet our exhibitor friends squarely on the ground of the cleanest kind of fair.

Mr. Seider's reply to Mr. Hochreich stated in part:

"We will make every effort to submit within the earliest possible time, the form of contract requested by you in your letter of August 10th.

"We will submit a short, clear and ample contract. We will propose a system of arbitration with a view of eliminating the present collection agency that deprives the theatre owner of his property rights.

"The contract is the foundation for square dealing in the buying, selling and booking of pictures. By your asking us to write "our own ticket" you manifest and give concrete evidence of the sincerity of your statement that it is your purpose to conduct the Vital Exchanges, Inc., on a "live and let live" basis.

"Please accept my sincere wishes for your success in your new undertaking."

Aller Sees Valuable Field in Russia

Vice-President of Rothacker-Aller Laboratories Returns from Trip to Union of Socialist Soviet States

THERE is a remarkable opportunity in the Russian motion picture field, and pictures there are enjoying great prosperity, according to Joseph Aller, vice-president and general manager of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Los Angeles, who recently returned from a visit to that country. In an interview in The Film Daily, Mr. Aller said:

"The Gos Kino controls production and the Sovo Kino distribution. Both are controlled by the Government and while conducted as private enterprises, finances come from Government banks. Three splendid studios are now functioning. One is at Leningrad, a second in Moscow and a third in Crimea, the Hollywood of Russia.

"It is now about two years since the real revival of the industry in Russia has been under way. Wonders have been accomplished in that time. There is no better theater construction to speak of, but a great deal of work is under way in reconstructing existing theaters. At the moment, there are few towns where a picture show is not operating."

Aller dissipated the idea that duped prints are being smuggled into Russia. He explained that all businesses are controlled by the Soviet and that, insofar as motion pictures are concerned, the Sov Kino is the body to be dealt with. For that reason, he maintains it is silly to assume that pirated prints can ever reach Russian theaters. He is convinced that there is a great deal of business awaiting American exporters, once they abandon the idea of the instability of Russian credits. Aller said he found in all instances that Russian paper was honored. One of the deterrents to American trade is the fact there is no competition.

The exporter must therefore accept the Russian figure or remain out of that market. A number of Governmental agents have been stationed in various important cities, such as Berlin, Paris and New York. In this country, I. J. Horgin, of the Amtorg Trading Corp., 165 Broadway is the representative. Aller's trip abroad was for the purpose of interesting the Russian Government in a number of laboratory patents. There is a great deal involving them under way at the moment.

"There are five stars over there whose popularity transcends all others," he continued. "Mary Pickford, and the Talmadge girls head the feminine stars and Doug Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin, the male stars. I attempted to see "The Thief of Bagdad" in three different theaters where they were day and date, but the attempt on my part proved unsuccessful.

"Studios are using 300,000 ft. of negative monthly. That in itself is sufficient to indicate how production is progressing. Some Bell and Howell printing machines are being brought in. Cameras are, in the main, De Brie. In the theaters, the Pathe (French) and the Ernemany (German) projectors pretty well cover the field.

Cody Signs Contract With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LEW CODY has signed a long term contract to play leading roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. The contract takes effect immediately. According to announcement of the agreement by the M.-G.-M. Company the actor will be featured in roles totally different from those in which he has been cast heretofore.

Among Lew Cody's more recent pictures are "So This Is Marriage," "Man and Maid," "The Sporting Venus," "A Slave of Fashion" and "Time The Comedian." His next pictures for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be "Exchange of Wives" in which he will appear with Eleanor Boardman and Renee Adoree, and "Dance Madness," in which he will appear with Aileen Pringle.

Motion Picture Campaign Committee for Support of James J. Walker

MOTION picture activity in behalf of Senator James J. Walker's fight for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of New York got under way with a rush this week. Headquarters of the motion picture division of the campaign were opened by Samuel I. Berman at 1600 Broadway and immediate steps were taken to mobilize the local industry to fight for the senator.

All branches of the business will be represented on the campaign committee now being formed. Exhibitors of all factions, producers and distributors, publicity and advertising men and trade paper representatives are to participate. Mr. Berman, secretary of the committee, announced that the help of everybody was welcomed and that all would be given opportunity to do their bit.

The motion picture division will be very active in the campaign. As Motion Picture News pointed out editorially last week, Senator Walker's candidacy found instant response in the amusement world, in which he is an outstanding favorite.

Further announcements of the committees and plans of the motion picture division of the Walker campaign will be made next week.

Perfect Plans For Convention

First National Sales Meeting in New York to Follow Elaborate Program

ELABORATE plans for the First National sales convention to be held in New York August 25th, 26th and 27th have been perfected by E. A. Eschmann and his associates in the sales department of the company. Mr. Eschmann, who will be in charge of the convention, has worked out a program of sales sessions and as well a schedule of entertainment.

The meetings will take place at the Hotel Roosevelt, where the sales policies for the handling of the big First National release schedule for next season will be outlined and various details of the campaign worked out.

The Southern delegation will arrive in New York in a body. Among those who will attend the convention are:

Christie is Made Head of West Coast A. of M. P. P.

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE was elected president of the West Coast Association of Motion Picture Producers at the annual election of officers held by the organization in Los Angeles last week.

Irving Thalberg was chosen first vice-president; M. C. Levee, second vice-president, and Fred W. Beetson, secretary and treasurer.

The association passed a resolution commending the work of Joseph M. Schenck, the retiring president.

Alec Francis Cast for Role in Tom Mix Vehicle

Alec Francis has been added to the cast of "The Yankee Senor," the next Tom Mix starring vehicle for Fox. The picture is now in production. It is an adaptation of Katharine Fullerton Gerould's story of the same title. In addition to Mr. Francis the supporting cast will include Olive Borden, Francis MacDonald, Kathryn Hill, Margaret Livingston, Tom Kennedy, Martha Mattox and Raymond Wells. Emmett Flynn is directing.

Six Players Added to Cast of "The Lone Eagle"

Six more well-known screen players have been added to the cast of "The Lone Eagle," Rudolph Valentino's first United Artist's production now being filmed at the United Studios, Hollywood, under the direction of Clarence Brown.

The newcomers to the cast are Spottiswoode Aitken, George Nichols, Barbara Tennant, Mario Carillo, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Otto Hoffman.

2,000 Seat Theatre for Hollywood, Calif.

A new motion picture theatre is to be erected on the east side of Alvarada Street, Hollywood, Calif.

In and Out of Town

JOE BRANDT of Columbia Productions has gone on a motor tour through New land and Canada. He took a fishing outfit and the golf sticks along.

COLONEL FRED LEVY, prominent First National franchise holder of Louisville, Kentucky, sailed Saturday, August 15th, on the Leviathan to enjoy a three weeks' pleasure trip abroad.

C. LALUMIERE, general manager of Film DeLuxe, Ltd., of Montreal, Canada, has returned to his home after conferring with Henry Ginsberg on matters relating to distribution.

COLONEL W. F. CLARKE, vice-president of Cranfield and Clarke, Inc., left last Sunday for Montreal, Canada, where he has gone in the interest of distribution.

THOMAS SPRY, manager of first National's Boston branch and A. J. Herman, manager of the Albany Exchange, were visitors at the Home Office last week.

HENRY GINSBERG expects to sail for London late in September to develop plans for extending the activities of his corporation in Europe.

LOUIS WEISS is on a sales trip to the Pittsburgh and Cleveland territories.

Thomas Meighan as "The Man Who Found Himself," his latest starring vehicle for Paramount.

New Trade Showing Idea by "U"

Parties Inaugurated for Benefit of Exhibitors in Small Towns Distant From Exchange Centers

BY means of an elaborate trade showing held in the Willarm Theatre, Creston, Ia., last week, Universal has inaugurated a new idea in the marketing of films in small cities which are distant from the exchange centers. The showing was attended by exhibitors within a radius of from 50 to 75 miles around Creston and proved sufficiently successful to make Universal officials determine upon a permanent plan for the continuation of the "theatre party" plan.

The idea was originated by Carl Laemmle as a means of giving small town exhibitors an even break in the matter of booking pictures, according to a statement from the Universal home office. It will enable every exhibitor to "look before he books," a slogan adopted by Laemmle long ago, but which has but seldom been possible to the house owner living out of range of the exchange centers. Following closely on the heels of Laemmle's Complete Service Plan, it is another step to help the small exhibitor select his pictures wisely and operate at a profit.

Carefully Arranged

The showing at Creston's was arranged with great care. The use of the Willard Theatre was obtained from Eller Metzger, its owner, for a morning and afternoon showing. W. C. Truog, Universal's assistant sales director in that part of the country, M. Gottlieb, Universal exchange manager at Des Moines, and Dave Bader, representative from the Universal Home office, cooperated to put the party over.

The Creston Chamber of Commerce, and other civic organizations in that town got behind the party, which rapidly developed into a sort of exhibitors' convention, drawing theatre owners from the entire countryside.

Upon arriving in Creston, the visiting exhibitors found that they were the guests of Carl Laemmle. Meals, entertainment, and other incidentals were "on" Universal, and even the transportation expenses of the visitors were refunded.

Hugh G. Davis, who has resigned as Comptroller of Arrow Pictures to become Assistant Treasurer of Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

Among the Universal pictures shown during the morning and afternoon pre-views were "Smouldering Fires," "I'll Show You the Town," "Oh, Doctor," "The Goose Woman," "Siege," "The Home Maker," "The Teaser," "The White Outlaw," and "The Circus Cyclone."

Headquarters for the party were in the local hotel and the Universal representatives made sure that all visitors, the wives and youngsters as well as the theatre men themselves, were enjoying the stay in Creston. The party ended with dancing.

Idea Well Liked

The new system of small town trade showings made a hit with the exhibitors, judging from reports. A letter of appreciation was written and signed by all of them, and sent to Carl Laemmle. It follows in part:

"We feel that out of this first party may come a movement which will revolutionize the buying problems of the exhibitors of the small towns. It is our belief that a picture previewed by the exhibitor is better sold to the theatre patrons, and you, Mr. Laemmle are to be commended for leading the way."

The next "Carl Laemmle Universal Theatre Party" will be held in the Temple Theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Ia. The Rotary and Exchange Clubs are cooperating with Universal and the officials of the Henry County (Ia.) Fair are also getting behind the party. The week following the party at Mt. Pleasant, a third showing will be held this time at Humboldt, Ia., and a fourth showing at New Hampton, Ia., early in September.

Harry Lefholtz, Universal manager in Omaha, is assisting in the initial showings under the new plan, and will stage several in his exchange territory later.

H. G. Davis Appointed to D. D. D. Executiveship

HUGH G. DAVIS, for the past five years associated with Arrow, has resigned to assume the position of assistant treasurer and chief accountant of the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., it was announced this week.

Mr. Davis has been in the film business since 1912 when he joined the old Consolidated Film and Supply Company Exchange in New Orleans. Later he was identified with the Syndicate Film Corporation, the distribution and production of Charles Frohman plays, and the Mutual company.

His latest appointment goes into effect on Labor Day.

The resignation of Mr. Davis from Arrow was announced with sincere regret by President W. E. Shallenberger. He congratulated the Davis Distributing Division on his acquisition, and stated he would announce Mr. Davis' successor at Arrow in a few days.

St. Louis Theatre Sued for Excluding Negroes

Suit to compel the New Palace Theatre at Franklin avenue, St. Louis, to admit negroes as well as whites has been filed in the St. Louis Circuit Court against the present operators of the house. The plaintiffs to the action are Hyman, Sarah and Sam Komm and the Franklin Amusement Company while the defendants are Edward P. Laurent and the Little Theater Corporation.

The petition sets forth that the plaintiffs on February 28, 1924, leased the theatre to Jesse S. Horwitz and that the lease contained a stipulation that the building was to be used only as a motion picture theatre for mixed audiences including colored and white persons, but provided further that it might be used exclusively for negroes. Later Horwitz subleased the house to Laurent.

The petition reveals that the Komms are interested in other theatres in that vicinity that cater to white persons and it is pointed out that the New Palace will draw patronage from such houses if it is operated in competition with them.

Moberly Ministers Fight Sunday Show Petition

A picture show war is on at Moberly, Mo. Two petitions are being circulated. One petitions the City Council requesting that the city ordinance be changed so as to allow Sunday movies, and the other asking the Council not to change the ordinance.

The trouble started when the manager of a local theatre started the petitions to open the shows, and announcing that he would obtain between 5,000 and 10,000 signatures of voters.

Then the ministers of the city held a meeting and petitions were passed through the congregations requesting the Council to refrain from changing the city ordinance. Both petitions will be presented in the Council at an early meeting.

Fight for Sunday Shows on in Two Missouri Towns

Exhibitors of two Missouri towns are waging educational campaigns to bring back Sunday shows in their respective communities. But Ministers, and reformers in both towns are fighting the move.

J. W. Cotter, of Fourth Street Theatre Moberly, is conducting the fight in that town while Rex Barret, of the Cozy Theatre, in Columbia, Mo., is campaigning there. It is probable that elections will be held in both towns as an effort will be made to secure city ordinances permitting Sunday shows.

"Lorraine of the Lions" is among the late Universal productions. These scenes were taken from the picture.

Al Green Signed to Direct "Spanish Sunlight"

Al Green has been engaged to direct Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone in the First National production of "Spanish Sunlight," which will be produced on the west coast. Green's most recent production for First National was "The Talker," the Sam Rork production based on the Marion Fairfax stage play of that title.

Laidlow to Play Character Role in Curwood Story

Roy Laidlow will play the role of O'Flaherty in "When the Door Opened," the Fox production of James Oliver Curwood's story instead of J. Farrell MacDonald, originally assigned the role. The switch was made because another part suitable to his ability and of greater importance turned up in another picture for MacDonald.

Abrams District Manager for Tiffany and Truart

JERRY ABRAMS, Chicago branch manager for Renown Picture for several years, has been appointed District Manager for Tiffany and Truart Production by M. H. Hoffman, general manager of those companies. The territory over which Abrams will preside includes Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. His headquarters will be in Chicago.

A. H. McLaughlin, assistant to Abrams at the Renown offices in Chicago, has been appointed to manage that office for the Renown company.

Metro-Goldwyn Quarterly Dividend Declared

THE Board of Directors of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ on the Preferred Stock of the company, payable September 15th, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business on August 31st, 1925.

Lou Payne in Cast of "The "Last Edition"

Lou Payne, actor and former theatrical manager whose wife is Mrs. Leslie Carter, has been added to the cast of Emory Johnson's "The Last Edition," now in production at the F. B. O. studios. Mr. Payne will be seen in the role of a newspaper publisher.

Howson Heads Warner Bros. Literary Department

Albert Sydney Howson, well known stage actor, has been appointed head of Warner Bros. literary department to succeed Mrs. Pearl Keating, resigned. Mr. Howson will be located at the New York office of the company.

Three New Pictures Started at Fox Studios

Three important Fox productions for the coming season's schedule have been started at the studios in Los Angeles. These are "The Yankee Senor," starring Tom Mix, and two short subject films "Transients in Arcadia," the second of the O. Henry series, and "All Aboard," one of the "Helen and Warren" series of comedies.

To Release Two-Reeler Free to Customers

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by the International Newsreel Corporation, of the forthcoming gratis release of a remarkable two-reel novelty picture, titled "Life's Greatest Thrills," to all regular patrons of the International Newsreel. The bookings will be arranged through the Universal Exchanges.

The production, which is made up of the greatest thrill shots which have occurred in the events reel during the past decade, was launched last week in Chicago where it was supplied to all International first-run accounts and released simultaneously with an extensive publicity and advertising campaign. More than 175 theatres in the Illinois city used the film during the week.

The purposes of "Life's Greatest Thrills" are explained by Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of the International Newsreel Corporation.

"Practically no attempt has ever been made to exploit the newsreel," he declared, "and despite this fact, it has won an enviable position on the motion picture program, due to its entertainment merit.

"'Life's Greatest Thrills' is an attempt to show both the public and the exhibitor what the International Newsreel is and what it means as an entertainment factor. A small amount of footage in the first reel is devoted to showing how the reel is gathered and the enormous facilities at its disposal; but seventy-five per cent of the picture is made up of the great 'thrills' that have appeared exclusively in the International Newsreel for the past twelve years."

Seven Chadwick Pictures Completed for 1925-26

SEVEN of the productions which will be offered on the independent market by Chadwick Pictures Corporation during the 1925-26 season have been completed, according to an announcement this week by I. E. Chadwick, head of the organization. The company now has one picture in production and two more will be started soon at the west coast studios.

The completed productions include: "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Perfect Clown," both Larry Semon starring vehicles; "The Unchastened Woman," in which Theda Bara will return to the screen; "Some Pun'kins" and "Sweet Adeline," the Charles Ray starring features; and George Walsh has completed "American Pluck" and "The Prince of Broadway." Walsh is now making "Blue Blood," which will be the third of a series of six features in which he will be starred by Chadwick.

Fill Supporting Cast for "The Unguarded Hour"

First National has completed the cast which will be seen in support of Milton Sills and Doris Keyon in "The Unguarded Hour," the new Sills starring vehicle now in production in New York. Those who will appear prominently in the picture are Claude King, Jed Prouty, Cornelius Keefe, Lorna Duveen, Dolores Cassinelli, and Vivian Ogden. Lambert Hillyer is directing the work.

A trio of scenes from "Heads Up," an F. B. O. feature starring Lefty Flynn.

Highlights from the Paramount production, "Wild Horse Mesa."

Macfadden Campaign for "False Pride" Started

THE exploitation campaign for "False Pride," the second of a series of Bernarr Macfadden True Story productions for Astor Distributing Corporation release, which is now being filmed in New York, is about to be launched. The story of the film will be published as a serial in four issues of "True Romances," one of the most widely circulated of the Macfadden publications. The company estimates that the title and details of the picture will be brought before the attenion of 16,400,000 readers.

"El Pasado" Being Filmed by Sanford Productions

A screen adaptation of the stage play "El Pasado" is being produced by Sanford Productions at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood under the direction of Wilfred Lucas. Important roles in the play are being acted by Bryant Washburn, Gladys Brockwell, Herbert Rawlinson, Liga de Golconda, Gaston Glass, Gene Crosby, Wilfred Lucas, Hector Sarno, Marshall Ruth and Barbara Tennant. The unit will leave for Mexico City next week to film exteriors in the locations called for by the story.

Templar Saxe in Cast of "The Primrose Path"

Templar Saxe has been added to the cast of "The Primrose Path," an Arthur F. Beck production which will be released by Arrow Pictures Corporation. Before entering picture work, in which he has become well known, Saxe was a leading man on the stage. He appeared with Lillian Russell in "The American Beauty," "Her Wedding Day," and "La Belle Helene."

"Three Faces East" to Be Filmed by De Mille

Cecil B. De Mille has acquired the screen rights to "Three Faces East," the Anthony Paul Kelly play, from A. H. Sebastian, general manager of Belasco Productions. The work will be adapted by C. Gardner Sullivan. Producers Distributing Corporation, who will distribute the feature, announce that the transfer will not affect the release.

Sears Manager of Cleveland Branch of First National

E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution of First National Pictures, has announced the appointment of Gradwell L. Sears as manager of that company's Cleveland branch. Mr. Sears has been with First National for some time as a city sales manager and circuith sales manager in Chicago.

Bess Meredyth to Adapt "Don Juan" for Warners

WARNER BROS. announce that Bess Meredyth has been chosen to make the screen adaptation of "Don Juan," in which they will present John Barrymore in the title role. Miss Meredyth, who has to her credit many important screen adaptations, among them "Ben Hur" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, also prepared for the screen "The Sea Beast," in which Mr. Barrymore is now playing for the Warner organization.

The company officials state that "Don Juan" will be made on an elaborate scale and will be one of the supreme efforts of the organization this year. The selection of Miss Meredyth for the important work of adapting the Byron poem is regarded as a high compliment to her abilities as a scenarist.

Gala Premiere For "Gold Rush"

Chaplin's New Production Cheered by Audience at a Midnight Showing in New York

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "The Gold Rush" was "cheered to the echo" by a capacity audience at the special midnight performance at the Strand, New York City, on August 16th, when the comedian's latest work for United Artists release was given its premiere on Broadway.

The event, advertised as a gala midnight performance, with orchestra seats selling at $3.30, attracted a notable gathering of theatrical and screen celebrities, prominent officials and business men, and a large quota of the socially elect of Manhattan.

Chaplin attended the performance, his entrance being the signal for loud and prolonged applause, which broke out again when the final fadeout on "The Gold Rush" flickered from the screen. The comedian was forced to leave his seat in an orchestra chair and appear on the stage. In a brief speech he thanked the gathering for the approval they had given his new effort.

It was just one minute after midnight when Carl Edouarde, leader of the Mark Strand orchestra, raised his baton for the first note that started the projection. First there came an overture—Dvorak's "Carneval"—and then Joseph Plunkett's special prologue to "The Gold Rush"—"The Monte Carlo Dance Hall." Then the picture.

At five minutes after two the showing was at an end.

After the performance Mr. Plunkett invited Mr. Chaplin and a number of friends to a reception to the star that had been arranged to take place in the Strand theatre studio. There were some 300 attended this, and it was here that Mr. Chaplin was presented with a gold "mother record" of the phonograph reproduction of his own composition, and in which he plays the violin —"With You, Dear, in Bombay." This presentation was made by a representative of the phonograph company.

Paramount Production Speeded

Period of Greatest Activity Starts at Long Island Plant—9 Units at Work

A PERIOD of the greatest production activity in the history of the plant is to be started at the Paramount Studios in Long Island. By September 1st there will be nine productions in work at the big studios there, with both the upper and lower stages occupied with sets and several large settings on the lot at the rear of the building in addition to a large one now in construction on a ball park near Astoria.

Two pictures are now under way at the Long Island plant. These are "A Kiss for Cinderella," which Herbert Brenon is producing from the Barrie play with Betty Bronson in the leading role, and D. W. Griffith's "That Royle Girl," in which Carol Dempster, Harrison Ford, James Kirkwood and W. C. Fields are featured.

On August 17 two productions will start. These are Gloria Swanson's "Stage Struck," an Allan Dwan production of Frank R. Adams' story which has been adapted by Forrest Halsey; and Richard Dix in "Womanhandled," an Arthur Stringer story adapted by Luther Reed. Gregory LaCava will make his bow as a director in this picture. He supervised the stunts in Dix's "The Shock Punch" and "The Lucky Devil."

On August 24 Adolphe Menjou will start in "The King on Main Street," from Ditrichstein's stage success. This will be directed by Monta Bell. On the same date Frank Tuttle will begin "The American Venus."

On September 1 Florenz Ziegfeld's first picture production will get underway. Edgar Selwyn is writing the story. It is to be called "Glorifying the American Girl." "Follies" beauties will play an important part. Also on September 1 Gilda Gray will begin work in "Aloma of the South Seas," from the Broadway stage success.

Thomas Meighan and the company of players now in Ireland making scenes for a picture adapted from "The Imperfect Imposter" are due to start back on August 25 and resume work on the interiors at the Long Island studio.

As soon as Mr. Brenon finishes "A Kiss for Cinderella" he is to start work on "The Song and Dance Man," George M. Cohan's stage success.

Warners Start New Productions

Four Units Begin and Six More Are Preparing—Mary Astor to Support Barrymore

FOUR production units are now at work at the Warner Bros. studios in Hollywood and six more are making ready to begin filming features which will be offered on this season's program. The Warner schedule of forty pictures for the year is now thirty per cent completed. The company has already started equipping the Vitagraph studio for increased production, $50,000 already having been expended in the installation of equipment for faster production there.

The pictures now in work are "The Sea Beast," "Compromise," "Hogan's Alley" and "The Clash of the Wolves."

New casting assignments include the selection of several players for pictures to be put into production soon. Mary Astor has been chosen for the leading feminine role opposite John Barrymore in "Don Juan," his picture to follow "The Sea Beast." Miss Astor played with Barrymore in "Beau Brummel."

Additions to the cast of "Hogan's Alley" are Mary Carr, James J. Jeffries, Ad Wolgast, and Tommy Ryan. The three leading comedians will be Willard Louis, Max Davidson and Ben Turpin.

Edward Martindel has been signed for the role of the Commodore in "Compromise," and this actor has also been selected for a prominent part in "Lady Windemere's Fan," an adaptation of the play to be produced by Ernst Lubitsch.

It has also been announced that Syd Chaplin's next picture for Warners will be "Nightie Night Nurse," from the story by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch.

Fox Increases Exhibitor Aids

Accessories and Advertising Material Enlarged for New Season's Productions

THE publicity and advertising departments of Fox Film are engaged in preparing material for the pictures which the company will offer this season, when, it is announced, a more elaborate exhibitor service than the company has ever attempted in the past, will be issued in connection with the features and short subjects.

Particular effort is being directed to the designing of effective accessories, while press books will be more comprehensive. In past years the press books have been written and prepared at the New York office, but under a new system all this matter is written and made-up by a staff of special writers at the company's West Coast Studios.

Among the artists who will design posters for the new Fox pictures is Luis Usabal, noted Spanish painter. The Fox exploitation department will introduce a new lobby photo made especially for first-run houses. These are to be made in two different styles, one consisting of a set of four 14 by 17 enlargements made from retouched negatives and printed on high grade photographic paper, and the other a set of eight negatives, mounted on 11 by 14 stock with decorative backs. These are being prepared in addition to the regular sets of hand colored 11 by 14's and 22 by 28's. A greater number of still photographs will be issued in connection with Fox features this year. The material for the short subjects will include complete press books on the two reel series, with synopses, cuts and mats, publicity stories, reviews and exploitation suggestions.

Announce Cast for "U" "Two Blocks Away"

Charles Murray and George Siuney are to be co-featured in the cast selected for the Universal-Jewel release, "Two Blocks Away,' a comedy of Irish and Jewish family life. The picture goes into production uder the joint supervision of Universal and E. M. Asher of Faultless Pictures Corporation.

P-D-C Production Increased

12 Pictures in Work at 4 Studios; New Stage for Hollywood Plant

ANNOUNCING the completion of five of the 1925-26 productions of the company and that twelve features are now being filmed at four studios of contributing producers, Producers Distributing Corporation states that production for this season's program has been increased 100 per cent.

The present facilities of the Hollywood studio where Hunt Stromberg, George Melford, Frances Marion, A. H. Sebastian and Renaud Hoffman are working on films for the P. D. C schedule, have been taxed to capacity and plans for the immediate future necessitate the building of a huge new stage, the dimensions of which will be 125 feet by 450 feet. Plans for the new stage have been approved by William Sistrom, general manager of the Hollywood studios, and work will be started immediately. The cost of building and equipping the stage will be approximately $125,000.

The plans call for many novel features, including a semi-domed ceiling to permit long shots giving effective outdoor atmosphere; a cinematographer's experimental room; overhead wiring; and a system of tracks suspended from the roof of the stage to support small electric cranes. The building will be constructed of concrete and steel.

At the Cecil B. De Mille studio in Culver City there are five units making features The pictures are "The Road to Yesterday," which Mr. De Mille is personally directing; "The Wedding Song," a Leatrice Joy starring vehicle; "Braveheart," starring Rod La Rocque; "Eva's Leaves," being directed by Paul Sloane; and "Three Faces East," an adaptation of Anthony Paul Kelly's stage success.

Five other productions for Producers Distributing are being filmed at the Hollywood Studios. These are "The People vs. Nancy Preston," "Simon the Jester," "The Man From Red Gulch," "Fifth Avenue" and "The Last Frontier." At the Christie studios "Madame Lucy," with Julian Eltings featured, is being made and Marshall Neilan is preparing to start the cameras on his first feature for this company at the producer's studios in Glendale.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

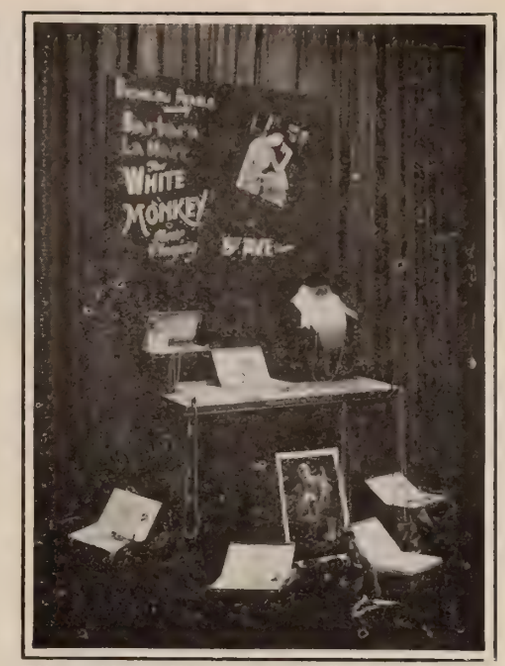
Cartwright's Campaign on "Lost—A Wife" Run

A week prior to opening of "Lost A Wife" at the Rialto, Chattanooga, Manager J. L. Cartwright launched a teaser campaign in the newspapers, the ads attracting a world of attention.

Beautiful window displays played an important role in the campaign. One with a well-known department store featured colorful silks with two Japanese parasols. Stills and photos from the picture, with a cutout of Adolph Menjou and Greta Nissen, were artistically arranged about the display. Another department store had an attractive window display of shoes with cutout and stills from the photoplay and a large framed card announcing the title, cast, theatre and play dates. Both stores being located in the heart of the business section, created a lot of favorable comment.



An attractive lobby display was arranged, composed of a six sheet cutout of the two stars and two specially worded one sheets. Running across back of lobby was a huge banner announcing the title, cast and producers. A good selling lobby was the result.

In addition to the usual newspaper and bill posting, a huge street banner worded "Lost A Wife-She can be found at the Rialto Mon. Tues. Wed." was placed in front of the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital. This building is located in a section of town where traffic is very heavy and the banner forced itself upon everyone's attention.

"Smouldering Fires" Aided by Doorknob Hanger

"The Fire Chief Says, Look Out For 'Smouldering Fires.' See it at the Schade Wed.-Thurs."

This message greeted the townspeople of Sandusky, Ohio, when they opened their front doors on a recent morning to bring in the morning paper. It was in the shape of a door-knob hanger printed on both sides in red and got across its message on the feature in no uncertain style.

When "The White Monkey" (First Nat'l) played the Fifth Avenue theatre in Nashville, this window tie-up was arranged for.

"Zander" Theatre Party is Given for Orphans

A theatre party for orphans of the town, sponsored by the Sharon (Pa.) News Telegraph, and held at the instigation of Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, recently achieved front page space in connection with the showing of "Zander the Great," at the local Columbia theatre. Pyle exploited the picture further by running a Marion Davies Title Writing contest which also achieved front page space.

The first prize was six free tickets to see any attraction at the Columbia, the second prize four tickets, the third prize two tickets and the next fifteen best received one ticket each. A cross word puzzle contest helped popularize the showing also, as did a slide and a triler. The town was well posted in addition.

Strong Civic Angle Given "Air Mail" Campaign

The campaign by G. H. Poster, manager of the Marion theatre, Marion, Ohio, and William H. Wright, Paramount exploiteer for "The Air Mail" is a corking good example of what can be accomplished by tying in with a civic campaign.

The Marion Star, with the local Kiwanis Club, was sponsoring the visit to Marion of Lieut. Jack Harding, one of the world flight aviators, who was to give a lecture illustrated with moving pictures at the auditorium of the paper's new building. Stories began running daily about a month before his arrival.

About three weeks before the day set for his talk, the Star announced a model plane building contest for boys. Wright happened to see the story and wrote the exhibitor suggesting that he tie it up with "The Air Mail," which he was to play the week after the visit. He suggested free tickets for every boy who entered and a year's pass for the winner and a six months' pass for second prize, these to be in addition to the prizes the Star already had announced. In return for this the exhibitor was to be allowed to place ad sales material on the show in the final exhibit of the planes. When "The Air Mail" played the town, the planes were to be carried around town as a ballyhoo by their makers.

All this went through exactly as he suggested, and although there were not over twenty-five entrants in the contest, the publicity gained from the tie-up was well worth while.

The appearance of the aviator assumed civic proportions before it was over, with the paper and the Kiwanis plugging it hard, and city officials and the mayor designating the day of their arrival "World Flight Day." Moreover, the speaker proved distant kinship to the late Warren Harding, who is venerated there with something of a feeling akin to that accorded a saint, and that all helped the interest in aviation and "The Air Mail."

A night photo of the attractive illuminated front for "The Ten Commandments" (Paramount) arranged by P. R. Touney at his Majestic theatre, Fort Dodge, Iowa. The space has been well utilized and the lighting makes it as effective by night as by day.

Window Displays Feature "Proud Flesh" Drive

Six elaborate window displays were a feature of a campaign recently put over on "Pround Flesh" at the Cameraphone theatre in East Liberty, Pa. These displays featured clothing, hardware, musical instruments, shoes, ladies garments and flowers.

Free tickets were awarded by the town's leading shoe store to all ladies purchasing shoes during the showing, while similar awards were offered by the best florist of the city to all brides purchasing their wedding flowers there during the week.

"Chickie" Given Valuable Tie-up in Cleveland

M. A. Malaney, manager of publicity for Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., got much valuable newspaper publicity for the showing of "Chickie" at the Stillman theatre, through a tie-up with the Cleveland Press which had formerly published "Chickie" serially and is now serializing" The Sequel to Chickie."

Malaney arranged for the Cleveland Press to print the opinions of ten Cleveland flappers of Chickie, the heroine of the picture "Chickie" which was screened at a private showing in the Stillman theatre in advance of its engagement there. The question asked was "Does Chickie come up to your idea of modern girl?" Six of the ten answered yes, and four, no. Their replies and their reasons for the same were published on the front page of the Cleveland Press in its issue of Saturday, June 3rd, under a three column top head. Portraits of three of the girls answering the question were printed with the story.

On the back page, where "The Sequel to Chickie" is running, was a box headed "'Chickie' in Movies Here." The box called attention to the serialization of "Chickie" and its sequel in the Cleveland Press and to the fact that the motion picture made from "Chickie' was starting at the Stillman theatre the following day. The instalment of "The Sequel to 'Chickie'" published that day contained a double-column still from the picture, "Chickie." On an inner page of the same issue was a three column portrait of Dorothy Mackaill with the nnouncement of the showing of the film at the Stillman. A two inch streamer ad clear across the page was used in the same issue.

Window Teaser an Unexpected "Night Club" Boost

Without trying to get the professional interest of the local police authorities, Ed. Corcoran, Paramount exploiteer, drew the attention of the entire city of Appleton, Wis., to "The Night Club." Together with the manager of Fischer's theatre he hired the window in an empty store and announced with a big sign that it would open as a "Night Club." As soon as the sign had been up a few hours a policeman was posted in front of the store to prevent any furniture from being moved in. Several ministers spoke about Night Clubs, and the whole town was agitated. This was an unexpected turn of affairs, and Corcoran capitalized on it by leaving the sign up for several days before posting a new one which read:

"There is no prohibition against laughter."

"Owing to the enormous crowds who wish to see 'The Night Club' with Raymond Griffith, King of Comedians, the show will open at Fischer's theatre."

This sign was posted several days before opening. On the day the picture opened, practically the same copy was used in a four column ad about six inches deep which was illustrated with press-sheet cuts. The copy was adapted from the press-sheet.

Star Identification Stunt Exploits "Zander" Run

An exceptional Movie Star Identity contest recently put over a showing of "Zander the Great," at the Metropolitan theatre in Morgantown, W. Va. In this instance Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, ran a scene cut from the picture with several chrcters on it. and offered free tickets as prizes for subscribers of the Morgantown Post was correctly guessed the names of the players.

An energetic press campaign, lavish posting of sheets of various sizes, a special lobby display and the distribution of 3,500 herolds completed this campaign.

Pathe Filming "Green Archer"

New Serial Picture Started at the Long Island Studio, Chester Bennet Directing

A NEW serial production based on Edgar Wallace's novel "The Green Archer" has been started for the Pathe organization at the Long Island Studio, Astoria, L. I., under the direction of Chester Bennet. Allene Ray and Walter Miller will be starred at the head of a cast which includes Burr McIntosh, Stephen Grattan, Frank Lackteen and Earl B. Powell, a noted archery expert. The picture will be filmed in ten episodes of two reels each.

Pathe anounces that the new serial is being made on a pretentious scale, the story calling for a large number of massive interior settings as well as a great many picturesque locations. "The Green Archer" is scheduled to follow "Wild West" on Pathe's serial program.

The stars of the picture play the leading roles in "Play Ball," the current Pathe episode picture, and won a large following among the serial fans in previous productions offered by this company. Chester Bennet, selected to direct the film made his debut as a serial director with "Play Ball," a work which established his reputation in this field.

The initial exterior scenes are being made at Storm King Mountain and at the Sound View Golf and Country Club, where the new game of Archery-Golf will be played before the camera.

"The Green Archer," which has had a successful career as a novel, was adapted by a specialist who has written the scripts for several successful Pathe serials.

The cast assembled to enact the characters of the story is regarded by Pathe officials as the strongest in popular names and screen ability ever brought together in a serial. Several of the players who will support Miss Ray and Mr. Miller have appeared prominently in features and serials both. Frank Lackteen, polite villain of many serials, again joins the Pathe ranks, and Wally Oettel, who scored as the comedy lead in "Play Ball" will continue his work along these lines in the new play. Burr McIntosh and Stephen Grattan are veterans of stage and screen with many notable performances to their credit.

To insure the accuracy of the archery action in the new film Earl B. Powell has been engaged. He is known as an expert in the use of the bow and arrow and also as an instructor in the sport, having served in that capacity for Douglas Fairbanks during the filming of "Robin Hood," and supervised the bowman in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments."

Marian Andre a Member of Christie Stock Company

Marian Andre, a blonde beauty who deserted the stage for the screen recently, has been added to the stock company of the Christie Comedy organization. Miss Andre visited Los Angeles with "The Passing Show," and there left the footlights for the studio. She was born in St. Petersburg, of Russian-French parentage. Her debut with Christie will be in a Bobby Vernon comedy now being filmed for Educational release.

Sennett Films Head Pathe Program for August 30

THE Pathe short subject program for the week of August 30th is headed by two Mack Sennett comedies, the titles of which are "Cold Turkey," in which Alice Day and Raymond McKee have the leads, and "Butter Fingers," with Billy Bevan, Ruth Taylor, Andy Clyde, Kewpie Morgan and Madeline Hurlock in the cast. Also scheduled for release on the August 30th list are the seventh episode of "Play Ball," current Pathe serial, "Topics of the Day," an "Aesop's Film Fables" reel, Pathe Review No. 35, and the two issues of Pathe News.

"Cold Turkey" concerns the efforts of a bride to entertain guests who come to celebrate the eighth week of her life of married bliss. Those who appear in supporting roles at Pat Harmon, Sam Lufkin, William McCall and Sunshine Hart. In "Butter Fingers" Billy Bevan appears as the crack pitcher in a fast-moving burlesque of big league baseball.

"Love Sick," one of the newest of the Century-Universal Sweet Sixteen series.

Edith Roberts Leading Lady in "Heir-Loons"

Edith Roberts, who plays the leading feminine role in "Heir-Loons," the feature comedy which Spitzer-Jones is producing for Pathe release, will make her fourth appearance opposite Wallace MacDonald on the screen in that picture, for MacDonald has the heroic part in "Heir-Loons." The first association of these two popular players in pictures was in "Thy Name is Woman."

Others who will be seen in "Heir-Loons" are Ralph Lewis, Stuart Holmes, Snitz Edwards, Sam de Grasse, Theodore Lorch, Martha Mattox, Cecille Evans, Emily Gerdes, Billy Eugene, Frank Campeau, Max Asher and Harry McCoy.

Universal Begins New Series of "Sweet-Sixteen" Films

A new series of "Sweet Sixteen" Comedies has gone into production at Universal City under the direction of Zion Myers. They will feature Arthur Lake and Eddie Clayton. Scott Darling, Universal's new comedy supervisor will work with Myers on the series.

Davis Completes First of Peggy O'Day Series

Davis Distributing Corporation announces the compleiton of "Peggy of the Secret Service," the first of the Peggy O'Day series. It is an adaptation of an original story by Finis Fox and was made under his supervision.

A trio of scenes from "Married Neighbors," a two-reel Century Comedy released by Universal.

"A Business Engagement" is a William Fox presentation based on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren." These scenes are from the production.

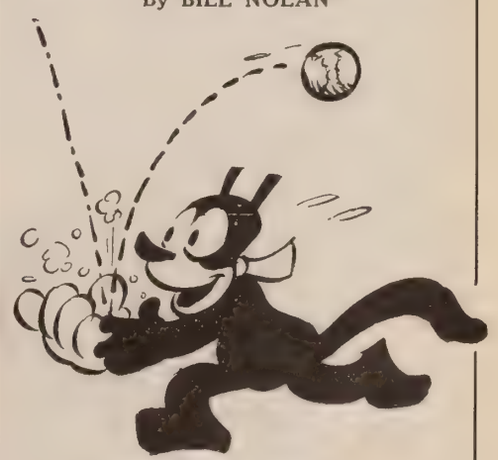
7 Educational Units Working

New Plant in Los Angeles the Scene of Great Activity in Comedy Making

THE Educational Studio in Los Angeles now houses seven comedy units, producing pictures under the supervision of Jack White for the enlarged schedule of short subjects which Educational will offer this year.

The plant has been greatly enlarged since it was taken over several months ago by Educational and the added facilities for photoplay production are now being utilized to their full capacity by the Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Mermaid, Juvenile and other units at work there.

Lloyd Hamilton has started work on his first production under the direction of William Goodrich.



Lige Conley's Mermaid Company, under the direction of Norman Taurog, has also taken advantage of the new equipment and is working in a set which is a replica of one of the large roller skating rinks of Los Angeles. With him again this year is Estelle Bradley, his leading lady of last year. Stanley Blystone and Babe London are also in the cast.

Stephen Roberts is directing Al St. John in a Mermaid Comedy with Virginia Vance as his leading lady. Lupino Lane is starting on his second picture of the series and will shortly go to a desert location where the exterior scenes of an African sequence will be filmed. Jess Robbins is directing.

The Juvenile Company is hard at work under the direction of Arvid Gillstrom. The cast is composed of youngsters picked from the applications which followed an advertising campaign for children, carried through the want ad columns of the daily newspapers and by radio broadcasting.

Two Cameo Comedy companies are also hard at work producing the first of a series of twenty-four single-reel comedies. Cliff Bowes is heading the company under the direction of Charles Lamont, while Phil Dunham, Jimmy Hertz and Helen Marlowe are in the company under the direction of Jules White.

Wanda Wiley Comedy to Be Released This Week

"Won By Law," a two-reel Century Comedy starring Wanda Wiley, will be released this week by Universal as the first of the new season's product from the Century studios.

The story was written and directed by Edward I. Luddy. Bob Reeves, Lillian Worth and Frank Whitson support Miss Wiley, who appears as a rich girl whose boredom with life generally is relieved by some exciting adventures in which she is pursued by a cave-man, whom she learns to love.

Starts Filming New Rayart Serial on Coast

Robert Dillon, author and director of "The Flame Fighter," a forthcoming Rayart serial in ten episodes, has started production on the picture with Herbert Rawlinson, Brenda Lane, "Crooked Nose" Murphy, and Jerome Legasse in the principal roles. The company is working at the California studios. It is being produced by Beacon Films Corporation, which is headed by George Blaisdell and the director.

Gillen to Play Opposite Elaine Hammerstein

By arrangement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Harry Cohn, production manager of Columbia Pictures, has acquired the services of Ernest Gillen as leading man opposite Elaine Hammerstein in "Ladies of Leisure," her new Columbia vehicle being made under the direction of Tom Buckingham.

Titles Selected for the Holland Flower Films

Cranfield & Clarke have announced the titles for the first three of the Holland films, a series of one and two-reel subjects. "Tulip Land," in two-reels, will be the first; "Let's Go Fishing," one-reel, is the second; and "A Pair of Wooden Shoes," a single reeler, is the title of the third in the series.

Trio of scenes from "Slick Articles" a Century comedy released through Universal.

New Fox Short Films Launched

1925-26 Program of "Featurettes" Opened With Release of New "Van Bibber" Story

THE ambitious short subject program announced by Fox for this season has been launched, the opening being inaugurated with the release of a new "Van Bibber" play and the initial production in the "Helen and Warren" series based on the Mabel Herbert Urner newspaper feature stories.

The first of the new "Van Bibber" plays is titled "The Big Game Hunter." It was directed by Robert Kerr with Earle Foxe in the name role which he created on the screen last season in the Richard Harding Davis tales. Florence Gilbert is seen as the leading lady, and other important roles fall to Freeman Wood, Frank Beal and Lynn Cowan. The release date of "The Big Game Hunter" is August 16.

"A Business Engagement" is the title of the first of the "Helen and Warren" series. It is acted by Hallam Cooley as Warren, Kathryn Perry as Helen and Diana Miller, Bill Davidson, Hank Mann, Fred Kelsey and Babe Lawrence in other prominent roles. The story is concerned with the difficulties encountered by a newly-married pair who have reached the stage of "mutual misunderstanding" of certain unimportant impulses and actions. The trouble starts when Warren forgets that it is Helen's birthday and when the latter imagines a lot of things when she sees him seated in a hotel restaurant with another woman, who is really the companion of his business partner.

The Fox Varieties subject for the opening season was "West Wind," a novel conception of dramatizing the elements. It is the first of a series of the film's adventures in all parts of the globe in search of romance and scientific exploitation for the entertainment of the motion picture public. These "Arabian Nights of the Screen" are said to have met with such favor from exhibitors that the Fox Company was compelled to release many of them before the schedule date to satisfy the demand. August 23rd is the release date of "The West Wind."

Red Seal Enlarges Quarters

Announce Ninety-Five Subjects for 1925-26 Coincident With Removal to 729 Seventh Ave.

RED Seal Pictures Corporation announces, coincident with the list of ninety-five subjects for 1925-26, the removal of their headquarters and New York exchange to 729 Seventh avenue. The removal to the new offices has been made necessary ,according to Edwin Miles Fadman, president of the company, by the fact that the offices at 1600 Broadway could no longer accommodate the additional sales and publicity staff which he has been compelled to employ.

Of the ninety-five subjects, only one, "Evolution," is a feature, being five reels in length. This film, a Kineto-Urban Production, edited by Max Fleischer, and made under the scientific supervision of Edward J. Foyles of the American Museum of Natural History, has already been put on the screen at the Rialto, Rivoli and Loew houses in New York, in Frank Newman's Rialto, Los Angeles, and other important towns where it was pre-released.

The other subjects, all featurettes, include thirteen "Out-of-the-Inkwell" Cartoon comedies with Ko-Ko, the famous clown created by Max Fleischer; thirteen "Marvels of Motion," in which Fleischer uses the famous "Novagraph" process to suspend animation and trace the movement of the figures on the screen; thirteen other creations of Fleischer, "Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes," in which the clown leads the audience to sing old favorites, are also on the program. An 18-piece orchestration goes with each of the "Car-Tunes."

The balance of the program thus far announced includes thirteen "Gems of the Screen," twenty-six "Animated Hair Cartoons," a series drawn by Marcus, the famous cartoonist of the New York Times; "Thru Three Reigns," a two-reel historic film covering the reigns of Queen Victoria, King Edward and King George, in which special scenes are held on the screen by the Novagraph process; "Flirting with Death," a two-reel ice-thriller laid 15,000 ft. high in the Swiss mountains; and "The Silvery Art," a two-reel skiing special.

"Help! Police!" First of Billy West Series

"Help! Police!" is the title selected for the first of a series of four five-reel feature comedies in which Billy West will be starred on the Rayart Program. The pictures will be produced by West Brothers Productions under the direction of Grover Jones. Those who will appear with the comedian in the first picture are Virginia Pearson, Lionel Belmore, Kathleen Myers and others.

The West company will also produce a series of two-reel comedies starring Gloria Joy.

"Cap," Clever Canine, to Be Featured by Sennett

"Cap," grandson of "Teddy" the famous dog actor seen in Sennett's comedies of several years ago, is following in his granddad's footsteps and will have a career on the screen. The producer has signed "Cap" to appear in comedies he will make for Pathe, his first assignment being to an important part in the series of domestic comedies which Sennett is producing with Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt in the leading parts.

"Sweet Marie"
(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS Fox Imperial Comedy has much in in its favor. In consequence of the presence in the cast of the winsome Judy King, the capable screen comedian Sid Smith, and several highly amusing incidents to fill out a good slapstick comedy plot, the picture is one that may be highly recommended for general exhibition. It will bring to the screen of your theatre the movement, dash and entertainment that is looked for by the bulk of the screen patrons when they devote their hour or so to the relaxations and pleasures of cinema amusement.

The picture is concerned with an "Evangeline" plot, centering about a wealthy chap who has been looking for "Sweet Marie," whom he met and loved while a soldier in France, ever since he came back to the U. S. on an army transport. He knows Marie is in this country and to him every day is just another twenty-fours of tireless search for his Marie. There is a villain, the former top sergeant who now runs a cabaret, Fate finally leads the hero to the cabaret, where he sees Marie as the premiere danseuse. The jealous proprietor sets upon the hero and fights of the slam bang sort, with several good comedy gags interpolated, come thick and fast. There is a flash-back to some equally comic incidents on the battlefield, where the hero and the villain and "Pal," the faithful dog, fought and bled.

It will be decidedly to the advantage of this type of short comedy if the Fox studio solons keep Judy King in them. She is comely and trim and there is a spirit and dash about her playing which makes one think of the Mabel Normand we knew in the old Keystone days.

The picture was directed very ably by Benny Stoloff. It has pace and it has some cleverness—as much as that is permitted in a comedy of this type. These are attributes not to be taken for granted in two-reelers of the slapstick variety, for they are not always present. The photography and staging of the work is of a high standard.

The Cast

Sweet Marie.....Judy King
The Hero.....Sid Smith

A Fox Imperial Comedy directed by Benny Stoloff

The Story.—An ex-doughboy, now living in the luxury his wealth permits, devotes his life to a search for "Sweet Marie," a French girl he has loved since meeting her while at war. Sure that she is in this country now, our hero sets out each day to comb the city in the hope of finding her. Fate takes a hand and leads him into a cabaret where Marie dances and which is owned by the hero's former top sergeant. The latter is in love with Marie and wants to keep her for himself. A fight ensues in which the hero, with the aid of his dog Pal, subdues the big brute and makes off with the charming Marie.

Summary.—An entertaining slapstick comedy finely acted and produced. It is a two-reeler of the type which appeals to all classes of screen fans and may be regarded as certain to satisfy generally.

Pathe Review No. 34
(One Reel)

A GROUP of under-water views, presented under the title "From the Inside Out," take the feature place in this issue of Pathe Review. The photography is exceptionally clear and shows the sportive actions of swimmers and divers in Clearwater Lake, Florida. The camera set-up was such that the spectator sees over the surface as well as under the water, a rather novel effect especially when the pictures of the diving stunts are flashed on the screen. The color subject presents views of Niort, France, and a short travelogue deals with the manners and customs of the people of Morocco.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Watch Out"
(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a typical Bobby Vernon vehicle, replete with action and all sorts of slapstick comedy. There is little new stuff in it. It was designed for laughs and will probably get them, though not as many as some of the other Vernon pictures that have gone before.

Bobby is a victim of circumstances in this one. Hastily turning a corner he bumps into a stranger and both go down. When Bobby comes up he bears with him a real old antique in the way of a watch, which is highly prized by the owner. A trio of Anarchists are very much desirous of possessing this watch and because of that this story develops.

Bobby encounters the girl whose face appears in the back of the watch. He tries in many ways to return it to her and in his efforts wrecks a department store into which he has followed her. He eventually succeeds in his mission, but only after a wildly hilarious chase in which many are involved and all suffer in the process of some of the wildest imaginable slapstick comedy.

The Cast

The College Boy.....Bobby Vernon
The Girl.....Frances Lee
Her Granddad.....Jack Duffy
A. Rival Collector.....Victor Rodman

A Bobby Vernon comedy, directed by William Watson from a story by Hal Conklin.

The Story.—Bobby hastily rounding a corner bumps into a stranger and in the mixup when both fall Bobby in picking up his scattered goods also picks up the stranger's rare old valuable watch, which is wanted by a trio of anarchists. The latter immediately start pursuit of Bobby, who encounters the girl, whose photo is in the case of the watch. He tries to return it to her without success, until after the wildest sort of chase. Then he disposes of the anarchists, returns the watch and wins the girl.

Classification.—A fast action slapstick comedy.

Summary.—There is an abundance of gag and slapstick comedy in this one. It moves along at a remarkable clip and strives at all times for laughter. Some of the gags are new but for the most part the material has been used many times before. However, the Vernon fans will like it and it will give others a few laughs.

"Educating Buster Brown"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is the first of the Buster Brown series and if it is to be taken as a criterion of what is to follow this should be a very popular set of pictures. Perhaps they will be more attractive for the youngsters, but the grown-ups too will find some good entertainment in them.

Arthur Trimble is the Buster of the picture and he looks almost as though he had stepped out of the R. F. Outcault cartoon. He is rather a clever youngster too, and is called upon to show considerable versatility. Doreen Turner is the Mary Jane, a precocious Miss who does the role remarkably well.

Buster is the real HE boy of the cartoons, always in difficulties. A good story was woven for him in this one, in which he cuts all sorts of mischievous capers to the discomfort of the schoolmaster.

Tige, the dog, is an exceptional actor, remarkably trained and easily sharing the honors with the other two featured players. His work will do much to popularize the series.

The Cast

Buster Brown.....Arthur Trimble
Mary Jane.....Doreen Turner
Tige.....Petey

A Century comedy adapted from the original cartoon by R. F. Outcault; directed by Charles Lamont.

The Story.—Buster and Mary Jane start to school on their scooters, accompanied by Tige. They are delayed enroute and as usual arrive late, for which they are punished. Tige takes exception to the licking given Buster and attacks the school teacher. A boy in an adjacent seat releases some real limburger cheese, for which Buster is blamed. The cheese is thrown out, but rescued by Tige amid the general furore of the schoolroom.

Classification.—A kid comedy of action and an abundance of good comedy.

Summary.—This is a real lively comedy, well directed and well acted. Buster cuts the same capers that for years have characterized the Outcault cartoons. The series should be an exceptionally popular one if the same standard is maintained throughout.

"Cold Turkey"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

AS her second starring vehicle Alice Day has "Cold Turkey," a Sennett comedy directed by Eddie Cline. It proves a greater handicap than the golf story which preceded it and the thought occurs that Alice will have little chance of getting anywhere if the stories continue so utterly dumb, dull and dolorous. Just what "Cold Turkey" is all about we cannot tell. Something on the order of the newlywed farce is promised in the opening scenes when a melodramatic plot, implicating an intrigue between the bride of eight weeks and her husband's employer, is planted. But soon the affair resolves itself into a series of episodes concerned mostly with some action, all in very bad taste, which grows out of intoxicating soup, served by the bride to her mother and her two brothers-in-law.

The Cast

The Bride.....Alice Day
The Groom.....Raymond McKee
Brothers of the Groom.....Sam Lufkin, Pat Harmon
The Mother.....Sunshine Hart

The Story—A bride of eight weeks and her husband prepare to celebrate. The groom's two roughneck brothers are on the scene and then the girl's mother arrives, bringing a parrot. By accident some alcohol spills into the soup and later when the parrot gets inside the cooked turkey and makes it trot about there is much excitement, with scares and various sorts of tumbles and scrambles continuing throughout the night. Events make the husband suspect his wife of a flirtation with his employer, but this is explained away when the husband finds that he is receiving an increase in salary and a new contract, a secret which the wife and the employer have been keeping as a surprise.

Summary—A jumble of episodes concerned mostly with the actions of some people who become intoxicated through an accident on the part of the cook. It is slow-footed, lacks humor and much of it is in bad taste.

"Butter Fingers"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

DEL LORD directed this burlesque of the tale about the base ball player who is coerced into "throwing" a game by a gambler. Billy Bevan appears as the great pitcher, whose delivery fools every batter facing him, curves, loop-the-loop balls, slow "hoppers" and fast ones being included in the box of tricks of the great hurler.

The comedy is fairly amusing in spots but seems to be hampered by its own plot, which gets in the way and succeeded in diverting the attention from much potential gag material. It relentlessly sticks to the business of getting the pitcher into such a scrape that the opposing hurler wrings from him a promise that he will throw the big game. The villain holds the whip-hand because he has found Billy in his wife's apartment.

The climax of the play is the big game, with great crowds filling the stands to cheer their favorites and with our hero bound to his promise that he will not "bear down."

Bevan is supported by several well known and thoroughly capable Sennett comedians, the majority of whom do not get much chance to create laughs. Among those who appear prominently are Andy Clyde, Ruth Taylor, Kewpie Morgan and Madeline Hurlock.

"Butter Fingers" is not up to the best comedy standards of the Sennett company. The situations are of the old stand-by order and fail to stir up much mirth or excitement.

The Cast

Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Ruth Taylor, Kewpie Morgan, Madeline Hurlock

The Story—Billy is the star pitcher of the home-town team, about to engage in its greatest game of the season. He loves the hotel keeper's daughter but the very gorgeous wife of the pitcher of the opposing team intrigues him, and he flirts a bit. She encourages him and his adventure leads him into a compromising situation. To escape the wrath of the other pitcher he promises to "throw" the great game. But his girl finds a telegram sent by the crooked pitcher to colleagues advising them to bet on the team, and her father promises Billy he must win or get killed. With two strikes against him, he bats out a home run and wins the game, score 104 to 100.

Summary—Burlesque of big league base ball stories well acted and staged. The material offers no novel or particularly amusing situations and the action is rather slow.

"Shoes"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

ONE of O. Henry's most entertaining stories is here brought to the screen in a manner which should win the applause of all screen observers and picture patrons. No feature could be treated with more care in the selection of players to enact the characters or with a greater understanding of the spirit of the story than is evidenced in this picturization of "Shoes."

It is "grown up" comedy, not in the sense that it is only for the few who claim special wisdom and taste in matters of the theatre, but in the regard that care has been exercised in preparing the scenario, casting the play and directing the action so that the most critical analyses will not discover flaws beneath the rippling surface of mirth and humor which single out "Shoes" as a picture that is distinctly worth while. There is that play of stirring human drama and bubbling humor which flavor the stories of O. Henry. His mastery of the short story technic has been preserved in this excellent screen adaptation. Beatrice Van must be complimented for her excellent treatment and scenario.

The picture should have a wide appeal. It is interesting and it amuses the spectator, while the action holds the interest unfailingly and without a falter from the opening scene to the happy and snappy finish. These are characters you have met in life and the ones who win your sympathy finally triumph just as you would have them. In a word the favorite wins and it is a favorite which carries your money. Just how that sort of performance, particularly when it has been handled with such expert skill, can fail before the rank and file of the picture fans, we cannot figure out.

As the outstanding performance we would select that of Brooks Benedict, who plays the "heavy," a small town wise guy. Benedict does capital work as Pinkey Dawson; indeed, he seemed made to order for the part or the part for him when this reviewer witnessed the film. Harold Goodwin is splendidly cast as Johnny Atwood, who goes to a Central American republic to forget and who makes good there. Marian Harlan is pert and pretty as the heroine, while other members of the cast who distinguish themselves once more are Charles French and Harvey Clark.

Daniel Keefe must be given a large share of the credit due for this fine work. He directed the piece and his work is exceptional for the color, the atmosphere and the conviction which all the characters and incidents carry. The timing is excellent and not one item of comedy or drama has escaped him.

"Shoes" is a two-reel comedy that stands way above the average film of this type. It is clean, wholesome and entertaining to a degree.

The Cast

Rosine Heinstetter.....Marian Harlan
Johnny Atwood.....Harold Goodwin
Pinkey Dawson.....Brooks Benedict
Mr. Heinstetter.....Charles French
President of Republic.....Harvey Clark

Story by O. Henry. Scenario by Beatrice Van. Directed by Daniel Keefe.

The Story.—Johnny Atwood tries to grow stickerless cockleburs on his farm in Dalesburg, but he fails at that. He thinks Rosine Heinstetter loves Pinkey Dawson more than he, so Johnny gets an appointment as consul in a Central America republic. His joking response to a letter inquiring about the commercial possibilities of a shoe store in that country is taken seriously and Mr. Heinstetter and his daughter arrive with a large stock of shoes. The natives have never worn anything like shoes, so it is up to Johnny to create a demand, which he does by sending for several hundreds of pounds of cockleburs. These he distributes about the streets, and the natives flock to the store to get shoes. The incident assures him of success in the suit for Rosine Heinstetter's hand and heart.

Summary.—A delightful comedy worthy of feature honors in the theatre billing. It is a very natural, human and pleasant tale, excellently acted and produced. If really high class short pictures, telling complete, well constructed stories are in demand this one should score a big hit and a box office success.

"The Wrestler"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THE Fox company is off on the right foot with the new series of "Van Bibber" stories, adaptations of the works of Richard Harding Davis which are already known to a banana peel serves to upset the enemy. the series released last season. This production is a dressy one, with lots of luxury expressed in elaborate settings and the elegant costumery of the characters in the play.

The story shows the bungling yet fortunate Mr. Van Bibber as a hero of doubtful courage though successful performance as a wrestler. He defeats, with the aid of Providence, the best catch-as-catch-can that Russia, where the action takes place, can pit against him. The while he is "rescuing" Olganova, famous Russian dancer from the advances of Strangler Stransky, he quivvers in his boots but the violent pitching and lurching of a Russian express train enables him to throw the Strangler about as though he were a mere feather.

The director, R. P. Kerr has devised many ingenious gags to fill out the wrestling episodes, some remarkably clever inventions being included to make Van Bibber win all his bouts with the challengers to his crown as a wrestling champ. In one instance it's a rolling barrel which strikes the antagonist's legs from under him and in another a banana peal serves to upset the enemy. There are several bouts and each is supplied with fast action and good humorous incident, highly amusing in itself and splendidly suited to the characterization of the central figure in the play.

If this is a fair sample of the standard of comedy which Fox will offer in the new "Van Bibber" two-reelers exhibitors are assured of a group of short features which they may offer to the most discriminating audience and which will fit in with the highest type of entertainment they may obtain for the other units of the program.

The main role is played by Earle Foxe, whose appearance makes him a most suitable choice for the part. Foxe is an experienced screen actor and puts his comedy over effectively, though there is a tendency to over-stress the acting now and then. Florence Gilbert plays the feminine lead capably and others whose selection for the cast is more than justified by their performance are Frank Beal, Lynn Cowan, Jacques Durac, Lionel Braham and Carol Wines.

The Cast

Van Bibber.....Earle Foxe
Sylvia.....Florence Gilbert
Colonel Paddock.....Frank Beal
Van's Friend.....Lynn Cowan
The Duke.....Jacques Durac
The Strangler.....Lionel Braham
Russian Dancer.....Carol Wines

Story by Richard Harding Davis. Directed by R. P. Kerr.

The Story.—Van Bibber, wealthy fashion plate traveling with friends in Russia, is called upon to save a Russian dancer from the attentions of a famous wrestler, both of whom are fellow passengers on the train. He reluctantly goes to the task and with the aid of the lurching of the train succeeds in throwing the wrestler, which brings him fame and the unwanted devotion of the dancer. The jealous Duke, who loves Sylvia, Van's sweetheart, arranges another meeting with Strangler Stransky and Van's doom seems sealed, but by the weirdest breaks of good luck and terrible wrestling technic he manages to win.

Summary.—A highly amusing picturization of one of "Van Bibber's" adventures in Russia, with several hilarious wrestling matches in which the delicate society idler comes out victor, much to his own surprise. It is an offering of sound entertainment values and high quality. The production is especially dressy and the acting good throughout.

"My Own Carolina"

(Fox—One Reel)

HERE is the "travel" picture at its best. It is a Fox Varieties reel and the subject is Carolina and the editino of the work permits the spectator to take a trip through that lovely state, tasting, as does the experienced and leisurely traveler, the beauties, the pleasures and observing all of the phases of life in the locality. The photography is wonderfully clear and rich and in addition to affording the spectator opportunity to glean a good ide aof the nature of the life and country there, it provides much that is visually appealing. It is the type of picture that will win the admiration of people for the screen and increase the prestige of the cinema, for it is entertaining, beautiful and withall instructive.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Sun Up

(Metro-Goldwyn—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

"SUN UP" translated into terms of celluloid is not so convincing as it was upon the stage, chiefly because there's only enough material to carry it through three reels. The result is it has been padded out with romantic episodes—and several patriotic flourishes which give it a different ending than what the play revealed. It revolves around a grim old woman, addicted to smoking a corn-cob pipe. She is vengeful toward the Turner breed for killing her "pap" and her husband. She is also "agin" the gov'ment, as she puts it.

THEME. Melodrama of Carolina feudists which tells of how a son changes his vengeful mother with his spirit of forgiveness and sacrifice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss LaVerne's graphic study of the grim old woman of the hills. The scene when the boy bids goodby to the girl. The moment when the deserter finds refuge in the old woman's cabin.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as adaptation of successful play which is faithfully adapted in its central plot and characters.

SUMMARY. This is made into a rather grim study of life among the "hill-billies." It isn't so convincing as the play because of its simple plot being elaborated with incident not written into the original.

THE CAST

The Widow Cagle.....Lucille La Verne
Emmy Todd.....Pauline Starke
Rufe Cagle.....Conrad Nagel
Sheriff Weeks.....Sam De Grasse
Stranger.....George K. Arthur

Adapted by Edmund Goulding and Arthur Statter from the play by Lulu Vollmer. Directed by Edmund Goulding.

SYNOPSIS. The Widow Cagle is against law and government and holds a terrific hatred for the Zeb Turner clan—Zeb himself having killed her father and husband. When the United States enters the Great War her son, Rufe, enlists. He wanted to get away because he believed neighbor Todd's girl, Emmy, didn't love him. While he is absent the Widow shelters a young deserter—her reason being her hatred for the government. She doesn't know that he is a Turner until her boy returns. She commands Rufe to kill him, but the son has changed his mountaineer watchword—"A life for a life." But he does exact vengeance against the sheriff for insulting Emmy. In the end he makes over his mother to respect human life—and brings love into her heart in the bargain.

Edmund Goulding.

"Sun UP"
PRESS NOTICE

Next ——— the ——— theatre will present "Sun Up," a rugged and picturesque melodrama of life among the Hill Billies of Carolina. It is a powerful picture of burning hatreds and strong love. You will see a vengeful, who is against any form of law and government. She commands her son to kill any member of the Turner clan. But the boy goes to war and returns with different ideas. How he changes his mother, wins the girl, metes out punishment to the man who would dishonor her —and becomes an officer of the law provide the plot and the highlights of this picture, adapted from the successful play. It is finely acted by players who fit right into their characterizations

CATCH LINES

When you see "Sun Up" at the —— theatre next ——— you will be royally entertained. It is a graphic picture of mountaineers and feuds in the Carolina hills. Don't miss it.

Fort Frayne

(Davis Distributing Division—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

HERE'S a good bet for the small town exhibitor, both Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber having a good following among the patrons of these houses. This feature also possesses the added advantage of a story written by General Charles Young, a widely read author.

Some of the earlier scenes could be cut as they retard the action of the story, for example the sequence showing Mrs. Farrar brooding over her son's picture. Outside of this and one or two other instances the action is kept at a fast pace. There are a number of good fight scenes and enough gun play to satisfy the most ardent devotee of this type of story.

THEME. Concerns efforts of band of soldiers to keep Indians in check; also mystery angle of missing son, supposedly dead, who turns up and causes all sorts of trouble until he is killed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Indian uprising which calls the garrison away and the shooting of the Colonel. The mystery element concerning the "dead" son who crops up as the villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the featured players, Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber; also the author of the story whose works have been widely read.

DRAWING POWER. Should prove a good drawing card in small towns. Will please the followers of the form of feature.

SUMMARY. Has a good story and the production is up to standard.

THE CAST

Capt. Malcolm Teale.....Ben Wilson
Helen Farrar.....Neva Gerber
Mrs. Daunton.....Ruth Royce
Royle Farrar.....Bill Paton
Col. John Farrar.....Lafe McKee

SYNOPSIS. Captain Teale, stationed at an outlying army post is in love with Helen Farrar, daughter of the Colonel of the troop which is continually engaged in fighting the Indians. During a skirmish the Colonel is mortally wounded and confides in Teale that his son, thought dead by the Colonel's wife, is in reality a fugitive. After the Colonel's death his wife engages a companion, who has married the son. Husband and wife meet at the post he having joined as a recruit. A series of unfortunate co-incidences involving Captain Teale, the Colonel's son and the son's wife, cause strained relations between Teale and the Colonel's daughter, but the trouble is straightened and all ends happily.

Ben Wilson.

Fort Frayne (Davis Dist. Div.)
PRESS NOTICE

There will be an unusually excellent story of early frontier life on the screen of the —— theatre on —— when "Fort Frayne" starring the ever popular Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber is shown. The picture has been fashioned for the entertainment for the entire family and Ben Wilson fairly outdoes his previous efforts. It is a tale of the early days on the border when the Indians, as yet unaccustomed to the advance of the white man, were continually on the war path in an effort to stem the flow of white people to their favorite hunting grounds. In addition to, this the main plot of the story, a mystery element is introduced which concerns the son of the Colonel of the troop, who, though reported dead, is very much alive and causing trouble.

CATCH LINES

An extra throb of the heart is felt in the scene where the heroine, heart broken because of her lover's supposed infidelity, bids him leave her forever.

The Lucky Horseshoe

(Fox—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by Paul Yawitz)

SINCE the first day that Tom Mix found himself featured in pictures, reviewers have labelled each of his successive efforts as his best, and here is another reviewer who goes on record with the statement that "The Lucky Horseshoe" is the ultimate in Mixian entertainment. J. G. Blystone has directed the most finished product of his long career and stamps himself at once as a master of the technique of humorous detail and flashing action.

THEME. Comedy drama running from the modern West to the Don Juan period in Spain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The superb action. The excellent selection of locale. The massive settings in the period scenes. The beauty of the women. The dancing of Ann Pennington.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This picture will please every type of audience and this fact should be announced to those whose mental classification of the star is that of a rough-riding western cowboy.

DRAWING POWER. There isn't a theatre in the world that will not show a profit on this production.

SUMMARY. "The Lucky Horseshoe" is one of the most romantic and appealing motion pictures which have come from the Fox factories in many seasons.

THE CAST

Rand Foster.....Tom Mix
Elvira Hunt.....Billie Dove
Denman.....Malcolm Waite
Mack.....J. Farrell MacDonald
Aunt Ruth.....Clarissa Selwynne
Dancer.....Ann Pennington

Author, Robert Lord. Scenario by John Stone. Directed by J. G. Blystone.

SYNOPSIS. Despite her protestations based on love for Rand Foster, foreman of the ranch left her at the death of her father, Elvira Hunt is hustled off by Aunt Ruth on a tour of European capitals. Her absence is over a period of two years during which she is wooed by a foreigner of alleged distinction, Denman by name. At home Rand patiently awaits her return and has in the meantime placed the ranch on a paying basis. Much to his surprise he finds Denman accompanying Elvira on her return and the wedding announced for the following week. Rand is despondent but is urged by Mack, his chief assistant, to take the lady by force. Mack tells him the story of Don Juan and how that romantic lover took the woman he loved regardless of circumstance and conditions. Denman then orders his servants to kidnap Rand and hold him until the wedding ceremony is over. Accordingly the cowboy is clubbed and bound and during his unconscious moments dreams that he is Don Juan in the court days of Barcelona. The dream sequence is highly interesting, but soon he awakes to the realization he must act quickly or he will have lost Elvira. Freeing himself with a knife he rides to the ranch-house in time to expose Denman and claim the bride for his own.

Tom Mix.

"The Lucy Horseshoe" (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE

"The Lucky Horseshoe" which comes to the———Theatre next ———, presents the versatile Tom Mix in one of his most exhilerating roles of his screen career. The action of the story, which is by Robert Lord and first appeared in magazine form, carries the Fox star from the wilds of the Arizona ranchland to the romantic atmosphere of Barcelona

An unusually excellent cast was selected by Director J. G. Blystone for the support of Mix. It includes such notables as Ann Pennington, whose dancing in the Ziegfeld Follies has captivated New York audiences for several seasons; Billie Dove also remembered for her Broadway appearances in the Follies; J. Farrell MacDonald, who came into his own with his comedy work in "The Iron Horse," Malcolm Waite, Clarissa Selwynne, and J. Gunnis Davis.

CATCH LINES

A brilliant comedy-drama in which Tom Mix scores another striking success.

Where Was I?

(Universal-Jewel—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHILE this farce-comedy does not measure up to the two previous pictures starring Reginald Denny—namely, "Oh, Doctor," and "I'll Show You the Town," it, nevertheless, carries a sufficient quota of laughs. For one thing it hasn't enough plot to keep it going, so the director is forced to repeat the gags, most of which can be catalogued as broad farce.

THEME. Farce-comedy revolving around effort of youth to disprove the declaration of adventuress that he is married to her. The complications get him into all kinds of trouble before he proves himself a bachelor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The moment that adventuress enters life of hero and proceeds to embarrass him. The ride in the taxi. The comedy which Chester Conklin puts over. The scenes in youth's home. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Now that Denny is over you won't have any trouble stimulating patronage. Play him up as one of the best light comedians of the screen. Bill picture as a lively farce carrying as many laughs as "I'll Show You the Town."

DRAWING POWER. Denny's name is widely known and he has become immensely popular. So give him prominent display. The title also has magnetic qualities.

SUMMARY. This Denny picture is not up to the caliber of his two previous efforts, though it carries a large supply of laughs. It is broad farce, obviously developed—and it is "gagged up" considerably.

THE CAST

Thomas S. Berford.....Reginald Denny
Alicia Stone.....Marion Nixon
Claire.....Pauline Garon
Henry.....Lee Moran
George Stone.....Tyrone Power
Bennett.....Otis Harlan
Elmer.....Chester Conklin

By Edgar Franklin. Directed by William Seiter.

SYNOPSIS. Young bachelor is the "go-getter" of his business. He embarrasses his partners with his romantic proclivities. The youth has become engaged to the daughter of a business rival when a girl enters his office and declares herself as his wife. He tries to disprove her statement by trying to find out where he was the night he was supposed to have married her. So accompanied by his valet he goes on a wild goose chase to locate the man who could provide the necessary information. The young man gets in deep trouble—and discovers that he has stolen a huge sum of money. The adventuress camps out in his home—and his fiancee calls on him. But when he is about to be arrested the "wife" reveals her true identity and saves him from being "framed." It was all a put-up job by the fiancee's father to break up his romance.

"Where Was I?"
PRESS NOTICE

"Where Was I?" is the title of the new Reginald Denny picture which comes to the —— theatre on next ———. It is a hilarious farce-comedy which gives this splendid young comedian another opportunity to display his abundant talent. Here he is placed in one embarrassing situation after another. There doesn't seem to be any escape for him. Then comes a startling climax which clears away the complications. The picture contains some high-explosive laughs —is capitally staged and played with dash and precision by a company that includes Pauline Garon, Marion Nixon and Chester Conklin.

CATCH LINES

See Reginald Denny, the star who made "I'll Show You the Town," such a delightful picture, in his newest release "Where Was I?"—a picture of a bachelor who wants to be married, but is confronted with the fact that he is already a husband.

The popular star of "Oh, Doctor," and "I'll Show You the Town," is back on the screen of the ——— theatre.

Peacock Feathers

(Universal—6747 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

AN entertaining picture is this featuring Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis which was directed by Svend Gade. It is a meritorious production both from the acting angle as well as the production given it; the introductory titles being shining examples of artistic efficiency and this is followed throughout the reels. While the story is somewhat familiar, the acting of the principals more than redeems it from the commonplace and, due to a smooth continuity and the fast tempo, it will interest the spectator from start to finish.

The director has lost no time in planting his characters and in getting his story started with the result that the spectator's interest is captured from the beginning and held while the actors 'do their stuff.'

THEME. Comedy drama of luxury loving young girl who marries poor man and suffers the consequences for a time but trouble is straightened out and they live happily ever after.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful introductory art titles. The fireworks display. The acting of Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis. The scene in which the newly married couple view their 'castle' for the first time. The scenes at the dinner table in the cabin.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There are any amount of fashion store tie-ups to be made with this title as the basis.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in any locality. Featured players are popular with the fans.

SUMMARY. Direction, acting and mounting leave nothing to be desired. It has a well told if somewhat familiar story and holds the interest.

THE CAST

Mimi Le Brun.....Jacqueline Logan
Jerry Chandler.....Cullen Landis
Andrew Fuller.....Ward Crane
Uncle George.....George Fawcett
Rev. Dr. Chandler.....Emmett King
Lionel Clark.....Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy

SYNOPSIS. Mimi Le Brun is introduced to Jerry Chandler by her cousin while on a trip to her home town and invites him to visit her. He does so and falls in love with her but she tells him it is impossible that they marry as he is poor and she needs luxury, also that she is engaged to a wealthy man whom she does not care for. Jerry's uncle dies and leaves him a ranch of which he has spoken of as a castle and Jerry, believing this to be the truth persuades Mimi to elope. They are disillusioned when they view the shack but after much discontent on the part of Mimi she finally accepts the situation. Mimi's rejected suitor turns up and she is about to run away with him but goes to Jerry, who has met with an accident, and they go into the final clinch.

Jacqueline Logan

Peacock Feathers (Universal)

PRESS NOTICE

LOVELY JACQUELINE LOGAN and the manly Cullen Landis score a big hit in "Peacock Feathers" which graces the screen of the ——— theatre on ———. It is a colorful, artistically mounted story of the luxury loving, but poor, girl who, although engaged to a wealthy man, elopes with a man she loves though his legacy turns out to be a myth. A picture with some wonderful artistic settings and a story that tugs at the heart strings from start to finish. Cullen Landis plays the role of the poor but honest young man who loves and almost loses the daughter of an aristocratic but impoverished family. Jacqueline Logan portrays the part of the girl.

CATCH LINES

She loved him but would have married the rich man for luxury.—She discounted the results of a loveless marriage—could you? Though accustomed to wealthy surroundings she, nevertheless, donned overalls to help her husband—would you?

Winds of Chance

(Frank Lloyd-First Nat'l—10 Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IN "Winds of Chance," Frank Lloyd has evidently attempted to make a great epic of the gold rush, comparable in scope and handling to "The Sea Hawk," but he has largely been defeated by a story which fails, at least in screen form, to suggest any elements of greatness. The story is simply a pleasant romance interspersed by moments and melodrama, and the rush to the Klondike becomes a rather unimportant background to the development of the love affair.

Otherwise, there are many splendid moments in the picture, were they not swamped by the weight of non-essential sequences. Victor McLaglen and Viola Dana—and what troupers they both are!—contribute vivid and living portrayals, and easily walk away with the picture. Ben Lyon, a likeable and pleasing actor in suitable roles, is utterly unconvincing as the hero. Miss Nilsson is capable and convincing as usual. Excellent work is done in smaller roles by Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, Claude Gillingwater, Charles Crockett, John T. Murray, Philo McCullough and others.

THEME. Melodrama of the gold rush to the Klondike, in which hero goes through stirring adventures and finds love amid the frozen wastes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes of shooting the rapids with the barges. The scenes between McLaglen and Dana. The scene in which Rouletta is at the point of death.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as a great Klondike epic by Rex Beach, directed by Frank Lloyd, the maker of "The Sea Hawk."

DRAWING POWER. The strong cast, plus the author and director, should make this draw well anywhere. Big enough for any house.

SUMMARY. Klondike melodrama, disappointing in certain respects but containing much fine material and some excellent acting. Well mounted and produced, on the whole.

THE CAST

Countess Courteau.....Anna Q. Nilsson
Pierce Phillips.....Ben Lyon
Rouletta Kirby.....Viola Dana
Sam Kirby.....Hobart Bosworth
'Poleon Doret.....Victor McLaglen
Laure.....Dorothy Sebastian
Tom Linton.....Claude Gillingwater

Adapted from Rex Beach's novel. Directed by Frank Lloyd.

SYNOPSIS. Hero comes to Klondike in gold rush. Broke, he carries packs for others. Becomes river pilot for Countess, and aided by French Canadian, takes boats over rapids safely. He and Countess are estranged. He becomes gold weigher in saloon. Framed up by men seeking revenge for earlier episode, and dance hall girl he has repelled, he is accused of theft and murder, but Countess and Frenchman save him. All ends happily.

Frank Lloyd.

Winds of Chance (1st Nat'l.)

PRESS NOTICE

BRINGING to the screen the thrilling events and human drama of the gold rush to the Klondike in '97, "Winds of Chance" will come to entertain patrons of the ——— theatre on ———. It is the latest production by Frank Lloyd, who gave to the screen the unforgettable historic sea epic, "The Sea Hawk."

A brilliant cast of noted players will be seen in the melodrama of the Klondike, including Anna Q. Nilsson, Ben Lyon, Victor McLaglen, Viola Dana, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastion, Claude Gillingwater, Philo McCullough, John T. Murray and others.

One of the outstanding thrills of the picture shows three barges being taken over the treacherous rapids by the hero.

CATCH LINES

They came from everywhere, this vast army of adventurers. They came to raid the bosoms of the lofty mountains, the beds of rushing streams, the deep hearts of the valleys. The thing that lured them was Gold!

Havoc

(Rowland V. Lee Production-Fox—Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is a picture, which we honestly believe, will start a new vogue for features with a World War background. It has been predicted both here and abroad that such a series would be born soon. "Havoc" is the first to blaze the trail and it also sets a standard which will make others hustle to equal. The story has to do with social life in Merrie England during the war and with adventure and heroism along the lines in France. And both phases of the plot have been packed with incident, color, drama, human interest, pathos and heart appeal.

THEME. A drama of social life in London during the war with some fine sequences shot along the battle line in France. Depicting the havoc wrought in the lives of two men by an unscrupulous woman who played with love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The characterizations contributed by O'Brien, McGrail and Miss Livingston. The sequence in which Dick returning with a love token from Dunton, is vamped by Violet.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with your local American Legion posts. Play up the names of O'Brien, Bellamy and others who have box office value.

SUMMARY. Following the wave of plain, everyday pictures, it is a pleasure to see one that steps out of the rut and registers a wallop as does "Havoc."

THE CAST

Tessie Dunton	Madge Bellamy
Dick Chappell	George O'Brien
Roddy Dunton	Walter McGrail
Alice Deering	Eulalie Jensen
Violet Deering	Margaret Livingston
Babe	Leslie Fenton
Smithy	David Butler
Biddle	Harvey Clark
Sergeant Major	Wade Boteler
Regimental Adjuant	Captain Clavert
Alexis Betskoy	Bertram Gressby

From the play by Henry Wallace. Scenario by Edmund Goulding. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Photographed by G. O. Post.

SYNOPSIS. Capt. Roddy Dunton and Lieut. Dick Chappell are both in love with Violet Deering, a society butterfly who trifles with men. Capt. Dunton becomes engaged to Violet. Dick takes his loss manfully. On leave from the front Dick delivers a letter from Dunton to Violet, who vamps Dick. Tessie, Dunton's sister, sees the two embrace. To save her face, Violet breaks her engagement to Dunton and gives Dick the job of announcing her act to Dunton. The captain, angry, orders Dick to remain in a dangerous outpost. Dick, survives, but is blinded. Dunton, remorseful, shoots himself. Dick returns, denounces Violet for the havoc she has wrought and then weds Tessie.

George O'Brien.

Havoc (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE

PORTRAYING the havoc wrought in the souls of men and women by the great war, "Havoc," a thrilling photoplay, comes to the ——— theatre on ———. It is not primarily a war picture, but a great drama of human hearts in their reaction to the brutal conflict.

The plot deals with a woman and two men—the woman a beautiful young girl who cannot decide between the two. The war breaks out and when the two are about to leave she chooses one.

This results in a gripping and nearly tragic climax, but eventually the sun breaks through the clouds and the havoc of war is dispelled.

George O'Brien, Margaret Livingston, Madge Bellamy and Walter McGrail portray the principal roles.

CATCH LINES

War wrought havoc in their souls—made beasts of men—and turned accepted standards upside down.

Dollar Down

(Co-Artists Production-Truart—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

THERE is more propaganda than entertainment in this program picture. It is really a sermon on thrift and has to do with the adventures of a family that indulged in too much luxury on the "dollar down" method of obtaining it. All looks dark when a child comes through with her savings at the bank and saves the day for the heroine, hero and a couple of families. The production smacks of film making of other days. The settings are "stagey" throughout and although there are a few good players in the cast their struggles to put over unconvincing roles fall flat.

THEME. A domestic drama in which the "dollar down" methods of one family almost bring on ruin when the thrift methods of relatives prove a saving factor and keep the heroine from jail.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which the villain learns the tract on which the company has an option. The society reception to pay for which the girl is forced to pawn a ring not paid for.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title offers chance to tie-up with the many Dollar Days being held in the towns. Work with the schools on the thrift idea. Might offer prizes for the best essays on thrift.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses that change their bills often, the small towns and the smaller community houses.

SUMMARY. A program picture pure and simple which has little entertainment value, being more in the form of a lecture on the value of thrift and the dire consequences of the "dollar down" stuff.

THE CAST

Alec Craig	Henry B. Walthall
Ruth Craig	Ruth Roland
Craig's sister	Claire McDowell
Gene, her son	Roscoe Karns
Jane, her daughter	Jane Mercer

By Jane Courthope and Ethel Hill. Directed by Tod Browning. Scenario by Fred Stowers. Photographed by Allen Thompson.

SYNOPSIS. Although Alec Craig has a good position as general manager of a manufacturing company, his wife and daughter have brought him close to ruin by their extravagance. Craig's daughter pawns a ring which is not paid for and Craig is on the edge of losing his job when the information on the company's option on a valuable site leaks out and he is blamed. Ruth, the daughter, takes the blame and then takes Steele who framed the girl into divulging the information into the air so that he is unable to exercise the option. Craig gets his job back and a niece saves the day when she supplies her savings to satisfy the pawnbroker who has the ring.

Tod Browning.

Dollar Down (Truart)
PRESS NOTICE

THE dangers of extravagance and too much buying on credit, "a dollar down and a dollar when they catch you," provide the theme of the feature attraction at the ——— theatre on ———, entitled "Dollar Down".

As suggested by the title, the story deals with a young married couple who proceed to buy all manner of expensive merchandise on the Dollar Down plan, until their financial resources are stretched to the breaking point.

An unusually strong cast portrays the principal roles, including Ruth Roland, a screen favorite, Henry B. Walthall, the sterling character actor, Roscoe Karns and Claire MacDowell. Tod Browning directed.

CATCH LINES

Do you buy everything on the Dollar Down plan? Are you guarding against "biting off more than you can chew?"

They bought everything on credit—and then the credit collapsed. Ruin faced them, when a little child—but see the picture.

The Wheel

(Victor Schertzinger Production-Fox—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER has transplanted John Golden's stage play by Winchell Smith to the screen in an eminently satisfactory manner. Edfrid Bingham is to be commended on the scenario and no small part of the credit for the success of the picture should go to Montague Glass who has written subtitles that are short, crisp and packed with humor when comedy situations give opportunity for his inimitable work.

THEME. A modern society drama of temptation and fast life in which "the wheel" comes close to ruining a scion of wealth, who is saved by his young wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight between Ford and Hamilton in the cabaret. The scene in which the hero gambles the check given him for an auto he has sold for his employers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES.—Play up the fact that this is a picturization of the big John Golden-Winchell Smith stage success. Boost the names of the stars.

DRAWING POWER. The best houses should do business with this one backed by such names as Golden, Winchell Smith, Montague Glass, Schertzinger and the stars.

SUMMARY. An entertaining screen version of one of the Broadway stage hits which has been made into a picture packed with pep, excellent character portrayals, good direction, an interest-holding plot, a powerful climax and through it all, a web of subtle humor.

THE CAST

Elsie Dixon.....Margaret Livingston
Kate O'Hara.....Claire Adams
Edward Baker.....Mahlon Hamilton
Ted Morton.....Harrison Ford
Theodore Morton, Sr.....David Torrence
Mrs. Morton.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Nora Malone.....Clara Horton

From the play by Winchell Smith. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Photographed by Glen MacWilliams. Scenario by Edfrid Bingham.

SYNOPSIS. Ted Morton has one weakness—the roulette wheel. Appealed to by parents to end wild life, he decides to quit game. Announces he is going to wed Kate O'Hara, a milliner. Father objecting, he leaves home. Kate and Ted wed. Edward Baker, proprietor of gambling house, coveting Kate, decides to "get" Ted. He buys costly car from Morton. Ted goes after check, but unable to keep away from wheel. Puts up company's check and loses entire amount. Returning home Ted confesses to Kate. Both seek funds in vain. Kate also loses on horse race. Then Baker repents and makes out a new check. Ted has learned his lesson.

Victor Schertzinger.

The Wheel (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE

THE subtle menace and allure of gambling, and its power to wreck human lives, are vividly portrayed in "The Wheel," a strong melodrama which will be the feature attraction at the ——— theatre on ———.

"The Wheel," originally written as a play by Winchell Smith, and produced by John Golden on the stage, was a tremendous success. It has been transferred to the screen under the personal supervision of Golden, retaining the strong dramatic values of the original.

Harrison Ford is the hero, with Mahlon Hamilton playing the other man. Margaret Livingston and Claire Adams play the leading feminine roles.

CATCH LINES

He gambled all on a turn of The Wheel—and lost.

The Wheel had an irresistable fascination for him. On it he staked honor and fortune—and lost!

Does the gambler ever win? Does gambling ever pay? See the answer in "The Wheel."

Shore Leave

(Inspiration Pictures, Inc.-First National—6856 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HAVING "done his duty by the army," in producing "Classmates," Richard Barthelmess now goes to sea and gives us a striking portrait of a care-free, jolly gob whose home is "wherever he hangs his middle cap." And while there is not the drama and tenseness here that we had in "Classmates," there is a wealth of human interest, heart appeal and above all a constant flow of comedy that is going to put audiences everywhere in good humor and prove for all time that "Dick" is a comedian, especially if he is given suitable material.

THEME. Setting forth the efforts of Connie Martin, New England dressmaker, to grab a gob who appears miraculously it seems when Connie sees spinsterhood appearing in the offing.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The meeting between "Bilge" and Connie. The party for the Smiths aboard Connie's old sailing vessel. The fight between Bilge and his pal, "Bat." The return of Bilge and consent to wed when he learns Connie is not a rich woman and has put her ship in trust for their first child.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Richard Barthelmess. Put on a Navy Night. Tie-up with your local navy recruiting station.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land, city or town and should do business because of star's popularity and entertaining qualities of picture.

SUMMARY. Here's still another contribution to better pictures for the Greater Movie Season and no one is going to be disappointed.

THE CAST

"Bilge" Smith.....Richard Barthelmess
Connie Martin.....Dorothy Mackaill
"Bat" Smith.....Ted McNamara
Cap'n Bimby Martin.....Nick Long
Mrs. Schuyler-Payne.....Marie Shotwell
Chief Petty Officer.....Samuel Hines

By Hubert Osborne. Directed by John S. Robertson. Scenario by Josephine Lovett. Photographed by Roy Overbaugh.

SYNOPSIS. While on shore leave in little New England town, "Bilge" Smith meets Connie Martin, an orphan. Connie seeing spinsterhood in the offing takes advantage of her opportunity and "goes after" Bilge, seeing in him not only a husband but a skipper for an old sailing vessel, now in India, left her by father. Bilge kisses her and goes away, promising to return. He does, a few years later, but has forgotten Connie, who, however, gives a party for all the Smiths aboard. She knows Bilge by the name of Smith only. However, thinking Connie still rich, Bilge refusing "to live off'n a rich woman," goes away again. He returns, however, and weds Connie when she declares the ship has been put in trust for their first child.

Richard Barthelmess.

Shore Leave (1st Natl.)
PRESS NOTICE

TO add to his laurels as a dramatic actor Richard Barthelmess proves that he is a clever comedian as well in "Shore Leave," his latest picture, which will be shown at the ——— theatre on ———.

Just as "Classmates" showed him as a West Point cadet, "Shore Leave" features Barthelmess as a rollicking "gob," whose merry exploits make up an entertaining film story. It has been adapted from the Hubert Osborne play of the same name which was so popular in New York not long ago.

Barthelmess again has as his leading woman the talented and beautiful Dorothy Mackaill, who also provides many laughable scenes and is a splendid foil for his fun making.

CATCH LINES

He met his ideal while on "shore leave," but he forgot to come back.

She entertained all the Smiths in the Navy to find her hero—and what a time she had!

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Kiss Me Again," — Warners, Piccadilly, N. Y.

Times: "Is directed with such ease and charm that one is kept in a merry mood for its full length. It has many deft and delightful touches. Miss Prevost and Monte Blue are delightful in their roles. Mr. Louis is capital as the lawyer."

American: "The word 'masterpiece' has been so often misused that it no longer means very much. But this comedy really deserves to be called a masterpiece of directing. Lubitsch has made a picture so fascinating that you dread the end. Then the end comes, just when it should, and is only an added delight. The cast is splendid."

Daily News: "The direction is champagne. The plot whipped cream. And altogether let it be said right now that this is one of the best pictures of the year. You'll fairly purr with delight. It's the witty, sophisticated film stuff that is so rare. Lubitsch is a wonderful story-teller. He's disarming and subtle, risque and blandly innocent."

Daily Mirror: "With the skilled hand of the artist, Lubitsch has shaped a scintillating comedy from a bubbling, vaporish story. It is handled with delicious effectiveness, and the ending, especially, bears the stamp of the one and only Lubitsch. Marie Prevost and Monte Blue achieve brilliant histrionic heights under Lubitsch's direction."

Herald-Tribune: "Ernst Lubitsch, master of the smart and sophisticated in film comedy, has found the screen equivalent of spoken with 'Kiss Me Again.' It is perhaps the most coldly brilliant and sparkingly gay thing that has ever been seen in motion pictures. Certainly there is no comedy in New York, either on stage or screen, as suave and distinguished as this picture. Lubitsch is the Oscar Wilde of pantomime, the Max Beerbohm of shadows. There are hundreds of delightful directorial touches, bits of shrewdly humorous pantomime and scenes of subtle interplay of character."

Morning Telegraph: "Sophisticated audiences will eat it up and every other kind of audience will enjoy it too, for Lubitsch has inspired his popular cast to put over somewhat racy humor in gay and innocent style. It is as good as if not better than 'The Marriage Circle,' with more human appeal. From the very beginning it is sheer delight. Lubitsch, expert skater on the thin ice of farce, has never performed more gracefully. It takes a Lubitsch to appreciate a Marie Prevost."

Evening Post: "Monte Blue and Marie Prevost fit excellently into the Lubitsch pattern and John Roche is just too artistic for words. Clara Bow makes a fetching little vampire of an unusual type—in the movies. 'Kiss Me Again' is a comedy for people who like sophisticated and witty pictures. Judging from the merriment at the Piccadilly lots of people like them."

Evening Graphic: "Lubitsch has added another gem to the already glittering crown of his cinema achievements. 'Kiss Me Again' is a rare treat. It bubbles over with wit, charm and vivacity, is as 'Frenchy' as the Champs Elysees, and its situations are handled in the deftly sophisticated manner that has placed Mr. Lubitsch at the head of the list of very capable directors."

Evening World: "When weighty minds get together months hence to catalogue the year's best offerings they will be in duty bound to give this one a place very near the top. In fact, those classics which will succeed in gaining a higher rating will be extremely fortunate. Here is a picture which is the acme of artistry—a frothy thing, sparkling as champagne which is unfolded with a continual touch at once startlingly daring and disarmingly ingenuous."

Evening Journal: "First of all, 'Kiss Me Again' ought to have a sub-title, 'See This Again.' It is an exceptional comedy—sophisticated, brilliant, frothy, clever—absolutely delightful, and with a lilting leitmotif, if that means what we think it does. It's just the kind of plot which Lubitsch. with his inimitable touches, can make a piquant pleasure. Marie's a great little actress, and Monte and Roche are perfectly cast."

Sun: "A delightful photoplay."

"Evolution," — Red Seal, Rialto, Los Angeles

Times: "One of the year's most sensational photoplays."

Express, "A clever adaptation of the artifices of movie magic to abstruse research. Intelligent hands have made the picture and combined in it the charm of technical cinema achievement and the instruction of clear, terse titles within the grasp of all."

Record: "Delightfully instructive without being pedantic."

News: "Startlingly vivid and highly entertaining."

"Evolution," — Red Seal, New Theatre, Baltimore

Sun: "Rich in varied and weird features."

American: "Seldom, if ever, have I come upon a more impressive motion picture than 'Evolution,' the one Edward J. Foyles, member of the American Museum of Natural History, has fashioned so that Darwin's theory of the evolution of the species may be made clear to you. Last night it held a typical movie audience spellbound by its clearness, its conciseness, its innate simplicity. After an hour's duration the onlookers burst into spontaneous applause. Such applause was most certainly deserved."

"The Freshman"—Pathe Trade Show, London, England

The new Harold Lloyd comedy, being released in this country by Pathe under the title of "The Freshman" will be presented in England as "College Days." The following excerpts are from newspaper reviews of the picture published after a trade screening at the New Oxford Theatre, London.

Sunday Herald: "'College Days', the latest Harold Lloyd film, must be numbered among the few finest comedies ever produced. The Lloyd method is well known; he employs men to inject funny ideas into the plot. Hitherto they have been too prone to depend on mere knockabout, but this time they have tempered gagging with subtlety. What is more, they have allowed the actor to round off the situation, to sharpen their point by his own fast-improving pantomime; that is to say, the comedian makes the situations funny, instead of the situation making the comedian funny."

Daily Express: "Harold Lloyd's new comedy, 'College Days,' is not only a sensational laugh, but a most revealing picture of American fotball, in which 'men are men and necks are nothin'. 'College Days' is an enthralling film. and contains more of the real America and its likeable young people than anything ever seen here. In his latest picture, 'College Days,' Harold Lloyd proves himself again the best of all exponents of mirth. There is no other film player who even remotely approaches him in the presentation of laughter. The manner in which Harold scores this goal in the last minute of the game makes 'College Days' perhaps the most mirth-provoking picture ever made. It is, in fact, what I believe they call in America a 'wow.'"

Weekly Dispatch: "There is something quite new in Harold Lloyd's comedy, 'College Days'. The spectacled comedian introduces a subtle note of pathos which. combined with his usual body-shaking fun, is quite irresistible. It is not Chaplin type of pathos but something quite Harold's own—the same kind of lovableness which convinces us all so utterly that he is a nice fellow. The football scenes are thrilling and funny to the last degree."

Star: "Harold Lloyd is better than ever in 'College Days.' which kept a crowded house in almost continuous laughter at the New Oxford yesterday afternon. Our highbrows who always appreciate Chaplin, Lloyd, and Keaton, must not miss this one. 'College Days' reflects the spirit of youth, and its exuberance is such that it is doubtful whether Lloyd or any other star has been manhandled and 'leg-pulled' so much before."

Morning Post: "The new Harold Lloyd picture, 'College Days,' presented at the New Oxford Theatre yesterday afternoon is assured of popularity. A knockabout, rough-and-tumble element is prominent in these adventures of the 'boob' at an American College, but it is genuinely funny, and there is no doubt about the film being laughter-provoking."

Referee: "This is a jolly film, showing us not only some acting from Harold Lloyd absolutely at his best, but quite a deal of the happier side of young America. It is sure to be popular—at any rate to judge from the laughter at the New Oxford's 'showing.' Altogether good, young and full of wholesome fun."

Evening News: "Early as it is to discuss Harold Lloyd's next comedy which at present is not due for release until next January. I cannot resist a hint that it is one of his very best. I was two hours late for lunch through seeing 'College Days', as it is called, and yet I laughed heartily all the time it was showing."

Times: "'College Days', Mr. Harold Lloyd's new film, is one of the best he has made, and as a result, one of the most amusing films yet seen. In it Mr. Lloyd once again proves not so much that he is himself a great comedian, as that he is a great creator of comic situations. The humor never flags."

"The Gold Rush"—United Artists, Strand, New York City

World: "Charlie Chaplin's new film comedy, 'The Gold Rush', is entertainment good enough for anybody in the world. There is every reason to suspect that it will be considered by many as the best thing which Mr. Chaplin has done. In it there are episodes as hilariously comic as have been placed on the screen in years, and there hovers over it a strain of moving pathos. If I were you I certainly would not consider missing 'The Gold Rush.'"

New York Times: "'The Gold Rush' is a comedy with streaks of poetry, pathos, tenderness, linked with brusqueness and boisterousness. It is the outstanding gem of all Chaplin's pictures, as it has more thought and originality than even such masterpieces as 'The Kid' and "Shoulder Arms.' There is more than mere laughter in 'The Gold Rush.' Back of it, masked by ludicrous situations, is something of the comedian's early life—the hungry days in London, the times when he was depressed by disappointments, the hopes, his loneliness and the adulation he felt for successful actors. Mr. Chaplin's acting in this film is more sympathetic than in any of his previous productions."

New York American: "In the years to come, when the name of Charles Chaplin is only a memory, 'The Gold Rush' will be spoken of as an example of the comedian's art. Yes, 'The Gold Rush' is a great picture. Charlie Chaplin is the one person who can write, direct and act without getting in his own way."

H. G. Rosebaum, formerly branch manager of the local Paramount Exchange, has been appointed District Manager in the Dallas territory.

James Clark, formerly connected with the San Francisco exchange of Paramount, has been appointed special representative of the company's advertising sales department.

Central Penn

A TWO-STORY addition is to be made to the building which houses the Third Street Theatre in Easton, by the Pomfret Realty Company owners of the property.

As an added attraction to the motion picture shows, the Victoria Theatre, Mahanoy City, has booked Professor George Schwartz, formerly of the Department of Music of Columbia University, New York City, for a limited number of weekly engagements to help attract the crowd during the warm weather of the late summer. Professor Schwartz plays operatic and other musical selections on the pipe organ. The Victoria is one of the theatres of the chain operated by the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises.

Another Chamberlain house, the Victoria in Shamokin, offered as a special attraction during the week of August 10, daily musical programs by Michael Slowitzky's Orchestra, from Mahanoy City.

Summer business was stimulated at the motion picture and concert pavilion at Schuylkill Park, Pottsville, during the week of August 10, by the introduction of several novelty features.

The home office of the Comerford Amusement Company, in Scranton, which conducts a big chain of theatres in the hard coal mining regions, has a new stenographer in the person of Miss Helen Walsh, who succeeds Miss Lilian Wicker, who recently was married.

A combined "double show" of movies, minstrels and vaudeville was offered during the week of August 10 in the Star Theatre, Canonsburg.

It is reported that the recent negotiations for the sale of the Franklin theatre, Allentown, by John Buck to Joseph Capkovic, failed of materialization and the theatre will continue to be operated by Mr. Buck.

The Strand Theatre, Allentown, introduced for the week of August 10, in addition to the picture program, a special concert by Charles Fenstermacher and his orchestra of eight pieces.

A hall completely equipped for motion picture shows and other forms of entertainment, including a stage and other theatre devices, has just been erected at an expenditure of $18,000, as a sort of community center, by the municipal authorities of Rehrersburg, in cooperation with the Keystone fire company. Part of the building, which covers a plot 40 by 115 feet, is used as a fire house. It is a two-story structure.

The Victoria Theatre, Mahanoy City, one of the Chamberlain Enterprises chain, has introduced special summer prices of ten cents for children and twenty-five cents for adults.

The ordinance passed by the City Council of York, permitting the new Strand theatre, just built there by the Nathan Appell interests, to use an electric display sign on the canopy overhanging the sidewalk in front of the theatre, provides that the city shall receive a fee of $100 for the permit. The new ordinance supersedes a city law of long standing which prohibited the use of such signs, and it was passed only after a spirited controversy.

One hundred orphan children of the Children's Industrial, Day Nursery and Sylvan Heights homes, in Harrisburg, were guests of George Vint, manager of the Grand Theatre in that city, at a special motion picture show on the afternoon of August 11. Each week now the orphans are the guests at a similar show at the Grand, on which occasions children of the playgrounds, other than the orphans, are admitted at the nominal price of 5 cents.

If psychology has anything to do with making people think they are cool in the hot summer months, the management of the Hippodrome Theatre, York, has solved the problem. A very cooling appearance has been given to the front of the theatre by the placing of an electric fountain above the main entrance. It is flanked by artistic paintings of icebergs on which colored lights play at night.

Omaha

William Hawley, exhibitor of North Platte, Nebraska, where he operates the Keith and Sun theatres, was here this week visiting the local exchanges.

Edgar E. Duncan, city commissioner of Lincoln, Nebraska, formerly owner of the Colonial theatre, was a visitor at the exchanges this week. Although he does not own a theatre at the present time he is still interested in theatrical affairs and his friends would not be surprised if he would enter the exhibiting field again.

F. M. Baxter, formerly connected with the Fox Film exchange in Kansas City, has joined Warner Brothers here. He will handle part of the Iowa territory.

Miss Hazel Anderson, secretary to Mr. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, is having a two weeks' outing at Lake Minnetonka, Minnesota.

A surprise on his own screen awaited Harry Watts, manager of the Rialto theatre, when he returned after a few days' visit to Chicago. August Terman, assistant manager, had built up a novelty organ number featuring the song, "Grow With Growing Omaha." The words were written by Mr. Watts some time ago to music composed by Julius K. Johnson, formerly organist and manager at the Rialto.

The Western Theatre Supply company is opening a new branch store in Des Moines, Iowa, at 416 West Tenth street, for the benefit of the Eastern Iowa exhibitors.

Harry Goldberg, general manager of the World-Realty company theatres and Mrs. Goldberg played the leading role in a "Midnight Show" last Thursday. Just as they were entering their garage after leaving the theatre a holdup man stepped up, covered them with a pair of revolvers, and demanded their jewelry. When Mrs. Goldberg screamed he threatened to kill them both. Mr. Goldberg's bulldog, "Lady," began to howl and the bandit repeated his threats. He took a four carat diamond ring, valued at $1500 from Mrs. Goldberg and $10 from Mr. Goldberg, overlooking a diamond on his finger.

The robbery of the Goldbergs was the climax of the bandit's career of the evening. He had held up three garages and stolen two automobiles earlier in the evening. At one place, he tore the telephone from the wall so the alarm could not be spread. The bandit made his escape.

Earl A. Bell has been appointed Omaha branch manager for Warner Brothers. He was formerly connected with the legitimate theaters here, including the American Music Hall, now the Strand theater, the Krug theater and the Burwood theater, now the Gayety. He then entered the film game and was with the Fox Film company for five years. Leaving Fox he handled Warner Brothers pictures in Omaha and Kansas City for three years. Recently he was in Indianapolis for Warner Brothers and was transferred here as branch manager, taking effect August 3. He took the place of Ed F. Tarvel, who resigned to enter the real estate game in Florida.

Detroit

JAKE and Alex Schreiber, who for a number of years have operated the Blackstone and Frontenac theatres have split their partnership and henceforth will be in no way connected with each other. Jake will own and manage the Blackstone while brother Alex will content himself with the Frontenac.

Max Ruben of the Amusement Supply company has been appointed chairman of the local committee on arrangements in connection with the 1926 convention of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, which will be held in Detroit.

Jules Levy, general sales director of Universal, was in Detroit during the past week.

Fred T. Grenell, whose specialty is theatre publicity, has moved his offices to 1057-1060 Book building, where he has much larger quarters. Grenell has had much success as a press representative for the local celebration of Greater Movie Season.

Thomas P. Ronan has been appointed manager of the Palace theatre in Flint, a Butterfield house.

New York and New Jersey

LEON O. MUMFORD, a pioneer motion picture theatre manager, is to be general director of the executive staff at the Capitol Theatre, Newark's new exclusive photoplay house at Broad and Market Sts. which will open during the month of September. In this same locality, seventeen years ago, Mr. Mumford opened "The Arcade", a type of theatre that has entirely disappeared.

The policy of the Capitol will be to show the finest pictures obtainable, and at a reasonable admission, and will also feature the super-productions that have heretofore been shown in the legitimate houses at a large increase.

Recently Mr. Mumford has been associated with the City and Tivoli theatres in the Roseville section, and as he first came to Newark from the old Manhattan theatre where Gimbel's store now stands, he is again leaving a Broadway playhouse, the Gotham at 135th Street, which has a seating capacity of three thousand.

Members of the Fox New York Exchange sales staff, under the able direction of Harry Buxbaum are anticipating what is to be known as "A Million Dollar Dinner" which will be held during the month of September at the Ritz-Carleton Hotel. This will be a reward for the efforts of the New York and New Jersey staff at the culmination of a huge drive that is now being made to bring in a stipulated amount of business, and from all reports that are coming in, there doesn't seem to be any danger of the boys being disappointed.

Several changes have taken place on the Fox sales staff and it looks as though Harry Buxbaum's machine gun corps is about complete. Gus Solomon and Ed Schnitzer, two heavy hitters that were formerly with Producers Distributing Corp. and who won first and second prizes during the latter's National sales drive, have recently signed up. Mr. Solomon will be located in New York City and Mr. Schnitzer will cover a portion of Brooklyn. Bernard Scholtz, known as the "Humorist" will cover South Brooklyn. Before joining the Fox organization, Mr. Scholtz was also under the banner of Producers Dist. Corp. for a period of three years and previous to that connection, was with Warner Bros. for two years. He is an old Western Press Association man, was at one time connected with the Paris Police Commission and in addition to his sales duties, is publicity manager for "Fox Folks," a Fox house publication. And then there is Frank Walsh who started in the theatrical business at the age of seventeen with Sam Harris and who was at one time a special representative for Universal in Canada and later on connected with D. W. Griffith. Mr. Walsh resigned from the Fox staff last spring, recently came back under the new regime and will cover Long Island and Up-State. Julius Schwartz is the only one of the old force that is left. He is a veteran of the organization, having been a Fox salesman for twelve years with a fine record and extremely well thought of by local exhibitors. Mr. Schwartz handles the lower section of New York City. Herb Kaufman, who left a fine record with the Metro sales force, will cover Upper New York. Under Joe Lee, the manager of the New Jersey division and who was recently associated with Milton Kussell at Paramount New York Exchange, are Fred Langtree, Chas. Kenneth and Joe Levee. As we stated before—the dinner seems to be a certainty.

Gardner James who will play the male lead in "The Gilded Highway," J. Stuart Blackton's production for Warner Bros.

Max F. C. Goosman, Home Office Manager of Vital Exchanges, Inc.

John Hammel, Paramount New York Exchange chief, has returned from a trip up thru New York State. During the past few weeks the City of Buffalo has come under Mr. Hammel's management.

The next meeting of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey will be held on the 28th of August at Wildwood, N. J., where the members will be the guests of Director William C. Hunt. Mr. Hunt's Wildwood theatre is the Casino and in addition he operates the Hunt Circuit which is composed of about twelve houses.

Next week Thursday, a group of Manhattan Beachites, headed by President Joseph M. Seider, will pay a visit to the Long Island City Studios of the Famous-Players-Lasky Company where they will go on a tour of inspection of the present day methods of production.

Paul Bern, who has just been signed by Louis B. Mayer to direct a series of pictures for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Jacob Unger, who operates the Court theatre, Newark, N. J., suffered considerable damage from a fire that occurred in his theatre last Sunday. A couple of weeks ago this same theatre was broken into and acts of vandalism committed. It is thought that the fire was of incendiary origin.

The friends of Julius Joelson will regret to hear of the death of his father which took place last Saturday night. Mr. Joelson operates several theatres, namely, the Crescent, Melrose and Belmore in New York and the Parthenon in Brooklyn.

Small and Strassberg will open their new Terminal theatre on September the 15th. The Terminal is a 1500 seat house and located at Dean St. and 4th Ave., Brooklyn.

Chas. Goldrever and Morris Fleischman will also open the Manor at Ave. K and Coney Island Ave., about October 1st. The Manor is a 2000 seat house.

Bill Atkins, assistant to Chas. O'Reilly the President of the T. O. C. C. of N. Y., is vacationing with his auto for a well earned rest up through the New England States. Mr. Atkins has charge of the Bohemian, Annex, Rex and 68th St. theatres.

Callers among the exchanges this week include Pete Woodhull of Dover, N. J., Dave Kaiserstein, who has the Dewitt at Bayonne, George Jerodsky, of the Regent at Summerville, William Keegan of the Hildinger and Newberry Circuit, James Ritter, and Joe Schoen of the Palace theatre, Bound Brook.

Leon O. Mumford, General Director of the Capitol theatre, Newark, New Jersey.

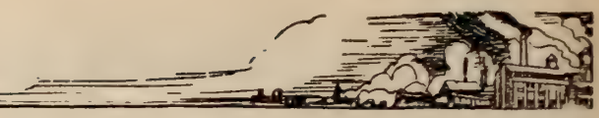
Before leaving on a trip to Europe, Sam Bullock, former Sec'y of the Ohio M. P. T. O., made his headquarters at the office of Jos. M. Seider.

Matt McNamara has remodeled his Midwood theatre located on Ave. J, Brooklyn, and has also increased the seating capacity.

Leo Brecher, who operates a chain of five theatres in New York City, is reported as about ready to open up a couple of new ones on the upper East Side.

Joe Steinkritz, recently returned from a week's rest in the country, has installed a new marquee on his Regent theatre at 81st Street and 1st Ave. He has also completed extensive remodeling and redecorating.

Local exhibitors are still coming and going on vacations. Irving Goldfarb, part owner of the Gates theatre, Coney Island, is leaving this Sunday to spend a two weeks' vacation at Lake Huntington. J. Idsen of the Montauk on Pitkin Ave., Brooklyn, has returned from a two weeks' auto tour. Ben Guttman, who operates the Atlantic theatre at 2646 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, will leave sometime this week for a two weeks' rest. W. Wollen, of the Hendrix theatre, 2245 Pitkin Ave., has returned from his vacation.



Harry Brandt has assumed full charge of the Cumberland theatre, Cumberland St., Brooklyn. Manager Ackman, formerly in charge has resigned.

Two more Brooklyn theatre openings are scheduled for this coming week. The Blake, at 138 Blake Ave., and under Sam Zahler, will open Thursday of this week. Mr. Zahler also operates the Review, The New Singer and the Miller under the firm name of the Rapthal Amusement Co.

Gus D. Stamatis's Apollo theatre, formerly called the Throop and located at Throop and Fulton Sts., Brooklyn, has been enlarged and remodeled and will have its opening on Monday, August the 24th.

Albany

SOME of the exhibitors in central New York have adopted novel methods of overcoming the trouble that is being experienced through electrical storms putting the lighting systems out of business for the time being in various places. At the Lincoln theatre in Troy, Manager Tony Veiller has placed a large electric flashlight in the rear of his theatre and no sooner does the power go off and the lights fade, than the flashlight is turned on. One night last week the lights in the theatre went out no less than five times, the projection machine stopping and then starting up as the power came back. In Richfield Springs, William Maxion, manager of the house, and Al Bothner, who is connected with the Smalley chain, using a flashlight as a spot, entertained the crowds one night last week with songs for nearly two hours, while the lights were out.

There is considerable speculation around Albany these days as to what name will be chosen for the new theatre which is being erected by the Strand interests. A good many people are suggesting that the theatre be known as the State, a name that will identify it with Albany's principal street as well as the fact that the city is the capital. Just who will be named as manager of the theatre which will be opened in March, is still undecided. Now that the Strand has taken over the Albany and the Regent theatres from the Sucknos, it is thought likely that Herman Vineberg, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, may also be given the management of the two additional theatres.

Edward Lyons, manager of the Capitol theatre in Albany for the past year, resigned during the past week, and has returned to New York. It is said that this house will go over to burlesque for three days, beginning in the early fall, and it is also rumored that Oscar Perrin, who suddenly resigned last week from the Buckley chain, may become its manager.

Robert Bendell, former manager for Selznick in Albany, and later on scouting for the Schine brothers for new theatres, is now engaged in the theatrical real estate business in Albany, and cleaned up handsomely during the past week in transactions involving the Albany and the Regent theatres in Albany, as well as the Lincoln in Schenectady.

Charles Walder, who has been manager of the Fox exchange in Albany for several months, and who was formerly connected with the Goldwyn exchange as manager, resigned during the past week and left almost immediately for Florida, where he will enter the real estate business. Mr. Walder has been succeeded by James F. Dermody, manager of the Fox exchange in New Haven, and whose home is in Elmhurst. When Mr. Dermody arrived in town he brought with him Austin Interrante, as a salesman.

The Rialto, in Little Falls, which is perhaps better known under its former name of the Gate- . and which was absorbed by the Schines some months ago and closed for repairs, reopened last Wednesday under most auspicious conditions. There were several floral tributes from Albany's exchanges displayed in the lobby.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange, is spending a two weeks' vacation in Far Rockaway. Helen Schleiger, of the Pathe exchange, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Lake Bomoseen. Edward Hochstim, a Pathe salesman is taking his vacation at Long Beach. Margaret Wolf, of the Universal exchange, is spending two weeks at the Hague. James Tunney, a shipper at the same exchange, is back from his vacation.

Joseph Schleiger, former assistant booker at the Pathe exchange, is now doing the shipping for Jack Krause, of the Bond exchange, succeeding Frank Matthews. Martin Schif, traveling auditor for Universal, has been spending a couple of weeks in going over the books at the local exchange. Sidney Katz, who is connected with the home office of F. B. O., but who is very well known in Albany, was here for a portion of last week.

When Carolyn Himmelberger, of the First National exchange returned last week from a vacation spent at Unadilla, a sparkler adorned one of the fingers of her left hand. No sooner did she enter the office than she was the center of a congratulating group of young ladies.

Jules Levy, sales-director for Universal, was met by H. C. Bissell, local manager for the company, at Plattsburg, and the two journeyed the past week through the Adirondack region, calling on practically all of the exhibitors from the northern border down to Albany.

Lee Langdon, one time booker for First National, and who has been connected in the past with several exchanges and known to exhibitors far and wide, is once more back on Film Row after an absence of several months. Mr. Langdon will act as the local representative for the Freedom Film company of Buffalo, which may shortly open an exchange in Albany if the business warrants.

Ben Davis, who has been looking after the financial end of the Schine circuit and who was formerly a Fox representative in Texas, resigned from the Schine organization last week. Mr. Davis was in Albany for a day or so, dropping in at several of the exchanges as well as the Albany Film Board of Trade. He made no announcement as to his future plans.

Bob Wagner, of Little Falls, very well known among the exhibitors of central New York, and who managed the Gateway theatre in that city until it was taken over by the Schines, is now connected with Renown and covering the Albany territory. Sam Freed was at one time local representative for Renown. At one time in his career, Mr. Wagner was connected with an animal act and as a trainer is said to have ranked with the best of them.

Efforts are being made by Jake Rosenthal, in Troy, to revive the old time illustrated songs. He has engaged a singer for each Tuesday night at the Rose and if the songs catch on, they will be featured one night a week. Mr. Rosenthal is admitting children each Tuesday during August at 5 cents. During the past week, Mr. Rosenthal has been entertaining his brother-in-law from Massachusetts, who appeared on the scene with a big Packard car, and as a result the Rosenthals have been doing quite a bit of touring, including a Sunday at Sharon Springs and one or two days at the Saratoga racetrack.

Although the American, in Troy, was due to reopen on August 15, delay on the part of companies supplying certain equipment, resulted in the opening being postponed for a week. Edward Trembly, who has been doorman at the Lincoln theatre in Troy, will act as superintendent of the house with Walter Roberts handling the theatre along with the Troy.

The program for the outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade at Luther's hotel on Saratoga Lake, on Monday, September 14, made its appearance during the past week. A. J. Herman will direct the day's entertainment The first event will be a baseball game at one o'clock between the salesmen and the managers. At 2:15 o'clock, there will be various races and contests and at 3:15 o'clock, according to the program, there will be water sports. Dinner will be served at 4:30. The first supply of tickets, numbering 500, has been virtually exhausted owing to a heavy demand from all sections, even including New York city. The First National exchange disposed of their first allotment and sent back for thirty more tickets last week. Jack Krause, manager of the Bond Photoplay exchange here, has taken 17 tickets, while other exchanges are doing almost as well.

The Lincoln theatre in Troy will observe its third birthday between August 29 and September 4. Manager Tony Veiller is now busy on a program which will be a part of the celebration and which will call for special music, much in the way of decorations and also one of the biggest pictures of the early fall.

Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold in Troy, observed his Old Home Week, starting on Monday, August 17, with added attractions each night, together with double features. On Monday and Tuesday nights, Mr. Golden featured Steve Harrington, a local soloist, while Thursday night brought an amateur revue of ten acts together with the D. and H. quartette. On Friday and Saturday nights, Mr. Golden featured Forrest L. Willis, a composer as well as pianist and singer, and whose selections had been broadcasted from the WGY station in Schenectady.

L. J. Carkey, who has managed the Schine theatres in Carthage, has assumed his new duties as district manager for Schines, having jurisdiction over a dozen theatres, with headquarters in Little Falls. Mr. Carkey has been succeeded by his brother, J. W. Carkey, in Carthage.

John Garry, manager of the Empire in Glens Falls, who has been at his home recovering from an operation for appendicitis, came back on the job two weeks sooner than he expected. When Mr. Perrin resigned from the Buckley chain, Alex Sayles was suddenly shifted from the Empire where he was stationed while Mr. Garry was recuperating, to the Leland, in Albany, making it imperative for Mr. Garry to return at once.

R. C. Kimball, who has been journeying along Film Row for several months picking up film for parcel post, has leased Woodman Hall in Westerlo, and opened it as a motion picture theatre last Saturday. Bob Grady, formerly of Vitagraph, has given up the Wawanda theatre at Haines Falls, the lease reverting to Rusk and Andrews, the original owners. H. C. Rawley, of Earlville, has sold his theatre there to a Mr. Bricker.

There is nothing the matter with the summer home which Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal in Albany, recently bought at Crooked Lake, but when it comes to the fishing in the lake, Mr. Hellman has a long story and one filled with many a note of disappointment. Mr. Hellman had planned to do a great deal of fishing. He bought for himself much in the way of expensive tackle as he believed the stories told of full creels. And now the sad part of it is that the summer is almost over and the only thing that Mr. Hellman has been able to catch are a few small sunfish and perch. The Hellmans will remain at their summer home until well into October.

E. H. Harriman, Jr., of Methuen, Mass., former owner of the Casco theatre in Portland, Me., was in town during the week, calling on J. H. MacIntyre, local manager for Famous Players, who was formerly stationed in Portland.

Adolph Kohn, the new owner of the Pastime theatre in Granville, is now improving the house in many respects preparatory to reopening the latter part of the month. Harry Rose, of Schenectady, has just been named as manager of Jimmy Rose's chain of houses. Henry Windekneckt, who is associated with Mr. Rose and who has been stationed much of the time at the Bijou in Troy, has found it necessary to devote more of his time to his business as postmaster. Mr. Rose announces that he will close his house in Queechy Lake on August 31, and will reopen in Kinderhook on September 1, with straight pictures. Mr. Rose appeared last week with a brand new Nash sedan.

Salt Lake City

A. P. ARCHER, of the Educational Pictures Denver office, has been here this week conferring with Clyde H. Messinger, manager of Educational here.

George Hayes, former manager of Associated Exhibitors in this city, is now on the road for Educational out of the Denver office.

A. G. Pickett, manager for Famous Players-Lasky here, has returned from a flying trip through the Montana territory.

Frank H. Smith, salesman for Famous Players-Lasky, has just returned from a trip through Nevada.

The Metro-Goldwyn salesmen traveling out of the Salt Lake office have come in from their territories to attend a sales conference conducted by Manager Cloward in regard to the policies of Metro-Goldwyn for this season. Those in attendance are: Joseph F. Samuels, who covers the Utah territory; E. E. Harris, working in Montana; Jack Connors, newly appointed salesman for Idaho.

C. A. Orr, manager of the Opera House, Grace, Idaho, is in this city, accompanied by his wife, and is arranging for new productions for his house.

W. E. Shipley, owner of the Gem and Empire theatres in this city, has just returned from a month's vacation which he spent in Yellowstone Park, Banff [illegible] Canada, and throughout the Northwest. He was accompanied by Percy Peterson, manager of the two houses.

Ed C. Mix, manager of the local Associated Exhibitors Exchange, is back from a three days' trip through Northern Utah and Southern Idaho.

R. H. Stackhouse who has charge of the Warner Brothers Exchange in this city, is working in the Great Falls section of Montana this week.

George Iensen, Montana salesman, D. T. McElhinney, Idaho salesman, are now working their respective territories for Warner Brothers.

W. F. Gordon, manager of the Associated First National branch here, left this week for New York City where he will attend the convention of company representatives.

Vete Stewart, crack salesman for Associated First National, returned from a swing through the Southern Idaho territory, and leaves this week for the central Utah section.

E. M. Gibson, assistant manager of the F. B. O. exchange, is in Denver spending his vacation with relatives. He expects to be gone two weeks.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures and Super-Feature Independent Exchange, was recently appointed receiver of Pleasure Park here. This park is the new open air theatre and dance hall which was opened this summer. Mayne reports a good business is now being enjoyed and anticipates that it will be but a short time until the place is on a firm financial basis again. Mayne is leaving the latter part of this week to work the entire Idaho territory, in the interest of the new productions which he recently purchased.

Lon Hoss, newly appointed salesman for George Mayne, has been assigned to cover the Utah territory and leaves this week on his initial trip. Hoss was formerly connected with the Universal exchange in this city.

Max Roth, personal representative for James R. Granger, general sales manager for Fox, who has been in this city for three weeks, leaves the latter part of this week for Los Angeles. Roth has been in conference with manager A. A. Schayer of the local office and the following changes have been made in the sales organization: A Singelow, formerly covering the Montana branch, has been transferrd to the Idaho territory; W. M. Hughart, formerly manager for First National in Butte has been added to the sales force and assigned to the Montana territory; J. L. Tidwell has been reappointed to the Southern Utah section.

Carl Stearn, manager of United Artists exchange, has just returned from a trip through Southern Utah, and is in Idaho making the key cities.

C. F. Parr, who has charge of the Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, is still in the Montana territory.

Allen Burke, local manager for DeLuxe Features, is leaving this week for the Yellowstone Branch, and expects to make an extended trip through Idaho.

James R. Keitz, manager of Greater Features exchange is back from Southern Utah. Since returning he has added a new salesman to the force in the person of Clifton Pearce, who was formerly located as an exhibitor in Brigham, Utah. Pearce is now out of the Greater Features office on an extended trip through Western Wyoming and Eastern Idaho.

Dad Rand, famous as the local movie humorist, has been entertaining "Film Row" and affording them much enjoyment this week. Rand is the manager of the Isis Theatre of this city.

The Orpheum Theatres, which opened the first of August, after having been dark since the early part of the summer, is enjoying a splendid patronage. The house is playing a picture policy only at present, and is setting a precedent for theatres in this city by operating with eight changes of program a week. E. A. Harris, who came from San Francisco to manage the theatre for the Ackerman and Harris interests which control the house, says that it is probable that vaudeville might be added to the program later in the season.

Out of town exhibitors who visited the local exchanges this week included N. Allermand, owner of the Star Theatre, Price, Utah; John W. Johnson, operating the Iris Theatre, Midvale, Utah; F. T. Duvall, who manages the Gem Theatre, Murray, Utah; John Rugar, managing the Orpheum and American Theatres, Park City, Utah, and W. H. Burt, owner of the Rialto Theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Cincinnati

A POCKET billiard match of no little importance will take place in Huntington, W. Va., the opponents in the game being Cecil Tipton, manager for the Hyman Theatrical interests and Ed Cook, Famous Players salesman. The contest is to be a 100-point affair. Abe Hyman, head of the Hyman interests, is to be the referee and his task will not be easy as both participants are out for blood, with Tipton slightly the favorite in the blood-curdling affair.

Harry Dodge, Famous Players manager in Columbus O., and Carl Weeks, salesman for the same office, spent the week end in the city after attending a general conference held for the salesmen and managers of the Louisville, Indianapolis, Columbus and Cincinnati exchanges at the Hotel Gibson on Saturday August 15. Chas. Regan, district manager for Paramount, presided.

Another devotee of golf in the Famous Players office is Mildred Bocklage, who is reputed to be wielding a mean putter for one so green at the game.

Walter Rand, doing special exploitation work for Universal, spent several days in the city.

I. Libson, head of the Libson Theaters, returned from his vacation at the sea shore looking much better after his long needed rest.

Al Sugarman, city salesman and short subjects manager for Universal, is touring the cities on the great lakes while on his vacation. He is accompanied by his wife and boy and from the latest news to reach the office Al was having a wonderful time.

Florence Shumaker, office manager for Universal, returned from her vacation of several weeks.

Herman Bly, of the Valley Bly Theater in this city, was seen on one of his very rare visits to the film buildings the other day.

Morris Frankel, handling several of the Frankel theaters in this city, purchased many pictures while on his weekly visit to the Broadway Film Bldg., last Monday. Another of the Frankel managers to be seen at the Broadway Film Building this morning was Moe Wilchins, who is recuperating from a severe illness of several weeks' duration.

Two other local exhibitors of prominence to make large purchases and bookings of pictures for the coming season were Dr. Kolb who heads a large chain of suburban theaters, and Izzy Schwartz of the Metropolitan.

Chas. Lowenburg, Universal exploiter, will leave on his vacation shortly with Cuba as the ultimate destination.

Elmer Shaw, a newcomer to the film game, has joined the Universal sales force. L. E. Davis, one of the cleverest salesmen in the game, is back with Universal after a short absence. This makes Davis' fourth time with this firm.

Lou Snitzer, owner of several theaters in Cincinnati and Hamilton, will leave for Florida soon to look after his real estate interests in that state.

I. Frankel, head of the Frankel interests returned from Miami, Fla., last week where he has been for some time, resting and taking care of his various holdings in the latter city.

J. E. Little, head of the Little Theater Circuit with headquarters at Bramwell, W. Va., was a busy little fellow around the film buildings the other day booking pictures for his various theaters.

Another exhibitor to visit the film buildings and exchanges was Harry Kaplan of the Dunbar Theater, Columbus, O.

Kansas City

"TELL me something," requested a friend of Adolph Eisner, manager of the Circle theatre, Kansas City, and former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, "how do you do it?"

He was referring to a "S. R. O." crowd for the second show on "blue Monday" night. Whereupon Mr. Eisner pointed to a sign above his head, which read: "Ten Cents To All."

"There's a way to operate small, cheaper houses and there's a method of operating large first-run theatres downtown, but as long as a fellow doesn't confuse the two methods of operation he's a good bet for a successful exhibitor," was the response.

Having operated both the large first-run and the "shooting gallery" type of theatres, Mr. Eisner's logic seems to be based upon sound facts, since he has transformed the Circle from a "flop" to a money maker in less than a month. Paint, decorations, poster sheets and a 10-cent admission did it.

It was "Greater Hustling Season" along Kansas City's movie row last week. A. W. Day, assistant P. D. C. branch manager, returned from his territory, while Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manager, was in Wichita, Kas., lining up business.

Mike Lewis, special representative for Paramount, revived old acquaintances in Kansas City, along with a business visit. He formerly was a salesman out of the Kansas City Paramount office.

C. D. Hill and R. L. McLean, district manager and representative, respectively, for P. D. C., spent a busy week in Kansas City.

Back only a few days, Harry Silverman, Independent Film Company representative, departed for the territory again, to be gone until September.

Bob Withers, Enterprise branch manager, who returned from a successful ten-day trip in the territory, asserts that exhibitors are much more optimistic than they were a month ago.

These exchange managers were away on selling tours: C. A. Schultz, Warner-Vitagraph; T. O. Byerle, First National; C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn; Harry Taylor, Universal, and Louis Reichert, P. D. C. A. H. Levy, former Fox representative in Washington, D. C., now is with the Kansas City branch, according to M. A. Levy, branch manager.

Miss H. Geerdts, Warner-Vitagraph booker, became so "inoculated" with the Florida land "get rich quick" excitement that she resigned to accept a position with a land company in the southern state.

W. Kaster, former veteran New York film man, has joined the Kansas City Universal sales force.

George Hartman, formerly with Vitagraph, has joined the Associated Exhibitors' selling force and will cover Missouri.

J. M. Duncan, special Warner-Vitagraph representative, was in Kansas City assisting Branch Manager C. A. Schultz in getting the Warner 40 placed as soon as possible.

A fire at the Lyric theatre, downtown Kansas City motion picture theatre owned by I. F. Deo and J. T. Wilson, Wednesday night destroyed five reels of film and damaged the booth and projection machine, but there was no damage to the house and the crowd filed out orderly.

Betty Jewel in the cast of "Invisible Wounds," the Robert T. Kane production for First National.

Herb Welsh, veteran Kansas exhibitor, has taken over the Orpheum theatre at Atchison, Kas., while Edward Dorrell, former manager, has returned to his home in Topeka, Kas.

The Lewis theatre, Independence, Mo., has been added to the chain of Glenn Dickinson, who now controls two houses in Manhattan, Kas., two in Lawrence, Kas., three in Junction City, Kas., and one in Independence, Mo.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were; W. J. Gabel, Grand Beloit, Kas.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; William Cuff, Strand theatre, Chillicothe, Mo.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

Glen Klock of the Klock theatre, Ottawa, Kas., soon is to become a benedict, it is rumored in authentic circles. The girl, the time and the place, however, is a bit in the dark.

Clarence "Bones" Smith, he of the high tenor voice, former manager of the Tenth Street theatre, Kansas City, Kas., has decided to try life on "the other side of the fence" a while, having joined the sales force of Associated Exhibitors in Kansas City. He will travel in Kansas.

Not 99 per cent, but actually 100 per cent co-operation has been obtained by William Burford of the New Burford theatre, Arkansas City, Kas., in putting over a campaign in conjunction with "Old Home" week, he says. All civic and educational, as well as church organizations are lending a hand.

Phil Wagner, manager of the Beldorf theatre, Independence, Kas., has his own ideas on promoting his theatre in the public eye. Here is a line he used in conjunction with his newspaper advertising the other day:

"A summer resort in the heart of Independence — The Beldorf, the coolest spot in town."

Cleveland

J. E. FONTAINE, for the past three years manager of the local Famous Players Lasky exchange, has been transferred to Pittsburgh as branch manager. He succeeds Mike Hughes, who has suffered a nervous breakdown. E. H. Brauer, Columbus manager has been made manager of the Cleveland exchange, and Carl Weeks, of the Columbus sales force, has been appointed Columbus branch manager. The members of the Cleveland Paramount exchange gave Fontaine a big farewell party at Rainbow Gardens. Thirty young folks were present, including division manager H. W. Dodge who came up from Columbus especially for the party. They presented Fontaine with a gold wrist watch as a remembrance of the three pleasant and harmonious years they have worked together.

J. L. Sears has been appointed manager of the local First National exchange to fill a vacancy following the resignation of Norman Moray who has changed his business from reel estate to real estate. Sears has been connected with the Chicago First National office as city sales manager.

Stanley Hand, First National home office representative, has folded up his tents and has wandered back to New York. He had charge of the local exchange in the interim of Norman Moray's resignation and J. L. Sears' appointment as resident manager.

The Film Bldg. Register was well patronized this week. Among the out-of-town visitors duly signed were L. B. Cool, of the Feiber and Shea theatres in Akron and Canton; John Pekras, Elyria; M. H. Hoffman of the Star theatre, Amsterdam and the Star theatre, Alliance; Raymond Wallace, Ohio theatre, Alliance; Ed. Shreffler, Opera House, Shelby; James McMahon, McTodd theatre, Willoughby; and Manager Smith of the Apollo, Oberlin.

Art Buck, of the Colonial theatre, Fostoria, has just returned from a four weeks' motor trip through Yellowstone and the National Park. Buck is full of enthusiasm both for the trip and for the sights. He drove every day he was gone, had only two punctures on the round trip and encountered nothing but pleasure. He even found the bears in the Park friendly and fed them out of his hand.

Sam Bullock, until very recently field representative for the M. P. T. O. of Ohio, sailed last Saturday on the Leviathan for a trip to Europe. Bullock says it's a straight pleasure trip, but that doesn't mean that he has to keep his eyes closed to European picture conditions.

Flavius E. Looney, head shipper of the Progress Picture Company, has just returned from a vacation trip to Columbia, Tennessee.

Louis Weiss, of Artclass Pictures, was in the city the forepart of last week, in close consultation with the independent exchange managers.

William Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome has just returned to his lake shore home where the breezes are guaranteed to blow, from a short business trip to New York.

George Schade of Schade's theatre, Sandusky, is again on the ticket for City Commissioner. It's a repeat campaign for Schade, as he has just completed a term as city commissioner.

A. E. Ptak, manager of the Lyceum theatre, Cleveland, has trailed the other exhibitors who have gone to Florida in search of treasure. He left last week and didn't leave any return date.

Messrs. Bly and Miller have sold the Liberty theatre, Geneva, to Ward Johnson.

Frank Mahalec announces that, beginning this week, he will run the Majestic theatre full time again. He was running on short time during July.

Sam Barck, of the Market Square theatre, is back from a short trip to Detroit and along the St. Clair river.

H. S. Hurlbert, manager of the Odeon theatre, Canton, is spending his vacation with his family in Canada where the fish are guaranteed to bite.

Seattle

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in this city last week of the appointment of W. K. Beckwith, former booker and office manager of H. A. Black's local Warner Brothers exchange, as manager of the new Warner Brothers exchange in Portland, which was opened early in August. Mr. Beckwith has already been installed in his new office by Harry Lustig, Western division manager of Warner Brothers, who has spent the last two weeks in this territory. Mr. Nave, formerly associated with L. K. Brin when the latter was the Warner franchise holder in the Pacific Northwest, now occupies Mr. Beckwith's post in the local office.

J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational Pictures Exchange, last week announced that he has completed negotiations for the leasing of the former Warner Brothers exchange on the northeast corner of Third avenue and Virginia Street and will begin immediately the removal of his office into the new quarters. Extensive alterations are now being made in the large office for Educational, and Mr. Gage is planning to entirely refinish and paint the premises before moving in. The new exchange is generally accepted as the most prominent office on Film Row, having been occupied by Metro Pictures up to the time of their consolidation with Goldwyn, and then having been taken over for Warner Brothers, by L. K. Brin.

Sid Hershberg, owner and manager of the Orpheum and Liberty Theatres in Havre, Montana, spent a few days here recently en route to his home town from California. He has been in the southern state for the last several weeks, on a combined business and pleasure trip. His present stay in this city was the first in many months.

William H. Drummond arrived in this city last week to accept the management of the Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, replacing Charles E. Feldman, whose resignation was announced last month. Mr. Drummond has had several years' experience in the motion picture field on the Pacific Coast, having left the Pathe exchange in San Francisco to accept his new post in this territory. After a short time getting acquainted in this city, he expected to make a brief tour of the larger cities in the Washington and Oregon territories.

Announcement was received on Film Row this week to the effect that the Myrick Theatre in Billings, Montana, had been taken over by Gene O'Keefe, prominent Montana exhibitor and former theatre man of this city. The house was formerly owned and operated by Lloyd A. Kennington, who took it several seasons ago from E. J. Myrick, also of this territory. Mr. O'Keefe now owns and operates the Babcock and Regent Theatres in Billings. He will rename the recently acquired house the Lyric, and will continue to operate all three as first-run theatres.

Jean Anthony Greif, former concert organist at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, last week ended his engagement at that house and has returned to Tacoma, where he formerly appeared in a number of picture theatres. His engagement in that city at this time will be at one of the houses operated by Jensen-VonHerberg for the H. T. Moore Enterprises, presumably the Rialto, although definite announcement to that effect has not yet been made.

Fred Walton, owner and manager of a number of motion picture houses in Bellingham, spent several days in this city last week, stopping off long enough to see the Greater Movie Season parade. He returned to his home town to inaugurate the season there the following day.

Lew Cody, who has just signed a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He will be featured, for the most part, in roles of the light comedian type.

A. H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices exchange, left this week on a business trip to Spokane and the Eastern Washington territory. During his absence, the F. B. O. exchange is undergoing a thorough renovating and cleaning, and it was a subject of debate on Film Row whether or not Mr. Huot would recognize his own office upon his return from the trip.

William Code, owner and manager of the Paramount Theatre, bid good-by to his patrons and friends last week, and set out for a vacation trip to California. He expected to be away for several weeks, and announced that he would bring back some new innovations for the audiences at his house upon his return.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Roach of the Selwood Theatre in Portland visited a number of the film exchanges here last week, for the first time in a number of months. They were returning from a vacation spent in and around this territory. Mr. Roach announced that he will soon have a definite opening date for his new Oregon Theatre in Portland, which is reported to be one of the most modern neighborhood theatres in the Pacific Northwest.

William Armour, owner and managing director of a number of motion picture theatres in Montesano, Elma, McCreary and other towns of this state, spent a short time in this city recently. He bought and booked a number of new season's productions for his circuit during his visit in Seattle.

Word was received here this week from O. McPherson of Kendrick, Idaho, to the effect that he still will retain the ownership and management of the Kendrick Theatre in that city. Reports were current recently to the effect that the house was to be turned over by Mr. McPherson to a Pacific Northwest theatre operating company, but the truth of this report is denied by the present director of the house.

Reports received from Edwin J. Rivers, former assistant manager and publicity director of Charles McKee's Heilig Theatre, indicate that he is entirely successful in his new venture as manager of a recently opened neighborhood theatre in Los Angeles. Local newspapers are still minus much of the enthusiasm and merriment that Eddie used to afford with his feature stories and press stunts for the Heilig.

John G. VonHerberg, of the Jensen-VonHerberg circuit, left his local office for a few days last week for a business trip to Yakima, where his organization operates two motion picture houses.

Denver

THE new Washington Park D & R Theatre celebrated its grand opening last Thursday night. It is the first of the three D & R Theatres now under construction in Denver to be completed. The capacity of the theatre is approximately 450 seats. It is located at 1028 South Gaylord Street in the heart of the Washington Park residential district. The second D & R Theatre to be thrown open to the public will be the Highland Theatre, located at 32nd and Lowell Boulevard and will be open about September 15th. The third theatre in Denver will be known as the Egyptian D & R Theatre located at 32nd and Clay. It is scheduled to be opened by October 15th.

Harry Lustig, new district division manager for Warner Brothers, arrived in Denver this week from Salt Lake City for a visit with the local branch of his organization.

Ed Schoelkoph, owner and manager of the Opera House, Idaho Springs, Colorado, is a visitor in the city. He reports a good season which means that Idaho Springs is as usual a favorite tourist resort.

Messrs. Krier and Kastner, well known exhibitors of Walsenburg and Boulder, Colorado, were visitors in the city during the past week. It is rumored that they have consolidated their theatres with the interests of the Western Enterprises Inc. although definite announcement of such arrangement has not yet been made.

B. P. McCormick, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Florence, Colorado, and the Opera House, Canon City, Colorado, has returned after an extensive tour of the South and Southwest.

Eugene Gerbase, manager of the local Universal Film Exchange, and C. M. Van Horn, manager of Pathe, are at present making the key cities of the New Mexico territory.

Charles R. Gilmour, Denver manager for Warner Brothers, announces the appointment of E. J. Lustig as salesman in the New Mexico territory. Mr. Lustig is the brother of Harry Lustig, western division manager for Warner Brothers.

Buffalo

HOLLIS A. SHILLING, for many years manager of the Flickinger store in Fairport, N. Y., has resigned to take over the management of the Rivoli theatre in the Shilling block. Mr. Shilling announces that new projection machines will be installed in the Rivoli and many improvements made in the building. The ventilation and lighting systems also will be changed.

Lockport, N. Y. stage employees have formed a new union with Austin Taylor, stage manager of the new Palace theatre, as president. Robert Spedding is vice-president and Grover McGowan, secretary-treasurer. The new union has been formed with the advent of two new theatres, the Rialto and the Palace, one a Schine house and the other under Paramount lease. The latter opened July 18 and on Labor Day will add Keith vaudeville to its picture program.

The Eastman, Rochester, orchestra, refreshed from its three weeks' vacation, is back on the job with Conductor Victor Wagner holding the baton for all performances. During the absence of the orchestra the musical accompaniments have been played by the organ.

Leo Murphy, salesman, and Percy Emslie, booker, have both resigned from the Buffalo Warner Brothers staff. Mr. Murphy has been engaged by Manager Fred M. Zimmerman as a Producers Distributing corporation salesman, while Mr. Emslie is returning to his first love—the hotel business. Clarence Snyder, former booker at F. B. O., is now holding down the same job at Warner Brothers.

Howard S. Riehl is now handling the Artclass product for Renown Pictures corporation in the western New York territory.

It's a hard life. No sooner than he arrived home from a trip to Europe, Joseph A. Schuchert Sr., owner of the Colonial and Columbia theatres on Genesee street, Buffalo, hopped off again for a tour of the Yellowstone National Park. Joe Jr., says tain't fair.

J. Walter Bengough, Esq., manager of the Jefferson theatre in Auburn, N. Y., was seen in Niagara Falls the other night talking with Charlie Hayman of the Strand and Cataract theatres. Walter is vacationing. Lionel Edel, assistant manager of the Lumberg at the Falls went to New York last week. Must be a big deal in the air.

The Lyceum theatre in Ithaca, N. Y., the home of Bill Dillon, president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., will play stock this season, but during the dull holiday season when the university is not in session, three acts of vaudeville and motion pictures will replace the stock company until about the middle of January. During the past season the Lyceum has been used almost exclusively for motion pictures.

George Reister has been appointed general manager for the Erie, Pa., division of the Rowland & Clark theatre interests. His selection was determined upon several weeks ago, when plans for speedy completion and reopening of the Aris theatre were detailed by James B. Clark, president of the theatre chain bearing his name. Managers of local houses remain unchanged with Thomas Fordham in charge of the Strand; N. C. Wagner at the State and Hiram Sallan at the Perry. Theodore Thompson, of Erie, who has been identified with picture house management for several years, has been engaged to manage the Aris theatre, which was destroyed by fire recently and which is being rebuilt. It will be ready within a period of several weeks. Jerome Casper who has supervision of all theatres controlled by Rowland & Clark, is giving the Aris work his personal attention.

C. R. Rogers has purchased from Mrs. Anna Shuss two frame buildings on north Center street, Corry, Pa., and later will raze them to afford space for an addition to the Grand theatre, at present a motion picture house. When remodeled, the house will be used for legitimate attractions.

George J. Walker, 8 Milton street, Buffalo, has been appointed manager of Shea's Court street theatre, succeeding the late Henry Carr. For more than a score of years, Mr. Walker has been connected with the Shea organization, for the past several years as assistant to Mr. Carr, who died in June.

William J. MacFarlane, who is interested in the theatre business in Canandaigua, N. Y., where he is also Mayor, will again head the Republican ticket at the coming election.

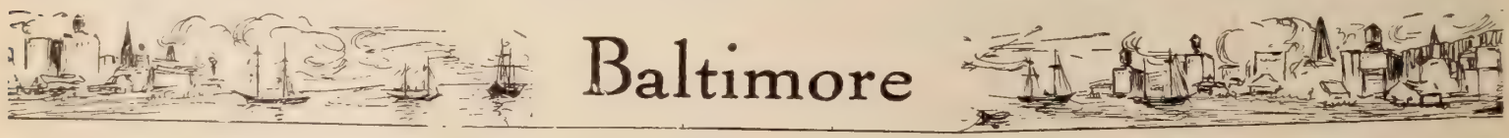
W. L. Winn, representing the National Screen Service, is seen around Film Row every afternoon in Buffalo.

G. Emerson Dickman, Fox salesman par excellence, has appointed Carl H. Fahrenholz his confidential secretary. Carl has assumed his new job in addition to his duties as managing director of the shipping department at the Buffalo exchange. The other evening "Emmy" and Carl started out together to drum up business, but the mysterious part of it is that Carl was seen in Niagara Falls, in Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo and with Ben Wallerstein of the Broadway theatre, Buffalo, all in one evening. Carl was trying to find "Emmy." It is rumored that Mr. Dickman is soon to write his memoirs as a film salesman. Several companies are said to be dickering for the film rights to the work.

George Rosing of the Fillmore theatre, Buffalo, has built a summer home at Crystal Beach. He has just returned from a trip to South America where he went for his health.

Frances Aichinger, manager of the Cozy Corner, Buffalo, has just been married to George Hill. Frances or Mrs. George is one of the livest woman managers in this neck of the woods.

Earl Kramer, manager of Buffalo's Universal office, is sporting one of the new Cadillac models. He broke it in the other day by driving to Rochester where some unfeeling motorists knocked the bumper on Earl's new boat for a row of orchestra seats.



Maurice A. Chase, president and general manager of Chase Pictures corporation, announces the opening of his Buffalo office at 258 Franklin street. Mr. Chase is handling the Preferred product in New York state. He has also opened an office at 676 Broadway, Albany. Mr. Chase is one of the best known film men in the state, he having formerly been vice president of Selznick and district manager for Universal as well as holding positions with other companies in the past.

Mrs. Ida Meranda has resigned as office secretary of the Film Board of Buffalo and has been succeeded by Miss Helen M. Powers, a sister of Ray Powers, assistant manager of the First National exchange. Mrs. Meranda has gone to Detroit.

Syd Samson of Bond Photoplays corporation, Buffalo, visited Saratoga Springs the other day to watch the ponies do their stuff. While there he met Dave Harrison and Morris Fitzer, Syracuse exhibitors. Syd picked a Spark Plug that is running yet—the other way.

A meeting of the directors of the Buffalo and Albany zones will be held soon in Buffalo to discuss arbitration. The by-laws recently drawn up have been O.K'd by the two zones. The date of the meeting will be announced in a few days by J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone.

J. Berkowitz, manager of the Buffalo office of First Graphic Pictures, is receiving many congratulations on the Buffalo material published in the First Graphic Bulletin which is being issued monthly by his company. H. L. Berkson is managing editor of the newsy little sheet.

Baltimore

THE fire damaged property of the Lyceum theatre, 1209-1213 North Charles street, owned by the James L. Kernan Company, will not be used as a funeral establishment by William Cook who has an option on the property.

The application to rebuild the structure for his purposes has been disapproved by Charles H. Osborne, Building Inspector of Baltimore.

When Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Rivoli theatre arrived at his home recently, he found the electric current was shut off from the second floor. Upon investigation it was found that the house cat had tampered with one of the sockets in the cellar causing a short circuit.

Lee McLaughlin, publicity manager of Keith's Hippodrome, has resigned from that position and will take a vacation before becoming associated with the James L. Kernan Company to be connected with the work this season at the Maryland, Auditorium and Academy theatres.

The Victoria theatre, 415 East Baltimore street, was reopened to the public on Friday, August 21, by H. A. Blum, the proprietor.

Another fire occurred in the projection room of the Cluster theatre, 303 South Broadway, on Friday night, August 14, resulting in Henry Cluster being burned about the arms and body severely. Mr. Cluster was treated for the burns at John Hopkins Hospital. About 500 patrons in the theatre at the time knew nothing of the fire for the show was continued after a short wait despite the blaze which was extinguished finally by chemicals.

A theatre building will be constructed at Portsmouth, Va., by the Portsmouth Improvement Company, of which Paul G. Blanford is president. The structure will measure 57 by 112 feet and cost about $45,000. The plans were designed by Charles M. Major, architect.

A two story theatre building measuring 75 by 125 feet is now being constructed at Pineville, Ky., by Dr. J. S. Conn and W. Handley Goddie. Plans were designed by John J. Nolan, architect, Cincinnati. Cost of the structure will be about $60,000.

Canada

A BUILDING boom is in progress in St. John, N. B. where several of the leading film company branches are going ahead with the erection of specially designed fire-proof structures.

One of the new buildings, to be erected on Princess Street, back of the Imperial Theatre, is to accommodate Regal Films, Limited, and Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., and Henry Nathanson of Toronto, brother of N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players in Canada, has been a visitor in St. John, to arrange details.

The site for the other film exchange building is the old Gem Theatre which was burned down some time ago. This structure will be used by the St. John branch of First National Pictures of which William Melody is the local manager. Louis Bache of Toronto, Canadian general manager for First National, made the trip to St. John recently for the purpose of looking over plans and other details for the new building.

Harold Bishop, the new manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, a big house in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has gathered about himself a strong group of staff executives who are holding sway since the reopening of the theatre in August. The new musical director is Albert Demkier, formerly assistant to Earle Hill, conductor of the orchestra at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg. George Parker, also formerly at the Capitol, has charge of the mechanical staff while Harold St. John Naftel, well-known in Western cities as well as formerly in Detroit and other American centres, is appointed the organist.

J. Coleman has announced that his company, the Coleman Electric Company, Toronto, will move from its present premises at 21 Dundas Street East to the ground floor at 258 Victoria Street, Toronto, on October 1. The Coleman company does a large business in theatrical equipment, catering exclusively to moving picture theatres. It has handled Powers, Simplex and Motiograph projectors and other lines for years.

John Golding, manager of the Imperial Theatre at St. John, N. B., for many years, made a special hit with a large group of local and visiting club members on the recent occasion of the visit to the city of the Boston Canadian Club and its ladies' auxiliary. Both Canadian clubs in St. John as well as the Boston people were guests of Mr. Golding at a theatre performance and a number of the guests were also entertained at the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Golding.

H. C. Robinson of Beamsville, Ontario, has announced that he is selling his theatre there, which has a seating capacity of 375.

Fire of unknown origin broke out at 9.30 at night on August 14 in the Grand theatre building, 9-11 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, the loss being estimated at $1,-100. The Grand, which is owned by the estate of Ambrose J. Small who disappeared from Toronto over six years ago, has been closed for some months past. The fire is believed to have started in the rear of a confectionery store which occupies a portion of the building.

Harriett Hammond, recently signed by Hunt Stromberg, will make her debut on the Producers Distributing Corporation program in "The Idyll of Red Gulch."

The date of the reopening of the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, which was recently acquired by Famous-Players interests, has not been announced. Leonard Bishop, manager of the Ottawa Regent, has been appointed manager of the Russell.

The Regent Theatre, Toronto, reopened August 15 with a new manager in charge, Donald Brown a Scotchman by birth, who arrived in the Ontario Capital after wide theatrical experience in South Africa and Australia. Mr. Brown was personally selected as manager of the Toronto Regent by John Arthur, general director of both the Hippodrome and Regent Theatres, which are among the leading houses of the Famous Players Canadian Corp.

The Strand Theatre, a downtown theatre on Yonge Street, Toronto, reopened Saturday night, August 22, under the management of Nester Lavene who was formerly identified for years with the Star Theatre, Toronto. The house has been renamed Abbott's Strand Theatre and the structure itself has undergone considerable altering. It was in the Strand Theatre that motion pictures were first presented regularly some 20 years ago as a part of the vaudeville shows presented by Jerry Shea who now has his own big house on Victoria Street.

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, since last September 1, is relinquishing the lease of the Franklin Theatre, another local downtown house which he operated before securing control of the Keith palace, which was formerly the Marcus Loew house in the Canadian Capital. The Franklin will be reopened September 1 by other interests.

Des Moines

ELMER TILTON, manager of the First National office of Des Moines, took a bad spill when he hit a slippery road between Waterloo and Cedar Rapids. The car turned over but was not badly damaged although it had to be towed into town. Mr. Tilton escaped almost without a scratch.

The deal for the sale of the two theatres at Chariton, Iowa, owned by E. P. Smith, did not go through. The houses were to have been purchased by a couple of business men from Hawarden. The sale was not completed and the Lincoln and the Strand became again the property of Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith has also purchased the Newtonia Theatre at Newton, which was operated by Joe Ireland.

All the Des Moines exchanges picnicked on August 15 at Sycamore Grove, excepting the bunch from Pathe and from Producers' Exhibiting Association. About a hundred were there and enjoyed chicken and eats galore. There was a baseball game in which everyone took part, the players being changed every second inning. The winning team split the twenty-five-dollar prize put out by the losing team. It was a nice little get-together and a good time was had by all.

Metro-Goldwyn lost a salesman when Harry Herman, who represents them in the southern territory, was offered the position of manager of the Orpheum Theatre at Clinton for the A. H. Blank Enterprises. The theatre has been closed for a time and the opening planned by Mr. Herman is set for Sept. 1.

Van Dyke and Young have reopened their theatre at Pella, Iowa. The house has been closed while redecorating has been in process.

Milton Overbrook, who used to be at Rock Island, managing a house there for A. H. Blank, is now the manager of the Capitol Theatre at Davenport. The Davenport house was run for several years by Ralph Blank who left to go into another line of business. Mr. Overbrook was in Des Moines as booking manager for Mr. Blank and was also manager of the Rialto Theatre in Des Moines for about a year. The Capitol was recently equipped by the Exhibitors Supply Company with two new Simplex machines complete with Peerless lamps..

Mrs. E. R. Alexander, also known by her maiden name of Esther Frost, is leaving the office of the Pathe exchange. She will join her husband who is in Miami, Fla. Mrs. Alexander has been honored with a number of farewell parties. Her mother entertained the girls of the Pathe office who presented Mrs. Alexander with a farewell gift, a hatbox. Miss Belle Miller, Thelma Washburn, Gretchen Kelleher, Rose Browder, Edna Vicker, and Ruby Crow were there. The same week Gretchen Kelleher also entertained the Pathe girls in Mrs. Alexander's honor. Mrs. Alexander's place as stenographer for Pathe will be taken by Belle Miller, while Gretchen Kelleher will take her place as sales control clerk. Ruth Burgum has been added to the staff as biller to fill the vacancy made by the transfer. Miss Burgum has at different times and in different capacities assisted her father, who is manager of the Garden Theatre, Des Moines, so the film business is not new to her.

Harold Davis, cashier for Metro-Goldwyn, will visit Knoxville, Iowa, Kansas City and New Orleans on his vacation.

C. M. McNall is the new assistant manager of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines. He comes from Cedar Rapids. Mr. Shipley, who was formerly assistant manager of the Capitol, is now managing the Regent Theatre at Saginaw, Mich.

Harry Simpson of the Garden at Sigourney came in and booked some new pictures. C. F. Madden of the Masonic Theatre at What Cheer was also a caller in Film Row. John Waller of Osceola and Mr. Michaels of Leon called on Mr. Swarz of the Premier exchange. W. C. Hoadley of the Opera House at Garden Grove was also in to see about contracts.

Elsworth Hull is the new cashier of the F. B. O. exchange.

A. H. Blank has bought a half interest in the Rialto Theatre at Cedar Rapids.

In the opinion of Miss Mary Benjamin, secretary of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade, a much larger per cent of theatres have closed for the summer season than were closed last year.

John Veenschoten, manager of the Hiland Theatre, one of Des Moines' suburban houses, was called to Boyden, Iowa, by the severe illness of his mother. John Hohnson, booker of the First National exchange, is managing the theatre during his absence.

Clyde Pratt, formerly of the First National office, is now on his way to Florida. He's not going into the film business but will take a flyer in real estate.

St. Louis

THE St. Louis film colony was unanimous in extending its sincere condolences to Mr. and Mrs. William Goldman because of the death of their son, Randolph Goldman, 11 years old. The little chap was injured fatally Wednesday, August 12, when he fell from a tricycle in the lobby of the Majestic Hotel, St. Louis, where he was visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Sophia Sievers.

When he fell his head struck the marble lobby floor fracturing his skull. He died at a hospital a few days later. The funeral was held on Sunday, August 16.

Mr. Goldman is the owner of the Kings, Rivoli and Queens theatres and long a prominent figure in St. Louis film circles.

Col. David L. Stone, commanding officer at the Jefferson Barracks has won his fight for free movies for the boys at the army camp. Heretofore only Army pictures could be shown at the barracks theatre, but the boys were not satisfied with such thrillers and longed for the big stuff. In addition the rookies and regulars had to pay to see the shows. Through an arrangement made with the managers of the various St. Louis film exchanges Col. Stone has made it possible to give free shows of good films for the soldiers in the future.

Dr. H. R. Pitner, whose experience as a motion picture exhibitor dates way back to the nickelodeon days, has arranged to sell his Rex Theatre at Fairfield, Ill., to the Sexton Manufacturing Company, who also own the Pershing Theatre in Fairfield and Orpheum at [illegible]

Frank B. Hocking is general manager of the Sexton theatrical interests.

Dr. Pitner has been in ill health for some time past and was forced to give up active practice some two years. He is a fine gentleman, and a friend to all the film boys and they regret to see him getting out of the business. He is the father of Harry Pitner who covers Southern Illinois for First National.

Phil H. Heyde of the Elks Theatre, Olney, Ill., is confined to his bed by illness.

"Bib" Clarke of the Opera House, Effingham, Ill., who underwent an operation about a month ago is convalescent and expects to be hitting on all cylinders again about September 1. The boys are glad to hear that he is ready to put on the harness again.

Sterling, Ill., is to have a new motion picture and vaudeville theatre. William Schrader of Sterling is the owner and plans have been drawn by Bradley & Bradley, Rockford, Ill. The house will be 250 by 136 feet and one-story high. It will cost approximately $50,000.

J. Baker of Baker & Dodge, owners of the Grand theatres at Keokuk, Ia., plans to spend his vacation in Michigan.

Harry Weaver of the Grand Theatre, New London, Mo., is going to Minnesota for a few weeks.

Mrs. N. E. Fett of the Cozy Theatre, Kahoka, Mo., was called to her old home in Iowa by the death of her father.

The theatre at Wayland, Mo., has been closed. It is possible that it may be leased to new owners.

Claude McKean who recently was appointed manager of the new Fox Exchange at Memphis, Tenn., is expected back in St. Louis this week. He has been on an extensive trip studying conditions in his new territory.

S. Solig, formerly booker for Fox office at Kansas City, Mo., passed through St. Louis en route to Florida. Naturally he plans to enter the real estate business in that state.

Jack Underwood of Enterprise spent several days in the territory.

Visitors of the week included: Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; Messrs. Reber & Hirsch, Pacific, Mo.; Jimmy Boyd, Blytheville, Ark.; Harry Miller, Festus, Mo.; A. C. Mercier, Perryville, Mo.; Leo Bernstein, Springfield, Ill.; P. A. Feitz, Highland, Ill., and H. E. Nelson, Quincy, Ill.

During a severe electrical storm at Galena, Kans., the lightning struck the motor twice in the large pipe organ installed there, burning it entirely out, but doing no other damage to the theatre. As the organ was fully covered by insurance there will be no loss to the theatre owner.

Walter Kinkaid, of the Kinkaid Theatre, at Mulhall, Okla., is convalescing from a recent operation at Guthrie.

The New Theatre, at Salina, Kans., one of the oldest buildings there, will soon give way to a seven-story hotel structure.

The Klock Theatre, at Pittsburg, Kans., of which R. H. Klock is manager, is to be remodeled. The remodeling of the building is to cost $10,000.

The Rex Theatre, at La Grange, Mo., has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. J. Willis.

Oklahoma Theatres just closed indefinitely include the Orr in the city of the same name; the Broadway at Kiefer, the Lyric at Raymona, the Alhambra, Tulsa; the Cozy, Matador, and the Lyric at Spearman.

The Senate and Osage Theatres, at Shidler, Okla., have been merged.

Gayety Theatre, at Springfield, Mo., which has been closed for renovation is now reopened.

It is reported that Ned Pedico of Guthrie, Okla., is planning to build a new theatre in Guthrie.

L. A. Bover of Sapulpa, Okla., has purchased the St. Denis Theatre, and will change the name to the Iris.

L. W. Ramey, district manager for Fox Film Co., visited in Oklahoma City, Okla., this week.

Bill Para, of Oklahoma City, Okla., booker for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was appointed Traveler. He is succeeded by L. A. Maurin, also of Oklahoma City.

H. W. Reddoe, of Oklahoma City, Okla., is traveling for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A. C. Bromberg, President of Progressive Pictures, was an Oklahoma City visitor enroute home from California.

A vote is soon to be taken at Lawton, Oklahoma, to close the theatres at that place on Sunday.

J. W. Williams, president of Independent Film Service Company, was a visitor in Oklahoma City, Okla., from Dallas, Texas.

J. D. Wineland, owner of a theatre at Picher, Okla., and his wife, who are enjoying a motor tour through the east, are spending several days at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Otto Feese, of the Best Theatre, at Parsons, Kansas., has been visiting N. W. Huston, of the Columbia Theatre, at Columbus, Kans.

Miss Maisie Shades, and T. D. Kelly, both Paramount employes here, were married.

Milwaukee

FRED SEEGERT, manager of the Regent Theater on the Northwest Side, has returned to Milwaukee after a two weeks' vacation in the northern lake region of Wisconsin. Upon his return he found the house doing excellent business with prospects for the fall season bright.

H. J. Fitzgerald, manager of the Milwaukee branch of First National, has returned to the office after a two weeks' vacation which he spent in moving into and getting acclimated to his own brand new home in Washington Highlands.

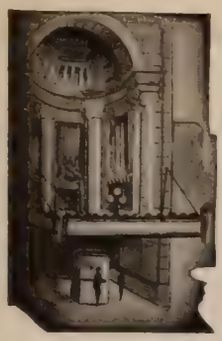
Ed. J. Weisfeldt, production manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theater, has returned from two weeks spent in New York on business for the mammoth picture house. Eddie assures his friends on film row that stage presentations at the Wisconsin will be easily 100 per cent better this year than last (which is going some!) While in New York he made arrangements that will lead to some mighty interesting announcements from his office in the near future, he states.

Following its preliminary two weeks' run under Universal management, the Alhambra Theater has been closed for remodelling. It will reopen August 29 after many comprehensive alterations, both inside and out, have been completed under the supervision of Dan Lederman, Universal's real estate and construction agent, who has been in the city for several months arranging for the "big turmoil" from which the Alhambra will emerge as one of the finest houses in this section.

Bill Roob, manager of the Grand Theater at Port Washington, dropped in at the Milwaukee exchanges for a pow-wow last week. His congenial smile was easy to understand after he explained how nice business is coming along up his way.

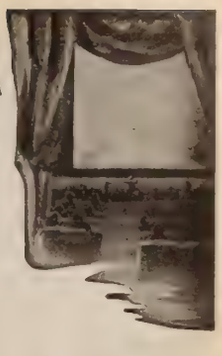
Exhibitors dropping in at the Milwaukee offices of Progress Pictures Co. during the past week, were greeted by an unfamiliar scene, for the outer offices had been entirely rearranged for greater efficiency and space economy. Those who boast of exploring proclivities found that the spirit of the thing had been carried out in all departments and that the distributing branch now is something of a model in convenient arrangement. J. G. Frackman, branch manager, beamed upon visitors across the freshly polished surface of his desk.

M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager for F. B. O., again paid a visit to the Milwaukee branch of the organization during the past week.



E. M. Michelson, operator of the Palace and Orton Theaters at Madison, was among the exhibitors who made their periodical appearance at Milwaukee's film row during the week. He endorsed the optimistic sentiments advanced by other visiting up-state exhibitors, and says his houses are doing a very satisfactory late summer business.

Rapid progress is being made on the two new picture houses under construction at Fond du Lac, Wis., and it is expected that the promoters will soon be announcing names for their respective theaters. One of the houses is to be added to the Saxe chain of houses throughout the state, while the Fischer interests will annex the other.



Direct distribution through the newly established Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation is now in effect and rapid progress is being made in the remodelling of the front offices of the exchange. Charles Lundgren, branch manager, has announced the addition of George Lemonoff, formerly of the Minneapolis office of P. D. C., to the sales force of the Milwaukee branch. He will travel the Fox River Valley.

Sam Thirion, manager of the Bijou Theater at Green Bay, Wis., motored down to Milwaukee Monday with his family. In addition to calling on the boys along film row he showed the sights of the city to his family.

"Doc" Holah and his Seeing America First motor unit, making pictures of leading cities and spreading propaganda for Universal, has left Milwaukee after creating a series of sensations for two weeks. He will take his troupe of boosters through Wisconsin and then head east to Detroit.

How to Secure Effective Theatre Lighting

Use of Illumination in Early Days; Recommendations for Modern Houses*

By G. G. Thompson

SOME theatre managers have already experimented with color organs, consisting of electric switchboards manipulated like a console of an organ, by means of which a "score" composed of sequences of changing colors is "played," this arrangement of colors purporting to interpret in terms of color the musical score or motion picture which at the same time is being played or shown.

Another application of colored theatre lighting for psychological effect is the use of "cool" colors in summer, and "warm" colors in winter. For example, a theatre illuminated with blue or bluish-purple light will seem cooler and therefore more attractive and restful on a hot day or evening. Conversely, illumination with a warm color like rose or amber renders the theatre more attractive on the cold days and evenings of winter.

As outlined above, the character of the performances to be staged imposes certain requirements on the theatre and to obtain the best results the theatre must be especially built to accord with the purpose it is to serve. As there are only a few theatres in each of the largest cities in the country which limit their productions entirely to drama, practically all theatres, outside New York City and a few of the larger cities, should be built either for miscellaneous productions or for moving pictures, or for a combination of motion pictures and vaudeville.

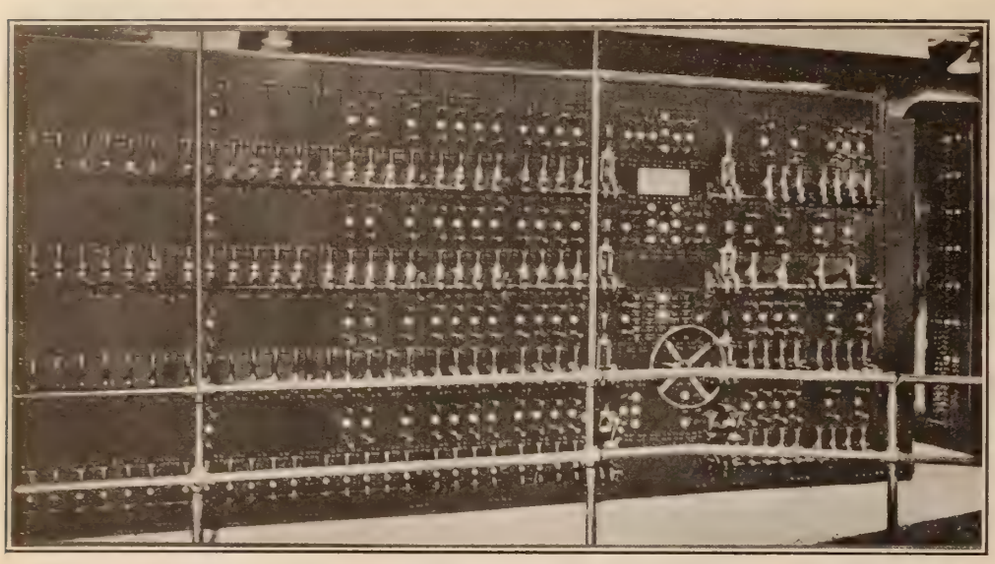
Owners Should Retain Theatre Architect

We cannot emphasize too strongly the need that when a theatre project is first conceived the owner retain an architect who has specialized in the building of theatres. There are those in the United States who, because of their wide experience in this line of work, can give very valuable assistance, not only in the design of the architectural features but in the general arrangement of the theatre and the proper selection of its location. Also, I would strongly recommend retaining an engineer who specializes on theatre and stage illumination to supervise this portion of the work. Fortunately there are some engineers in this country specializing in this branch on a purely professional basis.

Controlite installed in Proctor's Grand Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Before making specific recommendations as to the illumination of the theatre, it is advisable to get the viewpoint of the owner as to the type of production which will be played, and also what clientele he is trying to reach. In too many cases the owner simply has the idea that a theatre can be made to pay in a certain locality but has no intention of operating the theatre himself and does not know the type of production for which it will be leased when completed. Also, they frequently express a desire to have the finest equipment for theatre illumination that it is possible to produce, but as the building approaches completion, they try to cut this last item to the minimum possible and yet call the theatre complete and ready to lease for production.

In the design of a theatre to be used for moving pictures, either alone or in combination with other attractions, a totally indirect system of illumination should be used. With a totally indirect system of illumination it is possible to use the entire ceiling and some of the side wall as a source of illumination, and with this wide area the theatre can be illuminated quite brightly without having the brilliancy of this source of illumination exceed that of the average white surfaces in the motion picture and thus make it possible to use as high a degree of illumination as .2ft. candles without distracting from the clearness of the picture. The advantages of having this comparatively high illumination in the theatre are 1st: That the patron may find his way about the theatre without stumbling or the use of aisle lights—2nd: To relieve the gloom in the theatre, and 3rd: to decrease the eyestrain. Colored illumination should be arranged for all theatres of this type and is being provided in the better classes of such theatres, particularly in the Central and Western States. It is also highly advisable to provide a sufficient amount of white illumination for a reading light during intermission.



Advises Using Three-Color Lighting

It is quite customary to provide white and two colors, red and blue. This limits obtainable color effects to red, purple and blue. We believe much more beautiful results could be obtained if three primary colors were provided in addition to the white. The illumination during the picture should almost entirely be in color. This illumination is at a very low intensity so that it is not necessary to have as high a degree of illumination in the color as in the white. However, the absorbent factors of the present medium of color are so high that about the right results are obtained if the same wattage lamps are used in each color as in the white.

In order to attract attention and draw crowds it is highly advisable to illuminate the lobby very brilliantly. During the daytime the lobby should also be illuminated sufficiently so that it will not appear dull in comparison with the daylight outside. While very beautiful results can be obtained in the illumination of the lobby with coves, there is no real objection to the use of crystal fixtures and semi-indirect fixtures provided they harmonize properly with the decorative scheme. From the lobby in toward the auditorium the illumination should be gradually reduced so that one entering from the outside will not be blinded but will have sufficient illumination to see his way about even under the contrasts which are necessary during the projection of the picture. Good practice would seem to call for the illumination of the foyer near the lobby at about 5 ft. candles decreasing toward the theatre and the lounge, mezzanine and rest rooms at from 2 to 3 ft. candles.

Theatres have been very well illuminated with indirect fixtures, coves and soffit fixtures with from 10 to 20 watts per seat in each color.

The above factors may seem high to some but cover a totally indirect system. Using semi-indirect and with some direct fixtures it is possible to provide good effective illumination with as low as 4 watts per seat per color.

It seems to the writer that there should be some cooperative effort made to raise the standard of the illumination of the small standard moving picture theatre. If sufficient attenion is paid to the lighting during the construction of the theatre, just as good illumination can be provided in the small urban theatre as in the large moving picture palaces built in the larger cities. This should not require a very excessive installation or maintenance expense.

In order to provide beautiful and harmonious lighting in the moving picture theatre. it is necessary to have an adequate system of control. It is not only essential to provide switches for the different sections of lighting, but suitable dimmers should be installed and arranged so that they can be operated either by the projectionist or by someone in close touch with him. It is very advisable to provide master levers to control the separate color groups and in the larger theatres a slow motion hand wheel should be furnished so that it is possible for the operator to gradually increase one color and at the same time reduce another. The switching and control equipment should be compact and convenient and, if possible, both the switching and dimming functions should be either combined in one piece of apparatus or arranged so the switches are adjacent to the dimmer control.

Lighting Control in Smaller Theatres

In smaller houses where the lighting is regulated from the picture booth, this control equipment is located as part of the wall between the projection room and the motor generator or machinery room. One of the largest circuits on the Pacific Coast regularly mounts the light control switches in the front wall of the projection booth between the picture machine and arranges the dimmer control handles on a long shaft extending over the inside face of this wall just above the port holes. The dimmer plates themselves are mounted above the ceiling of the projection room. Master levers are provided for operating any or all of the dimmers in unison. These are located between each of the machines so that wherever the operator is standing he can reach forward and adjust the lights. We consider this arrangement a very good one. The operator should be entirely responsible for good projection, and to be responsible for good projection he should have complete and accurate control of the lighting.

Recommendations for Effective Stage Lighting stage is provided for prologues and vaudeville production, a standard type of stage lighting should be provided which will give a general illumination of the stage with the white lights of from 50 to 80 ft. candles. This will require the use of borders about every 6 to 8 ft. in depth of stage and with a wattage of from 150 to 200 watts per lineal foot. For this type of theatre we would recommend the use of the same wattage in each of the colors provided. This will make it possible to obtain very beautiful color settings with the use of comparatively inexpensive draperies and stage sets. The foot lights should be from 4 to 8 ft. less than the width of the proscenium arch and should have from 150 to 200 watts per lineal foot. An iron stand with an equivalent number of spot lights is frequently provided in place of the standard proscenium trough. The direction of these can be adjusted to meet special conditions. A series of incandescent pockets should be provided on each side of the stage, and also one in the center and one at the rear of the stage. It is considered good practice to provide a pocket opposite the end of each border, having one receptacle for each color provided in the border. The dimmers for these pockets should be arranged one in each color group. Where a complete stage is provided, it is advisable to locate the control for all lighting, both house and stage adjacent to the proscenium arch at the right-hand side of the stage.

For the purposes of the average moving picture house, the resistance type of dimmer equipment will fully cover the requirements of adequate lighting control. For very large theatres where extensive lighting effects are to be employed, the reactance type is recommended. This is a recent development, the first installation being made in the Cleveland Auditorium.

Details of Dimmers

As is well understood by engineers present the principal elements of the resistance type of dimmer are the resistor plates, the movable contacts and the mechanical arrangement for manipulating the latter over the fixed contacts and the arrangement of the whole in a form most conducive to safety and convenience of operation. A dimmer is of course in continuous operation during the whole time the lights are dimmed. Consequently, in motion picture theatres, where the lights are dimmed by far the greater part of the time, it is especially important that the resistor elements in the dimmers employed should be capable of continuous duty with complete safety.

The most usual form of old type dimmer construction is that known as the top-of-board dimmer. With this arrangement the dimmer and switchboard were constructed independently, and the dimmers being mounted on top of the switchboard by the contractor. Since theatres in general have tended to demand more and more light, the dimmers have, of course, required a correspondingly larger space. The number of circuits in the switchboard, however, has not increased so greatly, and therefore the space required for the switchboard has not increased proportionately. This has resulted in many installations where the dimmers are mounted with three or even four rows of operating handles above the switchboard. Where the switchboard is built very compact so that it does not exceed a height of 4½ or 5 feet, this has not been so objectionable, but in many instances the switch-

Projection School

A LITTLE while ago George McBride, of Trafford, Pa., wrote in requesting information on the whereabouts of a school for projection which would enable him to secure the necessary training to become a projectionist. His letter appears below.

Dear Sir:—

I am writing for a little information, which I hope you will be able to give me. I would like to know if there is any school in New York City that gives a course in Motion Picture Projection, that is, a course that covers the new kinds of lamps and the other various improvements.

I live in a small town, so I do not have much opportunity to become acquainted with different kinds of apparatus. I am, therefore, writing in the hope that you know and can tell me of such a school.

Thanking you for this information, I am

GEORGE MCBRIDE

No Such Thing

We are sorry, Friend McBride, but there is no such school in existence, either in New York or elsewhere. By this we mean a school devoted to motion picture projection alone, or having on its curriculum a course covering all the subjects with which any projectionist worthy of the name should be familiar.

An attempt seems to have been made along these lines, however, as a year or two ago a New York college announced a course in general motion picture instruction which, however, leaned more to the producing end than it did to the exhibiting of pictures. Whether or not this course is still being given we do not know at this time.

Generally speaking, training in the rudiments of picture projection of any kind is received via the grinding, laborious route of experience coupled with studying articles, appearing, for the most part in trade journals and the proceedings of technical societies.

This is at best but a slow process and the miscellaneous information so collected by the student tends to form a disconnected, heterogeneous mass of facts which are so hard to digest and correlate as to well nigh discourage all further effort to learn the underlying principles governing this interesting subject.

The general lack of literature describing in a connected manner the laws governing motion picture projection is partly accounted for by the fact that it was only as recent as 1915-1916 that these laws were first formulated and expressed in plain understandable English.

These laws by the way are really understood by a comparatively very limited group of people since both the laws and their explanation have been circulated mostly by word of mouth instead of through the medium of publications.

Restricted Field

Probably the real reason why no projection school exists lies in the fact that, after all, the projection field is inherently quite restricted or limited.

The attitude on the part of the union to charge relatively large initiation fees has often been severely criticized for various reasons but right or wrong it accomplishes its object of protecting the members which is its principal purpose in life. A supposedly secondary purpose of the union is to promote education among its members so as to make the unionist stand above the non-union man and this really holds true in many instances since a number of locals hold regular meetings at which instructive lectures and demonstrations are given. But, as far as getting into the union is concerned here is where the rub comes in. In order to be eligible for union membership the applicant must already be a full-fledged projectionist and the only way in which he can learn the tricks of the trade and the more complicated things concerning projection is by being already a union man.

In other words, in order to get in you must know how and practically the only way you can learn how is by getting in.

Subjects Covered

To get back to the subject of a course in motion picture projection, however, even though such a thing is not available we would say that the following subjects would be included within the scope of such a course.

OUTLINE

1— Mathematics
- (a) Arithmetic
- (b) Geometry
- (c) Trigonometry

2— Physics
- (a) Mechanics
- (b) Optics
- (c) Electricity

3— Mechanics of the Projector

4— Experience in Handling Projectors

How to do it

The first subject, Mathematics, and the first and third items under Physics can be learned in any High School, Night School, or Correspondence School.

The third and fourth subjects should obviously be acquired by serving an apprenticeship in the projection room of a theatre under the tutelage of an experienced projectionist. This really constitutes the practical end of the course and ordinarily would come at the end of it.

The Stumbling Block

The second item under Physics, or the subject of Optics really forms the stumbling block of the course and is largely responsible for the inability of students to become proficient at the projection game. There is no place one can go to in order to obtain a concise, complete explanation of the phenomena contained under this branch of physics. Ordinary college physics does not treat of the special optical problems encountered in picture projection and there is no book available which satisfactorily explains, in simple English, the particular optical problems found in picture projection.

It is true that books have been written on this subject which endeavor to explain, in a crude manner, the principles underlying this specialized branch of physics but without exception all these books fail in that they present merely a miscellaneous collection of facts (and many which are not facts) arranged without rhyme or reason which only serve to utterly confuse anyone endeavoring to correlate the various statements with one another.

The thing that is sorely needed, and which, so far, has been utterly lacking, is a clear, concise, orderly presentation of the laws governing all picture projection starting with stereopticon lanterns and ending with motion picture projection.

The foundation for such a book is contained in a paper by Dr. J. A. Orange, which unfortunately was so general it its nature that it is practically impossible to get the full significance of his statements unless the reader already had a good understanding of the subject.

Until such a book on motion picture optics appears the only hope for projectionists endeavoring to learn something of this subject lies in gleaning information here and there from trade and technical journals which obviously leaves much to be desired so far as the beginner is concerned.

Movie Comic Operas Staged on Picture Screen

Movie comic operas can easily be staged on the screen, declares Walter C. Simon, noted composer, and one of the leading organists in the country, who is at present playing at the Strand theatre.

"By throwing the verses on the screen, during the telling of a light play, and playing music which fits the words exactly, a movie comic opera can be produced," he explained. In that way the audience can carry the verse and the rhythm with the music, the tempo being set by the organist.

"To be sure, effects of all kinds must be used in such a presentation. Every good organist should have any number of such changes ready, for I feel that any picture is made more realistic by their application."

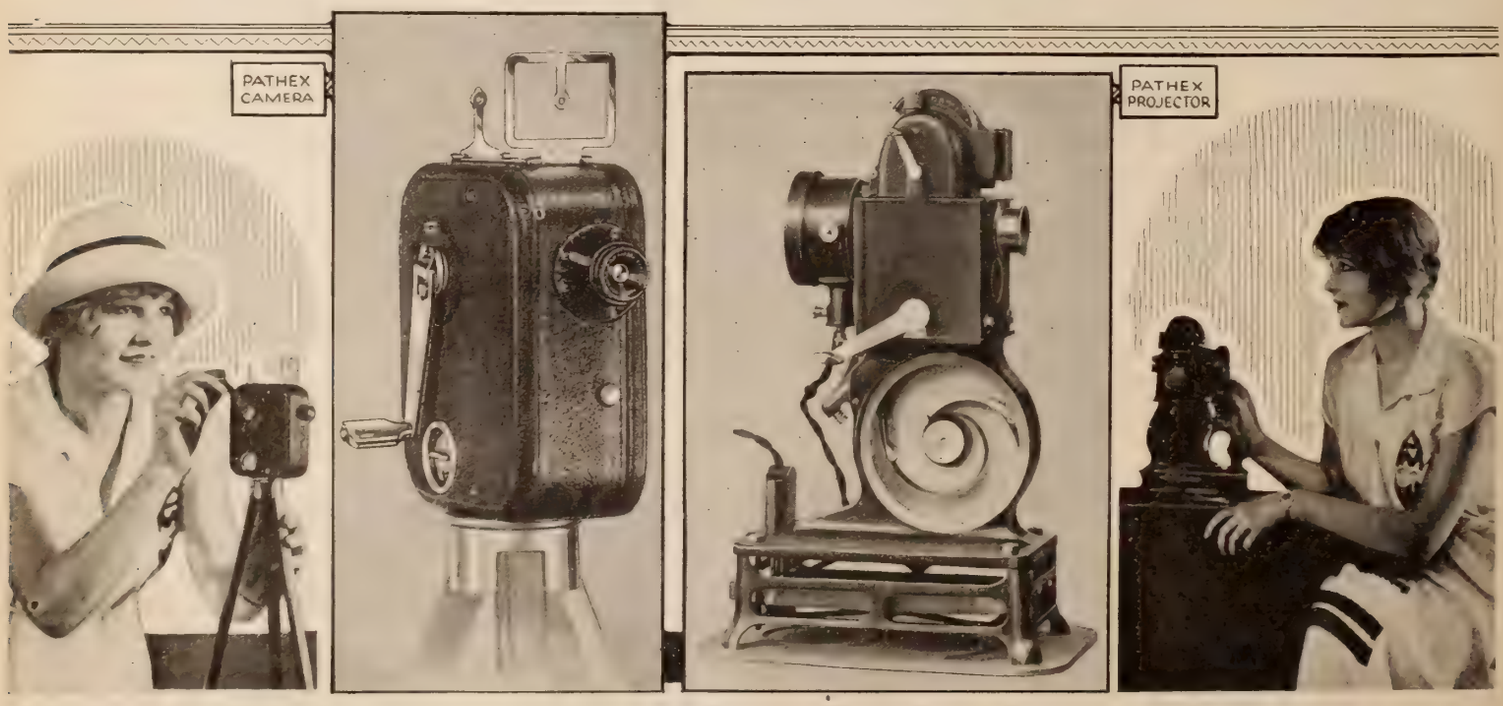
Motion Picture Outfit for Home Use Placed on Market by Pathex, Inc.

ONE of the most important developments in recent years in the field of motion-picture equipment has just been announced with the release on the market of a new camera and projector designed exclusively for non-theatrical purposes. The handling of each machine has been so simplified as to be almost automatic; and because of this facility of operation, the invention is expected to accomplish much in the popularizing of the motion-picture in such circles as have not already been won to the screen.

The American sponsors of the invention have been organized as the Pathex, Inc., which is a subsidiary of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Pathex, Inc., is promoting the new camera and projector in America under license from Pathe Cinema of Paris, the patentees. The invention has already been demonstrated to be a positive success in France and other European countries where many thousands of the Pathex sets are being sold monthly.

The invention comprises a motion-picture camera and projector so small as to be enclosible in a small-sized hand-bag, the combined weight of both machines being about five pounds. Both camera and projector are the acme of scientific construction and engineering technique and represent the fruits of over several years of continuous study and experimentation, it is claimed. The specially manufactured film stock to be used in this apparatus is non-burning. The entire Pathex set, including motion-picture camera, projector and accessories, is procurable at less than $100 retail.

The Pathex camera is 3⅜ inches long, 4⅛ inches high, and 1⅝ inches wide. The lens is an f3.5 non-adjustable fixed focus anastigmat. "Close-ups" of objects in motion can be made at five feet, and the camera can be used immediately thereafter to photograph distant views without any focus adjustment. A calibrated lens adjuster permits the operator to vary the diaphragm opening in accordance with light conditions. A chart, simplified for the use of the amateur, indicates at a glance the proper lens adjustment to be employed. A view finder is conveniently located on top of the camera. A footage indicator on the side ef the camera shows automatically how many feet of film have been exposed and how much remains in the film-magazine to be used.



The film stock employed in the Pathex camera and projector is of the reversible variety; that is, the negative film exposed in the camera is reversed by a special process to a positive. Accordingly, the same film is used in the projector that has been previously exposed in the camera. The film magazine contains thirty feet of film, is light-proof, and can thus be inserted in the camera in full daylight. The individual frame as 2/8 by ⅜ inch, and there are 1100 such frames in the thirty-foot reel, making the Pathex reel equivalent to 69 feet of standard film. A special feature of the Pathex film is that the perforations are located in the center of the film strip between the individual frames instead of on the edges as in the case of the standard film. A pull-down claw, seated directly in front of the film track and below the lens, engages and disengages in these perforations as the crank is turned, thus drawing the successive frames of the film in line with the lens aperture. The film magazines can be procured at any Pathex agency at less than two dollars each. When the entire thirty-foot reel has been exposed, the film magazine is removed from the camera and forwarded to the Pathex laboratory where the film is developed and returned, at no extra cost, to the owner in a ready-to-use reel for the projector.

The Pathex projector, like the camera, combines to a marvelous degree efficiency of operation with compactness of space. The projector is 12½ inches high and is fastened to a base 7 inches long and 3¾ inches wide. It has all the essential mechanisms of the standard projector—lamp house, upper and lower magazines, adjustable lens, shutter, intermittent, and an ingenious arrangement of cogs and friction rollers to assure a steady pull on the film strip as it is drawn by the pull-down claw before the projecting lens. The projector is equipped with a 12-volt lamp, current for which is secured from the ordinary house circuit by merely plugging into a convenient outlet or lamp socket. Pictures can be projected on as small an area as the human hand with good visibility. A sheet or wall space up to 3 by 4 feet can be used with the same clarity of detail. An especially ingenious feature of the Pathex projector is an "automatic stop," which halts the movement of the film at such frames as contain sub-titles and holds the film in check until the spectator has had time to peruse the reading matter. In this way, a sub-title takes the space of only one frame or at the most two frames, thus effecting an immense saving in footage over the standard projection.

The Pathex Company has prepared a wide variety of interesting subjects in ready-made exhibition form for home projection. These subjects, which are procurable at a very moderate cost at the same stores handling the camera and projector, cover animal life, industry, art, science, drama, comedy, sports, travelogues, etc. These exhibition films are provided in two sizes—thirty or sixty feet long.

Closes Negotiations for Large San Francisco Theatre

Harry M. Seigler, who has recently purchased the southwest corner of California and Fillmore Streets, San Francisco, announces that he has closed negotiations for one of the largest residential theatres in San Francisco to be immediately erected on this and adjacent property owned by him. Negotiations for this theatre, which were closed by Clyde A. Griffin, call for the erection of a theatre building, which is said to cost the sum of $250,000 and seating 2,000 people. The theatre has been leased to Sampel H. Levin, one of the pioneers in the motion picture industry in this city at a rental in excess of $500,000 for a term of 20 years.

boards have been built 6½ feet high so that the dimmer operating handle would sometimes be 7½ to 8 feet above the floor. To operate such a board the stage electricians have had to first close the switches and then climb upon a bench two or three feet high to operate the dimmers. With an equipment of this character it is impossible to obtain good results. In many instances where the switchboard is particularly large, a balcony had to be built for the operation of the dimmers. This meant that either the dimmers were not used at all or an extra operator had to be employed on this balcony during the period of the show.

The most modern theatre dimming installations comprise the combined switchboard and interlocking dimmer bank in which the switches and dimmers are interconnected electrically and mechanically. Each dimmer plate and its switch are controlled from a single operating handle. The dimmer switches open automatically at the dimmed position. The interlocking control permits the grouping of dimmers so that movement of a master handle or master wheel will control one or more dimmers as a unit, without interfering with the independent control of any single dimmer. Where desired, cross interlocking control may be provided which by the movement of one handle or wheel, permits the dimming of any group of lamps while any other is simultaneously brightened. This cross-interlocking arrangement, it will be seen, is extremely convenient where it is desired to fade one color into another. In the most modern dimmer installations, the switchboard and dimmer bank structure is finished with a dead front panel, protecting the operator from chance contact with live parts, the operating handles projecting from the panel being adequately insulated from current-conducting members. These newest installations also are designed with numbered indicators in connection with the operating handles so that each circuit handle can be previously set at any desired dimming point and at the appointed time a master handle operated to flash on the entire group of circuits with all lamps dimmed to the pre-arranged degree of intensity. The indicator on each control handle also enables the house electrician and theatre management to work out a lighting program where elaborate lighting effects are employed with assurance that the lighting score will be carried out exactly as previously found most effective in the light rehearsals.

A summary of the features to be sought in up-to-date theatre lighting control installation may be stated as follows:

The installation should comprise a complete switchboard and a complete dimmer bank in combination.

The dimmer and its switch should be controlled by one handle, an arrangement which makes it easy to operate without flashing the lights on or off, yet permitting the lights to be flashed if desired.

All dimmer-switch handles should be within easy reach.

All circuits should be subject to simultaneous control by moving a single handle or slow motion wheel. A slow motion wheel, it should be understood, is a hand wheel operated through gears to control interlocking master handles.

Any circuit or group of circuits should also be capable of operation independently or in unity with others.

Dimmer plates should be mounted directly in back of the control handles where they are readily accessible.

No dimmer plates should be in a parallel, thus reducing to a minimum the danger of burnouts of plates.

All fuses should be in one place, preferably at the rear of the control board.

Design of switch contact and arrangement of dimmer circuits should be such as to minimize arcing.

The dimmer control installation should be designed on an integral unit basis to facilitate any desired additions to or changes in circuits.

In planning the construction of a new theatre or reconstruction of an existing theatre, if dimming equipment is to be installed the dimmer manufacturer should be called into consultation at the earliest stage of the proceedings. When requesting proposals for dimmer equipment, effective cooperation can be most promptly secured from the maker of the dimmers if the following information is at once submitted:

1. Voltage of lamp circuits.
2. Where dimmers are to be connected to two or three-wire circuits.
3. List of circuits to be controlled, with the name of each indicated so that the dimmer handles may be furnished with proper name plates.
4. The number of watts per dimmer.
5. The type of dimmer control; independent handle interlocking, cross interlocking or remote control if interlocking or cross interlocking dimmers are to be used.

THE S. R. O. sign is up in front of the house again.

He hasn't got a first-run picture, either. Nor a big star, nor a box-office hit. But he seems to get the crowd—every night.

He knows that people like to look at clear, life-like pictures, where brilliant illumination and strong contrasts of black and white define the characters and the scenes and give them a sense of reality. He knows that audiences do know the difference between good and poor projection. So he uses a Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Projection Lens.

The difference shows in the box-office count.

New Steubenville, Ohio, Capitol to Open Labor Day

THE new million dollar Capitol Theatre in Steubenville, Ohio which has been under construction for more than a year will be formally opened Labor Day with five acts of Keith Vaudeville and Feature Pictures.

J. K. Papulias, President and A. G. Constant, General Manager of the Tri-State Amusement Company are dedicating to their home city an amusement institution that is not only the pride of Steubenville, but it is claimed, the entire Ohio Vally as well. Few theatres it is said possess the beauty, the appointments and luxurious appeal that have been incorporated into the New Capitol and it is conceded the last word in Theatre construction in which time and money have not been considered. The building covers an area of 27,000 square feet of space and includes a large number of stores, offices and a De Luxe Ball Room.

Messrs. Papulius and Constant also operate and control the Strand and Olympic Theatres in Steubenville as well as Stanton Park and the Strand and American theatres in East Liverpool, O.

Forrest C. Templin, well known among the Vaudeville and Legitimate profession has been chosen as House Manager of the Capitol and we bespeak for him new laurels to his successful past. Mr. Templin was formerly associated with the Rembusch Chain in Indiana and the Gray interests of New England.

Forrest C. Templin, well known Manager has resigned from the Smith Amusement Co., Warren, O. to accept the position of Manager of the New Capitol Theatre, Steubenville, O., which will be formally opened Labor Day.

Marr & Colton to Build Factory on West Coast

J. J. COLTON of the Marr & Colton Organ Company of New York, is in San Francisco at the present time looking over different sites on which to build an organ factory. Although not officially given out, it is expected the large factory to be built in this section by this firm will be erected at Fullerton. It has been found necessary to build a factory in Cal., it is reported, because of the amount of business done by this firm in this section and the West.

General Contract is Let for Class "A" Cal. House

General contract has been let in connection with the construction of a one-story class "A" Egyptian style theatre and store building to be erected at Fruitvale, Alameda County, Cal., to cost about $125,000. Plans for the structure were prepared by Architect A. A. Cantin, Flatiron Building, San Francisco.

Wilmer & Vincent Harrisburg House to Be Improved

Further details of the plan to extensively improve the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., as announced by C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatre interests in that city, will involve a financial outlay of $35,000. The improvements, which will be practically all to the interior of the theatre, already have begun and are expected to be completed about the first of September. They include complete refurnishing and redecorating of the interior and lobbies; erection of a new stairway to the balcony; and beautification of the stage settings, and elaborate changes in the lighting effects of the whole house. A New York firm designed the stage settings and local contractors are doing most of the rest of the work. All visible lighting fixtures will be of crystal, under the new plan of illumination.

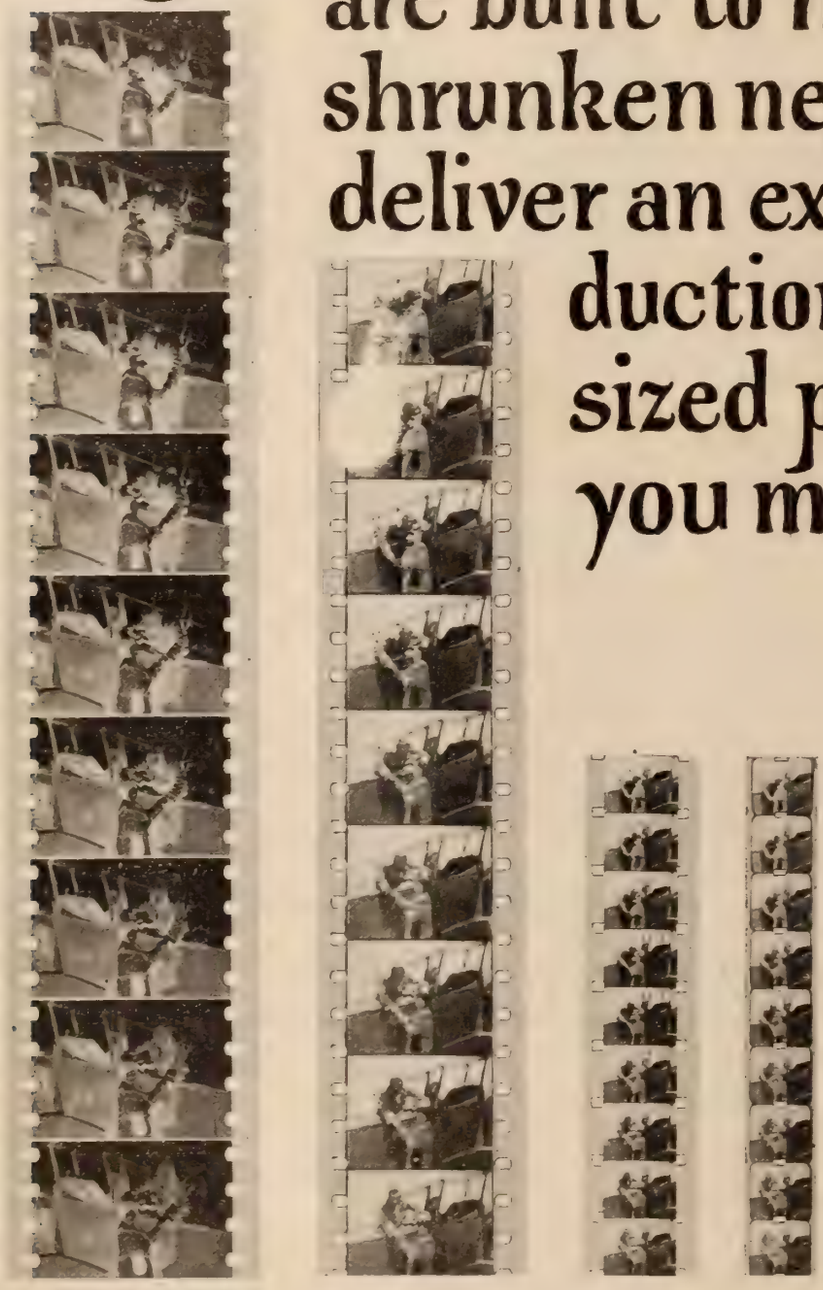
Newspaper Opinions

Herald Tribune: "If you think that Mr. Chaplin has run out of humorous ideas you'll change your mind when you see 'The Gold Rush.' Did you ever see one of his pictures which had a hunger-crazed man chase his companion in misery with an ax under the delusion that he is a large, fat chicken. Did you ever see Charlie boil one of his shoes and eat it? Did you ever see a log-cabin blown away by the fury of the gale and deposited on the edge of a cliff, so that it was balanced like a rocking stone? No. Neither did we—before. Praising one of Mr. Chaplin's pictures is like saying that Shakespeare was a good writer. Yet, we heard persons saying, 'Do you know, I think Chaplin is a genius?' Well, so do we, but never has it been written so clearly in letters of fire as now."

Daily News: "'The Gold Rush' collars you, plays quickly upon your emotions and leaves you in that mood where you can't laugh without a sob tearing through, or sob without a laugh bubbling up from the depths. It is the funniest and saddest of all comedies. There is one of the most pathetic, most poignant scenes in any movie. Charlie's pantomime is superb. Go and have a cry. No one need be ashamed. The picture is replete. Go to see this? I should say so! Let the gravy congeal on the dinner dishes, put off writing to Aunt Ida, but make it your delightful duty to see 'The Gold Rush.' Charlie did it. You will admit it."

Daily Mirror: "'The Gold Rush' is a box-office mint. This comedy sent an audience of blase movie into gales of laughter, fairly rocking the theatre. It is rare merriment and another riotous success for Chaplin. It is packed with pathos and humor."

Morning Telegraph: "You can see 'The Gold Rush' more than once and still find little touches that escape you. It will undoubtedly set all America laughing, though tears will often be near the laughter. There are delicious bits of comedy burlesque accentuated by the pathos of the forlorn little figure of the Lone Prospector, with its right foot bound in gunny sack, carrying a hopeless love in his heart, and the jaunty hauteur of a Beau Brummel."



Evening Telegram: "'The Gold Rush' is technically perfect, with its blending of comedy and sadness, its caricature and its good direction. And, oh, how you will clap your hands when he does the 'Oceana Roll.' It is guaranteed to those persons inclined to look down on mere movies that they can witness the best piece of satire ever perpetrated."

Evening Graphic: "'The Gold Rush' is a typical Chaplin film—indescribably clever, inimitably subtle and uproarously funny. Again Charlie shows his master craftsmanship in putting a pathetic twist into a comedy situation so that laughter and tears follow close on each other. 'The Gold Rush' adds another leaf to Chaplin's laurel crown as an artist in the field of dramatic comedy."

Evening Post: "Any audience will be enthusiastic over 'The Gold Rush.' Mr. Chaplin has never been funnier, nor has he ever been more pathetic. The film contains some of the most hilarious as well as some of the saddest moments that we have ever encountered upon the motion picture screen."

A Sound Investment
that pays a two-way profit

That is how one theatre owner expressed his opinion six months after he had installed a new Simplex Projector.

As this exhibitor pointed out, the manner in which pictures are presented on the screen is a feature of every program. Week in, and week out it is an ever-present factor that is working for or against the success of the theatre.

Successful exhibitors know that projection is of foremost importance because it effects the whole quality of the theatre's entertainment. While good projection will effectively overcome many possible shortages of quality in pictures, poor projection will just as surely ruin the very best of pictures.

There is no greater guarantee of perfect projection than to have a Simplex Projector.

The Simplex Projector

The Simplex Projector is built according to the designs and specifications of engineers whose many years of experience has given them a thorough knowledge of projection requirements.

The selection of material, the making of each part, and the construction of the whole machine is attended by the most diligent care and precise workmanship.

The good will the Simplex has created in all parts of the world is evidence of its consistently good performance and is tangible proof of the sincerity of our efforts to produce only the best.

A profitable Investment

To buy a Simplex Projector is to make a sound investment that will pay you a double profit.

By providing perfect projection it will attract more patronage to your theatre. Many exhibitors have in one year paid the entire cost of a new machine out of the increased earnings of their theatres. Buying a Simplex is simply reinvesting part of your earnings back into your business in order to draw a bigger dividend from your whole business investment.

Not only will a Simplex increase your earnings, but it will cut down your operating expenses. A poorly designed or worn-out projector is continually in need of repairs. The total annual repair bills for machine, films, etc., would go a long way toward the cost of a new machine. Saving your money on repairs is another way a Simplex will add to your profits.

THE BEST TIME TO BUY A SIMPLEX

Now is the time to equip your theatre with perfect projection. The fall season is near at hand. Get your theatre established early as a source of quality entertainment. You will find that patronage will continue to grow as the season progresses.

There is a Simplex Service Man in your district who will gladly discuss your requirements with you. Or mail the attached coupon and full description, prices, terms, etc., will be sent you without obligation.
